THE GREATEST NEED OF THE NEW YEAR—PERPETUATE PENTECOST

During the year 1930 the Christian Church has apropriately recognized the Nineteen Hundredth Anniversary of Pentecost. However, the Holy Spirit will best be honored by perpetuating the experience of Pentecost in Christian life and activity, for Pentecost is not merely of historic significance, but of vital importance to the Church of today.

The Church is an organism of spiritual power. As man widens his horizon to include illimitable space, deepens his insight to see hidden things, and lengthens his reach to grasp immeasurable forces; the Church must increase the measure of her intake of spiritual power so that she can release energies commensurate with the needs of man.

Countered by a hostile world, challenged with great opportunities, though she is equipped with a competent ministry and a well outlined program, power must be hers if success is achieved.

The Holy Spirit, the Third Person of the Trinity, is a Person who wields influence, arouses interest, exercises and bestows power. Jesus said, "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever," and "It is expedient for you that I go away; For if I not go away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you." He also said, "He that believeth on me . . . out of him shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because Jesus was not yet glorified."

When Jesus took upon himself our humanity it was for all eternity. He lifted our glorified humanity up into the Godhead bodily. And from this first fruit of the Incarnation, the Holy Spirit partook of the humanity of the glorified Lord and proceeded from the Father and Son out on His glorious mission of communicating the things of Christ to the children of men. After the Ascension of Christ the Holy Spirit became possessed with an affinity for man that he did not have before. It was this Spirit, incarnated in glorified humanity, with new powers of penetrating and abiding in human hearts, that Jesus said would baptize his waiting disciples.

It was upon his disciples and not the un-

LETTERS FROM OUR BISHOPS

FROM BISHOP DOBBS

My Dear Doctor Decell: I am writing you, and through you to the Methodists of Louisiana, concerning an important matter.

I speak of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and of our duty and privilege to stand back of and with you in the plan and purpose to enlarge its list of readers in Louisiana and Mississippi.

The Advocate is today, and has been for many years, our friend and ally in every noble task to which we have set our hands. We can not do our work now as it should be done without this "Advocate" of the great causes for which the Church stands and must continue to stand for the years to come.

I am, therefore, inviting and expecting the practical and earnest co-operation of all our preachers and people in the effort to make its influence felt throughout both States by the enlargement of its list of subscribers in every pastoral charge. No church official can do his or her work as it should be done without the church paper—this is taken for granted in practically all other organizations, membership in which usually carries with it the implied obligation to put one's name on the list of subscribers to the organization's magazine or paper.

It is my earnest desire that this matter be given the attention which it deserves. "The Advocate Week" will abundantly reward us all, If it is properly put before the people.

Very truly yours,

HOYT M. DOBBS.

FROM BISHOP DENNY

To My Brethren of the Mississippi Conferences:

Dear Brethren: To accomplish a work greatly needed by the Church there is to be an "Advocate Week," January 18-25. The New Orleans Christian Advocate must have an increased subscription list, and this increase is needed not simply to enable the Advocate to continue; It is needed more to enable the Church to do with greater effectiveness the work of every charge. Without the Advocate our work would not only slow down, it would indeed in many respects be stalled. No branch of the Church of God so much needs a weekly paper as a connectional church. A wider distribution of the paper in our homes will deepen the interest of our people, for a better knoledge of the work of the church necessarily awakens interest.

Let me earnestly request each pastor in Mississippi Methodism to give some thought and time during Advocate Week to this important work.

Assuring you of my abiding interest in each of you, and of my daily prayers for your success, I am,

Your fellow laborer,

COLLINS DENNY.

HARMON CHURCH HEIGHTENS ADVOCATE'S HOPE

In one week's time after the adjournment of the Louisiana Conference the board of stewards of the Harmon church, Pelican charge, Shreveport district, placed in their budget an amount sufficient to send the Advocate to every family in the church, and sent a check to the Advocate office to cover the subscriptions.

Rev. L. W. Smart, pastor, set the right example; and Mr. L. B. Moffette, treasurer, gladdened the hearts of the publisher and editor in sending the check. This is a worthy precedent.

What Brother Smart and the Harmon stewards have done can be done by most, if not all, of the churches in Louisiana and Mississippi. Such would enlarge the usefulness of the Advocate, assure a more interested membership, and solve a pressing need.

The manager and editor are anxious, primarily, that the January 18-25 Special Effort Advocate Week be a success in each charge, for the good that will come to individuals and churches, and the Kingdom interests the paper promotes; though financial relief is imperative.

A distinguished editor wrote the other day that "if the pastors were to emphasize the Advocate from their pulpits as much as fifteen minutes in three months, the subscriptions would double in one year's time." However, it is no longer merely the pastors' privilege and responsibility, but official boards should realize it is their corporate responsibility to see that the Advocate goes into the homes of the members. The Church Press contributes to all the purposes of the local congregation and is a vital necessity in connectional enterprises.

If all our churches that can would do what the Harmon church has done; and presiding elders, pastors, superannuates, and Christian Literature Committees in the remaining churches would advocate the Advocate and secure subscribers, the number of loyal members would largely increase and a better day would come to Louisiana and Mississippi Methodism.

We congratulate the pastor and board of stewards at Harmon upon their excellent work and assure them of the appreciation of publisher and editor. Also, in anticipation, we thank one and all for their conscientious efforts during the week of January 18-25.

JOURNEYING TO THE FAR EAST

By Bishop Paul B. Kern

(This is the first of a series of articles descriptive of the Orient by Bishop Kern, who is in charge of our mission work in the Far East. Other articles will appear soon. The series is offered to our readers by special arrangement with the Board of Missions.)

"See America First," is a slogan that has sound common sense in it. This vast and varied continent on which we live presents a thousand wonders to charm and inspire the sightseer and traveler. Travel widens one's horizon, breaks down provincial pride and brings a sense of ownership in all the beauties and riches of the world. To enjoy an experience while one is in the midst of it, to feel the thrill of a moment of wonder while one is passing through it, this is to drink deeply of the springs of joy and touch the spiritual center of unseen realities.

Chicago was our first stop. What a city has been built on the shores of stormy lake Michigan! We think of it as a city of thugs and gangsters, but this is only a passing phase of its myriad life. It is a city of dreamers, of empire builders, of wizards in finance and art and commerce. You cannot walk its streets without feeling the throbbing pulse of its driving human energy. The ends of the earth meet on its thorougfares and elevated railways. Here "Cross the crowded ways of men."

I stood at a window on the twenty-first floor of a hotel big enough to entertain the same guest and put him to sleep in a different room every night for eight years. Night has fallen over the tired city, but a new city is born each evening as the city of the day passes out. When the daytimers go in the nighttimers come out and the streets are alive every hour day and night. Chicago never sleeps. From my high vantage point I could see the lights of the city, the million eyes that shine in the dark telling the barons of finance and the weary homeless down-and-outer in the alleys below that there is something in religion, and that no material civilization can endure which is not founded upon the principles and gospel of the Christian faith. We shall not capture our cities by running away from their centers, and Christianity will have its chance only when religion dares as much for Christ as commerce dares for conquest.

The Canadian Rockies

All my life I had heard of the wonders of the Canadian Rockies. But the reality far outstrips the imagination. These mountains, which interpose their giant bulk between the prairies and the Pacific Coast, form one of the most remarkable mountain regions of the world. Composed of some five ranges, they offer nearly 850 miles of magnificent scenery—snowy peaks, glaciers, rugged precipices, waterfalls, foaming torrents, canyons, and lakes like vast sapphires and amethysts set in the pine-clad mountains. When Edward Whymper, the hero of the Matterhorn, described the Canadian Rockies as "fifty Switzerlands thrown into one," this certainly was no exageration.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has penetrated this tumultuous mountain region with a railroad line and standard of personal service that equals the finest in the world. As the train winds through gorges, along tumbling river beds, up grades made possible by engineering skill, one is left breathless and amazed, full of admiration for the master minds which conceived and carried through the construction of this transcontinental railway. At the Great Divide the roadbed is 8,691 feet above sea level. This spot is marked by an arch spanning a stream under which the waters divide. The waters that flow to the east eventually reach Hudson's Bay and the Atlantic Ocean; the rivulet that runs to the west joins the Kicking Horse River and adds its mite to the volume of the Pacific Ocean by way of the Great Columbia River. Close by is a granite shaft erected to the memory of Sir James Hector, the engineer who made possible the conquest of this continental divide by the steam engine and the modern Pullman car.

BISHOP PAUL B. KERN, B. D.,
Who begins an interesting series of articles on the Far East

One wonders constantly as he rides along in safety and comfort at the sheer courage and engineering ingenuity that has made this achievement possible. Take for example, the Spiral Tunnels between the Great Divide and Field. Formerly this was a most difficult grade of 4.5 per cent, but by two wonderful tunnels—one of the most notable engineering feats in existence—this difficulty has now been eliminated and the grade reduced to 2.2 per cent. From the east the track enters the first tunnel under Cathedral Mountain, 3,206 feet in length; and after running almost a circle and passing under itself emerges into daylight 48 feet lower. The track then turns easterly, and crossing the river enters the second tunnel, 2,890 feet long, under Mount Ogden. Again turning part of another circle and passing under itself, it comes out 45 feet lower. The whole thing is a perfect maze, the railway doubling back on itself twice and forming a rough figure "8" in shape. When run in two sections passengers can see the other section of the train directly below them making its way down the big grade.

We break the trip by stopping over for twenty-four hours at Banff, Alberta. Here we had a comfortable lodging in this little village, the center of the Canadian National Park. During the afternoon we drove over to the most lovely spot upon which my eyes have ever rested, Lake Louise. The day was flawless. Snow had fallen the week before and had not melted on the peaks. The visibility was perfect. We could see as far the eye could reach. For 42 miles we drove along a perfect road that wound between mountains and valleys, by laughing streams and roaring gorges until the human spirit was almost benumbed with the sheer extravagance of beauty on every hand. Along the road we saw beaver, deer, elk and buffalo in their native haunts, protected from the rifles of the white man.

Lake Louise

To describe Lake Louise and its environs challenges a more iridescent pen than I possess. Words somehow seem inadequate. It must be felt rather than seen and in its beauty is an element of the mystic and spiritual which lies deeper than language and is the voiceless emotion of the soul. This perfect gem of scenery bears the liquid music, the soft color notes of its name, almost into the realm of the visible. It is a dramatic palette upon which the Great Artist has splashed His most gorgeous hues, a spectrum of color. Deepest and most exquisitely colored is the lake itself, sweeping from rosy dawn to sunset through green, blue, amethyst and violet, undershot by gold; dazzling white is the sun-glorified Victoria Glazier, at the farther end; somber are the enclosing pine-clad peaks that dip perpendicularly into the lake, and magnificent are the stark immensities of the snow-covered peaks that enclose the picture except for the fleecy blue sky overhead. To behold it and brood over its beauty is to build in the secret chambers of one's memory a shrine of imperishable glory at which one may worship when overborne by the ugliness of man's shameless spoliation of nature.

As one travels through the kaleidoscope of nature presented by this trip which begins in the wheat fields of Saskatchewan, overleaps the mountains of Alberta and pauses on the seacoast of British Columbia, he sings with a new feeling the familiar stanza of Katherine Lee Bates' hymn:

O beautiful for spacious skies
For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
America! America!
God shed his grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

Our party consists of three of the members of the General Conference Commission appointed to join with a similar group from the Methodist Episcopal Church to set up an autonomous national Church in Korea. The personnel consists of Rev. Dr. W. G. Crain of Nashville, the General Secretary of the Board of Missions; Mr. Percy Downs Maddin, attorney from Nashville, member of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions; Rev. Dr. J. W. Moore of Petersburg, Va., a member of the Virginia Conference, and the writer and his wife. Miss Mabel Howell of Nashville, another member of the Commission, awaits our coming in Korea. To the regret of all of us, Bishop Beauchamp was detained at the last moment by illness and could not accompany us. We all meet in Vancouver and now the "Empress of Japan," proud new liner of the Canadian Pacific, waits to carry us to the Far East and the hearts of our brothers in the lands beyond the Pacific. May the Head of the Church give us grace and wisdom for our high commission and journeying mercies to our good ship!

IT IS TIME FOR ACTION

By Walter W. Jones

I am disturbed and have sufficient cause to be. That prevailing conditions justify a bishop in delivering to a body of preachers a broadside for willful negligence as to their financial obligations is indeed humiliating. This was done immediately preceding the reading of the appointments. I do not resent the exhortation by the bishop, I only regret the necessity for it. He was acting on information received from various sources and was endeavoring to discharge a painful duty. Obviously, the evil had been the source of deep regret to the presiding elders as they discussed it in the cabinet before any public statement was made. The bishop must have suffered some degree of remorse as he announced the appointments of the various derelicts who had been commissioned to "Preach the word of God . . . in the congregations." How a presiding elder can commend to a congregation such an appointment, though reluctantly made, is more than I can understand. Yet, there seems to be no easy remedy. The discipline is not specific on this particular offense, but I think the paragraph on "Improper tempers, words or actions" is not too remote to authorize action. It seems to be easily applicable to the case.

There will be a much more harmful result from this offense than the mere humiliation of the preachers. When the people lose confidence in the ministry, and we are branded as a class of non-debt payers, what then will be their attitude toward the Methodist Church? One layman wisely said: "if it comes to that, we had just as well close our doors."

I heard nothing in the ordination vows that suggested the possibility of sacrificing a church on the altar of my unfaithfulness, nor for my individual comforts; contrariwise, the impression was made on my mind that I might have to be sacrificed for the church. I know what it means to have to live on a very meagre salary, as the Conference minutes show in many cases. I have been the beneficiary of many courtesies extended by banks, merchants and private friends, but my business relations with them have never been the occasion of any embarrassment to me, nor to them.

I am not against anybody. I am for the Methodist Church and her faithful preachers. I would not, to the amount of one penny increase the burdens of my brethren. I did not know that this evil was so extensive and on an alarming increase. I have, in years past—not recently, followed in the wake of a few who were under such repute and have experienced some personal inconveniences as results, yet, I could not qualify as an acceptable witness again any preacher who might be under accusation. I have heard of complaints, made to presiding elders, against a few, but have tried to think the numbers of offenders very small. It does seem, however, that the number is large enough to cause our chief pastors much concern, and, unless some corrective, or protective, measures are enforced, there will be cause for greater solicitude throughout the entire church. Nothing will discredit us more than to be regarded as a debt-dodging class of men. There is already, in many places, a disposition to magnify the unbecoming things in Methodist preachers, and, in many cases, the innocent are victims.

From the statements indiscriminately made, through the paper and from the platform, no man knows where to draw the line. Bishop Denny says it is one of the worst evils and a growing evil; that preachers are failing to pay their debts: There was no bitterness in the heart of the bishop, but evidences of deep regret. Brother Felts (if I mistake not, now serving his fourth district in our Conference), in the Advocate of September 25, 1930, says: "In my P. E. experience, I have had more complaints of pastors because of failure to meet their financial obligations than all other things combined." He further says: "It is more often that the complaints are made against men who are comparatively well paid." It does seem that it is time for action, by those with whom such complaints are lodged, lest there be a "Wheel within a wheel." I do not believe faithful men, laymen included, are willing for the preachers to bear the stigma of this sort of thing, nor allow the Church for which they are giving their lives to be jeopardized by it. There is one thing that can be done, it is so simple it may not appeal to the profound: After careful checking-up, let the names of those against whom complaints have been justly made be tabulated. Let the bishop and each presiding elder preserve a copy and send a like copy to each lay leader. Revise the list as occasion demands. (Let him who is unwilling to be checked up on register objection.) The object is patent. Very simple in appearance, but it will work.

THE GRACE OF FORGETTING

It is very important what a man does with the criticisms and slights and seeming unfairness that come to him along the pathway of his life. To keep them about him and clutter up his life with them, is one of the stupidest of things, and yet it is to be feared that that is exactly what quite a few people do. . . . If a man ciritcises you, even in what seems to you a quite unfair way, after taking a good, honest look at the criticism so that you may profit from whatever point it may have, you can forget it. But you can do this instead. You can treasure it up so that when that man's name is mentioned or any thought of him crosses your mind, there is at once stirred up in you some feeling of bitterness or resentment. And you can keep on at that business and multiply that resentment over and over and over again, until your whole life is soured and embittered. You can; but, my, what a folly and stupidity it is to do it! And especially when you can keep life sweet and wholesome just by forgetting.—The Christian Guardian.

A NEW YEAR'S DAWNING

By F. R. Havergal.

Another year is dawning;
Dear Master, let it be,
In working or in waiting,
Another year for Thee;
Another year in leaning
Upon Thy loving breast,
Of ever-deepening trustfulness,
Of quiet, happy rest.

Another year of mercies,
Of faithfulness and grace;
Another year of gladness,
In the shining of Thy face.
Another year of progress,
Another year of praise;
Another year of proving
Thy presence all the days.

Another year of service,
Of witness for Thy love;
Dear Master, let it be
On earth, or else in heaven,
Another year for Thee.

A MESSAGE FROM THE BISHOPS

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

Your General Superintendents, assembled in semi-annual session at Charlotte, North Carolina, December 12-14, reviewed carefully the results of the work of our beloved Church in every part of its wide extension during the year now closing.

The reports showed much in which to rejoice and for which to give thanks to God.

The ingathering of souls by profession of faith has not been small, and the net increase of the membership of the Church shows considerable growth, although not all that might have been expected, and far less than was desired.

But while the membership of the Church has increased, there has been distressing decline in the collections for the support of its benevolent enterprises and indispensable institutions. The liberality of our people has fallen below the level of their numbers and resources.

The consequent deficit in the income of the Church must be met and overcome speedily, or its work must suffer damage, if not disaster, both at home and abroad, notwithstanding the enlarged opportunities opened before it by Providence and the imperative demands of duty laid upon it by our Lord.

Accordingly, we ask earnest, prayerful consideration of the plan, framed by the General Conference at its last session, May, 1930, and known as "The Kingdom Extension Offering" to be made during the months of January and February, 1931.

The great causes to which the proposed offering is to be devoted are missions (home and foreign), hospitals, church extension, and the educational work of the Church in all its forms. The urgent needs of these benevolent interests require that the combined offerings of all our people during the months named shall aggregate for this "Kingdom Extension Offering" not less than $1,200,000, which is less than fifty cents per member.

In recent years collections have been made during like months for what was called "The Maintenance Fund," which was designed to supply means for the support of our missions not supplied by the collections from the usual assessments upon the churches. Without the "Maintenance Fund" our missionary work in both the home and foreign fields must have been greatly curtailed in extent and impaired in power.

"The Kingdom Extension Offering," embracing, as it does, so much important work besides that of missions, is proportionately of greater urgency and consequence. Any lack of zeal and generosity on its behalf will have withering effect upon all the enterprises of our wide connection, especially upon the cause of missions.

Some may infer from the erection of autonomous Churches in Mexico, Brazil, and Korea, that there will be less need for financial assistance for the prosecution of the work of Methodism in those interesting fields. No inference could be more erroneous. The organization of autonomous Churches in the lands named is at once the evidence of the vast success of our missionary efforts in them and a constraining consideration for increasing our endeavors on their behalf.

The oldest of our missions in these countries, so needy spiritually, is scarcely more than fifty years old. Behold! "What hath God wrought", through the ministrations of our Church during this brief period! What may not be expected in the future? An autonomous Methodist Church was organized in Japan by the union of three Methodist bodies in the year 1907. The Mission Boards of all the Churches who united in setting up that self-governing Church in "the Sunrise Kingdom" have not diminished their appropriations to it because of its autonomous character; and the great results accomplished thereby have abundantly justified their continuance of such necessary support.

It cannot be doubted that the same policy will yield increased fruits in Mexico, Brazil, and Korea. We have not set off, but we have set up Methodism in those fruitful fields.

We will not be blameless before God if for any reason whatsoever we give less support to the work of missions, or less succor to any other department of the work of our beloved Church at this time.

We are not unmindful of the financial depression which rests upon our country, and which overshadows with deeper gloom all other lands. But, when all just allowance is made for this fact, it remains that notwithstanding the adversities which have overtaken many of our people, the Church as a whole has ample resources for maintaining all the work which it has undertaken and meeting all the sacred obligations which God requires of it. All this, and more, it could do even though it were less prosperous and far poorer than it is.

We should recall and emulate the example of the suffering Churches of Macedonia, of whom St. Paul wrote that "in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality (II Corinthians viii:2), so that, notwithstanding their dire distress, they went beyond their power and entreated him to receive their gift and thereby admit them to "the fellowship of the ministering to the saints."

The Apostle points out the source of their abounding liberality by saying, "This they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord" (II Corinthians viii:5). When men give themselves wholly to God, they joyously devote their possessions to the promotion of His Kingdom.

The solution of all our financial problems will be found in a deep and general consecration of our people to God.

Impelled by this conviction, the Bishops in their Episcopal Address called upon the General Conference, held in Dallas, Texas, May 7-24, 1930, to make the session of the body the beginning of a period of deeper and richer spiritual life among all our people.

In response to the call of your General Superintendents the General Conference adopted unanimously a report containing the following stirring paragraphs:

> "By every token we are called to a ministry of vigorous spiritual emphasis. The crass materialism of our times, the seductions and allurements of sin in modern forms, the rapid growth of strange and fantastic religions, the increasing advantages of new and adequate physical equipment throughout our Church, the growing range and significance of our educational program—all these challenge us to put first things first and preach Christ as Lord and pray for a baptism of the Holy Ghost that shall light a flame of radiant power upon every altar and in every heart in Methodism.
> "Let this be a quadrennium in which there shall be one dominant note, a passion for souls. Let us regard every financial campaign and promotional adventure as secondary to the main purpose of preaching and living Christ. Let our whole educational process, from the smallest Sunday school to the largest university, feel the thrill of a genuine spiritual call until men and women shall confess their sins and seek the Lord and find him, and our young men shall see visions and our old men shall dream dreams and Pentecostal power shall break out upon us in gracious and overflowing measure. With nothing less can we be content. God waits to give us the outpouring of his Spirit. Shall not his people be willing in the day of his power?"

Moreover, the Bishops were directed to appoint a special "Commission on Spiritual Life" to lead in a movement for a Pentecostal revival; and such a commission was duly appointed.

With the commission we now unite in calling all our ministers and members to lives of renewed consecration to God and to a mighty return to the original mission of Methodism "to spread Scriptural holiness" over our own country and throughout all lands. We entreat you to make this matter of supreme importance the uppermost concern of all your lives and efforts and prayers.

"We beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

TIME—ITS USE AND ABUSE

"You Can Not Kill Time Without Injuring Eternity"

By Rev. M. E. Lazenby, D.D., Editor Alabama Christian Advocate

Time has a peculiar way of going on. It will not tarry. From eternity's dawn it has ever been thus. It not only passes but it passes swiftly. Here we are, almost before we know it, standing face to face with another year. And so it will be with every new moment. They will not stay new. Truly we speak of them as the passing moments.

Perhaps there is no better time than now to think seriously upon the value of time. Like the air we breathe, like the light we see, time is one of the precious gifts of God. Like the air we breathe, like the light we see, we use it—we consume it—whether we will or not. Some people consume time in sheer idleness. Others consume it in carelessly planned activities. Still others, valuing it as one of the most priceless of all possessions, use it wisely, economically, religiously, and accomplish the largest possible good.

The Spaniards have a motto which says, "Time is money." Correct. Time is money, but it is more than money. It is opportunity; it is advancement; it is achievement; it is character. Time is everything that requires time for its acquisition or its accomplihment. To kill time, therefore, is to steal money, to retard achievement, and to destroy character. Time not used is abused. We hear much about the idle rich, but the rumor is all out of proportion to the fact. There are not many idle rich. There are many idle poor. Outside of the unfortunate few who inherited wealth the rich became rich by hard work and by a wise and rigid economy of time. Read their biographies. We marvel at their energy, their untiring efforts, and their wise and constant use of time.

Not all poverty, to be sure, is due to slothfulness. There are many causes of poverty that seem quite unavoidable. But we doubt not that most of the world's poverty today is due, directly or indirectly, to indolence, laziness, and a willful waste of time. Much of the world's poverty could be converted into prosperity by a rightful use of time.

This message will probably not reach the army of the unemployed; indeed, it is not meant for them. It is intended for those who, employed, wish to achieve the highest success in their work. This can not be done by playing with time. Time is not a toy. It is an instrument of achievement. It is an instrument of industry. It is an indispensable factor in all world progress.

Loafing is un-Christian. It cannot be justified by any Christian measurement.

Rest and recreation are essential to any great achievement, but when converted into indolence and carelessness, they defeat the very ends they seek to effect. Unlike the proverbial cat, time does not have nine lives. Killed, the grave becomes its eternal kingdom; it can not be resurrected. Among the "Memory Gems" of our schoolboy days were these words: "Lost, yesterday, somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered, for they are gone forever." "Lost wealth," says one, "may be replaced by industry, lost knowledge by study, lost health by temperance or medicine, but lost time is gone forever."

Time-killers keep their hands stained with the blood of a double murder. They kill their own time, and they kill the time of their fellows. At least two counts will be found in their indictment when it is read before them at the judgment bar of God. And "you can not kill time without injuring eternity." Time and life are, shall we say, synonymous? Benjamin Franklin thought so for he said, "Do you love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of."

Solomon said, "There is a time to be born and a time to die." Another, less wise than Solomon, but not altogether unwise, has added that there is an interval between these two times of infinite importance. We have nothing to do with the time we are born, and next to nothing to do with the time we die, but we have almost everything to do with the interval in between. It is this interval for which God holds us responsible. Used shabbily it fills our own lives with bitter regrets, it disappoints our friends, it grieves the heart of God. Used aright it brings joy to our own souls, good to our fellows, and glory to God.

The right use of time is fundamentally important. There can be no better time than right now to resolve to use the new year aright. It will be made up of minutes and hours. To squander time is un-Christian, and will mean a harvest of bitter regrets. To fill these minutes with useful study and hard work—all consecrated to God's glory—will save us from disappointment, and will make us look to the new year with at least some degree of atisfaction and with many joyful expectations.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

By Dr. S. A. Steel

I believe in annuity bouds, and I'll tell you why. A year ago that fine Virginia gentleman, the Rev. John Brandon Peters, D.D., of New Orleans, presented me with a $100 annuity bond. I never had a bond before in my life, not even the sort Paul had when he aid, "except these bonds." And in view of some discussions in Methodist circles about dealing in stocks and bonds, I was not exactly sure that it was safe to be a bondholder. So I consulted my oracle about what to do with it. She beats the Delphic virgin out of sight when it comes to interpreting mysteries. That Delphic girl often gave equivocal answers to the questions put to her; but milady always answers so plainly that a dunce can understand her. She said, "Why, that will get you a Christmas turkey as long as you live." Whoopee! I said; that's a big idea. And here is the first installment. Nettie, the cook, knows exactly how to fix the bird for the table, make the dressing—and the hash. Sam Jones, the original, incomparable and genuine Sam, said, "When we have turkey hash at my house I don't want any company." Hear that turkey gobble? If he had even goose sense he would be saying his prayers, instead of shouting; for in a few hours Nettie will have him in the oven.

Hicks is here and has started on the track like a young thoroughbred. I was not well and didn't get out to his first service, but milady was there, and brought home a fine report. The future looks bright for the church in Mansfield. Castle Melancholy stands in somber solitude and silence on the hill. The voice of the maidens that gladdened its halls is heard no more, and the winds wail as they stir the leafless branches of the trees, "For shame! For shame!" With oil pouring from a score of wells and Methodists living in luxury to close the doors of their oldest college for girls for the lack of a few thousand dollars! Tell it not in Gath—publish it not in the streets of Askelon.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

Recently a number of my friends have been going away. Away to the far land, whose hills and vales lie in the unknown, and are lighted only by suns of glory and stars of promise, given to God's children as they fare thither. One of these, a kinswoman, entered into this strange, mystic country while yet in the midst of a busy and useful career, using the means committed to her and her cheerful, bright disposition in ministry and helpfulness in the home and for the kingdom of God. Lonely hearts, sad at her going, can only find recompense in the grace of Him who came to serve, and in the thought of words spoken and deeds wrought in His name and spirit. These are the heritage, tender and full of comfort, to mourning hearts, and we may rest assured such are not in vain. Wonderful are the setting suns, tinged with glory and with gold. Advancing years mellow and soften the declining measures, the latter days of life with its hopes, its aspirations, its approaching close. May the manifold mercies and richest grace of Him who died that we might live, cheer and comfort loved ones left behind.

CHRIST AS "LORD OF CONDUCT"

By H. H. Smith

Sometimes an expressive phrase is more forcible in emphasizing a truth than a whole paragraph. In his interesting book, "If I Had Not Come," Bishop Hendrix says: "The supreme claim of Christ is as 'Lord of conduct,' and the ideal of life must be sought in conduct to meet His approval." Here is a subject for profitable meditation at this season, for, above everything else, Jesus Christ is "Lord of conduct." Five times in succession in the sermon on the mount He makes this assertion, "Ye have heard that it was said . . . but I say unto you . . . ." The Cambridge Bible notes that the phrase, "I say unto you," is a "most emphatic formula, which implies the authority of a law-giver." After hearing this wonderful discourse concerning righteousness (right conduct) and the kingdom of God, no wonder His hearers were astonished at His teaching and declared that He taught as one having authority and not as the scribes. He is Lord of conduct because He is the Son of God and speaks with authority.

Christ is Lord of conduct in another sense: He is the inspirer of God-like conduct. His influence upon all His followers, from the disciples to the humblest follower of today, is ample evidence of this. What a miracle of transformed conduct is shown in Pliny's letter to the Emperor Trajan, when Christianity was in its infancy. The only fault to be found with these early Christians just emerged from paganism was that "they had been accustomed on a stated day to meet before light and recite among themselves in turn a hymn to Christus as God, and to bind themselves by an oath, not to do any crime, not to commit thefts, robberies or adulteries; not to break their word," etc. With this picture before us, how appropriate the phrase, "Christ, the Lord of conduct."

The principles of conduct which Jesus taught are being acknowledged, more and more, as the highest code of ethics in existence, but unless His teachings find expression in daily conduct, they are valueless. Some years ago a little book appeared with the title: "In His Steps," or, "What Would Jesus Do?" It gained almost instant popularity, and a million copies were soon in circulation. Why? It was a simple little story without pretension to originality of thought or literary excellence, but it forcibly conveyed a great truth: that the world would be transformed if every professing Christian would take the teachings of Jesus Christ seriously, and make it a matter of conscience so to conduct himself as to win His approval. No man ever goes astray who conscientiously seeks to conform his life to the teachings of the Man of Galilee.

Conduct is the acid test of the Christian, and the Master was ever applying this test: "By their fruits ye shall know them." "Not every one that saith unto the Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." We shall often think of Christ as our Saviour, but it will avail us nothing to call Him, Lord, Lord, if we do not the things which He commands. If we would be assured that He is our Saviour, we must see that He is the Lord of our conduct. The much-needed revival will come when we turn to Him with all our hearts and let Him be, in deed and in truth, "the Lord of our conduct."

SEASHORE SIDELIGHTS

The Seashore District Stewards' meeting and the District Board of Lay Activities met in the First Methodist Church in Gulfport December 9, at 10 a. m. Rev. Otto Porter, newly-appointed presiding elder for this district, presided with ease and grace. Mr. A. L. Jones of Picayune was elected secretary. Rev. J. E. Williams of Poplarville presided while the salary of the elder was fixed. The salary remained at the same figure as last year, $4,000.

Rev. B. L. Sutherland appeared before the conference in the interest of the Supernnuate Endowment; Rev. B. F. Lewis spoke in interest of the orphans' home in Jackson; and Mr. W. D. Hawkins addressed the meeting in behalf of the campaign for full payment of the benevolences.

Dinner was served in the basement of the church by the ladies of First Church, and the afternoon session was given over to hearing a report of the committee, introducing new pastors to the district and a random discussion of various activities of the district.

Rev. V. G. Clifford, of Columbia, First Church, is embarking on a large field of activity this year. First Church Columbia has prorated $600 salary for a junior preacher whose duties will be the care of several outlying churches. These two pastors will minister to a widely scattered territory and will do it effectively.

Rev. C. P. Jones has moved into the work in Biloxi with even swing and is reporting splendid congregations at both services and a growing prayer meeting.

Of all the men who rejoiced at appointments, the voice of Rev. J. E. Williams was lifted louder than any other. Poplarville must be the doorway to heaven in the estimation of this preacher; he is very happy and will of course show his joy by preaching great sermons.

The church at Ocean Springs, Rev. J. W. Sells is the new pastor, held a good-will service at a recent date. The admission price to this service was some garment suitable for a gift to some unemployed person, or some toy to be given to the needy children of the neighborhood.

Rev. W. H. Lane of Wiggins and Rev. W. W. Moore of Carriere were unable to attend the district stewards' meeting because of sickness. Rev. W. B. Hollingsworth of Americus was also unable to be present.

Rev. E. L. Ledbetter of Pascagoula is making great plans to entertain the Seashore district conference in the spring. He hopes to have a new church building completed by the time of conference, the various committees have been at work for some time and quite a bit of progress has already been reported.

The Woman's Missionary Society on the coast lost an earnest and sincere worker in the death of Mrs. C. E. McClure of Ocean Springs. Mrs. McClure had lived in that community for more than forty years and was considered one of the leaders of the church. She was member emeritus of the board of stewards and a charter member of the local Missionary Society. Her death was a result of shock received in an automobile accident the Sunday before her passing away. The accident occurred as she, with her children and some of the grandchildren were returning from church. Mrs. Escambia Pabst, daughter of Mrs. McClure and president of the local Missionary Society, was in the car and received a broken wrist in the accident.

Rev. Otto Porter, the new presiding elder of the Seashore District, is officiating in able and efficient manner. He carries the office with dignity and moves in a certain manner in performing has task. The people of the district are receiving him with open arms and doing their best to make him feel at home as he discharges his duties. His address is Gulfport, R. F. D. REV. AND MRS. J. H. FOREMAN CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

On November 9, 1930, in the Methodist Church at Pelahatchie, Miss., Rev. J. H. Foreman and his good wife celebrated their golden wedding. Brother and Sister Foreman did not wish any public service of any kind, as their children could not attend. The people of Pelahatchie, however, insisted that they be given a chance to honor this man of God and his family. The church was beautifully decorated, and a congregation that taxed the capacity of the house was present to see this couple married a second time. The first wedding was solemnized at Florence, Miss., and the ceremony was said by the Reverend Daniel Loflin. During the exercises this time some canaries sang lustily, adding to the glad spirit of the occasion. The two churches of the town presented Brother Foreman with a love gift of gold. The presentation was made by the Reverend Mr. Meador, the pastor of the local Baptist church. After an appropriate presentation speech, he presented the gold and dropped silver into the tray while the orchestra played, "Silver Threads Among the Gold." None of the original attendants were present, but a daughter of the couple, Mrs. W. A. Miller, and her husband stood up with the couple. Another daughter, Mrs. J. M. Berry, read a history of the couple. The other children of the home were prevented from coming, but sent their love to their parents, two of them, the twin boys, calling their parents by long distance telephone from Port Arthur, Texas.

Brother and Sister Foreman have lived in Pelahatchie since he was superannuated five years ago, and the people of Pelahatchie are deeply in love with them. Brother Foreman is the only minister who lives in Pelahatchie, and his presence is sincerely appreciated. This golden wedding was a gala function in Pelahatchie and will never be forgotten by any of the people there.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The members of the examining committees met at the session of our Conference in Vicksburg, Miss., and organized, as the Discipline directs, into a Joint Committee on Ministerial Training. S. F. Harkey was elected chairman, and J. W. Sells was elected secretary. The committee decided to organize a library of the study courses to lend to the undergraduates. We want five or six complete sets of the books of the courses. They will be kept in the office of the Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education in Jackson and will be sent to the young men who wish them. The postage charges both ways will be paid by the users. Several of the young men have already written me asking about getting their books for early study.

I wish you would look through the list as printed in the back of the Discipline and see how many of these books you have and are willing to donate to this library. Please write me at once the names of the books you can give, and I will answer telling you which ones we need. I can in this way pick the books and make the donations as small as possible from each individual. Please mail me your list at once and wait to mail the books until you hear from me.

S. F. HARKEY, Brandon, Miss.

TWO AMETHYSTS OF PALESTINE

In the far days before the first Christmas, two boys were sent forth by their humble parents in Judea to seek each in his own way the finest thing in the world. One had been reared on the plains, and turned his attention to the raising of herds and flocks, and prospered in a modest way while still a youth. One day as he stood guard over his own, far away from the place of his birth, the rays of the sun were suddenly focused upon a bright stone on the ground at his feet. He stooped and picked it up, and as he gazed upon it in his open palm, he remembered the admonition at the beginning of his quest; and wondered if in some mysterious way this bright stone might lead him to his goal.

The other boy was born in the hills and journeyed to Lebanon out of interest in its famed cedars. He became a hewer of wood, and in the course of time a builder of houses in the cities of Israel. One day he, too, found a bright stone gleaming in the sunlight at his feet as he inspected some lumber on the ground where it had been hewn. He marveled at the stone's color, suggestive of royalty, and placed the crude gem in the bosom of his garment. His thoughts as he walked through the forest reverted to the day when he began his quest, and he recalled with unwonted pleasure the admonition of his father as he set forth. "This stone may prove to be the keystone of the arch of that which I seek," he said as he walked in the shade of the cedars.

Years passed and at the time for the taxing, these sons of Judah, now in young manhood, went up to Jerusalem. They found the populace full of excitement, for it was whispered that at an inn lay a new-born King, whose coming had been foretold in prophecy. Seeking out the place, the young men saw such a multitude round about that they turned away in despair at the prospect of a long wait in the severe cold ere they could expect to see the Prince, if, indeed, they should be able to see him at all. As they turned away, they met a poor woman with a tiny babe in arms. Something about her demeanor attracted their attention, and they saluted her gravely. She was a gleaner, and at the harvest-time the reapers had left little in the fields; therefore her store for winter was meager indeed, and she was sorrowful that she had no gift to offer the Prince.

"Take this," said the elder of the young men, as he took from his bosom the precious stone he had picked up under the cedars of Lebanon. "I found it at Lebanon, and it is doubtless of little value, but it will meet thy need of a gift for the King. Take it, and may it prosper thee and thine."

The younger man smiled. "And this stone, smaller than my companion's, I found in the field as I grazed my herds and flocks; thou shalt add this to thy gift, and may it bring upon thee and thine the blessing of Jehovah."

"Thy mothers are thrice blessed," said the woman with feeling; "for they had sons; those sons have grown to manhood, and they have the grace of God in their hearts," and she passed on her way with her babe.

Years afterward, a caravan camped for the night in the desert. In the moonlight under the canopy before the entrance to a camel's-hair tent sat two men in deep converse. They were telling tales of their early lives. One was a great builder of his day, and the other was the possessor of vast herds and flocks on the rich plains of Palestine. It was they who as boys had been sent forth by their parents in Judea to find the finest thing in the world; and each told of his quest, yet each in turn was uncertain as to whether or not he had accomplished the task set before him. They talked long into the night, when all the camp slept. Suddenly there stood before them a stranger in garments of white.

"I have traveled far," he said gently. "I am hungered and aweary, and the desert hath parched my throat."

Food and drink were brought, and the stranger ate in silence. He was invited to rest within and soon fell asleep upon a padded couch.

The friends talked on. They spoke of Jerusalem, the Holy City, and of the Nazarene, whose fame had spread far.

"He is the Messiah who was foretold," said the elder. "We looked for an earthly King, but a Saviour of the soul has come in his stead."

"And we gave naught on that holy night to the new born King," said the younger.

"Naught," responded his comrade.

The stranger rose from the couch. "I am refreshed," he said.

"Tarry with us yet awhile," urged the herdsman.

"Have ye been in Jerusalem?" asked the stranger.

"Yea," answered both the builder and the herdsman in the same breath. "More than once," added the builder. "But especially I remember the night when the star led the wise men from the desert to the inn yard."

"Ye were together that night?"

"Yea, but we knew not of the event in advance and brought no silver or gold, save enough to pay the tithing tax and for food and lodging. Therefore we made no gift to the babe."

The stranger smiled. "But ye believe?" he said.

"Yea," they answered.

"And ye have sought far in the quest set before you by your parents?" the stranger asked gently.

"Yea, far and long," said the elder, and the younger bowed. And they marveled that he should know thereof.

"And know ye not that ye have found that which ye have sought?" asked the stranger.

The builder and the grazier looked at each other in wonder. "Nay," they answered.

The Judeans were silent.

"That she might make a gift," said the stranger, "ye gave her all that ye had. He that giveth his all shall possess the kingdom of heaven. The precious stones ye gave the gleaner she gave the Child in the manger. He has never parted with them. See!" and the stranger drew from his bosom a folded cloth, and opened its folds. "Here are the jewels ye gave—two amethysts of rare beauty. They were your gift to Him who came, although ye knew it not. When others doubt, ye believe. Your faith shall save you."

The stranger raised his hand majestically, and smiled. "I go about my father's business," he said, and was gone.

The Judeans looked out across the desert and understood. Then they slept. In the morning each found a cut and polished amethyst glistening in rare beauty upon the pillow where his head had lain.

And to them ever after the amethyst became the symbol of royal favor, for they knew that their visitor was the Christ.—Marion G. Godette, in Zion's Herald.

THE SALVATION OF AMERICA

By Mrs. M. Barksdale Gillis

To-day men of active and serious minds are turning their attention to the conditions of America as never before, and are very much concerned about the future welfare and salvation of America.

What changes have taken place to cause this effect? What hope has America in keeping her present stand of civilization if she continues to indulge in the sinful vices, as she is now doing?

Why has not America taken warning? Is it that she is blind and ignorant of her condition? Or is it that she knows but does not heed. Whatever it is, it is time that America awake to a realization of the circumstances that threaten every day to bring her to ruin.

Every great nation has had its day. Greece, Rome, and others, each had their day. But what has happened to all? They have fallen, never to rise again. What was the underlying cause of the destruction of each? Inordinate selfishness, vicious and corrupt living.

Does America hope to escape the wrath of God when she indulges daily in activities that displease the Lord? Does she think that God will save her just because America is America and all nations admire and envy her? It is time that America should analyze herself. To outsiders she may be the jewel of ophir, but the very inner workings of the nation are in a critical condition. She must begin at the very heart of things before she can hope to overcome the obstacles that stand in the way of her spiritual and intellectual progress.

To begin at the foundation we must begin with the reformation of the individual and the home, for in no other institution is the real need of reformation needed more than in the home. We must bring the individual into a realm of godliness and lift his soul out of the sin-stained thoughts into the realm of pure thinking. We must direct his thoughts to the beauties of the world and to the arts that were created by God-inspired men.

God never intended for men to seek the low, degrading things and the mad entertainment that the evil-minded American people seek to-day. God's plan of life never borders upon the vulgar tendencies as the modern social conditions do. He has something far greater for man to employ his mind and energy with. He desires that man create things of beauty, think beautiful thoughts, grow strong spiritually, mentally and physically. Trust him and live in perfect harmony with his fellow-man. Yet we have drifted so far from this that the plan of God never once enters into our lives.

How far we have missed the goal that Christ set before us! God, not satisfied with merely written statements, sent his only begotten Son to show us in physical form the life intended for us, but how few heed this statement, "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly," Jesus said. The only solution to the salvation of this nation lies in this statement. She must turn from her wickedness and seek the high, elevating influences that the country of Greece sought in her arts, and rely upon the Saviour for the pardon of her many transgressions. This can only be accomplished by reforming the home and the individual in the home.

Although Greece did not know God as we know him to-day, why was it that Greece produced so many men of genius and of spiritual and intellectual power? Because of the uplifting influence that good art, literature, and philosophy posesses, it causes man's brain to be creative and active. In allowing his brain to become active in the fine things of life he gets out of the idle atmosphere that surrounds him and he plunges into the realm of the spiritual world.

Individuals of America, awake to your conditions! Discard your idle pleasures, your divorce courts, your mad run for pleasure, your fine dressing, your extravagant luxuries, your evil thinking, and accept the God-given life that is yours for the asking. Turn your minds and attention to good sculpture, art, music, literature, and things that cause your minds to think in the right channels. Start in your homes training your children in the good things of life, leaving off the evil and vulgar. Study the good philosophy of the ancient Greeks, and, above all, study the words of Christ.

By changing the individual we change the nation, and if we change the nation we may be influential in transforming the world into a place of peace and harmony. Let us first conquer ourselves and then impart to others the way of life. In so doing we will have a heaven on earth and will prepare the world to receive Christ when he shall return to establish his beloved kingdom. Watch and wait, for the time draweth near.

converted world that the Holy Spirit was to abide. Robson of Aberdeen said, "Prior to Pentecost the Apostles were men who had been born of the Spirit; they were sons of God and had been acknowledged as brethren of Jesus Christ." And Swete of Cambridge said, "The gift of Pentecost would have yielded widely different results if it had not fallen on men who were with Jesus and could testify to what they had seen and heard."

The baptism of the Spirit was not only an adequate resource for the Apostles, but it is for us today. Peter said, "The promise is unto you and your children, and unto all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." All questions have not been settled, but some have been superseded. It conforms to New Testament fact and experience to say that an individual may receive the baptism of the Holy Spirit simultaneously with his conversion; or that he may receive it subsequently to his regeneration—witness Cornelius and the Apostles. It is no longer a theory but it is an issue of fact: "Have you received the Holy Ghost?" Mr. Bushnell coined the words "Christing" and "Christed." The present issue is have we a Christing Church and are we Christed Christians? We may say with Paul "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: That we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith" and testify with Simon Peter: "We are witnesses to these things, and so also is the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him."

The baptism of the Holy Spirit produces men of mastery and not men of magic. Men whom the Holy Spirit masters, do not talk so much of their goodness, as they walk in the Spirit and practice the holy principles of self-control, brotherly love, and dedication of life to noble ends. They are not adepts in the magic of self-exploitation or the mimicry of imaginary saints. Spirit filled men do not subordinate mastery to magic.

The motive of contriving magic is wrong. When Simon saw the effects of the Spirit upon the Samaritans he wished to do the easy thing and pay for the power for wrong ends; and Peter said to him, "Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right with God." Motivated by a desire to do hard work in an easy way, to succeed over another regardless, will never lead to Spiritual power. Man may abuse physical and mental powers, but he cannot abuse Spiritual power; though he may lose it. Not to be a greater preacher than some other, nor a more conspicuous layman than another, but to be an effective witness for Christ is the attaining motive.

The Spirit is not ours to be used merely to promote our programs, raise our millions, or add our thousands; but we are to be used by the Holy Spirit as effective witnesses of the great salvation that is in Christ Jesus, who said, "When the Comforter is come . . . he shall testify of me; and ye shall also bear witness." The Holy Spirit is by no means a substitute for the personality and labor of the believer. He will not make tasks smaller, but will give power for harder work, and put the Cross in the heart and the print of the nails in the hands. The word is "ye shall be martyrs after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Let the Church witness with a martyr's faith and zeal and she will speak with authority, enjoy the communion of saints, open up the springs of liberality and accelerate all her evanagelistic, educational and missionary enterprises with spiritual effectiveness. It was the Church of the Spirit's power and martyr's zeal that refused to be consumed in flames of fire, buried in catacombs, or crushed beneath the ruins of falling empires.

The Holy Spirit does not create new religious ideas, nor discover new religious values, but He takes the things of Christ and incarnates them in his people. It is this en-Christed and Spirit-mastered life that will begird human weakness with divine omnipotence and drive away hoary systems of superstition, error and idolatry; loose methods of thinking and living; doomed and tottering philosophies, and monarchs of carnage and crime. The Church's power with God determines her influence over men. Let the experience of Pentecost be perpetuated through this New Year and all the years.

REV. S. S. BOGAN IN HOSPITAL

Rev. A. S. Lutz, D.D., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, sent us the following telegram: "Rev. S. S. Bogan, our pastor at Glenmora, took sick during Conference at Alexanadria. He has been here ever since under the doctors' treatment. They operated on him Sunday (28th.) He is doing as well as could be expected. Let prayer be made for his recovery."

Brother Bogan will have the sympathy of his brethren and they will unite in prayer that he may soon be well again.

REV. C. C. EVANS, PASTOR AT MOSS POINT, MISS., DIES SUDDENLY CHRISTMAS NIGHT IN HIS AUTOMOBILE NEAR PACHUTA

The distressing news of the death of Rev. C. C. Evans, pastor at Moss Point, Miss., brought sorrow to his many friends throughout the State.

Brother Evans had visited relatives at Waynesboro on Christmas day and was en route to Pachuta to visit his daughter, Mrs. E. W. Thornton, when death came. He was found in his car near Pachuta, having died from an acute heart attack.

Charles C. Evans, from the Montrose Circuit, was admitted on trial into the seventy-eighth session of the Mississippi Annual Conference at Brookhaven in 1891, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, presiding. His assignments were as follows: Homewood, 1892; Hillsboro, 1893-95; Shiloh, 1896; Satartia, 1897-1900; Benton, 1901; Roxie and Hamburg, 1902-03; Anguilla, 1904; Lucedale, 1905-06; Heidelberg and Vossburg, 1907-10; Decatur 1911-13; Laurel, Kingston, 1914; Scooba, 1915-16; Bay St. Louis, 1917-18; Canton, 1919-20; Hazlehurst, 1921; Natchez, 1922-26; Centenary, McComb, 1927-28; Waynesboro, 1929; and Moss Point, 1930-31. He had just begun his second year at Moss Point.

Bishop Joseph S. Key ordained him Deacon at Hazlehurst on December 10, 1893; and Bishop W. W. Duncan, Elder, at Yazoo City, December 8, 1895.

Thirty-nine years he went about his work as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ, preaching the Word, and shepherding the people committed to his care. He served on important committees and boards of his Conference. For sixteen years he was a member of the Conference Board of Missions and the last two quadrenniums he was its president. In this capacity he gave intelligent leadership to the cause of missions during one of the most exacting periods of the board's service.

Brother Evans is survived by his wife, Mrs. Josie Davis Evans; three sons: Rev. J. L. Evans, Trinidad, Colorado, (formerly of the Louisiana Conference); Thomas Evans, McGee, Arkansas; and A. B. Evans, Van, Texas; and two daughters: Mrs. Pearl Hutcheson, Louisville, Mississippi, and Mrs. E. W. Thornton, Pachuta.

Rev. W. B. Jones, pastor at Philadelphia, had charge of the funeral services which were held at Heidelberg, Sunday, December 28. Thus the name of another good and true man is added to the "Roll of the Sainted Dead" of his Conference. To his loved ones and all the bereaved, the Advocate extends deepest sympathy.

CHARLES F. NEILL, FATHER OF REV. J. L. NEILL, PASTOR AT CRAWFORD STREET, VICKSBURG, PASSES TO HIS REWARD

(Just before the final forms for this week's Advocate were closed, the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. J. L. Neill's father was received. We join with his congregation and other friends in assurance of sincere sympathy for him and the other loved ones.—Editor.)

Charles F. Neill, the father of J. L. Neill who is our pastor at Vicksburg, died here at Montrose at his home yesterday afternoon following an illness of twenty-five days. He was seventy-three years old, and has been an elder in the Presbyterian Church for fifty-three years. For the last few years he has been Superintendent of the local Presbyterian Sunday School. More than once he has attended the General Assembly of his Church. However, his consecrated wife, who is the sister of Rev. M. L. Burton of Gulfport, has always held her memberhip in the Methodist Church; and Brother Neill himself has always been at home in Methodist company. He was always constant in attendance at Methodist services and Sacrament. For years he was teacher of the Men's Bible Class at our Montrose Methodist Church. Probably his greatest service to the Methodist Church, besides rearing a Methodist minister in his home and Methodist stewards, was in connection with the Mississippi Conference Training School which was located at Montrose for a great number of years. For about thirty years Brother Neill was a member of its Board of Trustees, a part of which time he was even President of the Board, although himself a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Had he lived until the 29th, three more days, he would have lived to celebrate his golden wedding anniversary. His prayer, "Thy will be done," was backed by many years of consecrated service, and I am confident that he has gone to live with Him whose praises he rejoiced to sing while on earth.

Besides various other relatives, he is survived by a brother, Geo. L. Neill, of Montrose; a sister, Mrs. C. G. McCormick, of Heidelberg; his wife; one daughter, Miss Ruby Neill, of Clarksdale; and five sons: Lambert Neill, of Vicksburg; Luther Neill, of Louisville; Lamar Neill, of Jackson; Geo. T. Neill, of Woodville, and Alex Neil, of Tulsa, Okla. One daughter, Mrs. J. M. Ely, departed this life about nine years ago.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the local Presbyterian Church, Rev. T. Barton West, his pastor, having charge, assisted by Rev. W. A. Hall, of Jackson, a former pastor, and the writer.

GEORGE H. JONES,
Pastor, Montrose, Miss.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. T. B. Thrower has been cordially received at Ackerman. The indications are for a good year in the work of the Kingdom.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle is pleasantly situated at Cedar Bluff, Miss. The people have been kind and responsive.

Rev. T. H. King, pastor, Heidelberg, Miss., has our thanks for sending in five subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother King begins the new year with fine prospects.

Rev. R. G. Moore, pastor, Indianola, published an attractive bulletin for the Christmas number. Brother Moore is caring for all the interests of the church committed to his hands.

Rev. W. L. Robinson, in addition to looking after all the interests of his charge at Coffeeville, Miss., is the alert Epworth League Secretary of the Conference Christian Education Board.

Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell have been happily received at Fayette, Miss. No interest of the church will be neglected by these two faithful workers.

The Advocate is appreciative of the services rendered by Mrs. George S. Brown, New Orleans, for writing "Poetical Thoughts" and for two subscriptions sent in recently.

Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Hawkins begin the second year of their interesting pastorate at Jefferson Street, Natchez. Last year was a good year, but the outlook for this year is more encouraging.

Mrs. R. P. Goar, San Pedro, California, sends in her renewal and assures friends in North Mississippi that she is interested in the progress of the church in her old Conference.

Rev. A. Joe Beasley is improved in health and begins his work on the Eucutta circuit with a determination to succeed in every department of the work.

Mr. Anatole Stutes died at his home in Crowley, La., on December 12 and was buried from the Methodist church the day following, services being conducted by Rev. C. K. Smith.

Dr. H. T. Carley, the alert presiding elder of the Shreveport District, announces that the district stewards, pastors and lay leaders of the district are called to meet at the First Church, Shreveport, Thursday, January 8, 10 a. m.

Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, who so royally entertained the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, has the work of the year well planned and the program for the Christmas season was an inspiring one.

Rev. Floyd J. Andrus, who was pastor at Iota, La., for a year, has been awarded a scholarship at Emory University. After spending the holidays with his parents at Eunice, he will leave for Atlanta.

In an article appearing in the Advocate concerning the Methodist Orphanage Sunday School, Jackson, Miss., it was stated, "The Education Department of Millaps College is giving the school literature to the amount of $10 per year." This should have been written $100 per year.

Rev. W. R. Harvell has lost no time in getting his work started on the Minden District. He begins his third year with a good program. The Minden district stewards, pastors, and lay leaders are called to meet at the First Church, Minden, Tuesday, January 13, 10:30 a. m.

Dr. S. A. Steele, Southern Methodism's Grand (Old?) Man, of the Pelican Pines, Mansfield, La., in a communication to the Advocate, wrote in highest terms of Rev. H. W. Rickey, former pastor at Mansfield. Dr. Steele is loyal to his pastors and his church.

Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education, begins his new work with a contagious enthusiasm. The important work of Christian Education will go forward under the leadership of Brother Lord and his co-workers.

The Advocate office appreciated a Chritmas card from Mr. John R. Pepper, who for more than fifty years has been Superintendent of the First Methodist Sunday school at Memphis. He has been a useful man in Methodism and we join with his many friends in wishing him much happiness during the new year.

Mrs. O. E. West, Gattman, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, writes, "It has been in our home over forty years and we could not do without it. I think it gets better all the time. I have done my best to get others to take it." We appreciate the renewal and the kind expression.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, announces that the Grenada District Missionary Institute will be held at First Church, Winona, Thursday, January 8. Mr. H. H. Boswell, district lay leader, is co-operating and a large attendance is desired.

Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Ferguson have received a warm welcome at First Church, Laurel, Miss., and the year promises to be one of progress along all lines of church work. Notwithstanding their indebtedness on their splendid educational annex, we prophesy that the year's work will be one of substantial reduction in the amount and of successful achievement along evangelistic lines.

Upon the appointment of Rev. A. J. Martin as conference evangelist, the St. Helena Echo published the following: "The Methodist Conference last week appointed Rev. A. J. Martin conference evangelist, and although we regret very much to lose him and his good family, we congratulate him on this merited promotion. Greensburg charge was assigned Rev. W. D. Milton, who will come to us from Paterson, La. We extend him a hearty welcome."

The Logansport "Interstate Progress," upon the removal of Brother Fox, had the following to say: "Rev. Geo. Fox, who has served as pastor of the local Methodist church and Longtreet and Bethel churches for the past two years, was transferred to Hodge at the recent conference which was held at Alexandria. Rev. and Mrs. Fox and family have made many friends during their stay here, who regret to have them leave but wish for them success on their new field."

Mrs. Eleanor McFadden Rogers, wife of J. H. Rogers, died at her home in Brookhaven, Miss., December 11. Mrs. Rogers was a faithful member of the Methodist Church since early childhood. Funeral services were held from the church Friday afternoon, December 12, being conducted by Dr. B. F. Jones, who was assisted by Dr. J. A. Smith, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson; Rev. H. V. Lofquist, and Rev. A. F. Crittendon, Presbyterian and Baptist pastors of Brookhaven.

Dr. John S. Chadwick, in reporting the Conferences of Alabama, said, "As in North Alabama, Bishop Ainsworth receives high commendation from the members of the Alabama Conference. He gave us a most satisfactory administration, this in the difficult task of the assignment of the preachers and in his presidency of the Conference. His careful attention to every interest inspired confidence in his leadership. And his emphasis always on the chief task of the Church, evangelism and the deepening of the spiritual life of the people, heartened us for the work that is just ahead." During the 1922-26 quadrennium Bishop Ainsworth gave aggressive and successful leadership to the Conferences in Mississippi.

The General Evangelists of our church at their annual meeting held in Memphis in December reported that in 306 revivals held by them during 1930, 21,551 persons made profession of faith; 8,508 united with the Methodist church, and 8,016 united with other churches. Rev. James M. Smith, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, reported that 3,599 people had made profession of faith in the meetings which he had held during the year, which was the largest number reported by any evangelist. Dr. J. W. Perry, Home Secretary of the General Board of Missions, was chairman of the meeting and in addition to the evangelists, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington and Bishop Arthur J. Moore were present.

The Mansfield Enterprise, in speaking of the work of Rev. H. W. Rickey, published the following: "The Louisiana Conference, at its recent session in Alexandria, saw proper to transfer Rev. H. W. Rickey from the pastorship of the Mansfield Methodist Church to Abbeville. The annual change of ministers is a general rule of that church, and it may be for the best, but we desire to say that the removal of Mr. Rickey caused practically universal regret among all classes and all denominations. He is a superb pastor, an effective preacher, and commanded the love and respect of all our people, and especially that of his own congregation. We wish him all the happiness possible at his new home, and we know that he will discharge his duty well and faithfully."

Dr. E. O. Watson, editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, in writing of Bishop Candler's presidency over the South Carolina Conference, said, "His wit and wisdom created an atmosphere that was pleasing and however some might at times have felt a call-down kept all in good humor, smoothed what might have become acrimonious debate, and all in all the great Conference felt that Bishop Candler, in the providence of God, had come to us for just such a time as this. The vigor of mind and greatness of heart of this premier bishop of our Methodism has known no abatement. We are more than glad to have the last quadrennium of active service of this Chief Pastor, the calendar limit fixed by the last General Conference automatically retiring him at the General Conference of 1934." Louisianians and Mississippians are not surprised at the Bishop giving satisfaction over the conferences which he holds.

Dr. R. H. Harper has for some years been numbered in the brilliant succession of editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate—a succession that included H. N. McTyeire, John C. Keener, Linus Parker and C. B. Galloway, who all later occupied the Episcopal office with distinction. Dr. Harper at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference re-entered the pastorate and was appointed to serve the First Church, of Lake Charles, one of the most highly developed and most rapidly growing churches in the Conference. The new church building, among the most handsome in the State, was constructed under the pastoral supervision of Dr. R. H. Wynn. Dr. Harper is a graduate of Centenary College and exhibits some of the solid traits of his lamented father, the Rev. J. D. Harper, for many years a strong and striking figure in the Louisiana Conference.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

The Grenada Sentinel of December 12 contained an article concerning Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, the new pastor at Grenada, as follows: "Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, who has just recently begun his first year as pastor of the Grenada Methodist Church, came here from Greenville, where he served as presiding elder for four years. Since coming to Grenada, Mr. Lipscomb has made a deep impression on those who have got to know him and Grenada Methodists feel fortunate that he was assigned to this charge. In the Greenville Democrat-Times, after his final Sunday in the delta city, an account of the farewell tribute paid him by the 'Big Brothers Bible Class' was published and The Sentinel is reproducing this comment in order to show partially the great esteem in which the minister was held in Greenville. The comment follows: 'Last Sunday was another "big day" at the Big Brothers Bible Class. A big crowd was in attendance to hear the farewell message of presiding elder Lipscomb. L. M. Lipscomb has completed his fourth year as presiding elder of the Greenville District and is soon to leave Greenville to take up his work in another district. His address was a masterpiece, and quite a large number of those attending the class stated it was the best they had ever heard. The songs that were sung by the members of the class were Mr. Lipscomb's favorite songs.'"

The funeral services of MRS. MARTHA SUSAN ELMORE, wife of P. M. Elmore, of Durant, was held from the Durant Methodist Church, Saturday afternoon, December 13. Rev. S. A. Brown, her pastor, assisted by Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Batesville, a former pastor, and Rev. J. S. Riser, pastor of the Durant Baptist Church, had charge of the services. She was 84 years old and had been married 56 years. Her husband, P. M. Elmore, was for a number of years chairman of the board of stewards of the Methodist Church, and her son, Dr. R. C. Elmore, was his father's successor and served for many years as a steward. She was a faithful member of the Durant Methodist Church.

ANDREW PRICE, of Toomsuba, Lauderdale County, Miss., suffered instant and tragic death near his home on October 20, 1930. Brother Price was one of the biggest hearted men I have ever known and one of the best friends I ever had. He was as close to me as a brother and while I was preaching his funeral I felt it was the service of one of my own loved ones. It means more than tongue can tell to have a true friend.

Brother Price leaves his wife and several children and other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his death. It was a sad day in the town of Toomsumba when Andrew Price was buried. Let me say to his wife and children that you have suffered an irreparable loss. I will always cherish his memory and pray for his loved ones. Let us all be true so that when we stand before our God our banners of victory will be unfurled.

His former pastor,

A. J. LEGGETT.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. MARY WHITE VEAZEY, was born July 18, 1852. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. White, were pioneer settlers of Tate County. From these brave, courageous, trustworthy, Christian forebears Mrs. Veazey had a great heritage.

In early womanhood Mrs. Veazey was married to Mr. F. F. Veazey, one of Tate County's most substantial citizens and business men, who preceded her to the glory land twenty-two years. Her marriage to Mr. Veazey was a happy one. To this union God gave five children, four sons and one daughter. One son, John Hoyt, had already passed away some years ago, but not until she had seen him grow into manhood, married and with a family of his own.

The other sons, C. W., W. P., F. F. and the daughter, Mrs. T. J. Cooper, are all citizens of Coldwater and are always actively engaged in both civic and church enterprises. We see the life of this good mother examplified in the lives of her sons and daughter. Especially it is true with her daughter, Mrs. T. J. Cooper, who very worthily is following in the footprints of her sainted mother. It is useless for me to say that the home this good mother made for her husband and children was a hapy one. Even in her old age young people loved her and reverenced her name.

As a member of the church, the Methodist Church never had a more loyal, earnest, faithful worker. Early in life she gave her name and life to the church, and heart to the Lord. For over thirty years she directed the activities of the Woman's Missionary Society as its president. It was with this auxiliary of the church that she gave her time, service, devotion and means. No Methodist preacher ever had a more ardent friend and supporter in the work of the church than was she.

In Mrs. Veazey there was nothing more sublime than her positiveness of character. She did not borrow color from the group which she happened to be in, but she always lent color to her group. She was open and above board. Being positive in her nature, she was certain of her relationship with Jesus Christ. There were no uncertainties about Him Who is the Way, the Truth and the Life. She spoke as did John: "We know we have passed from death unto life." And with Paul: "I know Whom I have believed." To her the Bible was like a needle to the north pole, it pointed heavenward.

Mrs. Veazey was a great sufferer. Two times in life she had the misfortune of falling and breaking her hip. Resulting from the last accident, she was forced to take her bed and there for more than three years she lay calmly, serenely, with all the patience of a Job and all the heroism of a soldier. The end did not come unexpectedly to her or her friends. She was ready. For a long time she had been looking for His coming and some times wondering why He delayed. But on October 3, about 10 o'clock at night, with the attending nurses, the immediate family, and a few close friends standing by, she laid down all that was mortal, stepped on the Chariots of God, and went ever to be with her Lord. Sunday morning, October 5, with a large number of friends and relatives attending, her body was borne by those bereft to the church that she loved much. Here the obsequies were conducted by Dr. V. C. Curtis, her former pastor, and this writer, assisted by Rev. W. W. Grafton, pastor of the Baptist church. Her body was laid to rest amidst a great floral offering in the cemetery at Coldwater to await the resurrection morning.

"Good night," Mrs. Veazey, we shall say, "Good morning" over there.

Her Pastor,

W. C. BEASLEY.

FROM EUCUTTA, MISS.

Personal Notice

I was surprised to learn at Conference that so many of my brethren were under the imression that my health had broken down again and that I had been sick all the year and was gradually getting worse. I am very happy to correct this impression. I have had good health, for which I am devoutly thankful. I had a cold before Conference, but came through with flying colors.

I am here at Eucutta for this year under appointment. I shall do my best for a full year's work for my people on this charge.

I desire the prayers of my brethren for me and mine.

I pray for you.

Yours in Him,

A. JOE BEASLEY.

WORLD CONFERENCE ON WORK FOR BLIND

More than 10,000 blind children participated in Christmas celebrations throughout the United States. Christmas day without sight of Christmas trees or other holiday decorations, and approximately 50,000 partially seeing children had only dim visual impressions of the joyous occasion. Their happiness is assured in various institutions as well as in private homes on this particular day; but the multitude of problems raised throughout the year by the welfare of blind children will be gone into with special care by the World Conference on Work for the Blind, which meets in New York City next April 13, according to Edward M. Van Cleave, American member of the international committee which is making arrangements for the conference.

Some of the plans for the World Conference were made public here by Mr. Van Cleave, who represented the United States at a meeting of the Committee on Personnel and Program in Hamburg, Germany, recently. Mr. Van Cleave is Principal of the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind, Pelham Parkway and Williamsbridge Road, one of the first schools for the blind in America, which will celebrate its 100th anniversary in 1932.

"Among the principal matters concerning children to be discussed," said Mr. Van Cleave, "are the courses of study for blind children and vocational guidance to enable them to find self-respecting places in the community; experimental work in the psychology and education of the blind; and the intricate training of blind children with other disabilities, such as the deaf-blind, the blind feeble-minded, the crippled blind, and the emotionally unstable blind.

"The objects of the World Conference are: first, to make common cause among the workers for the blind in all nations with a view to bringing to pass a feeling of friendship; secondly, to bring knowledge of the best work being done for the blind in different countries to the notice of other countries; and, thirdly, to improve the standard and the status of work for the blind throughout the world. These purposes are sought in their double bearing on public opinion and on those already engaged in the work. President Hoover forwarded invitations to 50 different governments, and 30 nations have already indicated they will send their specialists on welfare of the blind as delegates.

"The United States is one of the most progressive countries dealing with the care and education of blind children. Nearly 6,000 pupils are enrolled in the 61 residential schools for the blind, private and public. In addition, there are day school classes for the blind in 18 cities in the United States; the first day school for the blind was organized in the city of Chicago in 1900.

"Many States now have appropriations which provide funds for the hiring of 'readers' for blind students attending institutions of higher learning. Owing to the limited market for special books for the blind, their publication has never been commercially possible; school books for these 'finger readers' have been largely supplied by the federal government during the last half century, operating through the American Printing House for the Blind in Louisville, Ky."

NOTICE TO PUBLICITY SUPERINTENDENTS

Mississippi Conference

New report blanks were mailed to each publicity superintendent in October. Please fill these out fully and mail to me by January 1, 1931. Thanks.

MRS. T. B. COTTRELL,
Supt. Literature.

At the December business meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church at Batesville, the annual election of officers was held and routine matters taken up looking toward the work of the society for the new Conference year.

Those chosen were: Mrs. E. B. Ferrell, president; Miss Daisy Pollard, vice-president; Mrs. Russell L. Harmon, recording secretary; Mrs. J. E. Cunningham, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Claude Smythe, treasurer; Mrs. J. C. Price, local treasurer; Mrs. R. P. Neblett, superintendent of children's work; Mrs. Louise Perkins, superintendent of mission and Bible study; Mrs. T. T. O'Bryant, superintendent of Christian, social relations; Miss Marguerette Carothers, superintendent of literature and publicity; Mrs. M. E. Jarrett, superintendent of supplies; Mrs. C. E. Flint, superintendent of local work; Mrs. W. E. Chapman, calendar clerk of year book; Mrs. J. B. Carothers, agent for the voice.

MESSAGE TO LOCAL SUPERINTENDENTS

Word has come to the central office that a number of superintendents in local churches are disorganizing their societies in view of the presentation of the new plan of the Board of Christion Education at the annual conferences held in the summer and this fall.

The general secretary of the Board of Christian Education and the general Secretary of the Board of Missions are agreed that the Young People's Missionary Society will continue in each local church until the pastor of the church is ready to set up the Young People's Department, and to launch the new program in his church. Then, and only then, will the superintendent discontinue her organization..

The young people's department in the Board of Christian Education has not yet been completed. A two months' extension has been granted the Board in which to set up this department. It is thought that the young people's program will be ready by the first of the year. The secretaries of the Board of Christian Education ask that the work of the Young Peoples' Missionary Society be held intact until the new program is ready so that there will be no loss in the transition.

May I state again that no superintendent will disorganize her group until the young people's department is set up in her church. When the new department is organized, the young people in her society between 12 and 23 years of age, inclusive, will become members of the young people's department and the members over 23 will be organized into a young woman's circle of the adult auxiliary. If a young woman's circle is already organized they will be asked to join it. If there are young married women or young professional women in the society who find it impossible to attend the Sunday evening Epworth League service they will have the privilege of membership in the young women's circle.

We have every opportunity to complete our year's work without interruption. Special efforts are being made to carry out our full program and to meet the pledge of our department to the Conference. This can only be done by the continued loyalty, enthusiasm, and diligent efforts of the Conference and local superintendents. May we each one prove faithful to our task!—Julia Lake Stevens, Council Superintendent of Young People.

TO THE NEWTON DISTRICT

Greetings and good-bye: Having served as district secretary of your district for three years, the time has come when it behooves me to pass the torch to other hands. Mrs. James W. Abney of Montrose has agreed to take over the work, at least until Conference. She is an exquisite person, and, as one pastor said, "a combination of consecration and intelligence rarely found." Give her your loyal support, and your loving friendship.

The reports of the fourth quarter should be in the making. Sacrifice until it hurts, and put our district over the top. These reports are to come to me.

Yours in the work,
BESSIE C. HOPKINS.

PROHIBITION POINTS

Bar Association Poll

The American Bar Association vote of 13,779 to 6,340 in favor of repeal of the 18th Amendment, represented only three-fourths of the entire membership.

And in this connection, Edward T. Lee, dean of the John Marshall Law School, Chicago, bids us remember:

1. That the American Bar Association is composed of about 20 per cent of the lawyers of the country.
2. That eight States and the District of Columbia, where people do not vote, contain more than one-half of the membership.
3. That of its 27,000 odd members far more than one-half live in cities of 50,000 and over. New York (including Brooklyn), Chicago, Boston, Washington, D. C., Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit and St. Louis, eight cities, contain more than one-fourth of the membership.
4. That the total vote cast by the American Bar Association for repeal of the 18th Amendment, 13,770, represents about one in ten of the total number of lawyers in the United States.
5. That the result of the vote merely discloses what is no news, that cities are wet while the country is dry.

"Church" Temperance Society Dies

The Rev. Dr. James T. Empringham, at one time head of the notorious wet organization masquerading as the "Church Temperance Society," is no longer a clergyman of the Episcopal Church. He was unfrocked by Bishop William T. Manning of New York.

"The action," said the New York Times, November 17, 1930, "took place . . . after Bishop Manning had frowned upon his methods of conducting anti-prohibition propaganda and his management of the Health Education Society Clinic."

The Church Temperance Society was as false a thing as the wets have organized. The character of its leadership is understood by the fact that not only has Dr. Empringham been removed from the ministry of his church, but has also been in difficulties with New York State authorities because of the character of his Health Education Society.

And yet this was the sort of thing on which the wets have based much of their assumptions.

Deaths from alcoholism are declining under prohibition. The census figures show an actual and proportional decline in 1929 compared with 1928.

The total number of deaths from alcoholism in 1929 was 4,339, or a death rate from that cause of 3.7 per 100,000 of population, while in 1928 the total was 4,627, or a rate of 4.1 per 100,000.

Fred Pabst' Million

There were nearly 800 brewers in the United States before prohibition; many of these remain, using their breweries for profitable purposes such as the manufacture of ice cream.

Only ONE old-time brewer, Fred Pabst, has said he is spending money to expand his single brewery in the expectation that there will be an early resumption of the beer business; and Mrs. Boole, of the W. C. T. U., seems to have effectively closed Mr. Pabst's lips by telling him that if he is really investing money dependent on the modification of prohibition for his dividends the money will remain idle a long time, which is not good business.

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish,—no danger.

Christian Education Institutes for the districts will be held as follows:

McComb, February 11; Hattiesburg, at Magee, February 6; Jackson, at Grace, February 10; Meridian, at Daleville, February 4; Newton, at Lake, February 12; Seashore, at Second Church, Gulfport, February 17; Vicksburg, at Port Gibson, February 19. All the sessions begin at 9:30 a. m. and close at 3 p. m.

There was a fine article from Rev. J. Q. Schislor in regard to the Local Church Board of Christian Education. We trust that you read the article and that you will be profited by it.

The Epworth League Cabinet met at Broad Street Church, December 20. This was a very fine meeting and the League reporter will give a full report in the Advocate. We are praying that the fourth Sunday of December will be a red letter day for the cause of missions. We are praying that every church will be represented by an offering.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The workers are very busy planning the work for this conference year. We are planning to go forward in the work in every phase of its program.

1. As soon as we can get to you we want to hold a workers' conference in every charge of the Conference. At these conferences we want to help the local people plan their work and carry out their plans.

2. One of the most important phases of the work is that of our training program. We are in position now to do more in this important and needy field than ever before. We should have more standard and Cokesbury schools, classes and individual study than at any time before. If you are planning for the training of your workers we want you to get in touch with us as soon as possible.

3. Plans are already under way for the largest and best Epworth League or Young People's assembly at Grenada in June that we have ever had. The program for this assembly will be given out as soon as it can be perfected.

4. The Conference standard training school at Grenada in June will be held just as before. A chance will be given for workers to take special training at this school. We are planning some outstanding features during this session of the Grenada school.

5. The work of the Daily Vacation Church or Bible Schools will be continued. In this field the North Mississippi Conference led the entire church last year, holding more of these schools than any other Conference. Miss Maggie May Jones has consented to do some voluntary work in setting up these schools this year. You should make your plan for a school.

These are just a few things that are immediately before us. Others will follow. Join with us in your prayers and plans for the greatest year of the many successful ones that we have already had in this work of our Lord.

R. G. LORD.

EPWORTH LEAGUE

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Epworth League Organized

Mrs. E. C. Driskell has organized the Epworth League at the Lambert Methodist church with the following officers in charge: President, Evelyn Newton; Vice-president, Mary Douglas Brewer; Secretary and Treasurer, Blanche Brewer; Pianist, Thelma Driskell. First superintendent, Darrel Cobb; Second superintendent, Wade Dudley Brewer; Third superintendent, Thelma Driskell; Fourth superintendent, Katherine Savage.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Leaguers: As we face the new year may we face it with a great faith and with a determination to do our best in the work of the church. The new year should be a challenge to us and we should accept this challenge courageously. If this is our purpose as we enter upon the duties of the new year and if we are persistent we shall finish the work of this year with joy.

The new year should challenge us because it offers new opportunities to us. Many opportunities came to us during the old year. Some of them we accepted and some of them we rejected. But whatever our failures may have been during the old year the new year brings new and possibly greater opportunities. We have the opportunity of being more faithful than we were last year. May we as Leaguers resolve to be more faithful to the duties which have been committed to us. We can be more faithful as members of the church and we ought to be more faithful to the church. The church has meant more to us than we often realize. We should appreciate what the church has done for us. Let us be faithful in that we shall help support all the institutions of the church.

The privilege of becoming more intelligent is another challenge of the new year. An ignorant zeal is one of the most dangerous things we can have in the church. It may cause us to crucify people. It is such a pity for us to go blundering along in the world and doing things just because other people are doing them. We have the wonderful opportunity of learning. There are so many ways of acquiring information. There is so much splendid literature that is published especially for young people. May we read more of this good literature during the new year. It would be a fine thing if we as Leaguers would read our Bible more. The Bible is a wonderful book. It has helped others and it will help us if we use it as we should.

The new year will also bring to us the privilege of making new friendships. What a privilege that is. Very often we let some of our friends slip away from us before we realize the true value of friendship. Our friends are such an inspiration to us. There are so many things which they do for us, so many joys which come into our lives as a result of our association with our friends. But it is even a greater privilege to be a friend. It is more blessed to give than to receive. Our friendships will mean more to us if we give as well as receive.

The new year is a challenge to us because it offers to us the opportunity of having our faith strengthened. The weakness of faith in the lives of people was a thing which disappointed Jesus many times during his earthly ministry. A great faith was something that always pleased Jesus. The same thing will please him today. Oh we of little faith. How often would Jesus work wonders with us if we only had faith. How often we impede the progress of his kingdom by our lack of faith. The Bible teaches us that Jesus is the same yesterday, today and forever. He met the needs of people who trusted him yesterday. He will supply our needs today and tomorrow if we trust him. May we go forth into the duties of the new year with a great faith in the living God.

We hope that much progress may be made by our young people this year in the work of the church. We trust that our great church will be more keenly interested in the welfare of our young people and that our young people will serve the church with a greater devotion than they have ever known.

Yours sincerely,
WM. L. ROBINSON.

WHAT I MUST DO

By Emil F. Colbert

Man has much to do if he would reach perfection. Yet is well rewarded if he makes progress towards this goal.

In order to be strong, brave, courageous and hopeful I must watch what I think, govern what I say, and understand what I do. For I must live right and act right by knowing how to choose the good and how to avoid and resist the evil.

I must build a house, and that "house built without hands" is my character; because my character is what I am in the eyes of my own conscience. I must let my conscience be a rule and guide in daily life and conduct, earnestly endeavoring to be true to my many obligations of serving and helping mankind.

I must constantly refuse to cloud my thoughts with hatred, anger, deceit and revenge, as these are the tantalizing things that make life miserable.

I must undestand whom to obey and adore, to have strength and courage to do right—for in Thee I place my trust, never let me be ashamed, let integrity be my goal, and "lead me into the land of uprightness." I must seek to understand the method or remedy to avoid suffering and escape punishment; it is by the way of wisdom, the "narrow way."

Follow the Master

I must listen attentively, and heed the dictation of my conscience; it is the "still small voice" speaking to warn, to guide my thoughts, my ways from wrong to right. I must strive in daily efforts to follow the Master, not personality. I must love God with all my heart. I must love my home, my country and my neighbor as myself, and abide by the "golden rule."

I must practice the things I preach in order to prove my sincerity. I must keep my mind full of wholesome thoughts, then will I find no time to engage in wrongdoing. I must persistently endeavor to look for the good that is in every one, then I will have no opportunity to search for human imperfections.

I must subdue my passions, control undesirable habits, govern unnecessary appetites, and also destroy thoughts of coveting, deceit, dishonesty, lust and hypocrisy before I can be of help to others that need my help; and in overcoming some fault, some temptation, I must not leave it where it will tempt and influence others. I must keep myself morally clean, and in this way help and influence others to so do.

I must be truthful, reliable in what I say and promise. I must be firm, steadfast in my dealings, upon the square with my fellowman, if I am to command the respect of friendship and good citizenship.

To be a man, I must be obedient to duty when opportunity calls. I must be true and sincere with self, before I can be so with others, and I cannot possibly fail by the same course to be true to God, too. I must be ready and willing to do my part the best I know how. I must contribute my share; then I shall find no purpose to steal from my employer or any man.

I must endeavor to be kind, considerate, reasonable, just and charitable in order to render a fair and impartial consideration. I must watch my daily opportunities, be careful of my environment, conduct and motive in my efforts in order to give a lecture on Brotherly Love to impress our true dependence of each upon the other.

I must be agreeable, peaceful, useful and helpful, and thus supply enlightenment, improvement and encouragement to be a light that benefits others. I must be joyful, thankful, grateful, hopeful and cheerful to appreciate the Light.

I must have trials, tribulations, difficulties, disappointments and experience hardships, taste of the "bitter cup" of persecution, to realize and appreciate patience, the achievements of humility. I must have His love to chasten and scourge the temple of pride, for pride and humility dwell not together in the secret place of the "Most High."

Divine Promise

All these things I find I must do in order to reach the goal and understand wisdom. Wisdom, intelligently discerned, not only enables man to acquire the art to live, to meet duty, to bear life's trials and purposes, but it makes its abode within, and becomes the secret of adjustment toward higher attainments of life's enjoyment and its successes in a consciousness that is beyond the things of this world; who so findeth wisdom and getteth understanding findeth life. It was King Solomon who said, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding." It was the Master who said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day . . . (for . . . I am that bread of life."—Supreme Council Bulletin.

They May Differ on Theology But Missionaries are Agreed on Vicks

Its Value for Treating Colds Recognized by All Denominations, Korean Missionary Writes.

"Vicks is very popular as a household remedy among the missionaries of Korea," writes J. E. Fisher, treasurer of the Korea Mission, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"It is used by all denominations, I think," continues Mr. Fisher. "They may differ on points of theology, but they all agree when it comes to the value of 'Vicks' for treating a cold."

This agreement about Vicks among people of different creeds extends also to people of different nationalities all over the world. In almost every tongue, people have come to associate the name "Vicks VapoRub" with "relief for colds."

Though used all over the world, it is surprising how many people in this country are not familiar with some of the most effective methods of using Vicks for various cold troubles.

For instance, a most convenient way to use Vicks when you feel a cold coming on is to place some up each nostril and snuff well back. Also, try melting a teaspoonful in a bowl of boiling water and inhaling the steaming vapors for several minutes. Repeat as often as needed for relief and comfort. The vapors of Vicks have a most remarkable effect in clearing away that "stuffed-up" feeling of a head cold. When sore throat accompanies the cold, place some Vicks on the back of the tongue and let it trickle down the throat as it slowly melts.

Of course these treatments do not replace the "rubbing-on" of Vicks at bedtime for its twofold action during the night. It is this long continued double attack on colds that makes Vicks so effective.

A GOOD SERMON AND A WONDERFUL SCENE

By Rev. W. Fred Long

The first Sunday in November at [illegible], Rev. [illegible], presiding elder, preached and held the last quarterly conference before the conference at Vicksburg.

The Holy Spirit was present with uplifting and convicting power. A fine young man, apparently twenty-five or more years of age, responded to the call of the preacher, stepping to the front of the altar, confessed his sins, renewed his faith, and walked over and placed his arms around his father, J. W. Wellman. It was a scene long to be remembered. A noble looking young woman was also saved.

The writer had the honor of being present and was a guest of Brother and Sister Wellman for dinner that day. How happy they were over the blessing that had come to their son and to their hearts. The untimely death of this Sunday school superintendent and good man, who was in a few nights killed by robbers, is heart-breaking.

ECHOES FROM GRENADA

Dear Editor: After four years spent in the "Queen City of the Delta," we said good-bye to our dear friends in Greenville and moved to Grenada November 19.

To say that the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places is stating it mildly. We are delighted to be here among such whole-souled, friendly and kind-hearted folks, who have given us a warm welcome to their hearts and homes. Brother Holder and his capable wife did a fine work during their four years' stay and left friends who love them dearly.

We have large congregations every Sabbath, and a splendid choir under the direction of the efficient organist, Mrs. Mohler.

We are so glad to have as our close neighbors the presiding elder and his interesting family.

Grenada is a fine old town and Grenada College should be the pride of Mississippi Methodism. Though not large in numbers this year on account of hard times, it has a choice set of girls who attend church and are an inspiration to the pastor.

Last Sunday afternoon, about fifty of the college girls gave a lovely Christmas pageant in the auditorium, which was thoroughly enjoyed by a large, appreciative audience. The sweet-faced Madonna bending over the cradle, the angels with their white wings, the shepherds and the wise men, all combined to form a lovely picture, specially when the colored lights played upon the last scene. During the pageant and while the ten nations in costume marched on the stage one by one and knelt before the Christ child, the chorus girls rendered beautiful Christmas hymns.

The Methodists of Mississippi should be loyal to Grenada College, as Dr. Countiss has given and is still giving his life to the great work of building Christian character and ideals among our girls.

DELTA PREACHERS MEET

The Sunflower Methodist Ministers' Association met in regular session with the Dublin Methodist Church, Tuesday, December 16, 1930, at 11 a. m. In the absence of the president, Rev. W. H. Shipman, the pastor-host, Rev. G. H. Boyles, called the meeting to order, and announced a song, after which Rev. J. C. Wasson led in prayer. Rev. E. C. Driskell was selected to preach, using for a text Hebrew 2:3. Rev. L. A. McKeown, closed the services with prayer and the benediction. Lunch was served by the ladies in the Sunday school room.

The afternoon meeting was called to order by Brother Boyles, and E. C. Driskell was chosen secretary for the meeting.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of Greenwood, president; E. C. Driskell of Lambert, secretary. The January meeting will be held in connection with the District Missionary Institute.

The association went on record as opposing the use of Sunday picture shows, slot machines or any other Sabbath desecration in violation of the law, in the name of the Church and for the use of charity.

A rising vote of thanks was given the pastor, and the good people of Dublin for their splendid hospitality.

Strongest

"Gerald suffered with his stomach and bowels until he was listless and weak," says Mrs. B. E. Geren, 822 West Main St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

"Now he's the strongest boy I know. I gave him California Fig Syrup because Mother used it. It increased his appetite, regulated his bowels, helped his digestion."

Nothing could be more convincing than the way thousands of mothers are praising California Fig Syrup to show how it acts to build-up and strengthen headachy, bilious, half-sick, constipated children.

Your doctor will approve the use of this pure vegetable product as often as impure breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness warn of constipation — or to keep bowels open in colds or children's diseases.

Cairo, Ill.—"I have used Black-Draught in my home for fifteen years, and it is a splendid medicine," writes Mrs. Bernice Brack, of 230 Thirty-second Street, this city. "Sometimes I am subject to colds and constipation, and I find it to be the finest thing for this.

"My mother used Thedford's Black-Draught in her home for years, and it was there that I began taking it. She thought it was so good that she had me to use it, and I have never found any medicine that would take its place satisfactorily.

"I find Black-Draught fine for sour stomach and gas. A few doses taken for several nights rid the system of poison due to constipation and it makes me feel like a new person.

"I try to keep Black-Draught always on hand, and I treat all small illness with it. I can certainly recommend it for I have found it very good and dependable."

In thousands of families, this medicine has a corner all its own on the medicine shelf.

BACK YOUR CONFERENCE ORGAN

FROM KREOLE, MISS.

Dear Editor: Will you allow me to give a few facts from Kreole?

Our people gave us a most gracious welcome upon our return from Conference. We went right to work and have our year's program mapped out and are well into same.

We have paid an additional $100 on our new parsonage since Conference. We are also planning a New Year's dinner for the same cause. Our aim is to pay it in full this year.

We have organized a church at Pecan, where we had only had a "preaching place" before. We also organized an enthusiastic Epworth League there last evening. We also have a Sunday school there. We have had three Sundays of perfect attendance in the last month.

We look forward with zeal to the new year and its duties and opportunities.

Best wishes far a merry Christmas and a healthy, happy, prosperous new year.

Your Brother,

L. D. HAUGHTON, P. C.

BALD NO LONGER
Mr. E. R. Colwill, 1419½ 4th Ave., Seattle, Washington, was partially bald for almost ten years. He had given up hope of ever having a full head of hair again. One day he tried JAPANESE OIL. Now his entire head is covered with thick, luxuriant hair.
If you are bald, if your hair is falling out ask your druggist for a bottle of inexpensive JAPANESE OIL—the antiseptic liniment. Use it according to directions. If your hair roots are not yet dead JAPANESE OIL will probably help you as it helped Colwill.

WINTER IS HERE—LIGHT THE FIRES

Another winter solstice has arrived. The calendar but marks a fact of nature. Trees are stripped of their foliage, meadows have yielded to frosty mists, and mountains are wrapped in blankets of snow.

Winter is here among the nations, international amity is clouded with turbulence and uncertainty. Upsetting revolts in 1930 forced changes in the governments of Bolivia, Argentina, Peru, Guatemala, and Brazil. While Spain, Cuba and Chile are not free from internicine strife; China and India continue to have internal troubles a-plenty; France and Italy are not enjoying cordial relations, and Russia, officially, gropes along in its godless gait. No nation is without its stress and strain.

Winter has fallen across the economic life of the world. Millions upon millions of men are out of employment, wheels of industry turn but slowly, the song of the laborer is silenced, and dire distress prevails in unnumbered homes.

The icy blasts of immorality have swept across America so fiercely that the Constitution has been ridiculed, thieves and thugs have become gentlemen (?) of high finance and have pre-empted many a front page column in daily newspapers, while felonious crimes, graft, and petty misdemeanors infest all sections of the land. Salacious literature has poured from presses like inky streams, to gurgitate the minds of young and old. Free love-ism would disrupt the home, and desecrate temples of worship. Social standards have been so compromised that morals are menaced.

The beacon lights of spiritual life, for too many, have flickered into smouldering embers and the radiance of Christian joy has waned down to the drudgery of lifeless toil.

Winter is here—light the fires!

The steps toward World Peace as expressed in peace pacts, disarmament conferences, and councils for better international understanding should be sustained; and settling differences between nations by arbitration instead of war should not be discouraged by the failure of the United States to enter the Permanent Court of International Justice. Reasonable reservations have been accepted and the United States should follow the star of Woodrow Wilson and the leading of President Hoover and help establish equity among the nations.

SOUTHWIDE MEETING AT JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

The Fourth Southern Baptist Sunday School Conference, which is a Southwide meeting, will be held in Jackson, Miss., January 13-16.

This will be a great conference and the city of Jackson, led by the versatile editor of the Baptist Record, Dr. P. I. Lipsey, and pastors of the various churches, will extend genuine Southern hospitality to their hundreds of visitors.

The main sessions of the conference are to be held in the City Auditorium, on Congress and Pearl Streets. Departmental groups will meet in the several nearby churches.

This conference will afford the Methodists of this section an opportunity to look in upon the activities of a great sister denomination in her Christian education plans and programs, and catch something of the spirit that is carrying them forward in the South.

Congratulations and best wishes to the Southern Baptists.

Economic conditions in the United States are better than in the rest of the world, though here employers of labor can assist in dispelling the gloom of the unemployed and help promote a sane era of prosperity by adopting the principles of the Golden Rule. The laborer must help himself by frugal habits, honest toil and rigid economy.

An intelligent patriotism must replenish the Torch of Liberty and assert itself in maintaining respect for the Constitution, observance of law, and holding high social standards.

The darkness of defeatism—a conclusion that the task is an enforced burden and sacrificial toil will be unavailing—can't be "a pillar of fire by night." Magnifying mistakes of the past will never lead to mastery in the present. The Church needs to light new fires of faith in God and herself, linger at the temple-altars of prayer until the cleansing fire falls and the glow of a renewed consecration shines in the face of the redeemed; then the bitterest winter will give away to spring, hard work will be done with a song, and victory in life and success in service will be her reward. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."

ARE PREACHERS WORTH THEIR PAY?

Soon "What has been estimated by the board of stewards for the support of the preacher in charge for the current year?" will have been asked in every charge within our Conferences. It is an important question and should be answered after due consideration and consultation with the preacher involved.

The preacher deserves the most liberal salary that can reasonably be provided. His expenses are heavy and demands are exacting. Keeping up a home, owning and operating an automobile, educating the children, and tithing his income for the Church and benevolent causes, are some of the unavoidable items in his account.

Does the preacher earn his salary? This is a pertinent question and there is nothing ungracious in asking it. We make bold to state that the preacher, with an occasional possible exception, produces his salary—and more.

All the values that create wealth and conserve the community are not grown in fields, dug up from mines, hewn down in forests, forged on anvils, nor written in contracts of exchange. The preacher who lives a holy life, sets a wholesome example, visits the sick, prays in homes and hospitals, fellowships with little children, inspires youth, and comforts the aged, counsels the distressed, encourages projects for civic betterment, promotes good will, and preaches a pure gospel, puts something into the community that makes him second to no man in productive toil.

A surgeon said to a Methodist pastor in Nashville: "You visit and pray with my patient ——— every day. I have reached the limit of my resources, but I observe after you have been there and prayed that there is improvement." The doctor was the only one who received so much per visit.

A leading business man of a Virginia city who heard his pastor preach one Sunday evening, was graciously blessed. Telephoned the pastor to come to his office the next morning and said, "See this gun? I had determined to take my life, but heard your sermon last night and am a new man today. I expect to use my life for His glory?" Doubtless that one sermon saved in actual dollars and cents, in taxes alone, more than the preacher's salary.

ONE BOOK FOR ALL PEOPLE

BY REV. JAMES I. VANCE, D.D., LL.D.

The Bible is one book for all people. It is one book unique and commanding among all the books of the world, and in the midst of all the literature of time, because of its unity and universality. These two features validate the claims it makes.

Made of Many Books

It is one book made up of many books. It was written in three different languages during fifteen centuries by more than fifty separate authors. It exists in two Testaments, one containing thirty-nine volumes, and the other twenty-seven volumes. These sixty-six books, written by men of different races and tongues and culture, discuss themes as widely varied as life, and sweep across epochs embracing five great civilizations. Each of these books has a definite message and stands apparently complete in itself. Collusion between the authors was difficult if not impossible. Time, distance, personality, language, built barriers between these writers that were impassable.

The Bible Is a Literature

The Bible is not only many books, it is a literature. History, poetry, prophecy, philosophy, theology, oratory, humor, sarcasm, irony, music, drama, tragedy, strategy, love tales, war tales, travelogues, laws, jurisprudence, songs, sermons, warnings, prayers, all are here. Was there ever such a literature? The Bible begins with a garden and ends with a city. It starts with a morning followed by a night, and ends with a day that shall know no night. It breaks the silence with: "In the beginning God," and it hushes the universe to sleep with: "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." It finds man at the shut gates of the lost Eden, and leaves him before the open door at the top of the road. It begins with: "Thou art cursed," and it ends with: "Whosoever will may come." On its first page is condemnation. On its last page is invitation. At the shut gate stands an angel with drawn sword, and at the open door the Spirit and the bride wait to welcome all who would enter the door which no man can shut.

The Bible breaks at dawn with God's voice saying: "Let there be light." It sets at dusk with God's truth proclaiming: "Let there be life." Between the two speak all voices that can breathe a prayer, plead a need, confess a sin, utter a warning, sob a sorrow, or sigh a penitent's tear. Between the two are the tragedies of hate, the follies of fear, the stain and shame of sin, the paralysis of dobut, the torment of despair, and the choke of the fog that ends it all. Between the two are the stories of nations, the acclaim of heroes, the fall of empires, the rise of kingdoms, the decline of dynasties, the tramp of armies, the crack and crash of civilizations, and the coming of Him who is "the bright and morning star."

It Affects All Literature

What a literature! The Bible as literature has affected all literature. It has been the admiration of the creators of the world's foremost secular literature. It has profoundly affected the style of historians, essayists, poets, journalists, statesmen, orators; all of whom have looked to the Bible for their masters. So secure is the place of the Bible in literature that any culture which would ignore it condemns itself, and any study of the Bible which blinds itself to the literary charm and character of the writings may scarcely hope to atone for the blunders of such stupidity by an overplus of piety.

The Bible Is One Book

While the Bible is many books, while it is literature, it is nevertheless one book. It has unity. Read it from Genesis to Revelation, and it does not jar. There is one great line of thought that runs from lid to lid. There is one dominant purpose ever in evidence. There is not only revelation, but progressive revelation. Things are growing more luminous, more significant, more impressive. John is plainer than David, but he does not contradict David. Paul is plainer than Isaiah but they do not worship different Gods.

There are the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule, and the Sermon on the Mount. There is the great epic of Job, the sublime psalmody of David, and the love song of Solomon. There is the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, the fifty-fifth of Isaiah, and the fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth of John. There is the eighth of Romans, the thirteenth and fifteenth of First Corinthians, the book of Ruth, the love letter of Saint Paul to the Philippians, the imagery of Daniel and the Apocalypse. How dumb the world would be were these great voices silenced. Yet let them all speak at once and there is no discord. Put all of them inside the same lids and they do not fight each other.

The Oneness of Life

How is this oneness of the Bible to be explained? It is not the oneness of dogma, nor of ecclesiasticism, nor of ritual. The oneness of the Bible is the oneness of a Person. That Person is the living Christ. "In one volume of the book it is written of me." It is not the oneness of an encyclopedia, but the oneness of a Personality. The unity of the written Word rests upon the unity of the living Word. The Bible is one book because its master theme is Christ; because the presence of Christ pervades the book as the life of the tree the branches. It is as though a great mass of material from many places and ages were piled together on a stage behind the curtain. Then on a signal, the curtain rises, the whole becomes instinct with life, and everything has found its place. The confusion has vanished. The meaning of all is clear. Every book and prophecy and type and symbol and gospel and epistle fits like a mosaic. It is like a tapestry. The design is one. What has happened? Christ has come. Calvary has transpired. It is all His story. "In the volume of the book it is written of me."

The One Book

The Bible is not only one book, it is the one book. It is the world's most popular book, the best seller, the book most widely published, most eagerly sought, most bitterly fought, most profoundly believed, most zealously proclaimed. It has been translated, in whole or in part, into eight hundred and eighty-six languages and dialects. During the past ten years some part of the Bible has appeared in a new language at the rate of one in every five weeks. The whole Bible has been published in one hundred and seventy-one languages, and the entire New Testament in one hundred and sixty-four more. The American Bible Society since its organization in 1816 has issued over two hundred and sixteen million copies of Bibles, Testaments, and Portions. In 1929 the Society issued more Scriptures than in any other year of its history. Last year was the fifth year in succession in which the issues of the Society exceeded those of the preceding year. The Bible was the fifth book ever printed. Since that first volume of God's Word issued from the press, fully seven hundred and forty million copies have been published—two portions of the Bible in book form for every five human beings living on the earth today.

The Book of Books

The Bible is the Book of books. It takes care of itself. We waste much energy trying to "steady the ark." We give ourselves needless anxiety worrying lest some profane hand should shake down the impregnable rock of sacred Scripture. The Bible goes on producing life, changing character, changing nations, proving that it is the power of God by exercising the power of God. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

It Protects Itself

Starting at Johnson City in eastern Tennessee, where John Sevier and his stout followers rendezvoused for the Battle of King's Mountain is a narrow line of steel carrying a little railroad up out of Happy Valley into the land of the sky. In building the road, the teams used were lowered by derricks from the dizzy lip of mountain precipices to stone ledges on the steep mountainside where the engineers did their difficult work. At one point in the climb you come to a place where ages ago a mountain and a river met and contended for the right-of-way. The river won. You can see where the battle was fought. It is carved a thousand feet on either side where the Little Doe wore and washed its way through the granite wall; and above the grind of the little train you can hear the roar of the victorious waters in the gorge far below. Today there is no need to protect Doe River or build a channel in which its waters may flow on their way. There has never been such need. The river protects itself. It wins its own way. It blesses the land through which it flows, and will last as long as the Blue Ridge is a watershed and rivers run to meet the sea.

The river is a picture of the Book—of the river of living truth flowing from the throne of God. How often the river has met the mountain and always won, and will forever! The kingdoms of the world are becoming the kingdom of the Lord. You can hear the shout of the victorious waters. The Bible does not need to be protected. It only needs to be proclaimed. It protects itself. It protects and blesses the world through which it flows, and will as long as rivers run and God's truth can find a tongue!

One Book For All People

The Bible is not only one book; it is one book for all people. It not only has unity; it also has universality. It is as much at home in one land as in another. It finds its mother country in all lands, and its audience wherever man is found. The Word of God is not "bound." There was a prison for Paul, but there is no prison for the Bible. There were chains for God's servant, there are none for His Word. No bars can confine it. No shackles can enslave it. No legislation can successfully proscribe it. No persecution can destroy it. No hate can send it into exile. The campaign of atheism in Russia today is just another effort of the hammer to wear out the anvil. The Soviet hammer will share the fate of its predecessors.

It Is of Divine Origin

The universality of the Bible also is an evidence of its divine origin. There was every reason why the Book should be provincial. We can understand how a Bible written today might be for all people. The bars are down. The barriers are gone. The world has become one neighborhood. Invention, transportation, journalism, trade, diplomacy, science, steam, electricity, the wireless telegraph, the telephone, the airplane, the radio, have made all people one people.

It was not so when holy men spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost and produced the sixty-six volumes which constitute the literature we call the Bible. Then the world was packed with barriers. War was its usual habit, hatred frequently its mood, and bigotry often its creed. The country that produced the Bible was a little land hedged in by natural barriers that were most difficult to surmount. The mountains were on the north, the sea on the west, the desert on the south and east. Within were a people steeped in exclusiveness and so saturated with nationalism that centuries of persecution have been powerless to dissolve these traits from the blood of the Jew. The authors of the Bible regarded themselves as God's chosen people. They looked upon Jehovah as a Hebrew monopoly. Everything connected with their religion was a rite or sacrament of separation. Their feasts, their sacred ordinances and ceremonies, their altars and temple courts, the very name they gave to God, were all significant of a pent-up heaven. How could it be possible, then, for such a time and such a land and such a race to produce a book for all people?

It Flames With Universality

And yet this is what greets us when we open the pages of the Book of books. The Bible flames with universality from Genesis to Revelation. It starts with an evangel of hope as the gates of Eden close, and it ends with the hosts of heaven singing: "Let him that heareth say, Come." The Bible is not provincial but cosmopolitan. It is not Oriental but racial. It is not for a chosen people but for all people.

There is a message in the Book for everybody. Somewhere it shines the light that shows to every wanderer the path back home. A religious worker in a western city relates that a lady's purse had disappeared from her motor car. Some time later it was brought to the police station and the owner was sent for. The man who brought it back announced that he had stolen it—which seemed a surprising statement in view of the fact that the money and jewelry in it were intact and that there were no clews to the thief's identity. The woman examined the contents of the bag and found that only one article was missing—a penny Gospel of St. Luke—the cause both of the theft's repentance and confession.

There is a message in the Book for all. At times it sings a song that will quicken hope in every heart that has turned to despair. A colporteur, returning to a town where some months earlier he had been selling Bibles, was advised that a purchaser had unsuccessfully endeavored to return a Bible which she had bought from him. On locating the woman he inquired if she still wanted to return the Bible. This was her reply: "Oh, no! When my husband, who had objected to my buying the Bible, found that you were gone he just said that since we had the Bible, we might as well read it. And, do you know," she added, "he was so interested that he could hardly wait until he got home at night to read it? In less than a month I noticed that he was changed. Then one Sunday morning he suggested that we go to church and we have been going ever since; and now our home seems like heaven to me."

The Key To a Better Day

There is a message in the Book for each of us. Ever in its hand is a key that will unlock the door that opens on a better day. It places a halo around every earthly relation. Of childhood it says: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Of old age it ays: "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness." Of marriage it says: "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and cleave to his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh." To blind poverty it says: "Receive thy sight." To the paralytic it says: "Take up thy bed, and walk." To shame it says: "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more." To the homesick and lonely it says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

How the world widens out as you enter the Bible! As you travel its road you meet with the people of every clime. As you sail its seas you catch winds that fan all skies. As you linger on the banks of its rivers you can hear the song of its waters. As you walk beside its shores you can sense argosies whose traffic was mothered beyond the dawn. As you look at its stars you dream of immortality.

What a land of promise is in the Bible! As you climb its mountains the world pushes back its curtains. As you camp on its plains the lights of heaven sentinel your tents. As you enter its temples its altar fires kindle across the world, and light for all pilgrim feet the path that leads to God.

There are warnings in this book to cause nerves calloused "past feeling" to rack with dismay. There are mysteries to puzzle the sages of all time. There are promises to build empires of expectation along the gulf of despair. Adventures are heralded to sate the ambitions of the ages. Ministries are offered to whet the appetites of the angels, and sacrifices demanded that should crowd the earth with heroism. There are visions in this book to waken the dead bones to slay a hell, and loves to build a heaven.

The Great Cure

The Bible gives us the cure for what Stanley Jones calls "the three great oppressions"—sin, suffering and death. Its remedy for sin is the cross; for suffering, the love of God; and for death, the life everlasting. These remedies are not affected by discoveries and inventions. These oppressions are not tribal. As long as men sin and suffer and die the Bible will be one book for all people. It gives us, too, the secret for what might be called the three great elations—life, and peace, and love. These also are the same in all calendars and on all degrees of latitude and longitude. All men long for life. All sigh for happiness. All yearn for love. To the thirsty soul, whether in an American city or an African jungle, the Bible offers One who says: "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." To the soul that longs to be happy, it offers One who says: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." To the heart weary and lonely it says: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." As long as men cry for life and peace and love, the Bible will be the one book for all people.

By Rev. A. W. Turner

Legislative Director Louisiana Prohibition League

We wish to call attention first to a quotation sent out by the W. C. T. U:

"We will celebrate January 16, 1931, the eleventh birthday of National Prohibition in a way to promote law observance and law enforcement. We will meet argument with the facts, abuse and misrepresentation with a calmness born of conviction, and finally, depending upon God for strength, we will continue to pray that righteousness may prevail, that our beloved country may retain its moral leadership and, like Liberty Enlightening the World, Prohibition, upheld by willing obedience and orderly enforcement, will point the way to all the world for deliverance from the drink habit and the drink traffic."

All of the Christian forces of Louisiana should unite in this celebration. Eleven years of Prohibition has been the law of the land and this anniversary will afford opportunity for a forward move. Let the pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and woman's missionary society workers co-operate in giving every department of the Church some place on the program. Make such program as you like to be given on Sunday, January 14 or 21. We offer the following suggestive program:

VICTORY DAY PROGRAM

January 16, 1931

Luncheon, Evening or Afternoon Meeting.

Theme:

"Observance and Enforcement, Not Repeal."

Devotional Service—I Timothy 1:8. "But we know that the law is good if a man use it lawfully."

Suggested Topics—Brief Addresses: Observance—"Why I Observe the Law." Enforcement—"How Citizens May Co-operate in Law Enforcement." Repeal—"The Fallacy of the Argument for Repeal."

Youth's Reply—Presentation of Youth's Roll Call.

Recommendations for Educational Work.

Special Music: Solo for Male Voice—"The Outlaw." Solo and Chorus—"It Is There To Stay." Children's Chorus—"Where There's Drink There's Danger."

The songs suggested may all be found in the 'W. C. T. U. Songs," which books may be purchased for ten cents per copy, or 75c per doz., from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois.

An enthusiastic observance of the Eleventh Anniversary of Prohibition will give notice to lawbreakers and racketeers that the Christian people of the country do not mean to sit idly by and allow this great beneficient legislation to go by default. Put on a program and make it count.

A MESSAGE FROM DR. A. C. MILLAR, DEAN OF SOUTHERN METHODIST EDITORS

In Atlanta, Georgia, on December 17, there assembled, for the first time, a new body, created by our last General Conference—a joint meeting of the General Commission on Benevolences and Representatives of the Annual Conference Commission on Benevlolences. About 125 perons—bishops, secretaries, and designated members of the different boards—were in attendance. Never, perhaps, did so many bishops—eight in all—make carefully prepared twenty-minute addresses in a single day. Partly because of brevity, all were pointed, pertinent, and impressive.

The bishops who spoke were: Bishops Darlington, McMurry, Mouzon, Candler, Beauchamp, John M. Moore, Boaz, and Ainsworth, and their subjects were, respectively: The opening devotional, "The Board of Church Extension," "The Board of Christian Education," "The Hospital Board," "The Board of Missions," "The Value of the Every-Member Canvass for the Entire Budget," "Organizing an Annual Conference for 100 per cent Payment on All Benevolences," and "The Kingdom Extension Offering."

Addresses on "The Purpose and Plan of the General and Annual Conference Commissions on Benevolences," "Our United Task: Christianizing Our Giving," "Our Laymen," "The Literature and Study Book of Kingdom Extension," "Missionary Institutes," "The Station Church Program," "The Circuit Church Program," and "The Financial Plan, Every-Member Canvass, and Offering," varying from ten to twenty minutes, were made, in the above order, by the following: Dr. W. F. Quillian, Dr. T. D. Ellis, Mr. G. L. Morelock, Dr. E. T. Clark, Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Dr. Ed F. Cook, Rev. J. Wilson Crichlow, and Mr. J. F. Rawls. In the absence of the regular chairman, Dr. W. G. Cram, who had not returned from Korea, Dr. T.

D. Ellis ably presided and Dr. [illegible] C. Jarrell conducted a Round Table at which many questions brought out needed [illegible] in details.

The General Theme was "Effective Plans for Securing 100 per cent in All Benevolences," and under the head of "Kingdom Extension Cultural Program and Offering" methods and means were discussed.

While it was discovered that the General Conference was no less interested in the vital and fundamental cause of Missions, it developed that it was the purpose of the General Conference to unify our efforts to raise funds, correlate activities, conserve forces, and present all causes so that individual members of the Church might be reached and impressed with their duty and privilege in contributing to the several causes, and that confusion and interfering movements might be avoided. The word "assessment" has been eliminated from our denominational terminology and "apportionment" has been substituted with a view to presenting the needs of the Kingdom as "askings" rather than as "taxes." Then, while the moral obligation is not diminished, the element of voluntary offering and giving as a grace are more definitely introduced.

It was thought by the General Conference, in creating these Commissions and providing a unified program of cultivation, that our people might be so informed about the several causes to which they are invited to contribute that they would be disposed to give more liberally and sacrificially and thus develop a Cross-bearing and more spiritually-minded membership.

In this conference of one day it was amazing that so many phases of the subject could be so thoroughly and so impressively presented. The addresses of the bishops constituted a veritable symposium admirably supplemented by the other addresses. The plans outlined will be submitted shortly to all our pastors and in the institute will soon be more fully explained. Ample illustrative literature has been produced and will be immediately available. All pastors should be ready to obtain the information and to co-operate in this church-wide simultaneous movement, in four periods, to disseminate information, create the right spirit, and get results such as we have never had before. It was unequivocally stated that unless we meet the present crisis with larger giving, all of our denominational institutions will suffer immeasurably and a retreat must be called. We are in the midst of financial tribulations, but it is to be hoped that, as in the case of the churches of Macedonia in Paul's day, "in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their (our) joy and their (our) deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their (our) liberality."

At the closing service, at night, Dr. F. S. Onderdonk, our veteran superintendent of Mexican work in the United States, using as his text Matt. 28: 18-20, pressed home the vital and fundamental nature of Missions, and made an impassioned plea for sacrificial giving and genuine Cross-bearing in our daily life. He instanced the case of a Seventh-Day Baptist who, on receiving an inheritance of $26,000 immediately gave $25,000 to his church and kept only $1,000, and with regret quoted the uncomplimentary comment on this incident by a member of the Methodist Church. Without unkind criticism, the preacher contrasted our profession of consecration with our selfish and expensive manner of life, and predicted that there would be a new era in the life of our Church when our people should learn to live and give in the true spirit of Christ. During the unique closing prayer by Rev. Nath Thompson, amid sobs and fervent ejaculations, there were evident reconsecration and deepening of purpose. It is believed that those who were present at this meeting will go forth to tell the hosts at home of the wise plans of the General Conference and that they will endeavor to imbue all our people with holier purpose and more definite and workable plans to devote their time and wealth to the sacred cause of Kingdom Extension.

Whereas, the General Conference at Dallas, Tex., May, 1930, made important changes in the financial plan of our Church, dividing the amount to be raised for Benevolent purposes into two amounts known as an Apportionment and as the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering; and

Whereas, the same General Conference created a General Commission on Benevolences and a Conference Commission on Benevolences and charged these Commissions with the responsibility of putting on a combined cultural program and a united appeal to the local churches for the aggregate amounts to be raised for all the interests included in the General Assessments and the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering; and

Whereas, the said General Conference made it "the duty of this Commission to initiate, supervise, and direct educational processes to inform the children, youth and adult members of the Church concerning all of our Connectional interests and to seek to enlist their whole-hearted support of these interests according to their ability, and to conduct in January and February, or such other time as the Annual Conference may direct in each year, a period of cultivation in behalf of the causes included in the combined askings for General and Conference work;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we approve and adopt the cultural campaign outlined in the program submitted to this conference.
2. That we request the Bishops who are the leaders of our Church, to give as much time and attention to this campaign as the many duties falling to them will permit.
3. That we request Conference Commissions to use all available forces to carry the message of Christian paying to every church.
4. That we appreciate the work of our great laymen, and the fine offer of Mr. G. L. Morelock and his co-laborers to furnish speakers and to give full co-operation in the work of this cultural campaign.

BROTHER HINES BEGINS FIFTH YEAR AT ELIZABETH

Dear Advocate: The joyful mysteries that infested our parsonage life, last evening, cleared themselves up by bursting through the general clouds of financial gloom with a flood of warm sunshine and Christmas cheer. At 7 o'clock friends began calling at the parsonage, each one making a happy visit in the natural trend of events—a little mystery breaking in here and there, but everything so well arranged and carried out that each suspicion would disappear before it was rooted. About 9 o'clock a soft tap came knocking at the door. The pastor, responding, found a beautiful little five-year-old girl standing without, holding a placard with tinsel ropes attached. The pastor overjoyed at receiving such a darling little visitor, at that hour, failed to notice the card, or to get the significance of the visit, supposing that she had just decided to walk over from the church while her mother was at choir practice, but, while trying to give her a seat, some visitor said: "Read the card." The card said: "You follow me, please." We did—pastor, his wife and guests. She led the way into the church. On entering, everything was in darkness, but as we entered the melody of a beautiful anthem began floating out of the darkness. Then, a flood of light was turned on, and there was the congregation together with a "Community Christmas Tree for the parsonage family." The tree was beautiful and well-freighted. The spirit of joy and good feeling was rich with sweet friendship and the sunshine of the Christ Spirit. After a few minutes of teasing and joking together we sang and prayed together, then, faithful arms carried the gifts to the parsonage. Expressions like these were attached to the gifts: "We are sincerely glad to have you with us another year." Attached to a dozen of the finest Delicious apples the market affords, was this wish: "May your happiness be as perfect as these apples." Then, the inner pages of a heart which was attached to a fruit cake, read: "To wish you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, and to tell you how happy we are to know that you all are with us for another year, it being the Lord's will, and hoping that you will enjoy these little gifts, we just want to say that we hope we shall have the pleasure of doing this again at the end of another year."

Who would not wish to be back with such a people. Having been with them for four years, and our spiritual fellowships leading our social fellowships through relationships that are sweet and rare, we have every reason to expect that the fifth year with them shall be the most fruitful of all. We are praying and working to that end, and may God lead us, this year, through experiences richer in spirit, sweeter in service and higher in the realms of Godly living.

METHODISMS

By Rev. James William Sells

One of the best means of keeping the local church before the community that it is supposed to serve is that medium given over to the service of the people: the local paper.

Preachers and church officials are prone to look with scorn upon the country newspaper. They treat it in one of several ways:

They leave it severely alone.

They ridicule it and look with aspiring eyes to the city daily.

They casually tell the editor-printer the news of the moment and trust to luck for the rest.

They insert church notices in the column given over to such notices and then never change the notice nor think of the paper.

Or . . . they carefully write out on a typewriter (double space and use one side only), the news that they think the public should be interested in and a couple of days before publication hand this brief article to the editor in person. And this news hits the front page of the local paper.

A church can be advertised without advertising the minister.

Church news can be made interesting, but don't sermonize.

Have something to say, say it truthfully and sincerely, and it will be read.

Write church news always, not from the standpoint of the minister, nor the church member, but write as if you were some uninterested stranger picking up the paper for the first time.

Use as many names as possible for "Names make news."

And remember: The country newspaper is more widely read and more carefully scanned than any paper ever printed.

Kingdom Extension

By order of the General Conference the months of January and February in all congregations are to be devoted to a study of the Kingdom Extension enterprises of the Church. The study is to be followed by a Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering for Home and Foreign Missions, Christian Education, Church Extension, and Hospitals.

As a loyal Methodist you will be happy to co-operate.

Study the new book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," by Dr. W. G. Cram.

Distribute and study the literature, which may be obtained free.

Display the beautiful poster sent to all pastors free.

Pray for and preach about the great benevolent causes of the Church.

Make an every-member canvass and secure a free-will offering from each individual.

For your own spiritual welfare—for the sake of the Kingdom of God we must inform our people and rekindle their consecrated liberality.

You will help! Do it at the time appointed.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON BENEVOLENCES

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

issue of The Publisher's Auxiliary, a trade paper published by the Western Newspaper Union and catering to editors only.

Part of the editorial is herewith given: "There is news in the fact that the ladies of the church will give a supper at the church. There is news in the fact that the proceeds of the supper will be contributed to the organ fund. There is news in what the ladies will provide in the way of a menu, and what they will charge. There is no news in the urge to attend the supper. That is either editorial or advertising. If the purchase of that organ is of value to the community, if having the organ will make the community a more interesting place in which to live, it is the editor's job to promote interest in the organ in his editorial columns just as he would promote interest in the building of new sidewalks or the paving of roads. The subscribers, the people who will benefit from the purchase of the organ, are entitled to that support as they are the people who make the newspaper possible. Without them there would be no advertising of any kind.

"There is only one basis on which to judge what shall be printed in the reading columns of the newspaper, and that is the viewpoint of the reader. To be a permanent success the newspaper must print those things in which the reader is interested and to which he is entitled."

In getting the news of your church before the community treat the newspaper editor as your most valuable assistant.

Buy your stationery from his print shop; get your printing done there; buy some printed material from his job shop whenever you have a special service; get acquainted with the staff; rely upon them to know their job as well as you know yours; and treat your editor as if he were a human being. Brag on some feature of the paper, and if there's nothing in it to brag on truthfully, write something and give it to him for some one else to brag about.

Last of all, many short items during the year are of much more value to your church than one big write-up when you move into the town and another when you move away.

(This subject will, from time to time, be reverted to, but the next "Methodisms" will deal with other practical phases of the pastorate.)

A NEW YEAR'S THOUGHT

By Rev. J. M. Lewis

There is a big jump between New Year and Christmas, but a mighty little step between Christmas and New Year.

Before we can catch our breath and wiggle out of our Christmas SPREES, New Year is here. It's a mighty good time to make resolutions; a new year with 365 clean sheets, unspoiled, unmarred, not a blotch on any of them; we wonder how clean we can keep them as the good Lord hands them to us, one by one, from His great store-house of Eternity. Just one sheet at a time and 24 hours to write on it. The day's record will be made whether we want it written there or not; what kind of pen and what kind of ink will we use? The pen of FAITH in God through Jesus Christ, controlling our lives through the power of the Holy Spirit, DIPPED into the ink of LOVE; love to God and Holy things, love to our fellowmen for Jesus' sake will enable us to write beautiful letters on each sheet God will hand to us one at a time. Let us all resolve to use the pen and ink God has provided for us to write on the sheet He will hand to us from day to day—God's pen—God's ink, God's sheet! God's children here on earth. The great Master Teacher, the Holy Spirit, is willing and ready and anxious to teach us how to WRITE.

THE NEEDS OF HIGHER EDUCATION IN MISSISSIPPI

By Dr. D. M. Key

Mississippi has a history that in some respects is almost unique in the matter of higher education. One element in the early population of Mississippi, not large in numbers but powerful in influence, has a strong cultural tradition of collegiate education dating back not only to the founding of the colonial settlements in the state but even for several generations beyond that. Many of the well-to-do planters and land-owners who came into Mississippi from Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas, were from families whose sons had for several generations been educated in the universities and colleges of the North, and even prior to that, in Oxford and Cambridge. As the population increased and the fertile lands of the state were brought under production, this element in the population continued to educate their sons, employing private tutors for them and sending them out of the state to the best colleges and universities to be found. Many of the political leaders of the state who achieved distinction of the first rank have been college and university trained men. Such leaders were Prentiss, who was educated at Bowdoin; Lamar; at Emory; John Sharp Williams, at the University of Virginia and at Heidelberg. Of seventeen eminent Mississippians mentioned in Fant's History of Mississippi, twelve received their collegiate education beyond the confines of Mississippi. Down to the present day, there is an unusually large percentage of families of aristocratic traditions that send their sons out of the State, to Vanderbilt, Virginia, Washington and Lee, to Princeton and other universities of the North.

The early decades of the Statehood of Mississippi were nevertheless marked by an impulse in innumerable communities to set up academies, colleges and universities—an impulse which apparently amounted almost to an obsession—so that over the entire State there are to be found remains of ambitious projects for higher education. These may be in the form of a name attached to a rural community, such as College Hill in Lafayette County and Seminary in Covington County; or, there may be found, lying in the cotton fields, the bricks and ruined wall of a building which was once an institute or college; or, in a village the name and the ancient structure of an academy now fallen into disuse. As there was no public school system and little provision for preparation for college, students were supposed to be prepared by tutors or to study independently in their homes. This record of defunct institutions shows that the early citizens of Mississippi had a true conception of the essential part which higher education must play in the training of those who are to be the leaders in the life of a civilized society. The failure of these colleges to grow into solid and permanent institutions was due to a number of influences—to the lack of means and resources, to ignorance of the magnitude of the task of building up a great college or university, to the scattered and incoherent character of the society at that time which made it colonial in effect if not in political organization, and, most of all, to the economic disasters of the War between the States and of Reconstruction.

A few fortunately located institutions have survived. They constitute the meager equipment of Mississippi in privately endowed colleges of the present day. In due time the State University and other state colleges were founded. These have done a great and important work in the development of the cultural life of Mississippi. Their growth and functioning has been retarded by the poverty of the state which followed the civil war and which has presisted down to the present time.

Along with the more highly educated planter element of the population of Mississippi there was also the great bulk of the inhabitants of the state who were tenants or small farmers and tradesmen, and the professional men of the numerous county seats and small towns. This great solid, home-loving body of Mississippi citizenry was to a very large extent limited in its educational outlook to the elementary schools. It has arisen in its culture along with the growth of our public and high schools in a development that in recent years has been so notable as to be truly romantic. In recent years, the growth of the agricultural high schools, of the consolidated rural schools, and of the junior colleges of Mississippi has put our state well at the head in the development of public education in these fields. But until the last decade the demands of the average citizens for college education for his children did not constitute a serious tax upon the higher educational resources available.

Meantime the march of events has brought Mississippi more and more rapidly into the current of industrial, agricultural and commercial progress. The exploitation of the gulf coast region as a national play-ground and pleasure resort has been accompanied by the improvement of railroad communications (giving a 23 hour service to Chicago), by the opening of improved automobile roads, by daily bus service, and by increasing use of the airplane. These means of communication, either already available or asured for the immediate future, make the paths to Mississippi pleasant, swift and direct. The equable climate and the natural resources, rapidly being developed, afford the incentive for southward migrations. The development of dairying, the piping of natural gas in a network soon to cover the entire state, the availability of power for electrical service to industry, these new attractions are making inevitable the coming of population from the neighboring regions of the North and Middle West in such numbers as to change materially the character and characteristics of Mississippi's social fabric. If the traditions and ideals of culture, manners, morality, integrity, and even chivalry, which have constituted the charm, grace, and authenticity of Mississippi's moral contribution to the republic are to be preserved, it is imperative that her system of higher education shall be brought from the colonial and almost feudal status of antebellum days, from a meager provision for the select few and a dependence on an imported culture from far away centers of learning, to a generous provision of both state owned and privately endowed colleges of the very best standards.

Such institutions gather into centers of research, not only the young people of keenest and best intelligence, but also the best thought and ideals of a state, political, moral, religious and social. Colleges profoundly affect, they have always affected, the character, intelligence and purposes of the people that they serve. Just as Mississippians in the past have thought, planned and built, with tragic ineffectiveness, numerous, aspiring, but transitory colleges, academies, and seminaries, so now they should think, plan and build, more conservatively, more carefully, more sacrificially, her higher educational institutions for the next century. If these colleges are to be abiding they must express the intelligence and seasoned purpose of the entire people as well as the aspirations and high aims of the few. The comprehensive plan of the College Co-operative Association and the wise direction of the project by a board of practical business leaders of the state may well challenge the co-operation of every man, woman and child in Mississippi.

THE UNKNOWN TEACHER

By Henry Van Dyke

Great generals win campaigns, but it is the unknown soldier who wins the war.

Famous educators plan new systems of pedagogy, but it is the unknown teacher who delivers and guides the young. He lives in obscurity and contends with hardship. For him no trumpets blare, no chariots wait, no golden decorations are decreed. He keeps the watch along the borders of darkness and makes the attack on the trenches of ignorance and folly. Patient in his daily duty he strives to conquer the evil powers which are the enemies of youth. He awakens sleeping spirits. He quickens the indolent, encourages the eager, and steadies the unstable. He communicates his own joy in learning and shares with boys and girls the best treasures of his mind. He lights many candles which, in later years, will shine back to cheer him. This is his reward.

Knowledge may be gained from books; but the love of knowledge is transmitted only by personal contact. No one has deserved better of the republic than the unknown teacher. No one is more worthy to be enrolled in a democratic aristocracy, "king of himself and servant of mankind."

Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College is the new president of the Methodist Educational Association. The Church is to be congratulated.

President Chas. C. Selecman was one of the speakers at the Interdenominational Men's Congress Program which was held at the Gibson Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio, December 11 and 12. His subject was "How the Laymen Can Promote the Kingdom by Co-operation with His Pastor." Between 500 and 600 men, representing 16 denominations, were in attendance. About 60 per cent were laymen, with 40 per cent ministers.

The Carnegie Corporation of New York has donated $8,000 to Wesleyan College, Macon, for the purchase of books, it is announced by Dr. W. F. Quillian, president of the college, who recently received word of the gift from Dr. F. P. Koppel, president of the corporation.

The sum is payable $2,000 annually for four years, and will enable the college to add several thouand volumes to the 16,000 already on the shelves.

Dr. Quillian expressed himself as greatly pleased with the recent benefaction, since, he said, it shows confidence in Wesleyan, for grants from the Carnegie corporation are made only to institutions whose libraries fully meet standard requirements and are recognized as rendering the largest service to the faculty and students. That other corporations shares the same good opinion of Wesleyan is evident from the fact that the college received a gift of $100,000 from the General Board of Education of New York in 1912, and the same amount in 1922.

Dr. Howard E. Jensen, professor of sciology in the University of Missouri, has been elected to a similar post at Duke University, to begin his duties in the fall of 1931.

Dr. Jensen is a graduate of the University of Kansas and the University of Chicago, and has had practical experience in sociology as director of the Latin-American survey, Interchurch World Movement, 1919-20, and in making social surveys in four Central American Republics.

Success of the N. O. C. A. special effort week, January 18-25, means larger giving to the Kingdom Extension Special.

The Home Circle

LIFE "MORE ABUNDANTLY"

In olden times the diamond merchant had his stones cut from the rough so as to get the largest possible stone. He thought that the value of the stone depended on its size. In recent times, however, the merchant has learned that value does not depend on size but on beauty; and now the diamond-cutter cuts the stone scientifically, according to the laws of the refraction and reflection of light. He does not care that the stone loses in size, if it thereby increases in beauty.

So it is with Christ and the soul. Man thinks of the quantity of life. Christ considers the quality of life. The individual soul loses somewhat in the quantity of the things it can indulge in, but Christ increases the beauty, depth, and meaning of life.—Edwin A. McAlpin, Jr., in The Continent.

WHO'LL BE THE FUTURE BOSS?

Amusement, though amusement which may sometimes be loaded with potential capacities for blazing animosity if one is not careful, may often be found in arguments on the age-old question as to which sex is the more dominant.

Now comes Lawrence Sturm & Co., investment bankers of New York and Chicago, to give the men something to think about in saying that 41 per cent of the individual wealth of the United States is controlled by women, that women are beneficiaries of 80 per cent of the $95,000,000,000 life insurance in force, and that they are receiving 70 per cent of the estates left by men and 64 per cent of the estates left by women.

Do these figures herald the arrival of a time when woman shall in truth be financially dominant and when there shall be little question of "who wears the pants in the family?"—Exchange.

ON THE HEIGHTS OR AFTER MANY YEARS OLD AGE

Old age is only for the body, because that is material; not for the soul—that is spirit and immortal and cannot grow old. I am not old; only this house "not made with hands," in which I have dwelt for over eighty years, is old. "I am not old, for I have not so far left the coast of life to travel inland but that I still hear the murmur of the outer infinite, and catch a gleam of the beautiful beyond."

The Scripture says that "at evening time it shall be light," and as I look back over these many years and question in my heart the purpose of it all, it seems that this body is only a piece of intricate machinery which I have cared for so long, and I have a dream of another body that will never grow old, another house "not made with hands, eternal in the heavens;" that somewhere in the infinity of space I am going to a land of light, where truth and beauty shine with full radiance, where all is love and harmony, and where we shall never grow weary, where wounded friendships are healed, where we shall dwell with our loved ones, released from care and pain, with faculties for enjoyment far transcending all knowledge of this world; and I shall only take up the divinity within me—love, moral sense, reason, affection, and benevolence—and angels shall guide me there.

My friends will forget my mistakes and they will say tender, loving words of me, which perhaps they forgot to say to me, and ease the pain. "And only the true shall praise me and only the true shall blame." I shall never be so happy but that loving thoughts shall add to my joy.

This may be a dream or it may be "a crystal of thought," but it is more precious than all worldly wisdom, for twilight is gathering now and I am rapidly nearing the other shore. All fear that oppressed me, all dread of the distant future has passed away, and all sorrow and care casts anchor in the harbor of my dream.

To the mortal He giveth sleep, but the soul shall wake, and He knows all the rest, and rocked in the cradle of His love I will lay me down in peace to sleep.

"Tired? Oh, yes, so tired, dear,
The day has been very long,
The shadowy gloaming draweth near,
It is time for the evening song.

"I'm ready to go to rest at last,
Ready to say good-night,
The sunset glory darkens fast,
The morning will bring me light.

"Sing once again 'Abide with me,'
That sweetest evening hymn,
And now, 'Good-night.' I cannot see,
The light has grown so dim."
Good-night, and God be with us!
—Mrs. S. R. Romney, in Zion's Herald.

BETSY ROSS AND THE STARS AND STRIPES

Betsy Ross was born on New Year's Day in the year 1752. She was a little Quaker girl, and I think she must have been a nice one and jolly to play with, because, although she was named Elizabeth, everybody seems to have called her Betsy, even after she was married.

She was thirteen years old when the Stamp Act made the trouble in this country, and I suppose she must have been going to school just as we girls are. I can imagine just how she and the other school girls would talk about it. I am sure that she was very patriotic and went without her tea when the tea was taxed and promised as solemnly as any of the older ones that she would go without eating mutton that they might have more wool to manufacture, and all those things. And I suppose she read the Pennsylvania Journal when it came out with a skull and crossbones at the top, and heard about how they buried Liberty in New Hampshire, and all the things we studied about in the "causes" of the Revolution.

When she was twenty-one years old, they had the Boston Tea Party, and that year Betsy Ross was married. Her husband was the brother of George Ross, who signed the Declaration of Independence. You can find his name in the list of signers in our history. John Ross, Betsy's husband, was very patriotic and belonged to some kind of Home Guard that used to guard the military stores on the wharves at night. One night while he was on guard some gunpowder exploded and killed him. So Betsy was a widow and must make her own living. I think that was pretty hard when she was only twenty-four years old.

Her husband had kept a little upholstery shop, and she kept it up, and sewed too, for she was a very neat sewer.

When the Congress chose the new flag, of course they wanted some one who could sew very nicely to make it. George Washington, Robert Morris, and Colonel George Ross were appointed a committee to see to it. Colonel George Ross was a relative of Betsy's husband, and he told the others how well she could sew, and how she had made flags before.

The flag was to have thirteen stripes, seven red and six white, with thirteen white stars on a blue ground in the corner. The thirteen was to represent the thirteen colonies. The committee had made a drawing of it and they took it to Betsy Ross and asked her if she could cut and sew a flag like it. She said that she could, and she showed them how to make it even better with five-pointed stars instead of six-pointed ones. Five-pointed stars are much prettier and they show off better, so I am sure we are all glad that it was to Betsy Ross and not to any other woman, who would not have known about the stars, that the plans were taken.

She began the flag on the seventh of June and she worked just as hard as she could on it and finished it in three days. On the fourteenth of June Congress adopted it for our flag, and that is why we celebrate Flag Day.

Mrs. Betsy Ross went right on making flags, for no one could make them better. She made flags for the United States for sixty years. She lived to be an old lady, eighty-four years old. She lived in Philadelphia, and she is buried there. And now they keep her house for a sort of curiosity museum.—Normal Instructor.

SPENDNG TOO MUCH MONEY

Yes, we are spending too much money, but spending too much money for what? We are spending millions upon self and a meager pittance for the good of others. A fashionable family will easily spend $1,000 each month for flowers alone. Under canopies of American Beauty roses, men and women sit down at tables decorated with lilies and gardenias. A single ball will ofttimes cost $15,000. A dinner for two hundred guests at the caterer's charge of $10 a plate, amounts to $2,000, exclusive of cigars and liquid refreshments. Yes, we are spending too much money for chewing gum, tobacco and cosmetics, but comparatively we are spending but a pittance for the salvation of the world. Even in our own land we find conditions such as Tennyson describes that we ought to strive to remedy:

"It is well that whilst we range with Science, glorying in the time,
City children soak and blacken soul and sense in city slime?

There, among the glooming alleys, progress halts on palsied feet;
Crime and hunger cast our maidens by the thousands on the street.

There the smouldering fire of fever creeps across the rotted floor
In the crowded couch of incest in the warrens of the poor."

HOLY MOMENTS

By Elizabeth Jones Boykin

When the evening draws her curtains
And the shadows bring the night,
Oft my heart is sad and weary,
Weary of the strife and fight;

Then I think of those who've left me—
Of that brother brave and strong,
How he fought life's battles nobly
For the right against the wrong;

Of that father, mother, loved ones,
All who've joined the silent band—
How they ever lived most truly
Their ideals great and grand.

And I think on and remember
All the things they held the best,
Of their high resolve and courage,
Where their faith and hope did rest.

As I meditate and ponder
My faint heart grows strong again,
And I feel my pulses quicken
For the race I must attain.

Though I oft do fall and stumble,
Bruise my hands and pierce my soul,
Yet I know at last I'll conquer,
And shall reach the final goal.

ARE PREACHERS WORTH THEIR PAY?

A home is on the verge of being broken up: The pastor comes, prays, effects a reconciliation; prevents children from becoming a liability on the State, and keeps a home on the avenue.

These and many others are typical and not exceptional instances. They could be multiplied over and over. Restraining evil and building health into social living, honesty in private and public life, are some of the paying results of the preacher's life and labor.

There has been much written about the "overhead" expense in the Church. Reduce the number of bishops, eliminate secretaries, and do away with presiding elders, say some, for they cost too much. The sacrifice he inspires, the causes he promotes, the unity of fellowship and purpose he secures, the administrative matters he adjusts, as well as the life he lives and the gospel he preaches, makes one of these servants of the Church many times more a producer than a consumer (with one exception).

Enlargement of territory or consolidation of secretarial offices in certain instances may be wise and economical, but a connectional and unified militant church must have the equivalent of our present system. Great railroads, and distributing concerns count it a paying investment to employ division superintendents, district managers, and promotional agents.

Taken in the large, preachers deserve and earn their pay, and change in polity will not count for efficiency and economy so much as deepening of piety on the part of the preacher and people.

Former President Calvin Coolidge, in writing recently on "Compensation of the Clergy," said: "Few people not intimately connected with the clergy realize the additional burdens which are imposed upon that devoted profession by business depression. Being the natural repository for the trouble of the unfortunate, which strain their strength and resources for relief in ordinary times, any increase of such demands puts on them a very disproportionate share of the general distress. Yet they meet it effectively and cheerfully with little regard for the needs of themselves and their own dependents. Many of us regard the clergy as a natural blessing, always serving others, never seeking their own, self-sustaining like the sun and air. This attitude makes their compensations meager and provision for old age inadequate. That is the general lot of all teaching forces. They are too little appreciated. In every generation the clergy have furnished the spiritual leadership on which has rested both the political and economic progress of the times. They are the main source of the best standards of civilization. Without their influence the nation would fall into a state of moral and material decay. If not for their sakes, certainly for our own, we should give them more appreciation and better support."

PERSONALS AND OTHER NOTES

Mrs. A. S. Page, Sumrall, Miss., in renewing her Advocate subscription expressed appreciation for the papor, which she has been reading since childhood.

Rev. F. J. Jones, pastor at Washington, Mississippi, received a warm welcome to his new charge. He writes, "The good people have shown us many kindnesses since we have been here."

Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor at St. Marks, was an appreciated visitor to the Advocate office last week. Ho had the Advocate sent to Miss Annie Alford, who is the Head Resident Deaconess at Kingdom House, St. Louis, Missouri.

Rev. Robert M. Brown enters successfully upon his work as presiding elder of the Ruston district. We are confident that the interest of the Advocate will be cared for in the Ruston district as well as the other important work of the Church.

Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, professor of religious education at Millsaps College, preached at Galloway Memorial on Christmas morning, using for his subject "The Quest of Reality." Dr. Cowan, the pastor, was absent, visiting relatives in Houston, Texas.

Mr. W. E. Lampton, superintendent of the Sunday school at Columbia, Miss., announced that Christmas presents of a package of fruits, candies and nuts would be supplied to each child of every family in Marion County, both white and black, who were unable to buy it for themselves.

We appreciate a list of five subscriptions from Rev. J. O. Dowdle, pastor, Lake Cormorant, Miss. Brother Dowdle begins his third year and says, "I believe we will have the best revivals this year we have ever had. The year has started off fine." We wish for him and his people every success.

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, was an appreciated visitor to the Advocate office on Friday the 26th ult. He reported that Mr. J. H. Carter, who is the capable Sunday school superintendent at Carrollton, was sick at that time.

Brother G. W. Wilson, Seminary, Miss., sends his subscription for the Advocato and writes, "My wife took the Advocate as long as she lived and had read it for over sixty years." We sympathize with Brother Wilson in the loss of his devoted companion and pray that the Advocate may continue to be a blessing to him at eventide.

Thelma, the little daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Saucier, Brooklyn, Mississippi, has been critically ill with pneumonia in the hospital in Gulfport, but we are delighted to report that she is on the road to recovery. Brother Saucier is in the second year of a successful pastorate at Brooklyn.

Rev. L. E. Alford, the energetic presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, in addition to his many other duties since Conference, has held a revival meeting at Stanton on the Washington charge. This is a new church, the building being recently purchased from the Presbyterians. There were twelve new members added to the roll.

Mr. James W. Hart, lay leader for the Foxworth charge, arranged an all day service at Sandy Hook for the lay leaders and other officials of the charge. District Lay Leader, Curtis Youngblood, was present and delivered an inspiring address. Brother Hart is one of the faithful men of his district and no cause is neglected in his hands.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor First Church at Corinth, Miss., has planned for an aggressive year's work. The Christmas cantata "Bethlehem," given by the choir and Epworth League, on Sunday evening Dec. 21st, prepared the hearts and minds of a great congregation for a spiritual celebration of the Birth of Christ.

Mr. W. H. Bailey, an esteemed citizen of Coffeeville, Miss., and a faithful member of the Methodist Church passed to his reward on the morning of December 12th. The funeral services were conducted at the Coffeeville Methodist Church by Rev. W. L. Robinson, pastor; Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder; and Dr. J. R. Counties, President Grenada College.

Rev. Walter W. Jones, pastor of the Merigold and Sherard charge, North Mississippi Conference, favors the Advocate office with a program of the Christmas service at Merigold which was a "White Christmas." Brother Jones says, "We all here in the delta are hard pressed financially; but the people are heroically standing by the church and its institutions."

In a personal letter to the Editor, Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor, Vimville, Miss., writes, "The people here have given us a very cordial reception; the ladies had a hot supper for us upon our arrival. Toomsuba will give us a public reception from seven to nine P. M. on the night of Dec. 22nd. We expect to build a new church at Bonita this year."

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington is carrying out the Pauline injunction, "Preach the word: be instant in season, out of season: . . . Do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." He recently held a revival at Bluefield, W. V., where Rev. T. S. Hamilton is the pastor. Many pastors and laymen from adjacent districts took advantage of the opportunity to hear the Bishop.

Rev. E. D. Simpson begins the new conference year on the Foxworth charge with the hearty co-operation of the people. Mrs. Simpson has been suffering with a slight attack of influenza but is now well again. Brother Simpson taught a Bible course for the Epworth League at Sandy Hook, Dec. 14-19, and Brother F. N. Ladner led in a young peoples' revival at that church, Dec. 21-28.

Dr. N. L. Linebaugh, Presiding Elder of the Roswell District, is the member of S. M. U.'s Board of Trustees elected recently from the New Mexico Conference. Dr. Linebaugh came to Roswell from the El Paso District, where he served as Presiding Elder for four years. He has been a member of several General Conferences, including the last one, and for several years was prominently identified with Oklahoma Methodism.

His many friends throughout Mississippi will be glad to know that Rev. Ben P. Jaco, who is a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, now living in Raymonville, Texas, is enjoying good health. The Editor and Publisher appreciate the good wishes of Brother Jaco and join his North Mississippi brethren in wishing for him continued health through the New Year.

The Eleventh World's Sunday School Convention meets in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in July, 1932. This will be the first time a world gathering of Christians has ever met under the "Spell of the Southern Cross." It would be a fine thing if our three Conferences could raise the funds to send their Executive Secretaries—Rev. W. W. Holmes, Rev. R. G. Lord, and Rev. J. C. Chambers to this meeting of world Sunday school workers.

Rev. Lewis Hoffpauir has had a fine start at West Monroe, La. There were 370 in the Sunday school on the third Sunday in December and all of the organizations of the Church are responding to the leadership of the pastor. Brother Hoffpauir writes, "We have found one of the best organized churches in the State here. The good pastors who have passed this way have done splendid work; and we are going to let you hear from this place during the year."

Rev. C. J. Thibodeaux, pastor, St. Martinsville, La., writes as follows: "We have started in our new work and like it very much. The charge is one hundred per cent. We expect to have a good year and much happiness in service with these good people. We ask our brethren to remember us and the work in their prayers." This is the second time Brother Thibodeaux has been appointed to St. Martinsville and the success of his former pastorate insures success for the year 1931.

We are indebted to Rev. W. T. Phillips, pastor of the Myrtle charge, North Mississippi Conference, for sending in three new subscriptions. Brother Phillips says, "We had our First Quarterly Conference last night (22nd). J. H. Felts, the presiding elder, was at his best. Every church was well represented. The reports were encouraging, co-operation and operation continued. The pastor was well received for the fourth year. Santa came to see the entire family Saturday night; all contributions were just such as we would have selected. Rock roads to every church on the charge; some man will find a loyal and high class people with whom to work next year."

Rev. Earl Buford Ellington and Miss Catherine Cheek were married in Durant, Mississippi, Dec. 19, Rev. S. A. Brown, pastor at Durant, performing the ceremony. The groom is one of the most popular young preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, now serving the Sturgis circuit in the Columbus district. The bride is a most lovable young woman of Lewisburg, Tennessee. She has been teaching in the High School at Durant. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left on a motor trip to visit friends and relatives in Tennessee. We wish for this young couple all the happiness and usefulness that life can give.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Summit, Miss., was called to Mayersville to conduct the funeral of Mrs. J. P. Heath, a devoted member of the Methodist Church. The burying ground is historic Clover Hill on an Indian mound. Mrs. Heath is survived by six daughters and one son, all of whom are faithful members of the Methodist Church. Rev. C. H. Williams, pastor, assisted in the service.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, who took the superannuate relation at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, preached an inspiring sermon to the LaBranch Street, McComb, congregation on a recent Sunday evening. Rev. J. H. Jolly begins his third year with a promising outlook for the best of the three.

The editor was happy to receive the following from Rev. W. H. Saunders, our enterprising pastor at Picayune, Miss.: "Our people gave us a royal welcome for the second year. They pounded us with an abundance of the substantials to make it possible for our family to enjoy the season at very small expense. They have pledged us their hearty support and evidenced this by attendance on the preaching services. We put on a most delightful program. With our five children at home and this evidence of good-will, it was an easy matter to celebrate the birthday of the King with a feast of the family. Mrs. Saunders continues to improve in health and in due time we expect to have her so she can fill her place as usual in the heart of the home."

Picayune Points—Our first Quarterly Conference came on the 19th inst. Brother Porter preached a great sermon and his presidency over the Quarterly Conference was very satisfactory. Our people are delighted with his leadership. The year opens up with bright prospects for a great year. We are planning to make advance along all lines. Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor, preached the annual Christmas sermon for the Knights Templar at 9 A. M. Christmas morning. We expect to meet the obligations and challenge of the general movement of the whole Church to make this a fruitful year in evangelistic results. We made many families glad with substantial remembrances of the season.—Reporter.

The Richton Mississippi Dispatch published the following concerning Rev. W. A. Terry, recently assigned to that charge: "Rev. W. A. Terry, newly appointed Methodist pastor preached to a large and appreciative audience at both morning and evening services. 'Prayer' was the subject of his morning sermon and he handled it in a splendid manner, his remarks carrying great weight and impressing his hearers. At the night service he continued the topic of the morning and his discourse which was greatly appreciated by all who heard it showed a wealth of thought and helped to clarify doubts in the minds of many. It is felt that Brother Terry will mean much to the spiritual life of the community and his genial manner and hearty good-fellowship cannot but win for him many friends during his pastorate here."

The Interstate Progress, Logansport, La., carried the following notice about the first service of Rev. J. D. Fomby: "Rev. J. D. Fomby, pastor of the Methodist Church, moved here Friday and filled the pulpit Sunday morning and evening. Large congregations heard him. At the evening hour the Baptist Church called off their service and attended in honor of the occasion. Evans gave the new pastor and family a hearty welcome after which Rev. Fomby preached a most helpful sermon, using as his text, 'If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His,' which was greatly enjoyed by all. Rev. Fomby and family have been given a warm welcome by his people as well as by others, and already they have made a most favorable impression on all who have met them." On Tuesday night following the opening Sunday the members and friends of the community gave Brother Fomby and family a pounding which included many useful gifts.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT—NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Aberdeen District Missionary Institute will be held at Okolona, Tuesday, Jan. 13th, at 10 o'clock A. M. All pastors, lay leaders, leaders in Women's Missionary work and young people's activities, chairmen of Missionary committees and leaders of all other activities of our church are cordially urged to be present.

T. H. DORSEY, P. E.

A REQUEST

Having been appointed by the Annual Conference at Vicksburg to bring the historical record of the Mississippi Conference up to the present, completing the work begun by the late Rev. John G. Jones, we earnestly solicit the co-operation of all preachers and laymen in aiding us to secure all records, papers, and documents of any kind whatsoever, that would enable us to get full information of churches, preachers, both itinerant and local, since 1845, and any other matter or matters that would be of assistance or interest in performing this task.

If you have any books, papers, or documents of the above period and will send them to the Mississippi Conference Historical Society, Millsaps Library, Jackson, Mississippi, we will appreciate it and after collecting data from them we will return them to you or retain them for the Historical Society, at your pleasure. The Historical Society would like to have any and all records of Methodism in Mississippi from the beginning.

We will be grateful if the older members of Methodist churches in the Mississippi Conference and the older preachers will write us their recollections of Methodism in the communities where they lived or served in former days. This will enable us to secure many facts of interest that have not found their way into the written records.

Sincerely,
M. L. BURTON,

SIN AND ITS COST—WHO PAYS THE PRICE?

By Rev. T. J. O'Neil

Every misdeed costs somebody something. But the question is: Who Pays the Price? There is an irreversible law written into Holy Writ, and into human experience—"The Way of The Transgressor is Hard." Any one who sins must pay some penalty. The fullness of the price paid by the transgressor may not be in full revelation to the world. The remorse suffered by the transgressor ofttimes is indescribable. But the tragedy of the matter is: the transgressor does not suffer alone. Many others suffer also. The price paid for a transgression by the innocent is often great. Many fathers and mothers carry heavy burdens of grief, and are brought to premature old age by the misdoings of their children. Many estates that have been acquired by honest toil and rigid economy have been squandered in an amazingly short time by prodigal sons and daughters.

The peace of communities has been disturbed. Friendships have been broken. Homes have been disintegrated, and happiness turned into sorrow, and many innocent caused to suffer because some of the citizens of the community are selfish, and thoughtless enough to respond to the appeals of abnormal appetites, and a diabolical spirit, and invade the rights of others to satisfy themselves.

These community liabilities are found among all classes. Sometimes the delinquent is a child, thought to be hardly responsible for its act. Sometimes it is a youth in whom the neighbors have implicit confidence. Sometimes it is a man whose records have been clear, but he yields to temptation, and falls into the slimepits of sin.

The suffering imposed upon the innocent by the sinner is found not only in grief-stricken parents, and disturbed communities, but I have seen twelve men taken from their homes, and business, and placed under strict surveillance by an officer of the law during the day, and locked up in prison by night, for several days at a time while they are serving as jurors, sitting in judgment on the case of some infraction of law. Perhaps no one of the twelve men has ever written a black page into his own history, but they are paying a heavy price for the guilt of others.

Furthermore, I have seen a company of preachers denied the privileges, and pleasures, as well as the benefits of an annual Conference, by being appointed a trial committee to try some member of the Conference who has so far discounted, or at least forgotten the high calling to which he is called as to class himself with the lawless, and then, instead of being manly enough to plead guilty to his sin, and beg pardon, or withdraw from the ministry, gets his consent to heap discomfort and embarrassment on his brethren by going into trial, when the only thing on which he can base any hope of acquittal is some mere technicality, or the possibility of destroying some testimony.

Surely, if every one who has any degree of the humane spirit left in his soul, would think on these things, he would be restrained from sin for the protection of his neighbors, even if he cares nothing for himself.

LETTER FROM MISS ROBBIE LEE LEGGETT

Laura Haygood Normal, Soochow,
China, November 24, 1930.

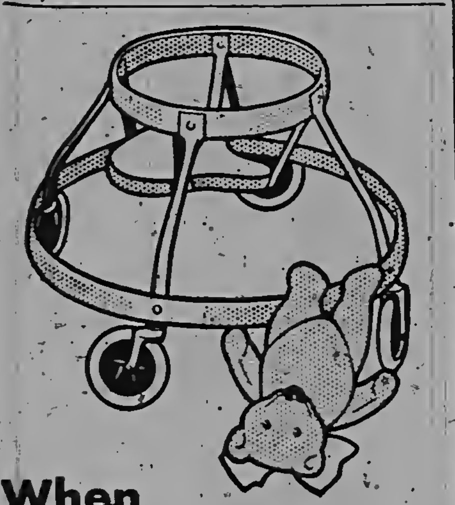
Dear Women of the Mississippi Conference: I don't know how to thank you for the check that Mrs. Sharp sent me saying that she was sending the balance of the love gift. When I wrote you thanking you for the $235, I thought you had been quite generous, for I knew that crops were not very good, that is the price was not, so you can imagine my surprise when I got the second check for $136.15. Thank you again and again for it. I assure you that I shall have no trouble finding a place for it. I have had some extra expense connected with my operation and there are quite a few things that I have to have that I didn't expect to get. It was going to be rather hard to pay back money that I had borrowed to go to school on, but you have certainly made things much easier for me. I hope that because you have removed some of my financial burdens I can do better work.

China is very interesting, very beautiful and certainly a very challenging field. Things have been rather hard for the missionary, but we hope to have more freedom in our work, now that the president has joined the Church. However, we don't know just how much power he has to make things easier for us. We are all hoping for the best.

I assure you that I shall do my best, realizing that you are my co-workers even if you are so far away from me. Thanking you again for making things so much easier for me.

Sincerely yours,

ROBBIE LEE LEGGETT.



When BABIES are Upset

BABY ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready?

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria.

MESSAGE FROM CHINA

By Robbie Lee Leggett

Dear Friends: In the beginning let me say to you that you need not read all of this letter at one time, nor will I feel hurt if you skip part of it, for I intend to write a long one. I shall try to answer all the questions that I have learned the answers to that were asked me before I left home, and if I tell you something that you already know, that was for the other person and not you. I must write carbon copies since time does not permit me to write you an individual letter. However, as I write these letters I am remembering you individually.

My Arrival

I arrived September 1 as I expected to. There were quite a few of the missionaries in Shanghai to meet me, as well as a few of the Chinese. Rev. Kiang, a pastor of one of the churches in Shanghai and a brother of the principal of Laura Haygood, was among the Chinese that met me. I had met Rev. Kiang in America, so it was quite a pleasure to be welcomed by a Chinese that you had known before. One of the teachers from Laura Haygood came down to meet me and to bring me to Soochow, where I am working this year. She took charge of all my things and got them through the customs, and I had nothing to do but to stand around and gaze at the things that I saw around me, and I did my share of gazing, too. One can read and read and be told about the country that you are to go to, but when you see it you are lost in wonder and amazement, but I have not been disappointed in the place.

China is a much more beautiful place than I had thought it would be. I think it is quite beautiful, even in spite of the dirt and the smell that you come in contact with so frequently.

Cities That I Have Visited

So far, I have seen only three of the cities of China: Shanghai, Soochow and Changshu (pronounced Zong-zo). They are quite different, but equally interesting. I landed at Shanghai, and if I had not seen the Chinese characters that were on the buildings, I could have easily imagined mysel in New York, that is as far as the looks of the buildings were concerned. There were these immense buildings, wide streets, and many other things that were typical of America. But even Shanghai, as foreign as it is, does not let you forget that you are in China. You look down the streets and you see motor cars of every kind darting to and fro, and in among these are richshas, wheel-barrows, coolies with great loads on their backs. You look for a moment and you want to turn away, for you do not see how all of these people are going to stay in the streets without having a collision. The coolies seem to be unmindful of the great motor cars that are buzzing around them. Yet no one seems to get hurt. Here the speed of the west has met the slowness of the east and one wonders how long they will be able to live together.

I left Shanghai and came to Soochow. It was a relief to get here, even if the streets are narrow. There is no way of traveling in the city except in richshas and sedan chairs. One feels quite safe, for everyone must move along at about the same rate.

My arrival in Soochow was more like waking up in fairyland than anything else that I know. Of course, I had read about the things that existed but you are never quite able to realize a thing until you see it. I was taken to a ricksha and I came across town—five miles. The most of the time we were going through what seemed like a narrow hall, but of course it was a street. I must confess that I had a rather strange feeling as I was pulled along by a man, and I couldn't help but think, as I went along, "It is to you, too, that I have come and now that I am here what can I do for you," and I must say that that question is continually flashing into my mind and I am trying to find a way to answer it.

The streets were most interesting. There were all kinds of things to eat that I had never seen before. Some of them looked quite delicious, while some of them were not so inviting. People were working on the streets, even as narrow as they are. I think I arrived on washday, for the cooly had to stop several times and let the woman move her tub out of the way so we could pass. Several other activities were going on, such as cooking, sewing, and carpentering. There seems to be no private life here.

After about an hour of the interesting sights, I was startled by a boom which sounded as if it were a bomb that had suddenly exploded near-by. This was immediately followed by another, another and another and another. I wondered if the "reds" were after me so soon. I looked at my new principal, who was behind me in another ricksha, and she laughed and said, "China welcomes you; this is her form of greeting." So I got quite a thrill out of the rest of the explosions—which were firecrackers. Always when some distinguished guest arrives they shoot the firecrackers.

Soochow is in the process of moderrizing herself. Some of the streets are being widened, and some of the canals are being turned into streets. I suppose that before long cars will be complicating things here as they are in Shanghai. It is quite pathetic in a way for the government is taking property without paying them for it, or are paying them a very small amount. In some places all of a man's shop is taken, but a few feet. His home and his place of business are the same, so he is in a rather difficult position. One cannot help but smile as they go along and view some of the shops that have only a few feet left. Their goods are hung on the wall and overhead is a roof extending over the street. This is where the family lives. One cannot help but wonder whether China will be better off or worse off when she is modernized.

It is very interesting to go down the canals which serve as streets in many instances. Soochow is called the Venice of China because of her many canals. As you go along you see a woman come along and wash her clothes in the canal, then she dips up a bucket of water to take back to the house to use. In a few minutes another woman comes along and washes her rice where the other woman has washed her clothes. Every Chinese drinks hot water, so I guess that is the reason that they don't all die. It is very discourteous to a guest to offer him cold water.

Changshu is still very different from Soochow. It is an interior country town with a population of only one hundred thousand. Think of one hundred thousand contituting a country town. They are very conservative and very superstitious. They worship their ancestors more religiously than they do in Soochow. Every few feet you see ghost money, trunks, servants and other articles made of paper for sale. These are taken to the cemetery and burned, so that the spirits might use them in the other world.

Even some of our church members there are still very superstitious. There are women in the church that believe the workers cast devils out

An Eminent Physician Prescribed this Tonic

AS a young man Dr. R. V. Pierce practiced medicine in Pennsylvania. His prescriptions met with such great demand that he moved to Buffalo, N.Y. and put up in ready-to-use form his well-known tonic for the blood, Golden Medical Discovery. of them. They are very devout church members with all of their superstition. I suppose one must be patient and let them come up through the stages that we have come, for our own forefathers have burned witches. I always draw a sigh of relief when I see them and am thankful that my work is educational rather than evangelistic, for we do not have the ones that are that superstitious. I feel that I know more about how to deal with the class that I come in contact with than I do with that class. But even in my classroom superstition is not wholly absent, for the other day two girls said that they thought there were real witches.

Mission Stations That I Have Visited

I have had very little opportunity to acquaint myself with our work since the need for workers was so great that I had to begin work as soon as I landed rather than study the language for this year. And in addition to this handicap I have had my appendix and gall bladder removed; however, I have recovered very rapidly from my operation and am now doing full time work.

In Soochow, we have Laura Haygood Normal School, and I am a member of the faculty here this year. This institution is a training school for teachers. The most of our work is training leaders rather than trying to do the work ourselves. We have a school that no one who supports it need be ashamed of; however, there are improvements that could be made if we had more workers and more money, but it is better than the government schools and is serving very well. Just across the street is Soochow University. It belongs to the General Board. It is a very pretty place and I understand that it compares quite favorably with the institutions of higher learning of China. To the left of our school is Soochow Hospital. I speak from experience when I say that it is quite efficient, for it was there that I had my operation. The hospital is under the auspices of the General Board; but it was built by the Rockefeller foundation and is endowed by it. There is one foreign doctor, Dr. Snell. He is one of the General Board's missionaries. He is a surgeon and, if I am any judge, you will have to look a long time in America before you can find one to surpass him. There are several Chinese nurses and doctors that are members of the staff. The two are very efficient.

Just beyond the hospital is St. John's Church that was built and named for St. John's of St. Louis. It is a very large modern church. It serves our schools as well as the community.

We also have another church and an evangelistic center here. When you enumerate them you seem to have quite a few, but when you think of the number of people that they must serve they do not appear to be so plentiful.

I had the pleasure of staying at McTyiere School for a day and a night. They have the prettiest place that I have ever seen. I wouldn't be ashamed to place it by Ward Belmont any day. It is the one self-supporting mission school in China. We have workers there, but the fees of the pupils pay for the upkeep and for the faculty. The president's wife as well as some other prominent women are graduates of this college.

I have also visited our work in Zongzo. This is not as encouraging as the other schools that I have mentioned. We have two girls' schools and one boys' school. Neither of them has enough money to run them as they should be run, and, in fact, the boys' school is supported almost entirely by the man who has charge of it. The salaries that are paid are too small to attract teachers, so they must content themselves with the type that they can afford to pay. It cannot secure teachers from Laura Haygood School, for one of our girls cannot afford to teach there on the salary that is paid, for she has spent too much in preparation to go there. She has too many obligations to meet. It is a situation that is to be deplored, but I am too young in the work to know what should be done, but I do know that when our mission maintains a station that cannot afford to pay a living wage to its workers, something should be done. It is not putting the Christian principles into practice, and if we teach a thing we should practice it. Some think that the schools should be closed, while those who have had a part in the making insist that the appropriation should be increased. I am not taking sides yet, but I do know that when a situation of that kind exists "something is rotten in Denmark."

My Work

I am teaching English at Laura Haygood this year. Most of the time I am quite happy in my work, but occasionally wish awful hard that it was religious education intead of English. I think it will be that in the future, but I must work patiently and wait for my time. As you know, there is no place in our school for religious education as such, but it must all be given as extracurricula activities, and you have to be careful too how you give it there. I think things will be different now that the president has joined the Church. We are certainly hoping so at least.

I am advisor for the Y. W. C. A. for this year. I am very glad to have this contact with the girls. I am to make a talk tonight at their first meeting, and I am speaking through an interpreter, since I don't know the language. I feel almost as important as the Bishop.

How Missionaries Live

So many people have asked me how missionaries live, so I'll try to tell you something of our home life here on the field. As far as physical comforts are concerned we are for the most part quite as comfortable here as we would be at home. It is not quite so comfortable here in cold weather as it is at home, but then we have enough fire to keep us from freezing, so you need't expect to get a report that I have frozen to death. We certainly have to wear more clothes than we do at home. I have already had on my heavy clothes and they felt quite good, even if I did look quite fat in them. Everyone does, so why should I worry?

You would be surprised to see how many of the things that we have at home that we have here. We do not have corn bread and milk. Being a Southerner, I naturally miss them.

All the missionaries of a station live in the Missionary Home that you have built for us. We each have our own room and we have a large room that serve as both living room and dining room. Most of the houses are built on the same plan. We have a cook and he purchases all of our groceries and prepares our meals. We divide his salary and the price of the groceries equally among those who live in the house. One member of the family acts as housekeeper and pays the bills, looks after the sanitary conditions under which the food is prepared, plans the meals, etc. Those who live in the house take turns doing this. A newcomer doesn't do it for some time, for there are so many things that have to be done and you have to be so careful about little things that you do not think of at home. I really have no desire to become so efficient that I can do this, for this is in addition to the other duties that you may have.

When we travel we have lots of fun, that is we do when we have a sense of humor and not too much modesty. As I have said before, the Chinese have no private life. You must become accustomed to any sight, for you never know when you will see something that would be very shocking in America. The trains are almost always late, and the launches on the canals are so very slow. A thirty-mile trip to Changshu takes a half of a day. We three new missionaries went up and we thought we were so far away from home and we were told that we were only thirty miles away from Soochow. You must become accustomed to the slow movement of the East.

You must also be ready for a personal inspection, for you never know when you will have one. They are not official inspections, of course, but just as thorough and more so than the one that we have. It is quite polite to stop a person and ask her how much the dress you are wearing cost, and to examine it if it is different from others that he may have seen.

One day I stepped outside of the compound and I saw a man with three children. They followed me and asked me all kinds of questions, but I could not undertand. They finally decided to inspect me, By their motions I knew that they wished to look at my watch. I held out my hand and let them take a good look at it. They then discovered a buckle on my dress. They

Stubborn Coughs
Ended by Recipe,
Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

"Hope Thou in God." This phrase is coming into my mind constantly. Banks are failing. Money is coming in slow for Missions. The idea of a unified program is not making much impression. Men and women are hard pressed and the weather is bad. Hope thou in God. God cares for us. I pray that each of us will be in prayer more than ever. More hopeful than ever. May we put the evil one to flight with radiant hope.

We are asking every Epworth League Chapter and every Young People's department or class to co-operate in a week of prayer the first week of January or at some other week in the beginning of the year. A week of prayer will mean much to us. Our people need to be heartened to the task that lies ahead of them. No one can tell when times will change. We know that we must face the issue with the consciousness of a Living God with us. We do not go alone. He is there to aid, to guide. The adult classes will be given permission to choose "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," Dr. Cram, to be studied during the months of January and February in place of the regular lessons if they so desire. It is felt that this will be most helpful to the churches for this to happen.

Already a few have asked for help in Cokesbury training and in vacation church schools. Our help must be limited, so get your requests in early

If you failed to send in your Missionary offering last month, so did 275 other Sunday schools. Can we not improve this condition?

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Our Dual Special

One of the many duties of the local Board of Christian Education is to see that a suitable missionary program is carried out in all the departments of the Sunday school and Epworth Leagues and that opportunity is given in the Sunday school and Epworth Leagues at least monthly, preferebly the fourth Sunday of the month, for a missionary offering. This is what the Dual Special is.

Loyalty

Loyalty demands this. The law is not optionary with us, i. e., it is not a matter of choice, provided we are loyal Methodists. If we are to have a loyal membership we are to lead in loyalty and teach loyalty. If we do this, our people will be just as loyal as those of any church. We will leave it to your conscience if it is right to take the offering that the people give to this cause and spend it for other things. Yet, some of our people or leaders do this.

Needs

Our General and Annual Conferences have projected a Conference Extension Program. The support and success of this program depends largely upon the Dual Special offering. We must have adequate support if we are to carry out your orders. Through our Extension Program we are aiming to make a worth-while contribution to every rural church in our Conference. The needs are mighty. As our rural church goes so goes the conference.

Our Extension Work Enriched and Enlarged

The last General Conference enriched and enlarged our work. More is demanded of us. In the face of these facts we are allowed to retain a smaller per cent of the total contributions. To be exact, 40 1-2 per cent. Please see that your Sunday school has a missionary program on the fourth Sunday. Make your program helpful and attractive. Use it in the place of the regular "Opening Exercise." Follow with an offering and send immediately to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss. The program will create new interest, will increase your income and give variety. Yes, the times are hard and precarious. All the greater reason that we should push the Kingdom's work. As to your offering we are not saying "how much", but we do beg you to send us what the people give to this work.

Sincerely,
E. G. MOHLER,
Rural Extension Secretary, North Mississippi Conference.

DATES FOR LEADERSHIP SCHOOLS

Plans for the Leadership Schools at Mount Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., and Lake Junaluska, N. C., are well under way and strong programs will be provided next summer.

The dates: Mount Sequoyah, first term, June 30 to July 11; second term, July 14-28; Young People's Leadership Conference, July 30 to August 11.

Lake Junaluska, first term, July 15-29; second term, July 30 to August 13; Young People's Leadership Conference, August 14-26.

During the second term at both schools special courses will be offered for Conference employed workers of the Board of Christian Education.

Other courses will be valuable for presiding elders, pastors and other workers in local churches.

Among the speakers at both places will be Bishop Paul B. Kern. Others will be announced later.

Make note of the dates and arrange your summer program to include one of the schools.

EPWORTH LEAGUE—NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Dear Leaguers: There are some things which we hope you will keep in mind for the next few months. You know our Assembly will meet in June and that is the time when we have the final check-up on our Leagues. You will want your League to have a high score when we meet in Grenada. So now is the time to begin working on your Standard of Efficiency if you have not already done so.

You should check up on your League now and see what your rating is. Get you a wall chart and keep it before your Leaguers so they can see just what progress they are making. When you have your council meetings go over the Standard of Efficiency and see what your score is. If you meet these requirements in the right spirit it will help you to develop a more efficient League. Let us see how many Standard Leagues we can have in our Conference by the time our Assembly meets again. Which district will have the largest number of Standard Leagues?

When we get back from the Epworth League Leaders' Council in Nashville we hope to have some suggestions which will help you in your League work. There is one thing you can keep in mind, though, and that is keep busy. If we are going to succeed in our work we must keep busy. Don't let up. Keep the good work going. We need more of the spirit of perseverance in our League work. That spirit will win.

In just a few more months our High schools will be turning out a lot of graduates. Some of them will be going to college next year. Where will they go to college? Many of them will go where they are influenced to go. Some of them will make their own choices. How about getting some of these girls lined up for Grenada College? Our Leaguers could make a survey of their community and find out how many girls will be going to college from that community next year and then see how many of these girls will agree to go to Grenada College. You will not find a better school for girls in Mississippi. The preachers ought to get busy too. We are mighty sorry agents if we can't sell Grenada College to more girls than we have been selling. The time to get busy is now. Don't wait until all of the girls have signed up for some other college. We should have more of our boys going to Millsaps too. It is an outstanding institution, one that we should be proud of. Let us get busy and tell people about our institutions. Many of our Methodist people know about them.

FROM MARKSVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Decell: I have a little message for the Advocate readers and my friends.

God was good to us during the holidays, for there was born unto us on December 28 an eight-pound girl. Her name is Virginia Rose. Of course, it is needles for me to say that we are indeed proud parents.

Now, let me say there is one other thing which has added joy to our hearts; and that is the cordial reception the good people have given us. This begins my fifth year on the Marksville charge, and they have been happy ones.

Let me add that my plan is to send some subscriptions for the Advocate as soon as I can scout around on the work.

Fraternally,
C. B. WHITE.

SPEAK THROUGH ME, LORD

By Elizabeth Jones Boykin

Speak through me, Lord, yes, speak,
To a sinning dying world,
To a world all hushed
With their hopes all crushed
Yes, speak through me, Lord, yes, speak.

Speak through me, Lord, yes, speak,
To the one who needs me most,
To the child so near,
And the ones so dear,
Or scattered far and wide.

Speak through me, Lord, yes, speak,
Whereever I be this day,
In the lonely place
Let me bring Thy grace,
Yes, speak through me, Lord, this day

STOP BOBBY'S COUGH

Before it Weakens Him to the Danger Point!

Never take a child's cough lightly. You can't tell where it will end. Many a serious sickness has started with "just a cough". For a cough is not only distressing, but weakening as well. At the first sign of a cough or chest soreness in old or young, always give good, dependable old "Piso's for Coughs".

Piso's does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages, soothes the inflamed tissues, and at the same time, has a tonic value that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Piso's supplies these five vital effects and it contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give, even to babies. All druggists sell Piso's in 35c and 60c sizes. Be sure you ask for "Piso's for Coughs".

FROM GORDON AVENUE, MONROE

Dear Advocate: We have had a splendid reception back at our church here on Gordon Avenue in Monroe. Last year was a happy year in the work of the church here and we feel confident this year will show a record surpassing the one just gone to record. A year ago this church had twenty-two adult members and at this same date a year later we have seventy-six adult members. It is evident God has in mind the building of a church in this community of the splendid city of Monroe. It's our wish and prayer that we may be the instruments in His hand with which He will build His church.

It will be of interest to our many friends over the State to know this church added to its physical property about $5,000 valuation; about $1,200 of this is unprovided for, hut will be taken care of in the coming year. It was the good friends of this church in Monroe working with the membership who made possihle the expansion. In our new building, we find refuge from the cold and rain in a most excellent apartment; and further a Sunday school of 191 is housed which would have been impossible in the small building here a year ago. All that prevents a Sunday school of at least three hundred is SPACE. We have everything full. We have to ask our teachers to keep on the soft pedal in order to house those who come to us.

Much credit is due our presiding elder, Rev. E. C. Gunn; Dr. W. W. Drake and his great First Church and our own Board of Missions for this fast growing Mission church. It is a pleasure for us to he connected with it in this fast developing age. We are happy and busy.

examined it. Then they looked at my shoes and compared them with theirs. I submitted as graciously as I could, and when I left they smiled at me as if I were an old-time friend.

When we go down the streets the people all stare at us. I don't wonder though for some of us do look rather curious, I am sure. They point and cry out, "The foreigner, the foreigner", so the other members can come out and have a look at us. Sometimes they are quite polite and say "foreign teacher," but at other times it is "foreign devil," but I really don't think that expression means to them what it does to us. Most always we can get a smile from them if we smile at them.

Foreign Feast (Chinese)

If you have ever been to a banquet at home and felt that you had to stay entirely too long, you know something of the feeling that one has when he attends a Chinese feast, only I am so curious about things yet that the time passes rather quickly for me. I have been to several and I am learning to use my chop sticks much better. Now, as to how well I manipulate them I'll let you guess. The food is put in the middle of the table and everybody dips into the bowl at the same time and fishes the food out. But let me warn you to use one pair of chop sticks to get the food out with and the other to eat it with. I didn't do this. I was so elated over the fact that I had succeeded in getting a mouthful that I dashed it into my mouth. You can imagine my embarrassment when I discovered that I was the only one that was dipping the chop sticks that I was eating with into the bowl. They sometimes serve thirty or forty courses; in fact, it is not uncommon to serve that many. A Chinese feast is A FEAST.

Chinese Dress

Many of you were asking about the Chinese dress. Men and women dress alike with the exception that women wear brighter colors than men. They wear long rohes with close-fitting necks. Or, at least, that is how the middle class and those above dress. The coolies and the women of the lower class wear what I call baggy pants, and a little jacket. The coolie never thinks of fastening his jacket in warm weather, and in he may discard it altogether. We have decided that it was a good thing that we became accustomed to the scantiness of dress in America.

Their shoes are, for the the most part, made of cloth and very much like our house slippers; however, they do have some flat leather shoes. Occasionally you see one wearing foreign shoes. The coolies wear grass shoes which are nothing but a bottom strapped on his feet to protect them from the cobble stones on the streets.

There are quite a few Chinese men who dress in foreign clothes, but you never see an American dress on a woman.

Sanitary Conditions

The sanitary conditions of China are very bad. One has to he very careful and we seldom eat anything that is not cooked in our own kitchens. You dare not buy a piece of candy, no matter how good it looks or how badly you want it. But even with all of this care one is likely to pick up harmful germs. I have heen very careful and I have just had some trouble caused by bacteria. It can be cured quite easily, but the method is not so pleasant. I am just ahout well now, and I am so glad.

They are working on the problem of health and cleanliness, but when you look out you wonder when their effort will mean anything.

Education

We have some very well educated people in China, hut the mass of Chinese have not heen educated. Some of the people we come in contact with are very cultured. The teachers of our school, of the University, and the doctors at the hospital are as well educated as Americans of the same class. When I am with them I feel that the task of Christian education in China might be relatively easy, hut when I pass through the streets and see those who are not educated, I wonder where one ought to begin.

Could Write a Book About It

"Nine years ago after my little girl was born dead, I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about four months. The next year I became the mother of a fine 11 pound baby boy. After he was born, I kept on with the medicine to build me up. Four months ago I was nervous and rundown and suffered from other troubles which I knew Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would relieve so I started taking it and now I feel fine again. Many of my friends could write a book on the good the Vegetable Compound has done them."—*Mrs. W. Happy Again

"Nothing seemed to please Betty Jean," says Mrs. James W. Nolen, 113 Ceanter St., Dallas. Texas. "She was feverish and fretful. Her appetite was poor; she seemed bilious.

"A child specialist recommended California Fig Syrup and it certainly made my little girl happy, well again in a hurry. We have used it over three years for all her upsets."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it for feverish, headachy, bilious, constipated babies and children; to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases.

Appetite is increased by its use; the breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are assisted; weak stomach and bowels are strengthened.

For your protection the genuine always bears the name California.

HOLD THE TRAIN

(Author Unknown)

"Madam, we miss the train at B—."
"But can't you make it, sir?" she gasped.
"Impossible. It leaves at three,
And we are due a quarter past."
"Is there no way? O, tell me then,
Are you a Christian?"
"I am not." "And are there none
Among the men who run the train!"
"No, I forgot—I think the fellow over there Oiling the engine claims to be."
She threw upon the engineer
A fair face white with agony.

"Are you a Christian?" "Yes, I am."
"Then, O, sir, won't you pray with me,
All the long way that God will stay—
That God will hold the train at B——?"
"'Twill do no good—it leaves a three and—"
"Yes, but God will hold the train;
My dying child is calling me
And I must see her face again. O, won't you pray?"
"Yes, I will." A nod
Emphatic as he takes his place.
"When Christians grasp the arm of God
They grasp the power that rules the race."

Out from the station swept the train
On time—swept on past wood and lea,
The engineer with cheeks aflame prayed:
"O, Lord, hold the train at B——!"
Then flung the throttle wide, and lik
Some giant monster of the plain,
With panting sides and mighty strides
Past hill and valley swept the train

A half—a minute—two, are gained
Along those burnished lines of steel
His lances leap, each nerve is strained
As still he prays with fervent zeal
Heart, hand and brain with one accor
Work while his prayer ascends t heaven;
"Just hold the train eight minutes, Lord,
And I'll make up the other seven."

With rush and roar through meadow lands,
Past cottage home and green hillside,
The panting thing obeys his hands
And speeds along with giant strides.

They say an accident delayed
The other train a while, but He
Who listened while His children prayed,
In answer held the train at B——."

The above poem, "Hold the Train," was given the editor by Mr. R. E. McInturf, a passenger conductor on the Illinois Central and an official member of our LaBranch Street church, McComb. Brother McInturf believes in letting his religion travel with him on all his trips. He is a personal worker with a rich experience of divine grace.

LETTER FROM SHANGHAI, CHINA

Dear Editor: You doubtless have many readers among farmers whom the Chinese class is second only to the officials. They may be interested in the god I enclose. He is "San-da-loh-te," the one Chinese farmers worship to get good harvests.

Though "highly civilized" China is a country of idols and idol-worship. The people have gods for every purpose and need and for each and every class and occupation. I sometimes think China has as many gods as people! This farmers' god is really named "Koh-zen," meaning "grain-god." "San-da-loh-te" describes him—"Three-heads-six-hands" god. The Chinese often call men and gods this way, as Mr. One-eye or Mr. Pot-mark, or Mr. Crooked-foot, or Mr. Iron-crutch. You will notice that the god I send has six hands. In the upper two hands he carries the sun (red) and the moon (green). If he turns the sun and moon properly the seasons come to the advantage of the farmers. If not, then Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter are bad.

In the second pair of hands are the "rain-bell" and the "wind-charm" (7 stars of Great Bear). With these he governs the winds and the rain so as to give the farmers (if he is pleased with them) sufficient wind and rain to make crops grow quickly and abundantly. Koh-zen's third two hands grip two swords. With these he slashes all the devils who would destroy or harm the crops or farms. Koh-zen has two eyes for each of his three heads and an extra one for good measure. Seven is a "perfect number." With his seven eyes he can see everything perfectly. He can so see the needs and supply them. He can see the dangers and devils and repel them. Is he not a useful sort of fellow? But they must worship him faithfully to keep him pleased. He is worshiped chiefly in the Spring enough to last the whole year. They set a fine feast before him and burn candles and incense, themselves eating what he leaves!

The eight red characters express their prayers, "Skyi bing-an, Zan-hwa mozwen"—May the four seasons be peaceful, the silk and produce be abundant. The figure above is the "Pa-kue;" a highly valued and much used charm. The four gods attending Koh-zen are powerful assistants. Koh-zen is very busy and needs these fellows to run his errands and carry out his commands of mercy. You will thus see how the Chinese needs and desires are like those of Westerners, and how Chinese, to meet the needs, work out in their gods' the attributes suited to supply their needs. How we wish they knew our one true God and realized how He is really living and able and willing to supply all these pictured needs and all other needs as well.

It is our joy to live among this interesting people and lovingly point them to our wonderful Lord, not forcing our religion upon them but revealing "a more excellent Way," for them to adopt or reject according to their own sweet will. Pray for this great people. May you and friends have a very merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

The life of "Young J. Allen, the Man Who Seeded China," by Bishop W. A. Candler, D.D., LL.D., is just off the Cokesbury Press, and is a book that "has come to the kingdom for such a time as this." It will put power into the missionary message during the January-February cultivation period.

Committing the task of writing the life of so great a man as Young J. Allen to Bishop Candler is like putting a well-tuned violin into the hands of a master. It is not a statistical biography, but a living voice that, for the church today and tomorrow, puts life into a heroic figure that fell on sleep twenty and three years ago and challenges us to

It was an unearthly Power that watched over a little boy who was born in 1836 and left an orphan when he was twelve days old; that convicted him when he was fifteen and impressed him that if he were converted he would have to preach and go as a foreign missionary. The Holy Spirit witnessed to his salvation and led him on through Emory, a college of revival power at Oxford, Georgia. He followed on until with his wife and baby girl he sailed for China in 1859. Having required seven months to reach Shanghai, his patience showed no discouragement, but he was determined to Stay and Serve and Not Despair.

"He went to China in a spirit of self-sacrifice to glorify God in the salvation of souls and not in a mood of adventure to visit a foreign land of novel scenes and strange peoples." During his earlier years, there were "wars and rumors of wars." The Taiping Rebellion was upsetting all China and the war was on for Southern Independence back in the home-land; consequently no support reached him for several years, but "like a star unhasting, unresting—and still shining" he stayed. Pauline-like, he worked on ship-masts—the ship of Zion, that would waft China over billowy deeps to "The Rock of Ages." He established the Chinese Methodist itinerancy in 1863, and during the time he was forced to support himself, he evangelized in the evenings and on the Sabbath. Through his enforced waiting he formed relations with the government that led him out in a large way to demonstrate the Power of the Written Word.

He recorded his purpose to spend half the day in studying the Holy Scriptures. "Like all great missionaries he rested his faith on the Word of God and drew from it his evangelic message." He learned Chinese script that he might write the message of salvation for three hundred millions of people. Rev. Sz Tsz Kia said: "Some missionaries worked in only one city or church, but Dr. Allen, through his writings, was a missionary to an Empire." "The books of Young J. Allen have hurled the Chinese gods from their pedestals." "He toiled terribly, but his orderly methods and tireless diligence preserved him in health" and he was Faithful to the End.

He was educational and evangelistic in his methods. He opened up schools and colleges, translated and wrote books, established papers, edited journals and preached to the people.

During his forty-seven years of service in China he suffered the heartaches common to man. He and his devoted wife lost

A THREE-CONFERENCE OPPORTUNITY AND A CHURCH-WIDE NEED

Next Sunday, January 18, begins the period of special effort to secure renewals and new subscribers for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. This paper belongs to the preachers and members of the Church within our three Conferences. The manager and editor are servants of, and co-workers with, some two hundred thousand Methodists in these Conferences. Will the more than five hundred preachers and their Christian literature committees work together with us this one week to extend the usefulness of the Advocate and meet its urgent need of funds? To ask the question should be to answer it—YES.

The Advocate owes New Orleans banks $3,000 and has $300 to meet the payroll and current bills. The reduced income from Conference assessments and all too small returns in renewals and new subscribers makes it imperative that we all do work together NOW. It is not to use depressive facts to promote an interest, but to give our constituency the facts that they might know. We, as manager and editor, are not discouraged for we trust the preachers and people whose servants we are. The Publishing Committee has reduced the overhead expense $4,300. In view of the above facts it is well they did. They also reduced the price of the paper to $1.50. It will require 4,500 renewals and new subscriptions NOW to meet the need of the Advocate. The week of January 18-25 is the time.

Our Methodism is a connectional church. The whole Church needs the Advocate as an inlet through which its evangelistic, missionary, educational, healing, and promotional ministry can reach and minister to the people whom it would serve and upon whom its conquests, in part, depends. Let the motto again be, "We can and we will."

BISHOP MANNING, PRIEST AND PROPHET

Bishop W. T. Manning, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of New York, is more than a priest who ministers only at the altar. He frequently puts on the robe of a prophet and like Isaiah he "cries aloud and spares not." Living in a metropolis of the world, this Episcopal Bishop is frequently in the thick of the fight for moral and civic uplift.

It is true that last November, at the consecration of Dr. Charles K. Gilbert as suffragan Bishop of New York, in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, he laid claim to apostolic succession. While we decidedly differe with the Bishop in his forging an exclusive chain, without a missing link, running back two thousand years, we do respect his opinion. He is a Protestant Episcopal Bishop and that is a belief of a large portion of his church.

As a contender for upholding the sacred sanctities of hime life, we express our profound appreciation of him. If he does possess the poise of a priest he exercises the courage of a prophet and boldly denounces companionate marriage and free lovism. The conservation of home life in this republic is more important than disproving the belief of apostolic succession. Even the presence of Judge Ben Lindsey, a leader in the menace of companionate marriage, did not diminish the flame of prophetic fire that burned in the soul of the Bishop when he stood in the pulpit of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and denounced the Lindsey laxity and called for the reincarnation of domestic virtue that has been one of the pillars of the republic.

Surrounded by the surge of immorality in a great city and countered by liberal views of some of his own clergymen, the Bishop has stood unmoved, and proclaimed a high standard for domestic and public life. It is reported that one Rev. James T. Empringham was unfrocked by Bishop Manning, who frowned upon Empringham's methods of conducting anti-prohibition propaganda and his management of the Health Educational Society Clinic.

It means no little for the moral of life of the country to have a leader in a great denomination stand in the breach and fight for such vital issues as true marriage and right social standards.

New York is said to be the largest Italian city, the largest Negro city, and the largest Hebrew city in all the world. Truly the ends of the earth meet there—and problems confront the Christian worker that are not experienced elsewhere. A social worker a few years ago said "New York City ought to be abolished for the good of America." Sin there, as in other places, should be abolished that the good might grow. May the Bishop live long to labor well.

WHERE TO BEGIN

Birmingham, Ala.

We are about to make a fresh start. A new year lies before us. Its scenes are unknown and its paths untried. We have not been this way before. Where shall we begin? At the beginning, of course. Let us begin with God! For the present let our books be shut up; let the day's program be suspended; let us pause for what our fathers called a day of devout remembering.

God is Number One. We have all studied a little mathematics. We know how numbers, like the stars, run into hundreds and thousands and millions and billions and quintillions and on toward infinity. But one is the unit of it! That is the miracle worker. And so God is Number One, the basal unit in all the calculations of human life.

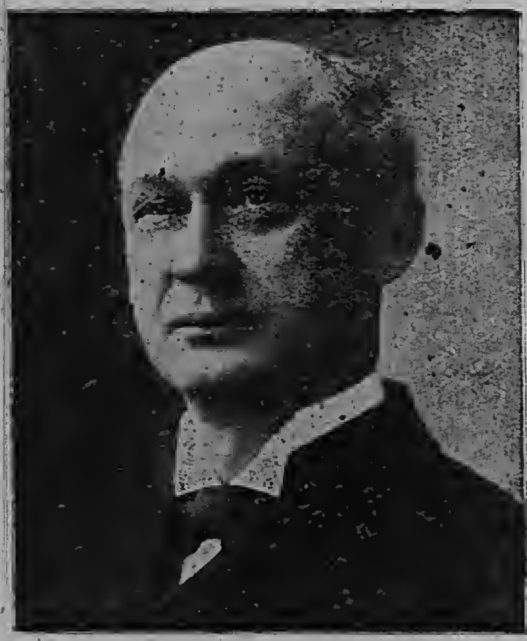
A pleasing speculation of ancient philosophy put heaven at the geographical center of the universe. Whether that be true or not, we know this is: God is the center of the spiritual universe. Swinging round Him, like planets about the sun, the spiritual movements of life all run. The primacy of God! The centrality of God! The supremacy of God! The sufficiency of God! These all stand out in revelation, history and experience as the immovable background of all Christian achievement.

The supremacy of God is given precedence in every revelation that deity makes of Himself. It stands out in all the works of creation and is distinctly affirmed in the first statement of Holy Writ. "In the beginning God"—the assertion of His priority over all time and the source of all life and order and force and destiny. He is what Dr. McCosh calls "That beginning back of which there is no other beginning and that foundation beneath which there is no other foundation." As all life proceeds from Him, so all life depends upon Him. "In Him we live and move and have our being."

As God is the source of all life, He is the seat of all moral authority and the standard of all permanency in the progress and development of society. He has ordained all order in the movements of men, which is as constitutional in social and spiritual being as gravitation is in the realm of physical nature. No progress or stability can be secured upon any other base. "Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." All legislation and social systems and ecclesiastical progress that are builded on any other foundation are wood, hay and stubble and are doomed to have their little day and cease to be. To build life and civilization any other way is building off the rock.

God is with the people who are the partners of His purpose. His presence and sustaining strength with those who run in the way of His commandments is no mere theory but is a most glorious fact. All history brings out the lesson that this is a fact to be relied upon with absolute assurance. "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." God and one man are stronger than all that can be against them. Times without number through the centuries God has shown Himself strong in behalf of those whose hearts are perfectly set upon the great ends of His will. Small minorities have again and again triumphed over the most terrific odds that were arrayed against them when they have relied alone upon the strong arm of the Almighty. Goliath lay dead at David's feet. Gideon and his brave band struck terror to the hosts of Midian that "lay along the valley like grasshoppers for multitude." Elijah on Carmel smote the prophets of Baal with withering fire. When Britain's boastful king rode out to meet the Scottish troops at Bannockborn, he said to the aide who rode by his side: "There is just a handful of those fellows and we have an army that is as the sands of the sea. Do they mean to fight us?" At that very moment those Highlanders, who feared nothing but God, kneeled down in full view of the armies of Edward. His chief marshal said, "See, king, men who pray will win the day or they will die." That handful of men reckoned on God alone and the English hosts were broken and scattered like the ships of Tarshish before an east wind. History is resplendent with the intervention of God in behalf of those who dared to adventure themselves upon Him alone.

There never was a time when God's people more needed to hear the voice of a prophet crying through the land, "Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." How prone we are to see the horses and chariots and carnal weapons that are arrayed against us! This is particularly a time of distress in the land. Labor is not productive. Not a few of the people are sitting by brooks that have all but gone dry. How are we to live this year? The treasury of God's church is depleted. What have we to bring to the altars of the Lord's house? The enemies of God and His church were never more blatant than they are today. Righteousness is challenged by widely-organized agencies that seek its overthrow. The forces of darkness are hurling themselves with terrific power against the very pillars upon which our civilization rests. The hearts of many have failed them through fear. "Things are just awful," they say. No, they need not be awful long. They are never awful when God is with His people.



BISHOP W. N. AINSWORTH, D.D.,LL.D.

There is light ahead. God will not leave His people in the sixth trouble nor forsake them in the seventh. He waits on us to prepare the way of the Lord and make our paths straight for His coming. Personal penitence will be blessed with His forgiving grace. The broken stones of home altars must be carefully laid again and the covenant-keeping God will preserve in righteousness them that honor Him, and their seed after them. Business must be sanctified by the partnership of His purpose. And let all of us come again to the house of the Lord and there pay our vows in the presence of all His people! And let no man say that the arm of the Lord is shortened!. A humbled, chastened, penitent people will yet have their captivity turned into rejoicing and see every weapon formed against God and His Church ground to powder.

Let all our people look up! Let the Methodist hosts begin this year with God! Let us reckon upon the faithfulness of Him who never fails!

"Sufficient is His arm alone
And our defense is sure."

—From the Alabama Christian Advocate.

FIRST STEPS IN A REVIVAL

By Bishop Joseph F. Berry, D.D., LL.D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church

Every real revival begins with Pentecost. Some evangelists do not seem to think so. They place much emphasis upon activity. Christians are exhorted to scurry around with cards of invitation. They are commanded to search the highways and the hedges. Crowds must be gathered. With a crowd there is always a sensation. And with some a revival and a sensation mean about the same thing.

Jesus had a different program. He said, "Tarry." Tarry in honest self-examination. Tarry in frank confession. Tarry in earnest supplication. Tarry in personal surrender. Tarry until you have lost the last trace of self-sufficiency. Tarry until the tongues appear. Tarry until the sound of a mighty rushing wind fills the place. TARRY UNTIL YE ARE FILLED WITH THE HOLY GHOST.

Pentecost might have come at the end of the first hour of the first day. But it did not. God understood the discipline of waiting.

This is the era of Pentecost. It is the dispensation of the Spirit. The promise of the Father has never been revoked nor modified. We have absolutely the same right to ask for the very presence of the Holy Spirit in our hearts and in our churches as the disciples had at the beginning. No matter now about the details of your revival organization, no matter now about the singing and the ushers and the publicity. These will be necessary later on. If you are to have a real revival you must first have a Pentecost.

Prayer is also an essential prerequisite to a genuine work of grace. True prayer always antedates a true revival. When a revival breaks out in any community you may be sure that SOME ONE HAS BEEN PRAYING. It may have been the pastor. It may have been a Sunday school teacher. It may have been some shut-in saint, whom nearly everybody has forgotten. It may have been two or three earnest souls who have pledged each other to pray until something gives way. But someone, realizing the spiritual needs of the Church and the peril of the unsaved, has been laying siege to the throne of grace. Mr Finney always insisted that "prayer is an essential link in the chain of causes which produce a revival." He declared: "Unless I had the spirit of supplication I could do nothing. If, even for an hour, I lost the spirit of prayer I find myself unable to preach with power or to win souls by personal conversation."

Mr. Caughey once said: "You ask for the secret of genuine revivals. It is knee work! Knee work! Revivals without intercessory prayer are unscriptural and superficial. But when the minister and his spiritual people begin spending hours in agonizing prayer, something will happen."

Mr. Finney tells us of a town that had no revival for years. The church was dead. The people were indifferent. The moral tone was shocking. An old blacksmith, who stammered painfully, lived in the town. While engaged in his shop he became alarmed about the condition of the church. This soon became an agony in his soul. Locking the shop door, he spent a whole afternoon in prayer, beseeching God to send help at once. The Lord heard that prayer and gave the assurance that deliverance would not be long delayed. He then went to his pastor and asked him to call a meeting for consultation and prayer. The pastor had no faith in such a meeting, but called it, nevertheless.

There was genuine surprise when the attendance crowded the room. All was quiet enough until a sinner broke out in tears and begged someone to pray for him. Others followed his example. It was soon discovered that persons present from all parts of the village were under deep conviction—all dating their distress from the afternoon the old man spent in his shop. An extraordinary revival followed.

Sentence prayers have their use. More extended public petitions form an important part of religious meetings. But the chief praying must be intercessory prayer—persistent wrestling with God. If God's people are not willing to surrender ease, and domestic duties, and social engagements, and business cares, and spend days and nights in prayer they cannot expect a mighty spiritual movement in the community. Multiplied committees, and catchy songs, and grotesque preaching, and elaborate organizations may fill the tabernacle or church, and furnish a long list of persons who have become "interested in the meetings," but only intercessory prayer will bring scriptural conviction and scriptural conversion to the careless multitudes aroung us,

At a large convention of Christian workers an unexpected question was asked by the leader of the morning devotions: "How many of you devote as much as two hours a day to the reading of the Bible and to secret prayer? Lift your hands." No one lifted a hand. "Well, how many devote one hour a day, systematically, to Bible reading and prayer?" No hand went up.

The leader feared he had been misunderstood and explained more definitely what he meant. Still no response. Is it possible that in such a congregation of ministers and workers no one could honestly lift his hand? Is not such a striking case an explanation of the superficiality of many modern revivals? And does it not help to reveal the impotency of the Church?

Roll upon us, O God, the burden of the world's indifference and sin. Give us a vision of the Church's peril and need! Make us to travail in pain in the midst of moral and spiritual desolation. Take sleep from our eyes! Take joy from our hearts! Give us an agony of desire! Make us to WRESTLE, WRESTLE, WRESTLE UNTIL VICTORY IS ASSURED . . . THE GREAT, CRYING, TREMENDOUS, OVERWHELMING NEED OF THE CHURCH IS FOR THE COMING OF THE HUNGER AND HABIT OF INTERCESSORY PRAYER!

Let us put first things first. Before we lift a finger to organized and advertise the coming revival let us get into our hearts the hot fires of a genuine Pentecost and a prayer-wrought, quenchless, CONSUMING PASSION to rescue poor souls now lost and undone!

(The above article was filed some years ago: and what Advocate published it is not now known. But, the article is timeless in its truth and appropriate at this time when we plan our Spiritual Life Services.—Editor.)

Recently a certain man said, "We must retrench." He was right. He began retrenching by digging the foundations from under his home and church. He was wrong.

When he said, "A man must live," he meant to convey a very different idea to what he actually conveyed. Better not tell him the exact impression made unless you want a fight.

When a man gets too poor to give any kind of support to the Church he is generally either vicious, a failure, or ignorant, or selfish, or stingy, or shiftless, or a common deadbeat. Possibly a little of all.

A Corinth (Mississippi) bank closed its doors recently. A well-known business man with a keen sense of humor made the following observation: "I began keeping tab on the amount men said they had lost. When the sum reached nineteen millions of dollars I quit." Who said that lying was a lost art?"

Another most interesting observation in connection with bank failures: Last fall certain men were complaining and grunting about being "broke." These brethren galore declared themselves unable to "pay another cent." Yet, when bank disaster came they were caught for sums ranging from a few hundred to many thousands each. I guess this was sanctified lying.

Our love and sympathy for the poor is expressing itself in ways beyond our understanding. Dances, card parties, "Lilliputian Weddings," prize fights, football games, movies, all for "sweet charity's sake." One town is reported to have given a dance for the benefit of the cemetery fund. It might be in order for us to apologize to the colored pastor who "shook a wicked hip" at a benefit shindig. One of these days we will "do unto others as we would have them do unto us." When?

The success or failure of a church paper is not unlike that of a pulpit. Personality, subject-matter, the way it is clothed, keen understanding of the public mind coupled with ability to interpret it properly, power to attract and hold. Too much dignity will kill anything except a mule. Too much limelight will knock the head off most anything except a giraffe. Here is hoping that the present editor may have sanctified common sense, pioneer gumption, financial wizardry, the patience of Job, health so robust that nerves will be unknown, and a devotion to his task that only those know who are "called of God." This scribbler calls attention to a saying of the late Bishop Hoss, coined shortly after he was made editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate. "But one editor ever pleased everyone. A wheelbarrow ran over him and killed him. He had no successor."

THE FREE-LOVE PROPAGANDA

By Ernest L. Lloyd

In the early part of 1930 there appeared in a number of leading daily papers of our country, a series of six articles treating of marriage and divorce. Each article was written by an author of national or world reputation. Each article advocated some form of free love; i. e., a standard of sex relations in some respects lower than Christian standards.

From one of these articles the following statements are taken:

"I see no chance of dealing with the divorce question rationally until the discussion is purged of religious considerations. Certainly the world should have learned by this time that theologians make a mess of everything they touch, including even religion."

"Obviously it will be impossible to come to any sensible arrangement of the relations between man and woman so long as such ancient imbecilities (referring to certain alleged Christian ideas) corrupt all thinking on the subject. The first thing necossary then is to get rid of the theologians."

In the latter part of 1930, a well known feminine writer, contributor of a daily column in one of our leading Southern papers, devoted a large portion of her column for one day to a laudation of the sex standards and practices of Soviet Russia, as opposed to the generally recognized Christian standard of sex relations. In a setting of the highest commendation she states that in Russia "divorce may be had for the asking," and "parties to irregular unions are neither hunted down by the police nor socially ostracised."

Many writers of the present day hold that society has no concern whatever with the relations of a man and a woman, within or without wedlock, except where children are involved. This means that there should be absolute freedom of sexual relations, outside of marriage, without injury to social status. Only when children are involved or in prospect, according to these writers, does society have a right to interfere and set up certain standards of responsibility and action.

Many writers hold that the sex standards of non-Christian countries are superior to those of the Christian religion. They hold that the sexual liberties and indulgences of ancient Rome were far more desirable than the sex standards of the Christian religion which supplanted them.

But the Christian religion brought new life to the decaying Roman Empire and continued it as a great power for two or three centuries longer than it would have lasted without Christianity. Furthermore, the Christian religion in ancient Rome produced a type of manhood with more virility and character than that of any other group within the Empire. For this reason, when the Christians were still but a small minority, Constantine espoused the cause of Christianity, in order to gain the suport of the strength of the minority, as preferable to the weakness of the majority.

The writers who denounce the sex standards of Christianity ignore the fact that the existence of these standards has tended to lift human love from the plane of purely physical and sensual indulgence and to give to it a spirit of romance and nobility that makes it the mightiest inspiration of the human race toward all that is noble

IS GOD THE FATHER OF ALL MEN?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

In the December 18th issue of the Advocate, Brother S. W. Miller, of Frisco, Texas, takes exception to a paragraph in one of my articles entitled "Pointed Paragraphs," in which I stated that the doctrines of the Fatherhood of God is at the root of the denial of the Virgin Birth, and then adds: "I do not know whether he believes in missions or whether he is a Calvinist in belief." For Brother Miller's satisfaction, I assure him that I am an ultra-Arminian, and I believe in missions for the very reason that I do not believe in the universal Fatherhood of God. If God were the Father of all men there would be no necessity for missions and the vocation of the missionary would be gone.

The presumption is that all men admit that Jesus claimed a peculiar relationship with God. To Jesus God was Father. So dominant was this conception of God in the thought of Jesus that it was his favorite name for God. He was the Son of the heavenly Father, and his teachings were devoted to a consistent and continuous endeavor to persuade men that they also may become sons of God. If they were already sons his endeavors in this direction were needless expenditures of time, energy, and effort. Furthermore, his death on the cross was a needless sacrifice of life.

But what did Jesus teach as to the Fatherhood of God? To answer that enquiry it will be necessary to examine his recorded sayings on that subject. Two things are clear:

First: Jesus knew God as Father. With only two exceptions does he ever address or speak of God otherwise than as Father. God was his Father in a unique sense.

Second: It is also clear that Jesus taught that God is, in some sense, either the Father of all men or of some men. Now, the question is, Does he teach that God is the Father of all men, or of some men only? I maintain the latter proposition.

I am very well aware of the fact that it is commonly supposed, and almost universally preached, that Jesus teaches that God is the Father of all men; but it is that fact with which I am in disagreement, and which, because of its logical implications, I deny with all the powers that are within me. The majority, perhaps, of recent writers on the teachings of Jesus hold the view that he explicitly taught that God is the Father of alll men. For example, Fairbairn in "Place of Christ in Modern Theology," Bruce's "Kingdom of God," and Watson's "Mind of the Master;" and yet, it is by no means clear that Jesus did so teach. After all, it is not a question to be determined by philosophical preconceptions or sentimental preferences for that which commends itself to us as a beautiful theory of God. That Jesus represents God as kind in his providential care of all men, as pitiful toward the lost, as providing for the salvation of all men, and as rejoicing over the sinner that repenteth, cannot be denied. That Jesus also teaches that God is the Father of some men is equally certain; but that he teaches that God is the Father of all men cannot be established. If it is to be established, it can only be done by an exegesis of his words. At this point mere assumption, the basis of the arguments of recent writers and speakers on this subject, is of no value.

It is generally supposed that the gospels are full of Jesus' references to God as the Father of men, but such references are few. The majority of all these instances are in the Sermon on the Mount, Matt. 5-7. Besides sixteen instances in the Sermon on the Mount, there are four others in Matthew, making twenty in all. The one instance in Mark is identical with one in the Sermon on the Mount. The same may be said of three, and probably four, of the five instances recorded in Luke and are, therefore, not to be added to the sixteen in the Sermon on the Mount. There are, therefore, in the three synoptics only twenty-one or two instances, sixteen of which are in the Sermon on the Mount. By Examination of these passages it will be found that in none of them does Jesus say that God is the Father of all men; but, in the first place, it will be ascertained that in almost if not quite all of them it is distinctly stated that he was addressing his disciples, and spoke to them of God as "your Father." In the second place, in some, if not the most, of them both the context and connection affords distinct evidence that he spoke of God not as the Father of all men, but only of a certain kind of men.

As to the Sermon on the Mount, the evangelists state that it was addressed to his disciples. It is true the multitude heard the discourse, but it is not said that it was addressed to them. A lawyer in the court room addresses the jury or judge, though they may be heard by the spectators. Consider some examples in the Sermon on the Mount: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Had Jesus meant to teach that God is the Father of all men he should have said, "and glorify their Father which is in heaven."

In Matt. 5:44,45, Jesus says: "Love your enemies, etc., that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." Here two classes appear—the persons addressed, of whom God is the Father, and the enemies of these. Certainly no disinterested reader can conclude that God is the Father of the enemies also. The words that immediately follow, "because he maketh his sun to shine on the evil and on the good," have been cited to prove that God is the Father of all men; but they teach no such thing. The thought is: You are to be good to the wicked just as God is good to the evil.

In Matt. 6:26-30, Jesus draws an impressive picture of God's care of the birds of the air and the lillies of the field. If God's sending his rain and sunshine on the wicked proves that he is their Father, then God's care of the birds and lilies proves that he is the Father of birds and lilies, as noting every sparrow that falls proves that he is the Father of sparrows. How ridiculous! and how ridiculous to imagine that Jesus taught the universal Fatherhood of God!

In Matt. 6:1-18, Jesus warns his disciples against giving alms, fasting, and praying to secure the praise of men, as do certain persons whom he calls "Hypocrites." Are we to suppose that Jesus intended to teach that God is the Father of hypocrites, as he is of his disciples? The only answer is an emphatic, No.

With reference to prayer, in Matt. 6:7,8, Jesus says: "But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do * * * Be ye therefore not like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him." The contrast here is between the disciples and the heathen, and beyond all dispute the teaching is that God is the Father of the disciples in contrast with the heathen, whose Father God is not. Immediately following these words, Jesus proceeds to give the disciples the Lord's Prayer in which God is invoked as Father. This has been called the "Universal prayer," that is, the prayer all men may use. A thorough study of this prayer will disclose the fact that it is only for genuine disciples, and no others have a right to use it, no matter who they are, or how many may "say" it.

The only remaining instance in the Sermon on the Mount where Jesus speaks of God as Father is in Matt. 7:11, but no evidence is needed to establish the fact that Jesus is here addressing his disciples only.

In John 8:42, Jesus, speaking to certain Jews, said: "If God were your Father, ye would love me." Here Jesus specifically says that God is not the Father of certain men, and if there are some men of whom he is not the Father, how can he be the Father of all men? To make it stronger still, Jesus said: "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do." So, then, the devil has children in the world of whom he is the father. God is not the Father of these, but it was these that Jesus endeavored to persuade to become the sons of God, and by his sacrificial death on the cross made it possible for all such in all ages to become the sons of God; but to become the children of the heavenly Father, and to have the right to say, "Our Father," they must be "born again." This has no reference, of course, to very small children who, by virtue of the atonement made for them on the cross, are born into the world already inside the kingdom and are, therefore, children of the heavenly Father.

Space forbids further discussion, but if Brother Miller or others should feel disposed to dispute my position, I stand ready to further elucidate the Scriptures in regard to the question whether God is the Father of all, especially because this error has become so widespread and so many people, including even the pulpit, are assuming, without investigation, the truth of this erroneous doctrine. I shall be glad also to point out some of its hurtful and dangerous implications.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that the argument that God is not the Father of all men is irrefutable, and the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God is utterly false, and further, its correlary, the universal brotherhood of man, is equally untrue.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT NOTES

Mrs. Vaughan, wife of Rev. Percy W. Vaughan, pastor at Roxie, Miss., who for nine days was a patient in the Natchez Sanatorium, is now convalescent at the Roxie parsonage.

Mrs. J. Oscar Adams and six children, while on their way Monday evening, December 22, to attend a Christmas Tree at the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, encountered a rapidly moving automobile. The mother and two of the children were struck down, and soon after being taken to the Chamberlain-Rice Hospital, Natchez, the mother died. But the two children will likely recover.

Since the present Conference year started, twenty-two names have been added to the membership of Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, three of whom were received on profession of faith.

Although time and opportunity for giving notice were slight, a larger congregation than usual appeared in the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, at 11 a. m., Sunday, December 28, where the hour was devoted to a service in honor of Rev. C. C. Evans, who for the five years ending in December, 1926, had been much beloved pastor of the congregation. Besides a short talk by the present pastor, who is writing these lines, addresses of tender appreciation were made by the following members of the church: Charles Head, Percy B. Fant, Miss Mabel Porter, and Hon. L. T. Kennedy. Near the close of the occasion, Mr. Isaac Zerkowsky, a much respected He-

What if You Had No House of Worship?

Whether a Church grows or shrivels—serves or fails—lives or dies—depends on its house of worship. Everywhere, the most useful Church is the one that has the best building.

Do you know there are over 800 Southern Methodist Churches that have no houses of worship?

Do you know there are over 600 Methodist preachers that have no parsonages?

Do you know there are thousands of congregations inadequately housed and unable to build without aid?

These are facts—hard and distressing facts. They mean that thousands of our congregations are failing or making no progress.

Church Extension is our answer to this situation. We must house our people. Insure the permanence of our small congregations and they will help others.

Your Board of Church Extension wants the people to know all about its work. Tell them it has already given $8,000,000 to 12,000 Churches and 4,000 parsonages.

Tell them also that 400 congregations last year needed $600,000 to help them build, but the Board could help only one-fourth of the number because it had only one-sixth of the amount to give.

Church Extension is in the Kingdom Extension Offering. See that every member gets the facts and has a chance to help.

WILL THE PREACHERS RUN?

By Rev. L. R. Scarborough, D.D.

(Dr. Scarborough's article was written, of course, specifically for Baptist preachers, but it will prove helpful to any preacher.—Editor.)

In times like those that face every home, county, nation, denomination, business and every man now, somebody is going to run. Who will that somebody be? If our bankers or our other industrial leaders get faint heart or weak knees and turn their backs to the foe and flee, what will happen? No telling.

There are many pivotal people holding the fabric of civilization together now. Industrial leaders, labor leaders, educational leaders, religious leaders, mothers and wives, are chief among them. Suppose our brave women, who love us, suffer with us, take counsel with their fears and flee. Chaos would afflict us. Probably the greatest calamity that can come to us is for the preachers, our spiritual leaders, to show their backs to the foe. He is the builder of confidence and courage. If he fails at the testing times like these, who is there to take his place?

Things That Scare Preachers

1. Dwindling congregations.
2. Divided, critical official family.
3. Debts, unpaid bills, a depleted treasury.
4. Growing lack of appreciation and failure in co-operation on part of deacons and congregation.
5. Indifference and a drought in evangelism.
6. Low tides of spirituality.
7. Worldliness in his members.
8. Declining interest in missions and Christ's world-wide program.
9. When the spirit of the people is down and pessimism predominates.

These and other things sap him of his power and courage and make him want to move. It takes courage like Daniel had to stand and face these foes and fight on. Many preachers are today quaking in their boots and taking counsel with their fears. They longingly look and hungeringly wish to move to every opening pastorate. Ought he to run, is it God's will for him to stay and fight on with a new grip on God, or run to other pastures that look green? This is the question in many a parsonage today. He should search his heart. Is it fear or God that is trying to remove him?

The Preacher's Allies

1. A definite call of God to face hard conditions and difficult tasks. Did He call you to ease, or to be a soldier? There is no such thing as a divine pillow made to put under a preacher's head. If God called you, He called you to endure hardness as a soldier.

2, The prevailing promises of God. They are on your side.

3. The examples of the past—Abraham, Moses, Daniel, Christ, Paul and the rest. Read Heb. 11.

4. A group of faithful, undefeatable Christians in his church who always stand by the pastor and fight on. These are the saving few.

5. God's reinforcements through prayer and faith. He sent ravens to Elijah, legions of heavenly soldiers to Elisha at Dothan, an immeasurable host ready for Christ in the Garden. He stopped the flame in the fiery furnace. He quieted the lions with Daniel. He parted the waves for Moses and Joshua. He answers prayer today.

6. God's unfailing love for His sacrificing, unselfish, faithful, loyal servants in trial and test. He will send His Spirit to you if you are faithful and unafraid.

These and other things will come to our aid in times like these.

Think of These Things

1. Christ was never discouraged nor defeated.

2. Heaven champions the cause of the heroic, unafraid.

3. God's ministerial military equipment for His soldiers in Eph. 6 makes no provision for the soldier's back. He covers feet, breast, head and all front parts, but nothing for his back. God wants us to always face the foe.

4. Be sure when you move that you are following God, not running from the devil. If the devil gets you to run once, he may keep you on the chase.

5. Remember that there are no easy places where there is work to do. Cemeteries and heaven are the only places of ease I know anything about. Some other preacher ran from the place where you want to go. The devil will be there to make it hard on you.

6. Pray your troubles through. Get a new grip on God and remember your troubles are a part of your education. God is trying to make a hero out of you. He has a big battle ahead and He is training you to lead it. Don't flicker nor falter nor show the white feather. Fight on, fight on! You can win through Christ. Jesus is a winner. Be like Him!—From the Baptist Message.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love.—1 Cor. 13:13.

A Psalm for the New Year

A friend stands at the door;
In either tight-closed hand
Hiding rich gifts, three hundred and three score,
Waiting to strew them daily o'er the land,
Even as seed the sower,
Each drops he, treads it in, and passes by;
It cannot be made fruitful till it die.

A good New Year, we clasp
This warm shut hand of thine,
Losing forever, with half sigh, half gasp,
That which from ours falls like dead fingers twine,
Aye, whether fierce its grasp
Has been, or gentle, having been we know
That it was blessed—let the old year go.

O new Year, teach us faith!
The road of life is hard,
When our feet bleed and scourging winds us
scathe,
Point thou to Him whose visage was more marred
Than any man's, who saith:
"Make straight paths for your feet," and to the oppressed,
"Come ye to me and I will give you rest."

Comfort our souls with love,
Love of all human kind;
Love special, close, in which, like sheltered dove,
Each weary heart, its own safe nest may find;
And love that turns above,
Adoringly, contented to resign
All love, if need be, for the love divine.

Friend, come thou, like a friend;
And whether bright thy face
Or dim with clouds we can not comprehend,
We'll hold our patient hands, each in his place,
And trust thee to the end,
Knowing thou leadest onward to those spheres
Where there are neither days nor months nor

—Dinah Muloch Craik.

How flippantly falls from our lips on the first of every January, "A Happy New Year!" I wonder what we mean! Of course, we want those we love, our friends and our acquaintances to have happiness, but if left to us what would we choose? I fear we would not know how to choose wisely even for our own children. We would strew their pathway with roses. We would not want them to have any hardships or trials. We crave for them all of life's sunshine and none of its shadow. We balk at trials and hardships and suffering.

This is very natural, but we know that all of these things help to make of us strong characters and something worth while in life. We need adversity to develop us. We would never be strong enough to bear our own burdens nor those of others if life were all a bed of roses. We would be flabby and useless if we did not develop. Nature sends both the sunshine and the rain. Trees grow and get strong under sweeping winds.

It is wise indeed that a dear loving Father over and above us all knows just what is suited to each one, just what we need, and so, as the New Year stands before us with the coming days clenched in His hands we would pray not for just the good things of life, but for what our Father thinks best for us and we would ask that He make us strong to bear burdens and able to endure affliction, to give us faith, and to make us helpful and kind and loving and true.

in art and literature and life. These writers seem to forget, or never to have learned, that the sex standards of Christianity have created the home with all of its spiritual meaning and its sacred associations—an institution which, in many of its essential elements, is peculiar to Christian countries. These writers seem to be blind to the fact that sex standards of Christianity are largely responsible for the position of dignity and honor that woman holds in Christian lands, and only in Christian lands.

There are still a few old-fashioned folk who believe that the Christian standard of sex relations is necessary for the best type of human society—that an enduring civilization, adequate to the needs of life, cannot be built with any other standard.

But the large majority of these old-fashioned folk have no conception of the strength that has already been achieved by the agents of this anti-Christian propaganda. The theories that they offer find a fertile soil in immature minds that have been made restles by the native human desire for liberty and license, by the modern mood of flippant disrespect for the traditions of the race, and by the modern tendency of rebellion against authority. The proponents of these theories have secured a strong foothold in many of our colleges and universities. It is probable that the extent and the force of the propaganda in our high schools is far greater than any of us suspect. As a mater of fact, our Christian civilization is imperiled. But most of us are fiddling while Rome burns.

What shall we do about it?

For several years past the General Sunday School Board of our Church has been working on this problem. This board has worked out and offered to the Church a Young People's Training Course, designed to meet various intellectual, moral and spiritual needs of our adolescent group. The Young People's Training Course consists of approximately twenty unit courses of twelve recitation periods each.

One unit in the Young People's Training Course is entitled "Christian Home Making." This unit involves a discussion of the following topics: Present-day Attitudes Toward Marriage, Pagan Views of Marriage and Divorce Prevalent To-day, Companionate Marriage, Reasons for Failure of Marriage, Forces Affecting Changes in Family Life, Dangers in Present-day Trends, Freedom Between People in Social Relation, The Question of Petting, the Proper Basis Upon Which a Life's Partner Should be Selected, How to Choose a Life's Partner, Desirable Qualities in a Life's Partner, The Christian Home, The Teachings of Jesus Concerning the Sanctity and the Permanency of the Marriage Relation.

During the past year the writer had the privilege of visiting one session of a class in this course of study. The membership of the class included thirty-five young men and young women. The teacher was a bright and attractive young married woman, the wife of a successful city pastor. This visit and subsequent interviews with the teacher of the class were sufficient to convince the writer that this course of study offers to our church one of the most effective means of fighting the free-love propaganda of the present day, and saving our boys and girls from the pagan society that threatens to engulf them.

During the present quadrennium we should find throughout Southern Methodism a large number of capable men and women who will make the necessary preparation for accreditation as teachers of the course in "Christian Home Making." As rapidly as possible we should proceed to make this course available to our young people in all sections of our church.

Book Shelf

The Cokesbury Press is attracting some of the best authors and publishing some of the best books on vital and important themes.

One of the recent Cokesbury good books is: "George Whitefield, the Awakener," by Rev. Albert D. Belden, B.D. The Hon. J. Ramsey McDonald, Premier of Great Britain, writes the foreword, in which he says, "This is peculiarly an appropriate moment to go back for refreshment and enlightment to such times as those of Whitefield, when the permanent things of the spirit were brought into challenging conflict with the rusting and corrupting things of material power."

Dr. Belden justifies his writing "upon the romantic and thrilling story of Whitefield," by the motive which prompted it—"An intense desire to quicken the forces of religious revival in modern society." There is no question about the superintendent of Whitefield's Tabernacle, London, "quickening the forces" and "inspiring his readers to reconsider the claim of Christ." Some of the stirring subjects are "The estimate of Whitefield as the greatest evangelist of English Peoples," "The possibility of a great Revival," "The Debt of Wilberforce and Lincoln to Whitefield," "Estimates of Wesley and Whitefield." If the reader cannot purchase but three or four books for this new year, let this be one of them. It is sold for $3 by our own publishing house, Lamar and Whitmore, Agents.

"Comfort for Those Who Mourn," by Dr. O. V. Armstrong, is a compilation of Bible verses, poems, and quotations from prose that comfort the heart and strengthen the soul. The book is published by our Cokesbury Press and the printers' art is at its best. Handsomely printed, beautiful in assurance, and attractively arranged, this book would be welcome by any friend in sorrow. The price is 50c, with a mailing envolope. Order of Lamar and Whitmore, Nashville.

"Methodism and Kingdom Extension," by Rev. W. G. Cram, D.D., Secretary General Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

This is a continuance of the Dynamic Series of books which the Board of Missions has been sending out to the ends of the Church with such phenomenal success. It is the Study Book for the January-February cultivation period this year.

Dr. Cram, the author, was for twenty years a missionary in Korea and has been connected with the Centenary and General Board of Missions since his return to the United States in 1922. A leader who sees the world and knows the Saviour of all mankind, has written chapters that will move Methodism to not only maintain her institutional life but to extend the Kingdom in a spiritual conquest of all frontiers of life. Don't read this book if you expect to quit, be indifferent, or refuse to see the whitened fields. It isn't a good tonic for tree-sitters—it is for mountain climbers. 25c at Institutes, or from Lamar & Whitmore.

J. L. DECELL.

The comfort which Christ imparted to the twelve is still the consolation of his friends in every time of parting and distress. The day is coming when in fellowship nevermore to be broken and in perfect peace and full knowledge they are again to sit down with him and all his friends in the kingdom of the Father.—William T. Ellis.

Success of the N. O. C. A. special-effort week, January 18-25, means larger giving to the Kingdom Extension Special.

The Home Circle

KEEP CLOSE TO ME

Keep close to me, Dear Lord, keep close to me,
The road is rough with rocks,
My faith temptation mocks,
Keep close to me, Dear Lord, keep close to me.

Keep close to me, Dear Lord, keep close to me,
The night draws on apace
And tears o'erflow my face,
Keep close to me, Dear Lord, keep close to me.

Keep close to me, Dear Lord, keep close to me,
When life's last embers burn,
And dust to dust return,
Oh! then, Dear Lord, keep close, keep close to me.

ONE MOTHER'S WAY

To make her little daughters helpful one mother originated the following plan: Each morning she would write upon a blackboard a list of twenty or more duties for the day: washing the dishes, sweeping, dusting, making beds, helping to iron, etc. A quarter of these were little things that even the five-year-old boy could do, like bringing in kindling or giving the hens some water. Each girl in turn selected one duty, placing her initials after it. As soon as a duty was completed it was erased from the board. At first the more difficult work fell to "mother", but soon even the hard tasks were being selected by the daughters until they all became proficient in most of the necessary branches of home making. This plan not only helped the mother and taught the daughters, but also served to prevent shirking, jealousy and that constant nagging which make life miserable in many homes.—Woman's Home Companion.

ROSEMARY'S SOCKS

It was twenty minutes past eight when Rosemary opened the door of the kitchen, where her mother was preparing breakfast. On one of her little feet was a black sock and a patent-leather slipper. Her other foot was bare, and in her hand she held the other slipper.

"Mother," said Rosemary, "I've looked everywhere, and I can't find my other sock."

"Well," answered Mrs. Holden, "I don't know what I am going to do with you. It was only last week you lost one of that new pair of white socks I wanted you to keep for best. Rosemary, you are careless about your things. Try to remember where you put your socks when you took them off last evening. And do hurry or you will be late for school."

Rosemary went back to her room to look again for the missing sock, but she did not have any hope of finding it. "I never can keep anything," said the little girl to herself. "I put the socks together on the chair when I went to bed, and I can't help it if the things don't stay where they're put." It was plain that the lost sock was not on the chair or anywhere in sight. Rosemary searched all the corners in her room where it could possibly be.

"O dear, what can I do?" she cried and winked hard to keep back the tears.

"Have you found it?" Rosemary's mother asked as she appeared in the door holding a sock in her hand. But it was not the lost sock; it was the mate of the one that had been lost the week before. The little girl shook her head slowly.

"Then," said Mrs. Holden, "I am afraid you will have to put on this one. If you wear these two odd socks together, it will really be only one lost pair. I know," she added noting her little daughter's astonished expression, "that it will look queer to wear a white sock with a black one, but perhaps it will help you to be more careful next time. Now, hurry and finish dressing."

Before Rosemary could answer, her mother handed her the sock and went back to her work. The little girl angrily brushed away the tears that were making their way down her cheeks and quickly put on the white sock and the other slipper.

"Everyone will laugh when they see that my socks don't match," said poor Rosemary when she kissed her mother good-by.

"I'm sorry," answered Mrs. Holden. But she was firm, for she knew that she must cure Rosemary of her careless ways.

The little girl started for school at last, feeling, in spite of herself, that she deserved to be punished for her carelessness. Although it was nearly nine o'clock, Rosemary decided to walk across the fields to the schoolhouse, as she often did in the summer when she had plenty of time. She climbed the fence into the Jones' meadow as usual, but she was so busy thinking of what her schoolmates would say when they saw that her socks did not match that she could not enjoy the walk.

"I almost think I shall not go to school," said Rosemary to herself; but she kept on walking across the field. She had nearly reached the far fence when the thought of going barefooted occurred to her. The Kelly children always went without shoes in warm weaher, and nothing could be so bad as wearing this odd pair of socks.

Feeling a little guilty, Rosemary sat down on a large rock and began to unbutton her slippers. When she had taken them off, she pulled off the white sock and then the black one. But to her surprise she found herself holding in her hand two black socks, one inside the other. Rosemary was much amazed that she had put both socks on one foot without noticing it.

"No wonder I couldn't find it!" she cried, laughing, and hurriedly put on her black socks and slippers. The white sock she put into her pocket, determined that it should not be lost. "And I don't intend to lose another sock so that there will be an odd one to go with it," she said and began to run so that she should be on time for school.—Youth's Companion.

Once upon a time there was a bobolink that was not a bird, and that sounds as though it was a riddle. If you had asked little Ruth Harlow, "When is a bobolink not a bobolink?" she would have known the answer right away, and would have said, "When it is a bumpy little trolley car.

If you had lived where Ruth lived, you would know right away, too, that a better name than "Bobolink" could not have been found for the car that she rode on to school when the weather was not pleasant enough for her to walk so far. The car tracks were not the right sort for the funny little short cars that had been brought from another city after car fares became higher. So the cars bounced up and down, and bobbled from side to side, and the best word Ruth could think of to describe the way they acted was "juhble;" and when you rode on this funny little car you had to bobble and jubble with it whether you wanted to or not.

Most people did not like to bobble and jubble, but Ruth thought it a jolly sort of fun, and she laughed with the other children who rode. It was as much fun as a merry-go-round to them all.

It was Ruth who had thought of the name for the car, and even Mr. and Mrs. Harlow now called it the Bobolink.

"Come, Ruth, hurry!" Mrs. Harlow would say on a dark, rainy morning. "Here is your umbrella. The Bobolink is just coming over the top of the hill. If it rains when you come out of school, be sure to wait for the Bobolink!"

In Sunday-school Ruth had been taught to be cheerful, polite, and good. At day school she had been taught the same things. At home, before she was old enough to go to school at all, she had been carefully taught these same things. Always she had been told that, no matter where you are or what is happening, you must try to be cheerful, polite, and good. Never can there be any excuse even for a little girl to be cross, impolite, or bad. So even in the funny little Bobolink, Ruth was cheerful, polite, and good. If the car was crowded and she had a seat, she cheerfully and politely gave it to some woman or to some elderly gentleman who might be standing, even though the Bobolink bobled and jubbled so she herself could hardly stand.

This Bobolink must have been a magic sort of bird-car, for he made every one show whether or not he or she had learned to be cheerful, polite, and good. Ruth found that almost all children laughed and found the ride pleasant. They practiced the lessons they had been taught in Sunday school, day school, and home. But, strange to say, it was the grown-ups, who had known so many years about being cheerful, polite, and good, who were made by this magic Bobolink to show that they had not learned these three things well enough to practice them when being bobbled and jubbled. Oh, my! One man even said a most bad word! A young woman—I nearly said "lady," but the name would not have fitted her just then—rudely snapped out cross words in a loud voice at the motorman, as though her discomfort were all his fault. A middle-aged man scolded about the railroad company all the way to town. A middle-aged woman said the passengers ought to be paid for having to ride on such cars instead of giving higher fares to a company which ran things like this.

Of course it was hard to hold packages, and get out your fare, and look after a little child at the same time, but a woman who tried to do it need not have forgotten to be cheerful and polite and good about it, but she did; and she was so angry that her face grew red as red, and she said she would report the motorman to the company.

It was a good thing that the motorman at least was polite. Some of the things he had to hear and some of the actions he had to see could not make him feel happy, but the Bobolink showed that even the motorman could be made to let the world know whether or not he had learned well those three things which all people are taught when they are children.

Ruth was always glad when she heard some of the grown-ups say funny instead of cross things about the Bobolink. "Daddy," said she one day to her father, who was a minister, "I can tell you how to find out if your sermons are making people good or not. Just take your whole congregation for a ride on the Bobolink!"

Father laughed, and said perhaps it was just as well the Bobolink wasn't big enough for that, and added that at least he hoped Ruth would never fail in the test.—Blanche Elizabeth Wade, in The Christian Register.

Already three forest fires which might have blazed into vast conflagrations have been put out by the League of Nations. The pacts of Locarno are the brightest stars of peace that have appeared on the horizon of this generation.—Dr. Henry van Dyke.

Show me a nation whose people dwell in homes where God is honored and the children are taught the principles of Christian religion, and I will show you a nation that cannot be destroyed by war, disease, revolution, or anything under heaven.—Dr. Carl Gregory.

three children. "The breastworks behind which the soldiers of Christ fight in heathen lands the good fight of faith for the Kingdom of their Lord are the graves of their little children and the tombs of their fallen comrades." But, for nearly a half-century, amid all the hardships and overwhelming opportunities that pressed upon him, said one who was intimately associated with him: "He was deeply pious, untiringly industrious, and never spoke evil of any one or repeated gossip which might be detrimental to another's character," and at the end "not in doubt and despondency went he to his grave, but as a conquering leader retires to his tent from a hard-fought field."

This Book an Unselfish Labor of Love

None of the proceeds of this book go to its distinguished author. All goes toward endowing "The Young J. Allen Chair of Missions" in the School of Theology at Emory University, toward which a friend has contributed five thousand dollars since the book was written. One dollar and fifty cents buys a copy, and its widest distribution would bless the Church as well as perpetuate the memory of an Ambassador of Christ to China. "That silent grave of the old hero, Young J. Allen, in a foreign land calls us from across the sea," and let that call be answered by purchasing and reading the book and emulating the virtues of the "Man who seeded China."

ROMANTIC RAILROARDING AND GOOD WILL

Many people throughout this section were delighted to know that Mr. J. L. Beven, formerly of McComb, Miss., and New Orleans, was recently elected at Chicago to the senior vice-presidency of the Illinois Central Railroad Company.

Jack Beven, as he was familiarly known, was call boy at McComb, Miss., when he was twelve years of age. Now, at the vigorous age of forty-three, he has become senior vice-president of one of the greatest railroad systems in the world. Mr. Beven won his way through the practice of respect for authority, faithfulness to duty, improvement of talents and integrity of purpose.

Every call-boy cannot become a vice-president of the railroad, but he may have creative qualities and share the fidelity to duty with the call-boy who has answered the call to a great executive responsibility. Mississippi is proud to own him as one of her sons of industry and congratulates his company upon his selection.

The spirit of railroad men is no longer one of exclusive concern, but a spirit of good will pervades them in their relation with the public. The other day Mr. R. D. Robbins, conductor on an Illinois Central passenger train between Canton and New Orleans, found a young lady school teacher of Summit, Miss., in much distress over having lost her purse and ticket. He had the right to be a Shylock and demand a ticket or cash, but with gracious courtesy he relieved the embarrassment and manifested interest in the welfare of the passenger. Such acts of manliness make us feel that a great corporation has a soul and a mind to help.

REV. R. W. TUCKER

Pastor at Rayville, Louisiana, and Father of Rev. O. L. Tucker, Wisner, Passed Away Sunday Morning

Rev. R. W. Tucker, pastor at Rayville, La., died Sunday morning, January 11th at the parsonage in Rayville. Brother Tucker had been sick only a few days when the summons came for him to cease his labors and to be at home with God.

R. W. Tucker had been a member of the Louisiana Conference for more than forty years, having proved faithful to every responsibility that was placed upon him as an itinerant Methodist preacher. Twelve years he was presiding elder and exhibited those qualities that made him a successful leader in the work of his church. He did not compromise with sin. He preached the everlasting truth of the gospel and practised its holy principles.

The following children survive: J. W. Tucker, Leesville, La.; Rev. O. L. Tucker, Wisner, La.; L. F. Tucker, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. Poole Robinson, Ruston, La.; Mrs. Baster Robinson, Lecompte, La.; Mrs. James Plummer, Bogalusa, La.; Miss Callie Tucker, Tallahassee, Florida, and R. W. Tucker, Canton, North Carolina. To these and the other bereaved ones the Advocate extends sympathy.

The funeral services were held at Ruston, Tuesday afternoon.

At an early date we hope to publish a fuller account of the life and labors of this deserving servant of God who has fallen on sleep.

Rev. Paul H. Grice and family received a cordial welcome back to the Madison charge, Mississippi Conference. Brother Grice is happy in his work and looks forward to a good year.

The Eleventh Anniversary of prohibition being next Friday, January 16, should make the mid-week services a victory celebration, if there can't be held such services on the Sabbath.

Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Milton were cordially received at Greensburg, La. Brother Milton has made a favorable impression upon the church and the community and every indication is for a good year.

Rev. A. Y. Brown and Rev. W. L. Robinson, of the North Mississippi Conference, are attending the six weeks pastors' school at Vanderbilt University. We trust these brethren may have a profitable period of study.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles begins his fourth year as presiding elder in the North Mississippi Conference, but his first year on the Greenville District. His success on the Aberdeen District insures a good year on the Greenville.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor at Tallulah, La., was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office on Friday, January 2. Brother Giles is one of the useful young men of the Louisiana Conference and the year is full of promise at Tallulah.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, pastor, Main Street, Biloxi, Miss., underwent an operation at the King's Daughters Hospital in Gulfport last week. It was reported that he was doing nicely and would be able to return home in a few days.

Rev. V. G. Clifford, First Church, Columbia, who is assisted by Rev. E. B. Flurry, supply, has planned a county-wide ministry and his program will be watched with interest as it is hoped that it will solve a rural church problem.

Rev. and Mrs. C. B. White, Marksville, La., are the fond and happy parents of a baby girl, Virginia Rose, who came to bless their home on December 28. We congratulate the parents and pray for the little lady a happy and useful life.

Rev. J. Lambuth Evans, Trinidad, Colorado, preached in the morning and evening at Main Street, Biloxi, during the absence of the pastor. Brother Evans was in Mississippi on account of the death of his father, Rev. C. C. Evans.

Mrs. M. F. Jones, who was a long time member of the Methodist church at Coffeeville, Miss., and a woman of the highest Christian character, died on Wednesday, December 31. The funeral services were conducted the next day at Goshen.

Dr. J. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office recently. Dr. Snelling is rendering a great service and should have the fullest co-operation and most liberal support of our people.

Sunday night, December 28, the Methodist church at Marks was crowded to its capacity when the pastors held a union service in honor of the students who would soon return to their various colleges. The program was well planned and an inspiration to all present.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor of Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, has been indisposed for several days, but expects to be able to resume his full responsibilities at an early time. Brother Bradley is giving aggressive leadership to the interests of the church in his important field.

Rev. and Mrs. Harry W. Brown of Springfield, La., are the fond parents of a baby boy who was born on December 22, 1930. Brother and Sister Brown named the boy Settoon for Senator J. S. Settoon. The Advocate congratulates the parents and extends hopeful wishes to the little boy.

Mr. W. C. Spencer, Division Passenger Agent of the Southern Railway System, was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office on the afternoon of January 6. Mr. Spencer is a member of the Rayne Memorial Church and spoke in highest terms of his pastor, Rev. O. W. Bradley.

Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor, Sulphur, La., closed the old year and started the new with a watch night service. The program was splendidly arranged and much good was accomplished by the fellowship of the people who prayerfully started the New Year around the altar of the church.

Mr. L. P. Bailey, Coldwater, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate says, "The Advocate has been coming into our home weekly for about forty years and we do not want to miss a copy of it." We appreciate brother Bailey's good will and wish for him continued blessings.

Prof. O. W. Stapleton, pastor's assistant at the Greene Memorial Church, Roanoke, Va., favored us with a copy of their Christmas program; it was a splendid program. Prof. Stapleton was formerly at Capitol Street, Jackson, as assistant to Dr. T. M. Brownlee. We congratulate the Virginians.

Miss Maggie Ellen Simpson, who was a popular student at Whitworth College last session, was happily married on December 26 to Sellers Denley, of Coffeeville, Miss. Mr. Denley is the young editor of the Coffeeville Courier. We congratulate these fine young people and wish for them every blessing in life.

Rev. J. L. Sutton, manager of the Home Finding Society, Jackson, Miss., passed through New Orleans last week on his return from an important engagement at Lake Charles, La. Brother Sutton is a member of the National Child's Welfare Association and is highly informed on all matters concerning child welfare.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, beginning his first year on the Hornbeck circuit, Lake Charles District, preached at Prospect Church on the last Sunday in the old year. An attendant writes, "The pastor took for his text, 'My heart is fixed.' We have seldom heard a more forceful sermon preached. We were glad we heard it."

The heart of Southern Methodism was saddened when it learned of the death of Dr. Harry C. Howard, a member of the North Alabama Conference and a professor in the theological department of Emory University for the past sixteen years. Dr. Howard was the author of "Princes of the Christian Pulpits and Pastorates."

Miss Johnnie Sullivant, a member of our church at Kosciusko, and Mr. P. Z. Jones, of Jackson, Miss., were married at Kosciusko, Tuesday, December 30, with Rev. J. T. McCafferty, pastor, performing the eceremony. The bride formerly taught in Brookhaven and the groom is one of the promising young attorneys of the Capital city.

Occasionally inside news of the actual condition of the country will trickle out of Washington, probably through the inexperience of some cub reporter, or the conscience of a patriotic pen pusher. For instance, it was given out last week that "Nutt paid Lucas' note." There are a few nuts around in this section that did not grow on walnut trees.

Rev. V. G. Clifford, pastor First Church Columbia, Miss., included the New Orleans Christian Advocate in the program for "special goals" and also carried in his bulletin the letter published last week from Bishop Denny. We congratulate the church and the pastor upon the ten high goals that they set for themselves; and pray that each one may be reached.

Mrs. A. F. Watkins has been named Field Secretary for the W. C. T. U. in Mississippi. Mrs. Watkins co-operated with her distinguished husband, Dr. A. F. Watkins, former president of Millsaps College, in supporting and promoting those causes that meant for personal honor, social betterment and good citizenship. She will render signal service in her new relation.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Abels Settoon, wife of Senator J. S. Settoon, were held at the Springfield, La., Methodist Church, on Sunday, December 16. Rev. Harry W. Brown, pastor, conducted the service, being assisted by Rev. W. H. Bowdon. Mrs. Settoon was a sister of Brother J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula, La., and was a most faithful worker. The Advocate extends sympathy.

Brother R. W. Millsaps, Lake Providence, La., formerly of Copiah County, Miss., sends in his renewal to the Advocate and encloses a receipt for one year's subscription to the Advocate dated May 20, 1869, and signed by Bishop J. C. Keener. The subscription price of the Advocate at that time was $3. Brother Millsaps is in his ninety-fourth year and we wish for him much happiness in this new year.

It is reported that Congressman M. J. Maas, of Minnesota, who being thirty-two years of age is next to the youngest member of the entire Congress, stopped at the Jackson, Miss., airport on his way back to Washington from Central America. He was there long enough to prophecy "that prohibition is doomed and light wines and beers will return within two years." We are glad he left up in the air.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, while on his way to attend the trustees' meeting of the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg, Miss., stopped at Brookhaven and baptized Paul Hardin Strait, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Strait. There is no more beautiful part of our ritual than that for the baptism of infants. We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Strait and pray for the little one, dedicated to God, a long life of usefulness.

The Advocate office was made happy last week by a visit from Rev. W. Fred Long, Jackson, Miss., and Mr. Van Carter, of this city. These brethren are connected with the International Sunday School Association and both of them have rendered effective service for a number of years. They had enjoyed a visit with Dr. William A. Brown, pastor of the American Church, Buenos Aires, Argentina, who was here for that day.

Our church at West Point observed the Christmas season in a very interesting manner. The Sunday school assembled and had an hour of Christmas stories told by four good story tellers with young people and children assisting. The Christmas music given by the choir drew a capacity congregation. Rev. W. R. Lott, the capable pastor at West Point, purposes carrying out the suggestions given by the Spiritual Life Commission.

Whatever Rev. J. H. Morrow, Gloster, Miss., puts his hands to he does thoroughly. In writing concerning his being agent for the New Orleans Christian Advocate in the Vicksburg district, he said, "With the class of literature that is finding its way into the homes of our people, certainly every pastor ought to exert every effort to offset this with good, wholesome reading matter, and our church papers are pioneers in the better field."

On Sunday, December 28, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs preached the morning sermon, and Dr. R. E. Smith was the preacher in the evening at the Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport. The pastor, Rev. T. M. Brownlee, was spending the holidays with his family at Clarksdale, Miss. He and Mrs. Brownlee arrived in Shreveport on Monday the 29th and have entered joyfully upon their new work. The Noel Memorial congregation is to be congratulated upon having these splendid workers with them for the new year.

The many friends of Rev. A. A. Simms, D'Lo, Miss., superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, will be pleased to know that his health has improved and that he feels able to do such work as the brethren may call upon him to do. In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Brother Simms says, "The Lord has blessed me in a most wonderful way, and I am constrained to join with the psalmist and say 'bless the Lord, oh, my soul and all that is within me bless his Holy name.'"

Colonel R. H. Henry, eighty-one years old, passed to his reward at Jackson, Miss., on Friday, January 2. Col. Henry was a unique man and one who loved his State devotedly and had a wide circle of friends throughout the commonwealth. He was for fifty years owner and editor of the Daily Clarion-Ledger of Jackson. While he was a member of the Presbyterian Church, he enjoyed attending the Methodist services, particularly at Shiloh Camp Ground and at the Seashore Camp Ground. Another gentleman of the old South has fallen asleep. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Rev. James M. Lewis begins his second year on the Louise and Holly Bluff charge, Mississippi Conference, and the year promises to be a most successful one. He writes, "Upon our return for the second year we received the most hearty welcome we have ever received. A few nights after Conference, without notifying us, the people here at Louise came crowding into the parsonage, about fifty of them singing, "There shall be showers of blessing," and what a blessing it was. The table was loaded down with all kinds of good things, but the thing that made us feel most happy was the motive back of their visit and the happy expressions of the men and women and children who came."

GENERAL LEE'S ATTITUDE TOWARD WAR

By H. H. Smith

At this time, when many are working for a world peace and a warless world, it is to be regretted that some of our military leaders "glorify" war. Now, war is the last thing to be "glorified;" it is enough to be compelled to justify it. At its best it is stern business, and at its worst it is all that Sherman called it. Can any one imagine General Lee's glorifying war? He was a master of warfare and his brilliant achievements afforded ample opportunity for him to "glorify" war; but, instead of glorifying it, he abhorred it. General Hunt says that, while in Mexico, Lee earnestly strove "to heal the differences between General Scott and some of his subordinate officers. He was a peace-maker by nature."

"War, of which he was so supreme a master, was to him abhorrent, only possible as a dire necessity, in defense of home and fireside," says a writer. When the Federal hosts were driven back from the Heights of Fredericksburg, an officer said to him, "Isn't it splendid?" He replied, "Yes, but it is well that war is so terrible, or we might become too fond of it."

In one of his letters during the war, he said: "The loss of our gallant officers and men throughout the army cause me to weep tears of blood, and cause me to wish that I could never hear the sound of a gun again."

On Christmas day, 1862, just after his great victory over Burnside, at Fredericksburg, he wrote to his wife: "But what a cruel thing is war to separate and destroy families and friends and mar the purest joys and happiness God has granted us in this world, to fill our hearts with hatred instead of love for our neighbors, and to devastate the fair face of this beautiful world! I pray that on this day when only peace and good-will are preached to mankind, better thoughts may fill the hearts of our enemies and turn them to peace."

If the military leaders of the world today had the spirit of Robert E. Lee in regard to war, it would go a long way toward producing a warless world.

A. W. ARMSTRONG

In the Mississippi Conference Journal, under "Our Sainted Dead," appears the name of T. Y. Armstrong who died March 7, 1863. He was one of our real pioneer Methodist preachers. He had a son, A. W. Armstrong, who, too, was a Methodist of the old-time type. This son lived to be 87 years of age. He was married 57 years ago. He passed on from this life December 8, 1930, and was buried at Heidelberg the following day, the writer being in charge of the burial obsequies. He leaves a devoted companion to mourn his departure. He also leaves three children, eight grandchildren and one great-granchild. The children are: Mrs. J. F. Lavigne, of Laurel, Miss.; Mrs. J. T. Speed, of Erata, Miss.; C. O. Armstrong, of Heidelburg, Miss. Brother Armstrong joined the Methodist church at Chunky, Miss. in early life and ever remained true to its vows and rules. His home was a home where the family altar was a reverent place of worship. The influence of this shrine in this home will never die. Brother and Sister Armstrong were making their home with the daughter, Mrs. J. T. Speed and all was done that they knew to do for the father as life gradually ebbed away. The rich blessings of our Lord and Master be with all the loved ones left behind, especially the lonely companion for these fifty-seven years.

A sympathetic friend.

J. A. WELLS

MILTON CANNON McLAUGHLIN was born in Lincoln Parish, La., December 23, 1852, and departed this life September 20, 1930, being 77 years, 8 months and 27 days old. His life was spent in the community of Antioch, a few miles northwest of Ruston, where he established his home and became one of the most prosperous farmers of Lincoln Parish. Brother McLaughlin was married to Miss Martha Louise Cargill, September 6, 1894. Of this union there was born one child, a daughter, now the wife of Mr. Burt Lomax, a prosperous business man of Ruston.

Brother McLaughlin joined the Methodist Church early in life, being a charter member of Antioch Church, now on the Simsboro charge. From the beginning he has been an active member of the church, for many years Sunday school superintendent and steward of the church. He was a most consistent and loyal member of the church, loving its work and his pastors. His home was the preacher's home, and there was always a hearty welcome for the servant of the Lord. While never possessed of great wealth, he was most generous of heart and gave freely of what he possessed.

He was a most useful and honorable citizen, was highly respected and beloved by the people of his church and community. One of the sturdy, dependable kind that constitute the most valuable type of American citizenship. Honest, clean, high-minded, generous, kind, loyal and true—a product of Christian training—to which the Church can point with pride.

His body was laid to rest under the shade of the stately oaks, in the quiet little cemetery in the Antioch community, following a brief service in the church where for many years he was a leading, active member. A large crowd of people attended the service, attesting their devotion to the life of this good man and expressing their sympathy to the bereft loved ones.

To the devoted widow, their daughter, grandchildren and loved ones we extend our heartiest sympathy and point with joy to the Christ, who alone can bring comfort in their grief.

"WORRY"

In the year 1853, Herbert Spencer wrote to his father, saying: "I was sorry to find that your nervousness made you, as usual, to expect the worst results conceivable. It is a pity when inclined to take such gloomy thought you cannot call to mind how many times you have prophesied dreadful results and have been mistaken."

We are all prone to worry like the father of the great English philosopher. Sometimes the reason for our worry is found in our physical condition. We are nervously exhausted and lack the necessary strength to overcome the spirit of apprehension when it assails the citadel of our lives. Frequently worry is a reminder that we need to pay more attention to our health and seek through rest and recreation to increase our reserve of physical strength.

We must recognize the seriousness of life. There are burdens to carry, mountains to climb, and problems to face. Often the burdens seem greater than our strength, the mountains too steep for us to climb, and the problems too serious for us to solve. Responsible men recognize the realities of life and the necessity of facing them seriously. Every day there are things that invite worry. But why worry? Worry neither strengthens nor helps us. Rather it weakens and hinders.

Let us face our problems courageously, work faithfully to solve them, and the consciousness that we have been brave and done our best will so occupy our thoughts that there will be no room for worry in our lives.

Some men worry about the problems of today, but most of us worry about those of tomorrow. When we are over-apprehensive about the future, it is wise to pause and think of the past. In reviewing the yesterdays of life we but find that there were sunshine and rain, but much more sunshine than rain; there were joy and sorrow, but much more joy than sorrow; there were success and failure, but much more success than failure; there were days of apprehension in the past when we feared that the sun had said good-by forever as he stooped low in the heavens and kissed the earth good night. But the morning came, and we found the sky bright with sunshine and the earth vocal with praise. The sun was shining again! It was David who said: "Whoso is wise and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord." We need to be reminded frequently as was the elder Spencer: "Many times have you prophesied dreadful results, but have been mistaken."

Therefore be it resolved that we will not worry, but that like good men and true we will face the problems of today without fear and those of tomorrow without undue apprehension. —Watchman-Examiner.

CAN CHINA BE FORSAKEN?

By Dr. David A. Brown, New York City

"Can China be forsaken now?" David A. Brown, chairman of the Board, China Famine Relief, U. S. A., 205 East Forty-second Street, New York City, asks and answers that question. He says: "Is it an indictment of the humanity of the world that within the past three years over 8,000,000 people starved to death in a country that has always looked to the United States as its best friend? Were it not for the fact that we have been enabled to send money to China, such an indictment would stand against us.

"The aftermath of that frightful tragedy is that 2,000,000 more people will die before another crop is harvested unless they are helped from the outside. The Chinese are doing much, but they have their hands pretty full. I am sure that China Famine Relief, U. S. A., interprets the wishes of the people of good will in the United States in its determination not to forsake the starving in China.

"Humanitarians tell us that we have instituted a great movement in China. Work has been started that needs to be completed, and with the certainty that there will be other famines we think it our duty, as well as our opportunity, to carry on in a special endeavor to prevent the necessity of recurring calamities and their consequent appeals for help from this country.

"We have demonstrated that famines in China can be prevented, and, at a recent meeting, decided that we would go ahead in a movement to show the Chinese how it can be done. I know, of course, of the status of our own country and am proud of the way our needs are being met.

"Ours is a charitable enterprise, but at the same time it would be an economic blunder to drop it now, only to have to face it more seriously in a few years. Moreover, that limiting restriction that charity begins at home would prompt us to do what we can to restore the buying power of the Chinese.

"We have learned what is necessary and with the spending of a limited amount of money, and the leadership in China that is available, we can help bring life and comparative prosperity to a population that will otherwise either perish or remain as a constant cause of need."

THE BESSIE C. ALFORD RESERVE FUND

An Investment in Appreciation

By Mrs. W. T. Hegman

For six years, Mrs. L. W. Alford, as president of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, has given whole-heartedly of her time, strength, personality, and means, and great joy has come to her in return—but, as the time nears for her to pass on to other hands the office that she has filled so graciously, there comes the shadow of anxiety, lest the Conference should fail, for the first time, to pay its obligations in full.

"But unto souls who trust Him,
God will ever point a way,
As we seek the Spirit's guidance
And work and watch and pray."

Thus to such a soul Mrs. J. E. Brown, of Gloster, came this idea: That each auxiliary, in addition to its noblest effort to pay its own obligation in full, build up, through its local treasury, a reserve fund to be held by the auxiliary subject to the call of Mrs. Alford, should the need arise.

No finer expression of appreciation could we voice to her who deserves the best; and no investment could be surer of the Master's approval. Let each auxiliary, as well as interested individuals, take as many "shares" as possible.

"Let sacrifice overrule our lack,
Lest His cause be in vain,
For truly millions for whom He died
Have never heard His name."

At Christmas time the Star of Bethlehem will shine again in the sky. God grant that we may be wise enough to follow its rays out of the darkness of the present world situation into the way of sacrificial living and giving.

Mrs. Lipscomb's endorsement of above plan:

"I want to place my unqualified approval upon the splendid plan of the Reserve Fund which the Mississippi Conference has chosen as the means of bringing up finances in full. It could not have been done in a more beautiful or deserving way."

THIS IS A NEW YEAR

This is a new year, friend of mine,
A token of love
From the Lord above,
A gift from his hand divine.

He's sent it to you
With a task to do
To make it the best you've had?

This is a new year. What does it mean?
A service to give,
A record to live
With a purpose true and clean.

This is a new year, fresh as the dawn,
With a page all white,
And a promise bright,
And a light to carry on!

The old is gone,
The new moves on,
But God is the Lord of all!"

ZONE MEETING—ELECTRIC MILLS

The fourth quarterly meeting of Zone No. 4 was held in Electric Mills on November 4 with members of four auxiliaries represented. Mrs. W. E. Rogers of Porterville, Zone leader, presided. The program was helpful, and those who led in discussions had thoroughly prepared.

After the morning session the visitors adjourned to the Community House, where a delicious plate lunch was served by the ladies of Electric Mills auxiliary.

A short business meeting followed the afternoon program and the following officers were elected: Mrs. Grady May of Electric Mills as Zone chairman; Mrs. V. M. Creekmore of DeKalb as secretary.

A motion was made and carried that each auxiliary be responsible for one entire program during the year, each program being submitted to the Zone chairman for approval.

DeKalb will entertain next Zone meeting and Porterville Auxiliary will be responsible for program.

MRS. HARDY MYERS,
Zone Secretary.

The following auxiliaries are to be added to the roll of those who have met all their financial obligations in full: Lucedale, Fayette, Brookhaven, Norfield and Centenary, McComb, Crawford Street and Holly Bluff.

The Annual Conference of the W. M. S. of the Mississippi Conference will be held at First Church, Gulfport.

Doctor's 3 RULES
Big Help to Bowels
What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:
1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.
Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.
Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

March 4 and 5, at Millsaps College, will be held the Mississippi Circuit Pastors' Conference. This will be our first meeting of this kind.

Dr. Alexander, head of the Department of Schools and Colleges, and Mr. A. W. Martin, head of the Department of Extension Work, will be with us.

Millsaps College will entertain us for $1 a day. All the work will be conducted on the college campus. This Conference is for both the Mississippi Conference and the North Mississippi Conference.

Miss Jane McDonald will be with us at Jackson and Meridian and will teach Organization of the Young People's Division. I am greatly pleased to make this announcement.

Dr. G. L. Morelock will be in the Jackson District Training School, teaching Stewardship. It is hoped that we will have a great class for Dr. Morelock. All the lay leaders should be present and take part.

The Mission collections continue to drop. It is hoped that the tide will turn and that many schools never before supporting our cause will begin to do so. We are very happy that so far we have been able to keep the work going.

Plan now to attend your District Institute. Read the News letter. I call your attention again to the fact that the workers of your Board come to you FREE. Please get the habit of using the Board to aid you.

Pray for the work and the workers.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The recent meeting of the General Council of Christian Education of the whole Church was a most interesting meeting. The above organization came into being during this meeting. It was organized out of the old Sunday School Council and the old Epworth League Council. The merger of these two organizations without friction and with perfect and devout harmony is a long step forward in the work of our Church. The spirit of the young people was characteristically fine. They manifested an interest in the unification of the work of the local church, especially that which affected their activities.

The meeting was marked by decided determination to eliminate all overlapping and duplication in the educational work of the church. It emphasized a simplified organization and unified activities. There was always an earnest desire to do that which will bring glory to Christ and victory to His kingdom on earth. The spiritual values were repeatedly placed in the forefront of all else.

Our Conference was represented by the executive secretary' Rev. E. G. Mohler, extension secretary; W. R. Hammontree, rural worker; Rev. C. A. Parks, superintendent of adult work; Rev. W. L. Robinson, director of young people's work; Rev. J. E. Stephens, chairman of the board.

We must not let our training work lag one bit. I am fully aware of the situation that faces us in the failure of some fifty banks within our Conference recently. But I am working out plans that will place training at the hands of every worker who wants it. The life of the whole program lies here. So, make your plans for a standard school or class or a Cokesbury school or class. Write to us and we will be glad to take up the matter with you.

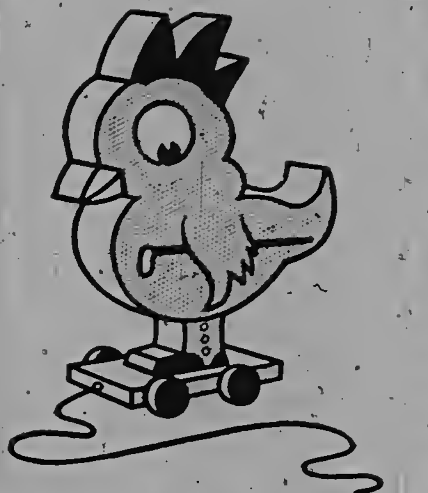
LOUISIANA EPWORTH LEAGUE

Dear Young People: On Tuesday, December 13, I left Monroe for Nashville, Tenn., to attend the Epworth League Leaders' Council. I have realized for some time that this would be about the most eventful session that I had had the pleasure of ever attending, but I can now take the word "about" out of this sentence. We had not been in session twenty-four hours before the Sunday School Council, the Christian Education and the Epworth League Leaders' Council were disbanded as three organizations and united into one. With the thought of a unified program overhead and the consciousness that we all represent one motive in a great church the three councils proceeded in their tasks. If the other two divisions accomplished as much as we did in the young people's division, then we certainly made history for Methodism while in session. It is impossible for me to give you young people a gist of all the observations made while attending this important council.

Representatives from the Adolescent Department of the Sunday School and the Young People's Missionary Society sat with the League leaders and together we discussed and planned for the future of the young people of Southern Methodism. In order that we might conserve all of the great values of these three organizations, protect the autonomy and purpose of both the Sunday School and Epworth League and at the same time work toward a program of co-operation and unity we had to proceed cautiously and wisely. We realized that underlying our every purpose was a great spiritual value that must guide us in our thinking and be dominant in our decisions.

I wish that I might give you here, the findings of the young people's group, but, since that is impossible, may I urge a large attendance at our Union Presidents' Meeting at Alexandria, on January 24-25. This meeting is the annual meeting of the union presidents of this conference. Because of its importance we are urging every Epworth League Conference officer, district secretary, Union president, young people's president or superintendent, and any individual interested in this vital question to sit in this meeting with us and learn of the plans for future young people's work in Louisiana Conference. We are arranging plans at the Rapides Hotel whereby you may get a rate of one dollar per person for rooms and the total expense of the meeting will be reasonable. We are not in position as a conference to care for any officer's expense, so we are asking each officer to care for his own and for the unions to finance the president's way. Some of the topics to be discussed are: The Sunday School and League Leaders' Council at Nashville; Past and Future of our Union, District and Conference Organizations; Organization Within the Local Church; Our Training Programs; The Epworth Era; Anniversaty Day; Sunday School Day; Our Missionary Interests; and Plans for Our Summer Assemblies. The first session opens Saturday afternoon



Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! As harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant — as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

A Group of Native Evangelists at Pochow, Anhwei, China.

"We folks in the Methodist Mission here in Tientsin," writes Mrs. Berkey, "are great boosters for Vicks. In a climate such as we have here, it seems that especially the children have so many colds—and we all use Vicks. Personally, I have found that it is a good relief to take a little Vicks in my mouth when I get to coughing in the night.

"We appreciate that you are interested in the work of Christ's Kingdom on the other side of the world."

Mrs. Berkey's experience with Vicks in controlling night coughs is shared by thousands of others, who have also found it effective to melt a teaspoonful of Vicks in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming vapers. This opens up nasal passages and overcomes mouth breathing—so often the cause of dry, irritated throats and night coughs.

Vicks also quickly checks those sleep-disturbing coughs of children. Just rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to irritated air—passages. At the same time, it acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

This two-fold action, which continues through the night, has a most remarkable effect in easing the breathing and relieving the cough, thus assuring sound, restful sleep for both mother and child.

Each chapter that gets a certain quota will receive one, two, or three Mission or Study text-books for your Library. The subscriptions to the Epworth Era will carry over in whatever new magazine the Publishing House gives us to supplant the Era in our new program; so do not hold back on that account. We should place this magazine in the homes of the young people of our church.

Splendid reports are coming in on our Union meetings throughout the Conference. It is a great realization to know that the youth of our church are gathering in such large groups monthly to plan for and promote chapter growth. If your Epworth League is not in a union, you are missing a great deal. Let us help you get into one.

In the future my headquarters will be Box 742, Alexandria, so direct all inquiries to that office. Let us help you in organization.

Did your chapter president receive a copy of the Christian Education Bulletin mailed out the first of the month? This Bulletin takes the place of the Louisiana League Life and the Missionary Extension Bulletin gotten out by my office and the Sunday School office. If your chapter did not get one, there is a reason. Let us know about it.

The new editor is not accustomed to my long weeklies. Here's hoping he doesn't strike out many sentences this week as they all are of importance if your young people's secretary knows how to judge values.

Sincerely,

ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF MERIDIAN HOLD BANQUET

The Epworth League hall was made a most beautiful setting for a banquet for the Young People's Division, including Leaguers and members of the Senior-Young People's classes of the Sunday school, on December 26. Yuletide decorations were prominent in the embellishments and motif of the evening entertainment, both in the windows, also lighted by candles, and the banquet table which was arranged in the form of a Maltese cross. In the center of the table was a miniature Christmas tree and at the points were blooming poinsteeas. Tiny gift candles marker each plate.

The Rev. J. F. Campbell returned thanks, after which the following program, arranged by Miss Lilybec Phillips was given during the banquet: The familiar Epworth League Chanticleer Boost sounded by Bro. Campbell for the entire Young People's Division; the introduction of out-of-town visitors and other guests; vocal solo by Miss Gulleyye; reading by Miss Clara Buchanan; vocal solo by John Campbell; music by Miss Willie Grace Mooreland, pianist; Gordon Ezell, violinist, and Morris Christopher, saxophone artist.

After a humorous reading by Bro. Campbell, he explained the new program of the consolidation of the social activities of the young people of the church as recommended by our General Conference.

The success of the banquet was due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Joe Van Norman, Mrs. J. H. Wells, Mrs. B. Moore, Mrs. M. Hale, Mrs. C. H. Christopher, Miss Cora Sanford and others.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Epworth League Leaders' Council and the Sunday School Council have had their meetings and very interesting meetings they were. These meetings were held in Nashville, Tennessee. We now have the General Council of Christian Education. The Young People's associate council will be a part of this General Council.

It was very gratifying to see so much consideration being given to the work of the young people. They certainly received recognition. The leaders of our Church realize that the young people have an important work to do. They realize the great importance of getting our young people lined up with the program of our Church. Our young people are being given the opportunity of making a large contribution to the program of our Church.

There is a group in our church now known as the Young People's Division. This includes the young people from twelve years of age on up. We don't emphasize the up too much. After people get up to a certain age they don't want you to say too much about their age. But we do want the young people to get behind the program of our church. We have over six hundred thousand young people in the Southern Methodist Church. Just think what this great host of young people could do if they would give their united support to one great program of Christian Education. They could work wonders.

Don't get excited now and think that the Epworth League has been discontinued. We still have the Epworth League. We are planning great things for the League. We are hoping to have a great Assembly at Grenada next June. Instructors are being selected now. We hope to have the best Assembly we have ever had. We are planning to put on a recreational program that will appeal to you. We want you to be there and enjoy it. We want Epworth Leaguers to be there and we want representatives from the Sunday School and other young people's organizations. Begin now to make your plans for the Assembly.

Brother S. E. Ashmore is still our treasurer. Send your pledge money to him. Remember that we want to raise more money for missions this year than we raised last year. We are still supporting the African Special. This is a worthy cause and we hope that our Leaguers will respond in a worthy way. See to it that your League pays its pledge in full by the time our Assembly meets. The way to do that is to pay your pledge by the month. We hope you will also remember our Special for Epworth Hall at Grenada College. We need a new dining hall at Grenada College and we are going to have it.

Don't forget to line the Methodist young people of your community up for one of our church schools. Try to influence the girls to go to Grenada College and the boys to Millsaps College. These are two institutions that we should be proud of. More of our boys and girls should be attending these schools. Let us be loyal to our institutions. We promise to do that when we join the church.

OUTGROWING DIFFEERNCES

Even Christian men will have their differences and these debates or controversies may at times become too earnest and exciting. It is not only so now; it has ever been so. To say nothing of the difference which once obtained between Abram and Lot, we have, in the very first century, a recorded controversy between Paul and Barnabas over John Mark, who wished to return to Jerusalem, perhaps because he became homesick. The debate became so earnest between these two good workers that they withdrew one from the other. But there is reason to gather that later they became reconciled. By that time John Mark may have given evidence of a capacity for real, downright Christian service, attesting sincerity by the enduring of hardships, while Paul himself mellowed and became more understanding of human nature. It appears, in short, that the difference between Paul and Barnabas was simply outgrown in the course of years. It did not look to be so serious a matter ten or twenty years after it originally occurred. Tmie is a healer.—Zion's Herald.

CHRISTMAS AT KINGSTON

Of course, it was "different." So, it was with everybody in the land, but barring the distressing times, we had a sweet, and blessed Christmas at Kingston.

We made a special plea for the Orphanage at Jackson, and if every Methodist church in Mississippi did as well as Kingston and Antioch, the future for the Home is so much brighter! We got a substantial cash offering and sent them some boxes and sacks of provisions, etc. Both churches responded fine for the times.

Then on Christmas day the Junior Boys, under the leadership of Mrs. Wells, took some groceries to Rev. J. B. Stringer, a supernumerary of our Conference, who has recently moved about ten miles east of Laurel. The boys were happy to do this and Bro. Stringer and family appreciated it very much.

By strict economy since the boy was a baby, our oldest son is in Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.. and was home for the holidays, and he brought a thoughtful message Sunday morning, December 18, and an appreciative congregation listened to him. Then, this Sunday evening, our college students, home for the holidays, conducted the services. The following subjects were discussed: "Two of Kingston's Best Assets," "My Idea of a Model Church," "Two Ways of Promoting the Spirit of Fellowship Between the Young and the Old," and "Some Goals for Kingston for 1931." Now, Brother Decell, you would have enjoyed listening to these youngsters talk—and they talked, too!

I had announced that the program by the committee on Spiritual Interests of the Church would be followed, beginning with a watch-night service, and we sure had a fine watch-night service. Forty-nine remained until the old year died, all but one partaking of the Lord's Supper just before midnight. It was a great joy to have my own boy, who was licensed to preach last year, to assist me in this solemn and sacred sacrament. The Senior League assisted in the program of the night, and the hours passed quickly! Different members mentioned personal goals they had for the church and Sunday school work. Well, it was a fine beginning of the program. Sixty-five in attendance and forty-nine remained until the New Year.

During the following nights of prayer, we intend to organize the forces for the most aggressive spiritual campaign we have ever undertaken. I sure would appreciate the prayers of the real Christians who read these lines.

Looking unto Jesus,

GLUE AND GLORY

By Eugene C. Rowell

The carpenter preached a sermon with his glue. It was a good sermon, though he didn't know he was preaching.

To begin with, the glue must be hot. That stands for enthusiasm, a good text.

Glue sticks to a rough surface as well as a smooth one. In fact, it likes a rough surface best. Don't give up your job or shrink from your duty just because it's hard or the way is rough.

Glue is wonderfully sticky. But that isn't enough. It must have something to stick to.

Last of all, in a good joint the glue itself cannot be seen. It just stays down out of sight and does its work of holding fast. That means humility, an excellent conclusion. You may think some people do not amount to much till you try to pull apart what they are holding together in their unassuming way. Then you will find that you will have to split the wood to get them loose.

Worth-while people are like glue. They stick. Not only that, but they have something to stick to. Not the stubborn foolishness of "Right or wrong, I'll stick to it," but a life purpose which they know is right. The Psalmist expressed this when he said: "I have stuck unto thy testimonies: O Lord, put me not to shame."

That prayer is always answered to those who stick as he stuck.

For instance, there was Noah. When the existence of the human race depended upon him, he stuck. People laughed at him for over a hundred years. But there was no shame for Noah when the ark rose grandly above the upreaching waves. There was no shame for Noah when God made a covenant with him and signed it with that most glorious signature, the rainbow.

Then there was Esther. When the life of the Jewish nation had been sold to their crafty enemy and she was called to the kingdom for such a time as that, she stuck. Through twenty-five centuries that have silenced the blast of trumpets and laid low the might of kings, her calm, young voice still sounds. "I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if I perish, I perish."

Well, there was no shame for Esther when, as queen over a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, she saw her people's enemies overwhelmed with a vengence from God.

Paul stuck, too. His task was to hold together the parts of the Christian faith when persecution seemed about to rend them forever apart. But there was no shame for Paul. The glory in which the Roman eagles flew far to ruthless conquest has faded and left Rome's greatness to the owls and to the bats. But when Paul stood alone before the most heartless of her emperors there was with him glory eternally undimmed. The shame was rather with that Demas who forsook him, having loved this present world.

Thus through the course of human years we might go on. The true glory of this world is with those who stick to duty, to principle, to the precepts of God. This also will be their glory in the world which is to come.—In the Watchman Magazine.

Idea Worked!

Wise mothers find the things that keep children contented, well, happy. Most of them have found they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The experience of Mrs. Wm. Charleston, 903 Gilmore Ave., Kansas City, Kans., is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Annie and Billy all their lives. Whenever they're constipated or bilious it has them comfortable, happy, in a jiffy. Their wonderful condition proves my idea works."

Physicians endorse the use of pure vegetable California Fig Syrup when bad breath, coated tongue, dullness, feverishness, listlessness, etc. show a child's bowels need help. Weak stomach and bowels are toned by it; a child's appetite and digestion are improved.

The genuine always bears the name California for your protection.

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish,—no danger.

A LETTER FROM A PATRIARCH OF NINETY-FOUR

I want to tell about some children that lived one hundred years ago. I they were now living, some would be over one hundred; some one hundred and some about my age. I lack six years of being one hundred. I neighbored with these children, went to school with them, went to church and Sunday school with them. They grew up in a neighborhood of well-to-do farmers, Christian people. God was first in their homes. Family altars and altar fires kept continually burning, neighborhood prayer meetings well attended, fast days, class meeting, love-for. art were observed, religion pure and undefiled ruled in their homes.

The parents led their children and brought them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. They lived their religion, it was not Sunday religion, but Monday and all time religion. It is said that nobody got sick in the neighborhood and died unsaved. The people would come and sing and pray with them until they were converted and ready to go to heaven.

An incident in my own experience verifies the truth of this saying. I was sick and three physicians were attending me. They met in consultation one evening, and told my father I could not live through the night. He called the neighbors in and they had a song and prayer service until they all got happy. I got happy, but I did not die.

These children attended the country school, some of the boys went off to college, graduated and returned to their homes to take up their chosen profession. One family of five boys there chose the ministry. One succeeded in business and was the prime mover in building a college at Jackson, Miss., for the education of boys and girls. From that neighborhood at that time twelve young men chose the ministry for their life work and, to follow up some of those young men, Chief Justice Lamar said of one of them he could not be surpassed in oratory by any pulpit orator in the nation. On one occasion this preacher was at Crystal Springs camp meeting. One Sunday there was a great crowd there. They put up the biggest preacher for 11 o'clock. He preached a big sermon and it did not have the desired effect. The committee on public worship saw it was necessary to put up the right man for the night service. Many preachers were there and many were suggested for the night service, but the committee said they would not do. Finally, this preacher was suggested and the committee decided he would do if they could get him right. They spent that Sunday evening praying with and for that preacher to get him right for the night service. He preached a powerful sermon, a soul-searching and sin-convicting sermon. A circuit Judge, a strong Baptist, was sitting by a friend of the preacher and said, "Where has that man been, I never heard such preaching." At the conclusion mourners were called for and front benches were filled with people crying, for many, many were converted, the tide was turned, conversion and soul-winning conttinued to the end of the camp meeting.

The girls of that day developed into fine women, established families, and some of their decendants are now doing missionary work in foreign fields.

Does religion pay? Yes, religion pays. My long experience in the service tells me that religion pays. The joys and comfort I have received in times of deepest sorrow could not come only through true religion and trust in my God and Saviour.

NIGHT COUGHING

Quick and Safe Way To Stop It!

Whatever it is due to—cold, catarrhal condition of the throat, dust irritations or smoking—night coughing can and should be stopped! Nothing will pull you down faster, for it not only deprives you of needed sleep, but it tears you to pieces.

At the first sign of a cough, take good old "Piso's for Coughs." It does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages and soothes the inflamed tissues. At the same time, it has a tonic value that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Piso's supplies these five vital effects and it contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give even to babies. All druggists sell Piso's in 35c and 60c sizes. Be sure you get "Piso's for Coughs."

FOR COLDS—
ALKALINIZE
YOUR SYSTEM

Doctors everywhere are prescribing this new treatment for colds; and it is delighting thousands by the quick relief it brings when used consistently.

Begin when you feel a cold coming. Take a tablespoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water, morning, noon and night, the first day. Do the same thing the second day. Then take only at night.

Colds reduce the alkalinity of your system. That's what makes you feel achy, feverish, weak, half-sick from them. Phillips Milk of Magnesia is alkali in harmless, palatable form. It relieves the symptoms of colds by restoring the alkalinity of your system.

For fifty years this pleasant alkaline has been famous as an anti-acid. Doctors prescribe Phillips Milk of Magnesia; hospitals use it; millions know how it relieves sour stomach, gas, indigestion and other symptoms of over-acidity. All drug stores recommend it. 25c and 50c bottles, with full directions for its many uses.

THE PROHIBITION NEW YEAR

A significant anniversary was marked on January 16. For eleven years Prohibition has been the law of the land. Notwithstanding a determined and well-organized movement to create disrespect for the law, its beneficial effects are so evident that he who runs can read.

While he was Secretary of Commerce, President Hoover, after analyzing economic statistics in his department, said: "There can be no doubt of the economic benefits of prohibition. Viewing the temperance question only from this angle, prohibition has proved its case. I think increased temperance over the land is responsible for a good share of the enormously increased efficiency in production, which statistics gathered by the Department of Commerce show to have followed the passage of the prohibition law.

"Exhaustive study from many angles of production over average periods, ten years apart, before and since the war, would indicate that while our productivity should have increased about 15 per cent, due to the increase in population, yet the actual increase has been from 20 to 30 per cent, indicating an increase of efficiency of somewhere from 1 to 15 per cent. There is no question, in my opinion, that prohibition is making America more productive. There can be no doubt that prohibition is putting money in the American family pocketbook. The dry law has proved its worth in dollars and cents."

A recent note sounded from an important source was that made by Mr. Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association, when he said:

"The talk of national referendum of the Eighteenth Amendment shows an amazing ignorance of conditions in the country at large. Such a procedure would subject the country to needless controversy when there is a firm demand for international peace and constructive effort. There is not now, and never has been, a ghost of a show for repeal. The rising tide of militant dry sentiment has only begun to come in. The Eighteenth Amendment is not primarily a political issue or even an economic problem—although these phases are important. It is a human issue and a moral problem. The Eighteenth Amendment is the greatest contribution to child welfare in human history with but two exceptions, the establishment of the Christian church and the development of the common school. Enforcement is now 70 per cent effective and is gaining steadily under the new policy."

The President is quoted recently as saying, "We can no longer gloss over the unpleasant reality which should be made vital in the consciousness of every citizen, that he who condones or traffics with crime, who is indifferent to it and to the punishment of the criminal, or to lax performance of official duty, is himself the most effective agency for the breakdown of society."

It was the editor's privilege recently to meet and enjoy a brief visit with Mr. E. R. Black, member of the First Baptist Church at Atlanta, Ga., Governor of the Sixth Federal Reserve Bank District, and in the course of conversation the financial leader mixed religion with business and said, "The pressing needs of the time are not many, nor are they complex. They are few, but very important; we need a courageous faith in God, faith in each other and faith in the principles of legitimate business. Business will revive more by the reassertion of character than anything else."

Without the qualities of good character business cannot be good. The millions of dollars that are wasted in riotous living, dissipated in speculative grasping would all be put into constructive channels if the standards of Governor Black were prevailing.

The millions of dollars that it cost this republic to operate its courts and deal with the criminal element is sufficient to adequately endow every one of the six hundred or more struggling colleges and initiate methods and operate industries that would do away with unemployment and make the pinch of poverty an unknown experience in American life. When will people act upon the knowledge that they have—that sin and its by-products cost individuals and the government more than the necessities and worth-while things of life? If man would go out of the business of sin and into a life that would reassert the dominance of character, it would bring him into prosperity and peace.

ADVANCE WHILE WAITING

The supreme need of the world is the good man. The days await the showing forth of the sons of God who will lead mankind out of a maze of speculation, enervating social contradictions, and low spiritual levels up on to high planes of spiritual adventure and conquest.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, in his book, "That Flame of Living Fire," wrote, "The world awaits the arrival of a new religious leader, who has the vision, tact and courage to live the highest New Testament Standard of experience and life and power; who believes in the whole Bible as a message from heaven, who is dead to the world and alive to God in every atom of his being; with every capacity filled and every power energized by the Power of the Holy Spirit."

There have been and are leaders who have led the multitudes far up the heights. However, no voice can communicate vision and power that doesn't have responsive hearers.

Must the age wait for an individual who towers above his fellows like an Everest? May not the redeeming qualities of Dr. Wilson's "new religious leader" be incarnated in a type rather than a single man? The needs are so immediate until the average man should move on, and not sit idly in the market place waiting for a gigantic personality to appear who will perform herculean tasks in a miraculous way. It may be that the valleys have been lifted up until the base and peak are close together; and leadership has become more of a correlative richness of spirit and administrative direction than an eminence of superiority.

Pascal said, "Give us the man and all else will follow." Have we not the Man of Galilee? The ascended Captain of the host is with us yet, and the conquering principles of His Kingdom are not hidden away in reserve for the few, but they have been heralded abroad from the Mount. Immanuel tabernacles with His people and leads against the foe. The lines of advance have been plainly written in imperishable words of spirit and life. Millions have come to live for they have seen Him who is full of grace and truth.

It is time for the rank and file to forward march with such an abandon that will make the hardest task a privilege and the heaviest sacrifice a joy. Let the average man realize his place in the momentous scenes of spiritual conquest and the Church will advance while she waits.

A Matter of Importance

BY BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS, D.D., LL.D

The College of Bishops, on the morning of May 7, 1930, in their Episcopal address to the General Conference then assembled in the city of Dallas, Texas, brought before the whole Church the significant fact that our Schools of Religion at Emory University and Southern Methodist University should be more adequately endowed—and this without delay.

These words from the Episcopal Address will be readily remembered by all who heard them or read them:

"Emory University and Southern Methodist University were established by authority of the General Conference, and the whole Church, therefore, has a responsibility with reference to these two institutions.

"We would especially call your attention to the Schools of Religion which are vital parts of these Universities. Steps should be taken immediately more adequately to endow these institutions.

"We should be false to a solemn responsibility, therefore, if we did not unitedly call upon this General Conference to consider and approve plans for the liberal endowment of our Schools of Religion."

The General Conference accordingly took this important matter under most careful consideration and later adopted the report in which the following words appear:

"We respectfully ask that the General Conference authorize the raising of $1,000,000 endowment for each of our Schools of Theology at Emory University and Southern Methodist University during the quadrennium, the funds raised east of the Mississippi River to be assigned to Emory University, and those west of the Mississippi River to Southern Methodist University, except when otherwise directed by the donor.

"We ask that the General Conference request the Bishops to co-operate with this movement in their respective districts, and that the General Board of Education be directed to co-operate in this effort during the coming quadrennium.

"It is not contemplated that this should be a Church-wide, every-member campaign or drive, but a duly authorized and carefully planned approach to men and women of liberality and ability in the various Presiding Elders' districts.

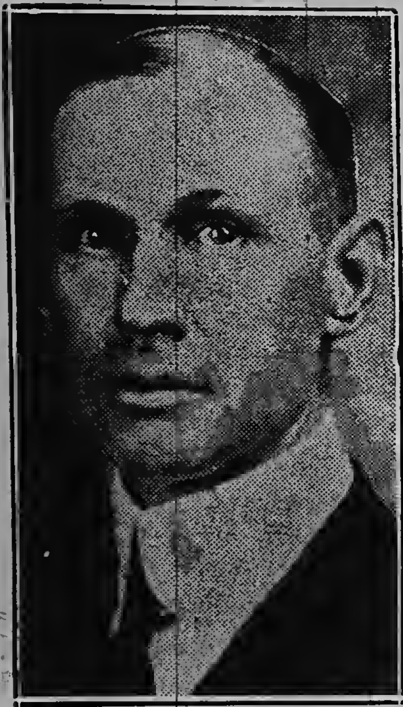
"We ask that an organization adequate to the task be authorized to co-operate with the representatives of the two institutions."

In compliance with this requirement of the General Conference, President Charles C. Selecman, of Southern Methodist University, on Friday, November 21, 1930, invited the Bishops in charge of Conferences west of the Mississippi River to meet him, the faculty of the School of Religion, the Board of Trustees, and other officials of the Church and the University, for the purpose of perfecting plans and devising ways and means by which to accomplish the ends set forth in the preceding paragraphs of this article.

The Bishops were requested to write letters to all the presiding elders in the Conferences west of the Mississippi River asking that they prepare and send to the Bishops in charge the names and addresses of prospective donors. The presiding elders are further expected to send also the names and addresses of all prospective students for the School of Theology, and to impress their young men entering the ministry, not only with the desirability, but of the imperative need of trained men for the work of the Church.

It is well known to all that these Schools of Theology have been doing their work since 1914—having been in operation for only fifteen years. Yet, during this short time, the School of Theology at Southern Methodist University has enrolled eight hundred students, including thirty-six from foreign countries. There are at this time approximately eight thousand preachers serving in the pulpits of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the young men who have done their work at Southern Methodist University and Emory University have already taken rank with the most efficient men in our ministry. It will furthermore be seen that in these fifteen years, the School of Theology at Southern Methodist University has trained a number equal to one-tenth of the entire number of preachers now in the pulpits of Southern Methodism. While the figures from Emory University are not at hand, it is safe to say that Emory has done equally as well.

The preacher of tomorrow, even as the one of yesterday and of today, must come to his place with some degree of preparation which is in keeping with the demands of his high calling and commensurate with the noble opportunity which is his in our own day and generation.



BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS, D.D., LLD.

One of the most thrilling and significant chapters in the history of the people of God is that which acquaints us with the experience and the training by and through which God has led men in preparing them for this great responsibility. Abraham, Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Saint Paul, Martin Luther, John Wesley, and Francis Asbury, are only a few of those whose names come to mind when review is made of the radiant points of the history of the Church. Men and women in every walk of life and in every calling now receive some training of some kind for their various tasks and responsibilities. This is one of the great presuppositions in all worldly pursuits which is even more necessary in the work of the Christrian ministry.

Our life today grows increasingly complex. We are more and more dependent one upon another. The spread of knowledge, which, unfortunately does not always mean the spread of holiness, is well nigh universal. The standard of intelligence is higher and higher all the time. Men and women still hunger not noly for bread, but also for God. The demand for inspiration and for strength is unceasing. It is unthinkable that men in the Christian ministry can enter upon its duties without in some measure preparing themselves for its exacting demands. This is not debatable, and so far as we know, it is no longer debated.

The obligation is unmistakably ours to make adequate and ample provision for the needs of the noble young men and women who have been admitted into the Church "by birth or baptism," and to put within their reach the religious and cultural advantages which every other great church offers to its sons and daughters.

All the other enterprises of the Church wait upon that of Christian education, which must either limp or lead in proportion to the generous foresight of Godly men and women of means who deliberately decide to make this the most far-reaching of all investments—that of moneys applied to the creation of character and citizenship in the kingdom of God upon the earth.

"The preacher is to interpret the will of God; and he is to do this in an age which is confronted with a confusion of facts and of ideas and of ideals for which human experience has no parallel. For this task creative minds are required. To rethink this enlarged world, and to comprehend and proclaim the Old Gospel in terms of the new and more complicated human relationships is a task for intellectual adventure of the highest order. The minister has the moral obligation to be intelligent."

The funds for this purpose must in the very nature of the case be supplied by the Church. The reasons for this will be readily apparent to all thoughtful and discerning men and women. The government and also the State now offer education which is practically free to all who will comply with the conditions for entering upon its benefits. As is well known the American people early in their history made the decision wisely to keep the Church and the State separate in their respective functions and spheres. This makes it necessary for the seminaries to look to the Churches for their revenues. Of course, these revenues may sometimes come through the channels of individual and private philanthropy; but even then the Church has been either directly or indirectly related to the donors. Moreover, most institutions of learning now derive their moneys for teaching from endowments. This has come to be the most practicable, the most satisfactory, and the most permanent method of support and management. In thus seeking endowment for our schools of religion we are putting ourselves in line with the most approved experience and plans of all other great religious organizations, and of many of the other secular corporations and institutions of our country.

This appeal will be felt also because of the present practical needs of our Schools of Religion. While it must be admitted that we have made and are now making great progress, the fact remains that we are under the necessity of doing vastly more in order to conserve the results already obtained and to insure the work of the future. We must continue to maintain an increasing self-respect. We must create and shape our own leadership. Our young men are entitled to the same cultural and religious advantages which the other great denominations offer to the young ministers coming up to them for training.

The School of Religion at Southern Methodist University needs the endowment of a million dollars for several reasons. The professors there and elsewhere are justly entitled to a living which "will keep them above the drudgery line." They need to be free to pursue the high aims which we have set for them, and which take for granted an adequate support. Some of them are making sacrifices which, if the Church knew about, it would be unwilling to have continued.

Most of the young men who enter the ministry have already largely exhausted their resources before they reach the doors of the seminaries. In some instances they have been compelled to incur debt in the completion of their academic studies. Hence it is but our reasonable duty to provide scholarships for those of character and ability in order that they may fully equip themselves by further pursuing their studies as other graduate students in other departments of the University constantly have the privilege of doing. The sum of $5,000 put at interest under the direction of the president and the board of trustees, will yield an income sufficient to enable a worthy young minister annually to meet his expenses in one of our Schools of Theology. In this way men and women of influence and of means may have the satisfaction of putting into the Christian ministry every third year a young man who may be permitted to continue to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ long after many of us have fallen on sleep.

Perhaps it is not too much to say that one million dollars set aside as permanent endowment for our Schools of Religion would yield returns as far-reaching as any which can be conceived of at this time. It is indeed a far call from the establishment of Harvard College on that memorable day in 1636 to the founding of the University of Chicago, Southern Methodist University, and Emory University. The words of those pioneers bring with them significance and weight as they reach us today:

"After God had carried us safe to New England, and we had builded our houses, provided necessaries for our livelihood, reared convenient places for God's worship, and settled the civil government, one of the next things we longed for and looked after was to advance learning and perpetuate it to posterity, dreading to leave an illiterate ministry to the Churches when our present ministers shall lie in the dust."

Here begins, then, the history of higher education in the United States of America. They were resolved to "bequeath to subsequent generations a worthy ministry." In other words, one of the noblest by-products of the work of the Church at that time was the higher education of men and women in this western world. The Gospel—the Church—the Christian ministry—these are the primary agencies which nourish and keep alive the nobler qualities of the nation's life.

This appeal is made to the men and women throughout the whole Church. The human soul is the most precious value of which we have any knowledge. To bring to bear upon a human soul the redemptive energies of the Cross is to shape human destiny not only in one's own day and generation, but in all succeeding generations.

This is the force which makes men and women, upbuilds civilization, and brings to greatness all who embody it. It is religion which makes civilization, and not civilization which makes religion. Gold, under God, may be made the means by which character may be formed and communities influenced and history shaped for centuries. The purse of a Christian man or woman may speed these processes of redemption. The future leadership of the Church depends in large measure upon the adequate endowment of our Schools of Religion. The College of Bishops, the General Conference, the Universities, and their Boards of Trustees, unitedly call upon our people everywhere to make this one of our major objectives and one of our great achievements during the coming quadrennium.

ORPHANAGE APPEAL, BUT NOT FOR CASH

By Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent

In this article I am going to make an earnest appeal, but will not ask for one penny in cash. I am sure it will not be necessary for me to dwell upon the fact that something should be done to liquidate the debt of $40,000 on our Home, which has been an extremely heavy burden to us for a long time. The interest rate has been increased until we are now paying nearly $3,000 per year interest. This within itself is a heavy and aggravating burden especially now when there is a general business depression.

The plan which I am going to present will wipe out the entire $40,000 indebtedness and stop the paying of excessive interest and it will not cost one penny in cash. It will, however, cost your enthusiastic co-operation. When I have gone into the details of the plan and explained how easily we can accomplish this worthy and worth while undertaking I just know that we can count upon you and all your friends and neighbors for one hundred per cent co-operation.

Here is the plan: The makers of Octagon soap products have agreed to take care of the entire $40,000 indebtedness in exchange for 8,000,000 coupons from the various soap items in the Octagon family, of which there are six. I think it will be appropriate for me to name these six coupon-bearing products. They are as follows: OCTAGON SOAP, OCTAGON SOAP POWDER, OCTAGON CLEANSER, OCTAGON TOILET SOAP, OCTAGON FLOATING SOAP and OCTAGON SOAP CHIPS. Please note that coupons from all these items can be combined to make up the required number. Also note particularly that we will receive double value from all coupons from OCTAGON TOILET SOAP. If you are not willing to make Octagon your "Wash Word" one hundred per cent in 1931, I know you will be able to pick out several of these items which you will be willing to use regularly.

The general policy of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, makers of Octagon products, has been to spend their advertising appropriation for merchandise, giving same to their customers and friends in exchange for the coupons. But in our case they have cheerfully modified this forty-year-old policy and made us the offer as above outlined. I cannot help but feel that we would be ungrateful, indeed, and may I say, short-sighted if we fail to take full advantage of this extremely liberal offering. Furthermore, the company has agreed to give us a new truck as an extra bonus, cost not to exceed $800, if we secure the needed 8,000,000 coupons within a specified period. After giving the matter due consideration we have decided to set our goal at 1,000,000 coupons per month. This will be easy and yet it will take thoughtful, careful, and prayerful consideration by each and every friend of the Orphanage. Everyone is interested in all institutions that care for homeless children, therefore it will be easy for you to enlist the co-operation of all your friends.

Should some unsympathetic party suggest that you are paying for all these coupons, kindly inform such a one that you are aware of that fact, and also that you are aware of the fact that the public pays for all advertising, regardless of the mothod of publicity adopted. The coupon method of advertising is certainly ethical, as it assures everyone of receiving their pro rata of the advertising appropriation if they will save the coupons.

It is just possible that in some of the rural sections and perhaps in some of the small towns the dealers have not been handling the Octagon products regularly. Should this be true, may we suggest that committees be appointed to call on the dealers, urging them to co-operate by stocking with the various Octagon brands, so you will experience no difficulty in securing the same? Here are other suggestions, that will be helpful, that have been used successfully in other coupon drives. Get the dalers to place coupon boxes in their stores near the soap counter. Have appropriate posters made which will explain the object, requesting that coupons be deposited for the Orphanage. Possibly some of the younger members of the community have talent and will be glad to prepare these posters.

The campaign proper will start February 1 and is scheduled to be completed by September 30. Early in October we hope to have a state-wide rally and note-burning. Will tell you more about this later. Mr. Bowman, the representative of the premium department, has expressed a desire to ride to this rally astride the hood of the new Bonus Truck, and we are determined that he shall have this pleasure.

Finally, do not wait until February to get started. Begin now. See that your local dealers are prepared to co-operate. Have the posters and coupon boxes ready and placed in the stores. Get your local editors to give publicity to the campaign. Write your friends. Get the young people interested. There are various and sundry suggestions which could and will be made from time to time, but we hope our friends will assume their responsibility and give their whole-hearted support and co-operation by working out effective methods for the success of this big coupon drive.

WE MUST WIPE OUT OUR INDEBTEDNESS AND WE NEED THE NEW TRUCK. We MUST WIN. REMEMBER THE MINIMUM WILL BE 1,000,000 COUPONS PER MONTH AND THAT THE NOTE-BURNING IS SCHEDULED FOR EARLY OCTOBER.

I could not close this article without thanking you sincerely for your part in helping us secure the big General Electric refrigerator. It is wonderful and did not cost us a penny—only Octagon coupons.

Jackson, Miss.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICE AT BENTON

Rev. G. E. Allan, the resourceful pastor at Benton, Mississippi Conference, closed the old year and began the new with a Watch-Night Service at Benton. This was the first step in the Spiritual Life plan and the following unique and suggestive Acrostic was used:

N—Now is the time for all men to come to the aid of their Church.
E—Every effort should be made to make this the best year of our lives, individually and as a Church.
W—Ways should be found to use our time, to the best advantage, for the glory of God and the advancement of His Kingdom.
Y—Years—yes, this New Year offering 365 days filled with opportunities for service and for praise.
E—Eternity cannot be measured by mortal man, but if we measure up to God's standard, for man, then no regrets shall be ours as the years of eternity roll on and on and on.
A—All together we shall win if our trust is stayed on Him.
R—Righteousness not only exalts a nation but a community also; may our Nation, our State and our community be more righteous throughout this new year.
1—One, yes, I am only one but I'll do my best.
9—Nine, like minded as me, would be nine times my strength you see, for it was nine, plus
3—Three, that Christ used as a nucleus for the beginning of our Christianity.
1—One was a traitor who proved untrue; God forbid that this should ever be said of me or of you.

THE CHURCH PAPER

Dr. L. O. Hartman, editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, Mass., enumerates fourteen points of value in the church press, as follows:

1. I mention first the fact that the religious weekly voices the call of God both to the individual and to society, reiterating that summons to Christian idealism every seven days throughout the year.

2. The church paper promotes fellowship and solidarity among the followers of Jesus Christ, and today is paving the way for Christian unity throughout the world.

3. Through the pages of such a periodical, instruction is furnished in Christian principles through editorials, contributions, poetry and devotional articles.

4. The religious press also seeks week by week to apply gospel teachings to concrete situations as they develop in the progress of the world.

5. The church paper furnishes information on great issues, eliminating the false propaganda that in our time fills the pages of many daily newspapers.

6. The religious weekly interprets the events occurring throughout the world from the angle of Christian teaching, and points out their meaning for the kingdom of God.

7. In the columns of such a publication the relations between religion and the philosophic, scientific and social movements of the day are shown and explained.

8. The church paper is also a watch-tower from which the watchman reports the advances and retreats of the Christian forces in their battle for the things of the spirit, discerns the signs of the times, and warns the followers of Jesus against impending dangers.

9. The Christian weekly is, moreover, a defender of the faith, attacking the menacing evils of the day in the fields of thought and action. It is unalterably opposed to the pagan spirit in its every manifestation.

10. Sometimes we hear the religious journal described as the "spearhead" of organized Christianity, because it does a pioneering work, espouses reforms, many of them unpopular, and seeks to lead Christian forces into the new paths of genuine progress.

11. Through the mails week by week comes this printed message of gospel teaching to help parents in the cultivation of home religion. In the pages of the church paper are to be found wholesome, inspiring aritcles and stories, good reading for children, and editorials on the problems that today beset family life and threaten its welfare.

12. The Christian newspaper clears the pathway for the preacher by imparting to his members important information about the Church and the Kingdom enterprise and stimulating generally an interest in religion and the life of the spirit.

13. A Christian newspaper chronicles the happenings of the religious world, furnishes news about churches and leaders, and reports the progress of evangelistic and missionary endeavors.

14. Through the columns of the religious press is furnished the very best publicity for Christian enterprises, such as universities, hospitals, homes, and other institutions dependent upon the good-will and generosity of the Christian public.

TRIBUTE TO REV. C. C. EVANS

As his official Board and friends, we want to render our tribute of respect and esteem to the memory of our dear pastor, Brother Evans, a man of fine character, loving disposition and a great friend; a beacon light to his people, ever endeavoring to lead them to a higher life and towards that City whose builder and maker is God.

Out in the cold Christmas night alone with God, stepping out into that beautiful Home, the home of the soul, that he preached so eloquently and earnestly about a few weeks ago.

We offer this our tribute of love. His memory and soul-stirring sermons will linger with us for years to come. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to his loved ones, praying they may be sustained and kept by that power that is a refuge in time of need.

CHURCH EXTENSION

The Board of Church Extension regrets that it is necessary to announce to the Church that receipts from assessments from the several Annual Conferences for the year 1930 fell to such a low figure that the Board finds that it has granted at the last Annual Meeting and at the Appropriations Committee meeting, September 5, 1930, donations sufficient to consume all the donation money in hand. The financial condition throughout the territory covered by our Church has brought embarrassment to many congregations which, under normal conditions, could finish their enterprises without aid, but whch, because of these circumstances, are making earnest appeals to the Board for loans and donations to save their property.

The purposes of this communication are to inform the Church of the real situation, so that the churches whose applications have been declined may understand why they did not receive aid, and to urge all congregations to make an earnest appeal for liberal contributions to the Kingdom Extension Offering.

T. D. ELLIS, Secretary.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING

Those of us who have been in the district for the past three years have become accustomed to the fine district meeting sponsored by the Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District. But his most ardent supporters were not prepared for the most excellent meeting of the district board of stewards and charge lay leaders which he called to meet in the Ponchatoula Methodist Church, Tuesday, January 6, 1931. From the beginning to the end the meeting was a success.

The apportionments were received and handed down to the several charges on the double ratio of membership and pastor's salary. The presiding elder's salary was fixed at 13 per cent of the preacher's salary. After these routine matters of the district board of stewards were finished, the other interests of the church were presented.

Rev. J. Henry Bowden represented the Board of Christian Education and brought a short message on "Paying the Apportionments in Full." Rev. Walter C. Scott represented the Board of Missions and distributed literature and took orders for literature from each pastor in the district.

At the close of the conference the ladies of Ponchatoula served a chicken dinner which was enjoyed by all present.

One of the outstanding attractions of the meeting was the inspiring message brought to us by Dr. Theodore Copeland, 3710 Euclid Avenue, Dallas, Texas. Dr. Copeland remained during the conference and preached Tuesday night at the Methodist Church in Ponchatoula. The writer of this article heard many very fine words of commendation for the two messages of Dr. Copeland. We trust that Dr. Copeland will visit our district again.

Another event of importance was the passing of a resolution offered by Rev. J. B. Grambling to this effect, that the Baton Rouge District adopt as its slogan for 1931, "Make Church Membership Mean More," and use this slogan in all our advertising and church literature.

We believe that the Baton Rouge District has its best year ahead of it. If the beginning is any criterion of the ending, then surely this will be a successful year, for we have made a good beginning.

J. HENRY BOWDON, Secretary.

THE MONROE DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING

If attendance and interest mean anything to the material and spiritual life of a district, Monroe is off to a banner year. At the annual district stewards' meeting, January 7, every minister, with the exception of Rev. R. W. Tucker, who was ill, was present with his district steward or a member of the board of stewards. The new ministers present were: Louis Hoffpauir, West Monroe; Bill Pomeroy, Delhi; H. W. Cudd, Sterlington; R. R. Branton, Epps, and R. A. Bozeman, Oak Grove.

Important discussions centered around the apportionments as the pastors received their quotas for the year. Rumors of "depression" and "hard times" were insinuated, as some expressed regret that reductions were not greater, but all concurred in the high resolve to do their best to make the district as near one hundred per cent as possible.

Dr. W. W. Drake and Rev. W. H. Giles spoke on the new financial plan, and each expressed a belief that it was possible for every church to reach its goal if it only entered into the work with confidence and the spirit of sacrifice.

Miss Elizabeth Langford spoke enthusiastically of her work with the young people of the conference. She now represents all of the young people's work which was provided for by the merging of Sunday school, Epworth League and education boards.

Mr. W. B. Clark was appointed district lay leader, succeeding Mr. S. M. McReynolds, who was elected Conference lay leader at Alexandria.

The Dual Extension work, through the Sunday school, was ably reviewed by Mrs. D. C. Warner of First Church, Monroe, who has the reputation of being one of the most efficient missionary superintendents in the district.

THE CHURCH IS BUILT ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Wesley knew it, hence he said of those preachers who did not study constantly, "Ought not shame to cover your faces?" Hence he built a school before he ever had a Church. Hence he gave life long encouragement to the Methodist woman who organized the first Sunday School in history.

Methodism has always known it, hence the Church has gone hand in hand with the school—has covered the world with institutions of learning—has even made a school out of every congregation bearing its name.

Christian Education is much more than conducting schools for literary and theological instruction. It is a process of training every soul in and for the Christian life.

It must precede evangelism. Indeed, it is evangelism. Practically no persons are converted who have not first been trained in religion. Eight or nine out of ten converts come from the training processes of Sunday School or Epworth League.

If Methodism grows—even lives—it must spread its whole program of Christian Education.

The Kingdom Extension Offering will do this. Bring it to the attention of all the people. Inform them thoroughly. Give every member an opportunity to make an offering.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON BENEVOLENCES

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH
Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tennessee

The presiding elder, Rev. E. C. Gunn, announced the district Kingdom Extension Institute for January 30, at Winnsboro. Rev. Louis Hoffpauir set the challenging note for the year in his devotional talk when he spoke of "Service Out of the Overflow." It was the prayer of everyone present that the spirit of loving service might flow through every channel of church life in a large measure in 1931.

B. C. TAYLOR, Secretary.

RUSTON DICTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING

A meeting of pastors, district stewards and lay leaders for the Ruston District was held in the Trinity Methodist Church, at Ruston, on Wednesday, January 7, 1931. There were about fifty present, most of the charges being represented.

The meeting was opened at 10 o'clock a. m. Rev. George Fox of Hodge led the devotional.

Rev. R. M. Brown took the chair and after the election of a secretary the business of the day was taken up. Rev. R. M. Brown explained the new financial system.

The apportionments for benevolences for the various charges were made and the salary of the presiding elder was fixed.

A committee was appointed by the presiding elder, in accordance with a prevailing motion, to study the various charges in the district with a view to more equitable distribution of the benevolent apportionments. The committee composed of Rev. K. W. Dodson, Judge E. L. Walker and Hon. W. J. Hammons are to have their report ready at the meeting of the District Conference.

Judge Walker, district leader, presided during the remainder of the session, and gave an excellent talk on stewardsip and the duties of the various officers under the "new plan."

A delicious luncheon was served by the ladies of Ruston. During the luncheon hour, Dr. W. W. Drake of First Church, Monroe; Mr. S. M. McReynolds, Conference lay leader, and Rev. A. K. McLellan brought us helpful messages.

In addition to the regular official members there was a number of visitors present, including several ladies.

Rev. Robt. M. Brown announced the Mission Institute to be held at Gibsland, on January 29, 1931, and asked all present to take the announcement as official notice.

Rev. George Fox, Rev. J. T. McVey, and Rev. Cleanth Brooks were introduced as the new pastors of the district.

The meeting was closed with prayer by Dr. Brooks of Haynesville.

R. H. STAPLES, Secretary.

IN THE HEART OF LOUISIANA

Our district stewards' meeting has come and gone. Those preent: Wadley, Hunter, Sanders, Ernest, Rogers, Few, Butler, Hardee and Breedlove. Nine.

The regular business was transacted. The apportionments were handed down on the basis of membership and salary. Has anyone found a more equitable way?

The preachers and the district board of lay activities were invited to sit in with the district stewards. Preachers present: Holmes, Wilson, Foster, Nease, Hines, Knight, Atkinson, White, Lipscomb, Joyner, Cross, Anders, Boddle, Dring, Baggett and McLellan, sixteen. In addition, quite a number of lay leaders, both men and women, were present.

Hon. T. W. Holloman explained the new legislation adopted by the General Conference in regard to lay activities, stressing the feature that the board of stewards constitute the local board of lay activities.

Dr. W. W. Holmes spoke on the merger of the three boards into the Board of Christian Education and what it should mean for the local church as they carry out the idea into all of their activities.

Miss Elizabeth Langford spoke of the "Young People's Movement in the Church," and what this new year should mean to us as we put our young people to work.

Strong resolutions were adopted pledging the district lay movement to promote Christian stewardship, men's work, boys' work, full payment of all benevolences, personal evangelism, lay speaking, training of church officers and all other interests of the church in co-operation with the agencies promoting these interests in the local church.

"We know one thing is always true:
Achiement knows no bar nor fetter.
What man has done, that man can do,
And usually a little better."

The motto for the year is: "Everything in Full." Place high thy standard, and with a firm tread and fearless eye press steadily onward. Persevere, and thou wilt surely reach it.

Distribute the literature on the benevolences. Secure your pledges. Collect them through the year. Success will attend you.

January is church loyalty month. February is survey month. March is the month for missions. April is revival month. May is Christian Education month. June is laymen's month. Remember on June 14 a layman is to speak in every pulpit. Follow the program of the church.

DEDICATION ADDRESS

A MEMORIAL TO MY MOTHER, MRS. SUSAN L. MONTGOMERY

By Arthur Montgomery

(Rev. P. H. [illegible] upon [illegible] appointment to Madison station, Mississippi Conference, visited Mr. Arthur Montgomery, a successful business man of Atlanta, Ga., and Mr. Montgomery contributed most of the funds required for the erection of the beautiful new church at Madison. Upon the dedication of the church building, Mr. Montgomery delivered the following eulogy, which is replete with sentiments that express the affection of many another son for his own mother.—Editor.)

Not far from where I now stand my eyes were opened upon a beautiful world. My advent was timed to nature's awakening of spring—the trees were budding, the grass greening, and the flowers beginning to bloom. It was here that my infant feet made their first impression on the clay of this soil—here that I lived my childhood, my youth and my adolescence. Attaining the period of early manhood here, I saw a beacon and heard a call to other fields. In responding to that call I carried with me the sweet memories of my home, my friends and associates, and that sentiment has adhered tenaciously to me to the present day.

Looking backward upon the days of my early life, reviewing the many scenes and rehearsing the happy events, I feel my spirit rejuvenated, and I am made to feel the exuberance of youth and wish I were a child again.

Retrospecting this period of half a century past brings to me picturesque panorama, like the scenario of a moving picture, in the background of which I see my old home and the surrounding playgrounds. I imagine I can hear the sweet song birds send their carols of peace and good will to all mankind. I imagine I see the apple blossoms in the old garden vieing with the sweet-scented roses diffusing their fragrance on the early morning breezes.

But paramount to all these I see in the forefront of that picture the face of a beautiful woman on whose cheeks still linger a trace of youth. While that face is furrowed by the bitter tears of grief, sorrow and bereavement it yet radiates a character of strength, and patience, faith and hope.

I see this good woman again, each Sabbath morning leading her little family of paternal orphans to the Union Sunday school in the old Methodist Church. I see her kneeling around the chancel of that old church, in communion and fellowship with other Christians, commemorating the dark scenes in the Garden of Gethsemane.

As our reel unfurls, it develops that same good woman in her Samaritan work, visiting the sick, consoling the distressed, and measuring out comfort to the bereaved.

This Christian woman was not a member of the Methodist Church. Adhering loyally to the tenets of the church of her ancestors, but without a single sectarian thought, she affiliated with every church of the Christian faith. She was always among the first to greet the incoming pastor and welcome his family, ever ready to cheer the disconsolate, encouraging the doubtful and building bulwarks against the skeptical, because she herself was a Christian.

And that good Christian woman was my mother.

She that nurtured me from weakness unto strength, nursed me from sickness unto health. She it was at the close of each day, when the shadows of darkness hung over our happy home, lay me in my little bed and taught my lisping lips the "Now I lay me down to sleep."

My mother was my Guardian Angel—ever watchful that she sound the siren of warning when danger threatened. She blazed the highway which I must tread and swept aside the jagged stones that might bruise my feet.

She placarded the paths of rectitude, lest I stray into the broadway of turpitude. She closed the prison gates ahead of me and planted the red flag at the gates of the alluring gardens of temptation. She spun the first thread of a character she coveted for me, and with her prayers wove that into a cable she thought would sustain me. And if today that character were on trial before a jury of my peers, and were found wanting, I could not enter a single plea in mitigation for my derelictions, or traverse my mother's prayers; but say it is but the weakness of the flesh.

If in their research any strength be found, infinitesimal as it might be, I should claim no credit to myself but say it obtained by the grace of God and my mother's prayers.

More than two decades have passed since deaath closed her eyes, sealed her lips, and silenced her voice, yet that voice reverberates in my ears still and I can hear my mother's call.

Oft times at the end of a strenuous day, when I can close down my desk and my feet homeward trend, I meditate, for I am mindful that in that happy home there yet remains the vacant chair of my mother. And when the nocturnal shades shut out the light of the receding day, and nature calls me to rest and slumber, like Jacob I dream a dream.

I can see the gates of heaven ajar—I see the angels descending and hover around my couch. I recognize the faces of the loved ones gone before, but pre-eminent among these I see the face of my mother, reflecting the glories of her heavenly home. When I seem to embrace her I am restrained by the forbidding hands of the angels, while my mother touches the silver chords of her golden harp, attuned to the melodies of the angels' anthem, singing, "Holy, Holy, Holy."

I realize my utter unworthiness to touch the hem of her celestial robe, yet I importune her, "Mother, if you cannot come down and take me again in your arms as of yore, take my spirit to your bosom and waft it to your heavenly home." And her sweet voice answers: "Nay, nay, my son, not now, but soon."

This may appear a phantasy, but to me it is sufficiently realistic to bring to me an inspiration, and that inspiration was to build unto my mother a monument.

"I had thought it to be of stone, and on the scroll of that shaft would I carve her name, but again I heard a voice saying, "Not so, my son, not so. Build not unto the temporal that which is ephemeral, but rather unto the spiritual that which endureth forever."

My interpretation was that her monument should be a temple unto God, on which though the rains descend, the tempests assail or fires destroy, the Church of God like the Sphinx would arise again and live forever. With the culmination of this thought, could I find a more fitting place for that monument than on the very spot on which she had worshipped, or in the community where she had lived the major portion of her three-score years and ten?

And the answer came to me.

In a conference with your enthusiastic and energetic pastor, our inspirations met, and I said I should be glad to take a part in building this church as a memorial to my mother.

I said that I was opposed to individualizing the church and thought everyone should have the opportunity of becoming interested. That the "widow's mite," though it purchase but a single brick, should have no less interest than he who might buy many bricks—and now it is my pleasure to place my little brick beside that of the widow's mite, a memorial to my mother.

To this end and in furtherance of the memorial I have caused to be cast a tablet on which is embossed her name. I have required the face of that name to be polished to a brilliancy commensurate to her life and character on earth, and in committing to you this church and that tablet, may I not hope that when I shall have reached the end of my trail and my last sun has set beyond the horizon of my destiny, that some one will brush the dust from that tablet, and wipe from the face of that name time's erosive mold—and remember it is a symbol of a son's reverence and affection for his mother, and an expression of gratitude to Almighty God, that he gave me a Christian Mother?

By Rev. S. J. Davies

The press, the pulpit, and the people are all discussing the economic conditions of our present day. I shall not attempt in this brief bit of writing to state causes or suggest remedies, but merely attempt to say something that possibly may be helpful and constructive for better conditions. This old world has been wagging along for a considerable period of years, having had eras of oppression and depression, cycles of good times and hard times, days of prosperity and adversity, of wars and peace, yet we are living, the most of us, in a fair measure of peace and comfort. Grumbling, complaining, fretting never get us anywhere, only burdens the mind and flesh and taxes the nerves. I do now exhort you, beloved, to hold fast to the things that are true and tried, that have stood the test, the storm and stress of the past. Don't lose faith nor courage. Don't play the baby when we need men. We all need anchorage in a storm, and the old ship of state is drifting, and if we are not careful Zion's bark will be caught in the cross currents. In spite of the wonderful discoveries made by modern chemists in the way of new remedies for human ills, I notice that the old-time medicines, quinine and calomel, turpentine and paregoric, are still standards and are administered by physicians. So in the body economic and social. Faith and work; good, honest, faithful toil will help. Let the psychology of the times take care of itself, as it surely will; only be sure each one of us stands securely and trustfully in our assigned place in life, believing in the goodness and wisdom of Almighty God.

The young woman, thinking, thinking of life, destiny and purpose burst into tears. What is it all about, she asked? The mystery of our mortal being is the question concerning which many have wept and more will continue to weep as the years unfold. Yet life has a purpose, but never a selfish, self-centered purpose. The springs of joy, contentment, and right vision of things, will surely become arid and barren if their upstreamings are spent only on self. I was thinking, last Sunday, while the teacher was teaching, how universal are the big, common, indispensable things that maintain life. The atmosphere enfolds the whole round world in its ethereal cloak, the waters of earth cover three-fourths of its surface, light from sun, stars, and moon so widely dispersed, and now music and speech from countless microphones fill and flood the many homes of our land. There are too many big things about me and too many ceaseless, busy activities among peoples and nations, for me at least, to waste time in morbid brooding and vain questionings. I am not sitting by as an idle, disinterested spectator, watching the crowd march by, but in some measure at least, I am part of the thing and trying to keep step with the music. Shakespeare wrote many magnificent plays, but he never dreamed a drama so big, so filled with human interest, so replete with sorrow and joy, so everlastingly busy, and projected on so vast a stage, as this modern, present-day life we are living. It's big enough and attractive enough to hold your attention, little sister, and that of the rest of us, and keep us from idle, useless broodings over mysterious problems that find no solution. Sharing and serving is the essence and meaning of a useful, happy life.

YOUTH'S OPPORTUNITY

O youth! the doors will open wide
 To various tasks that you can do,
Heed well the opportunity
 To choose a work that keeps you true;
And then determined, do your best,
For labor earns an honest rest.

O youth! strike out into the field
 While hand is firm and eye is keen.
Keep faith and love within your heart,
 And mind and body pure and clean;
Be on your guard each day through life
To meet and conquer every strife.

O youth! quick colored moments fly;
 Each breath's a tick from clock of time;
If cruel stones should bruise your feet
 As recklessly the hill you climb,
Reach out and take the Master's hand;
Your stumblings he will understand.

HOW POINSETTIA GOT ITS NAME AND WORK OF POINSETT

The brilliant red flower coming into more and more use for Christmas decorations was named poinsettia in honor of Joel Poinsett, a remarkable South Carolinian, who introduced the plant from Mexico and grew it profusely at his home in Charleston and near Georgetown. The English call it Mexican flame leaf, and the Mexicans call it flora de paca.

In recent years the poinsettia has rivaled in popularity the holly for Christmas decorations. Perhaps the reason for this is that it can be so easily produced in velvet, muslin or even paper bringing it within reach of the purse that could not afford the precious hot house plants nor rare holly. Recalling the man for whom it was named the happier thought would be that its popularity is due to its unusual brilliance.

Poinsett was born in Charleston, South Carolina, of Huguenot descent. Like so many of the colonial gentlemen he was educated in England, and studied both medicine and law. Physically he was never strong; but having the good fortune to possess a wealthy physician for a father, he was able to travel through many countries in search of health. It was sheer will power that enabled him to do whatever he wished; for he said a few years before he died that in spite of the doctors he had lived comfortably with one lung for over 60 years.

Next to his love of adventure, probably came his love for flowers and conversation. He was able to indulge himself in both of these when he left Mexico and bought a home in his beloved Charleston. It was a small house surrounded by a garden and a grove of oaks. For many years "Poinsett's Grove" was a place of great interest to strangers, but that all consuming force, Progress, has devoured the house and the grove is now almost impossible to locate.

Soon after his marriage, Poinsett moved near Georgetown, S. C., to White House, a plantation owned by his wife. There he gave himself over to the joy of horticulture and between 1830 and 1835 he planted a garden noted for its beauty and value. He had brought from Mexico many rare plants and cultivated them there. Among these were the red and yellow mimosa called Goat's Beard; and the so called Mexican rose, a species of hibiscus, which changes from white to pink to red in a single day, and also the poinsettia.

This wonderful garden boasted of a wealth of roses, camellia bushes, pryus japonica, magnolias and a hedge of azaleas between the house and the river, which was so brilliant that horses making a turn in the road would often shy as they came suddenly in sight of the blaze of color.

Nothing is left of the garden in which Poinsett labored so diligently and of which he was so proud. Even the house is gone. Sparks from a forest fire about three years ago burned it to the ground. Possibly the moss-draped trees along the river bank in front of the lawn are the only remaining witnesses of the happy life of the Poinsetts at White House.

He often visited his friend, Dr. William Wallace Anderson at his colonial home, Hill Crest, at Statesburg, S. C. It was while on one of these visits that he died and was buried in the Anderson family plot in the nearby church yard. It is a spot most fitting for such a lover of nature. Here in the shadow of the little but beautiful Episcopal church, Church of the Holy Cross, surrounded by native growth, is his old-fashioned tomb.—From the Southern Christian Advocate.

A FIRE THAT ILLUMINATES LIFE'S SHADOWS

By Mary Belle Poole-Mason

"When you and I were seventeen,
And Life and Love was all."

It was in a little town way up in Mississippi, and the boy from Kentucky, who had improvised a sled with jingle bells, and all, and came with Frank, so tall and handsome, to take my beautiful sister Annie (who went so soon afterwards to live with the angels in Heaven), to his birthday party at their house on the hill that was always so full of hospitality and charm. The house was all decorated with crimson and green holly and silver-white mistletoe. His beautiful mother (who had always been associated in my mind with a queen on a throne, with her snow-white hair and young face, her silks and satins, and diamonds) met us at the door. We went into the brilliantly illuminated hall and there stood Henry, a boy who was always just on the outside edge of our crowd. His father kept a bakery or something and we, a horrid little bunch of snobs, made him feel it. But the boy from Kentucky, with that greatness of spirit that always characterized him, always treated him as a friend and equal, and had him here as a guest of honor on his birthday night. I gave Henry a stiff little nod, but my sister Annie, who was always an angel on earth before she went to be one in Heaven, smiled kindly and said, "How are you, Henry?" A pleased flush came over his thin face.

Oh! that grogeous night. The promenading all around the block, which was quite the style then. At 12 o'clock supper was announced, and the boy from Kentucky came to me and said a little diffidently (for I knew he had asked every girl there to go in with Henry and been refused), "You don't mind Henry going with us, do you?" And just because I was so happy, and being a bit more democratic or maybe a bit more diplomatic and a bit more popular too, but most of all to please the boy from Kentucky, I marched grandly in with the boy from Kentucky on one side and Henry on the other to take the place of honor at the head of the table. I can see that table now with its crystal pitchers, gleaming silver, fruit and flowers, and every good thing on earth to eat. As I stood there a beautiful dream grew in my heart, for I thought through all the coming years I would stand or sit at a table with the boy from Kentucky and maybe after a while a round table with him at the head and me at the foot with bright little faces seated all around us. Oh! boy from Kentucky (God bless him), somewhere in this great wide world today, you'll go back and look into your heart of that night and will acknowledge that your dreams then were just the same as mine, and you'll "Think what might have been, Lorena, if you and I had only known." But Fate tricked us. She often does.

Then the ride home over the frozen snow. The moon had a great golden round face and the stars twinkled and winked for very joyousness.

Suddenly came a shrill fire alarm on the frosty air. "Oh, Hunter," I said to the boy from Kentucky, "let's go to the fire." "All right, girlie," and we were off. We came to an obscure part of the town, and there stood a dingy three-story brick house all aflame. The fire equipment was poor, for the town was small, but the firemen were doing their best to extinguish the fire. Suddenly I gave a scream of terror, for standing at a three-story window was a girl, hardly older than myself. She had on a pink kimona with big flowers all over it. Her hair was reddish gold and hung all around her face. I thought her marvelously beautiful—I, so young and innocent, I did not know the kind of girl she was. I heard the boy from Kentucky call out, "Come on Henry," and then to my horror I saw them start climbing the narrow iron railing that led up to that window. I'd never been much of a praying girl—just to fall on my knees by my bed at night and mumble a few words, often half asleep before I finished, but now I knew somewhere there was a God and he alone could help. So I closed my eyes tight, but opened them just a moment to see that they had reached the window. I heard the boy from Kentucky say: "Can you open the window, little girl?" And she put up her thin arms and lifted the sash. The boy from Kentucky caught her in his arms and Henry caught the boy in his arms and they began that perilous journey down. I closed my eyes again—I couldn't look—I just prayed out loud: "Oh, God! Dear God! please save the boy from Kentucky and Henry and the girl." And in a little while I heard wild cheering and yelling, and I opened my eyes and there they were safe on terra firma. The boy from Kentucky holding the girl in his arms and Henry holding the boy in his arms. Someone took the girl, and I rushed forward (all my snobbishness forgotten) and threw my arms around both the boy from Kentucky and Henry, and said, "Oh, boy! you were wonderful." But he laughed and said, "Why, Henry did it all, I didn't do anything." That was the way he was always, and how was I to know after the wheels of Life had turned many times this Henry boy was to do me a great favor that helped me on the sometimes hard journey.

When we reached home mother was waiting at the door with a rather anxious look. "Why, how late you are, dear." "Mother, we've been to a fire, and Oh, mother, won't you make me a pink kimona with big flowers all over it?" "We'll see about it," she said with a smile, "but now you must go to bed, it is almost morning." And again, I called out, "Oh mother, I'm so happy, I hope I'll live forever." And I went to sleep and dreamed I was sailing over a blanket of snow with the boy from Kentucky, a flying angel before us with flapping wings and a pink kimona with big flowers all over it.

A LITTLE BOY'S SERMON

One Monday a little boy, who had been to church the day before, thought he would have a church of his own. He arranged his four sisters in front of him, then stood up on a stool and spoke very loud.

"This is to be a 'mind mother' sermon. There are two ways in which to mind everything she says:

"Mind her the first time she speaks. When mother says, 'Mary please bring some coal or water," or 'Run to the shop,' don't answer: 'In just a minute, mother.' Little folks' minutes are a great deal longer than the one the clock ticks off. When you say, 'Yes,' with your lips, say 'Yes' with your hands and feet. Don't say 'Yes' and act 'No.' Saying 'Yes, in a minute,' is not obeying, doing 'Yes' is. Mind cheerfully. Don't scowl when you have to drop a book, or whine because you can't go and play."—The Watchman.

THE POHIBITION NEW YEAR

These forceful, statements from President Hoover, and Mr. Morgan's vigorous assertion that the Eighteenth Amendment was the third greatest contribution to child welfare in human history, speak volumes in favor of retaining and making more effective temperance laws.

The Wickersham Commission's report on Law Enforcement, and the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the novel decision of the Jersey Judge are awaited with interest. It is not expected that these will retard a progressive improvement in temperance law enforcement.

The new temperance year should be one of good results. The American Federation of Labor, and the American Legion, at their annual gatherings voted down motions for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment; while the intrepid Senator Morris Sheppard says, "All the Morrowites and all the Raskobites aud all the Bar Associations cannot prevail against Prohibition." Down with the liquor menace and up and on with the Constitution and the flag!

CALIFORNIANS AT THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Bishop Arthur J. Moore, D.D., LL.D., and the Rev. W. H. Nelson, D.D., were guests of the Louisiana Annual Conference at its recent session.

Bishop Moore, who was elected to the episcopacy at Dallas last May, preached stirring sermons afternoon and evenings during the Conference and edified the throngs of people who waited upon his ministry. He is a great evangelistic preacher and his election to the bishopric has not cooled his ardor nor lessened his zeal for the lost. He is the same earnest, powerful gospel preacher that he was in his notable pastorates at Travis Park, San Antonio, and Birmingham, Ala.

Dr. Nelson, who was born in the city of New Orleans, was at the Conference and spent several days in different sections of the State gathering data and, as he said, getting the atmosphere necessary to write the history of Centenary College. It was the editor's and manager's privilege to enjoy several days of fellowship with him while he was going through the Advocate files. Through many discouragements Dr. Nelson has stood out on the far western front and carried on in the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Kingdom of Heaven. Declining offers of much larger salary, he has remained faithful to the task and with heroic devotion and unusual ability he has placed the Pacific Methodist Advocate, of which he is editor, among the best religious periodicals in the Church. The Church is to be congratulated that Bishop Moore, with his fine enthusiasm and aggressive evangelism, is seconded in his work on the Pacific coast by the consecrated pen of Dr. Nelson.

MR. EUGENE PHARR PASSES

Mr. Eugene Pharr, who died of pneumonia on Saturday, January 10, 1931, was the scion of a distinguished Methodist family. His father, the late Captain John Pharr, came to Louisiana from the Carolinas, married a Miss Andrus of Opelousas, La., and engaged in steamboating in the early days in Bayou Teche. While thus occupied he acquired large timber interests, and later in life engaged in sugar raising, having come into possession of thousands of acres of land on the Teche. He made his home at Berwick, opposite Morgan City. Captain Pharr once ran for Governor of the State of Louisiana on the Populist ticket.

Mr. Eugene Pharr was the youngest of three sons. He received his education at Centenary College and schools of note in the East. His wife, who, with several children, survive him, was a Miss Nye, daughter of Bill Nye, celebrated humorist. They have a beautiful home on Avoca Island, within sight of Morgan City.

At the time of his demise, Mr. Pharr and his two brothers were engaged in sugar raising. He was a charming gentleman and a valuable member of the Methodist Church at Morgan City, La. He will be greatly missed. His remains were interred at New Iberia, La.

Mr. Thomas W. Camp, a layman of Haynesville, La., Church, writes of his appreciation of the Advocate and urges other laymen to take and read their Conference organ. We appreciate the good words of Brother Camp and trust that the new year may bring him much happiness.

Rev. H. W. Cudd, Louisiana Conference evangelist, is now residing at 1602 North Sixth Street, Monroe, La. The brethren desiring the services of a good evangelist may address Brother Cudd at Monroe. There is no necessity for waiting until summer to have a good revival.

Dr. Clanton, a physician of Grenada, Miss., and an official member of the Methodist Church, addressed the congregation of the Methodist church at Coffeeville on a recent Sunday on stewardship. Rev. W. L. Robinson, the pastor, was absent attending the Educational Meeting at Nashville.

Rev. J. F. Campbell, pastor, Fifth Street, Meridian, publishes a most attractive church bulletin. A recent number carries the information that all the departments of the church are well organized and starting into the New Year with a determination to make progress in every way.

Bishop Dobbs is keeping busy in his episcopal district. He was scheduled to dedicate the church at Many, La., on Sunday morning, January 18, and at Winnfield on the morning of January 25. Revs. James E. Selfe, and C. C. Wier and their people are to be congratulated upon their achievements.

Rev. J. L. Jordan, local preacher, Biloxi, Miss., in renewing his Advocate subscription expresses appreciation for the paper and states that he has been reading it for more than sixty-five years. Brother Jordan is in his eighty-fifth year and we wish for him that it may be the happiest of all thus faf.

Rev. John C. Chambers writes: "Arrangements have been made for cheaper postage by using a printed envelope and having letters alike. I am asking each one interested in the work of Christian Education Boards to look for these letters and examine them. It will enable us to reach more workers at a large saving."

Mrs. Stevens, wife of Rev. J. E. Stevens, pastor at Lexington, Miss., was operated on Monday, January 12, at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis. Dr. Eugene Johnson performed the operation which was said to be a very serious one. Let prayer be made for the restoration to health of this useful companion and devoted mother.

Rev. C. F. Checlzzli, a native of Ethiopia, East Africa, a Negro who is in his seventy-second year and touring America, recently addressed both the white and colored people at Picayune, Miss. He states that his father is yet alive and is one hundred forty-four years old. Dr. Checlzzll has a number of degrees and is said to be a remarkable man.

The Mississippi Conference was well represented in Nashville, December 31-January 2, at the various Educational meetings: Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Mrs. C. F. Nesbitt, Miss Doris Alford, Prof. C. F. Nesbitt, Prof. H. C. Blackwell, A. L. Gilmore, Dr. C. A. Bowen, Dr. J. A. Smith, Rev. J. C. Chambers, O. C. Hull, S. T. Lewis, and Drs. D. M. Key, A. P. Hamilton and B. E. Mitchell.

Mrs. T. Dilworth, Aberdeen, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, writes of the benefit she receives from the Advocate and says, "Our little granddaughter finds the Home Circle page and I must read it to her just as quickly as I can." We thank Mrs. Dilworth for her kind words and wish the little granddaughter many hours of pleasure from the Home Circle page.

Rev. J. B. Shearer, pastor, Gueydan, La., has our thanks for three subscriptions to the Advocate. Mrs. Ida Doxey of Grand Chenier, is chairman of the Christian literature committee in that church, and Brother Shearer reports that we may expect some more subscriptions from there at an early date. The work on the Gueydan charge starts off with promise of a good year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Goss, members of our church at Tie Plant, Miss., have the sympathy of their friends over the death of their little son, J. L., Jr., nine years old, who died at Grenada on Christmas day. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. T. Sledge, assisted by Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder. Prof. John Rundle, superintendent of the Grenada school, also assisted in the service.

It is estimated that the overhead expense of the new Board of Christian Education will be from fifty to seventy thousand dollars less than the cost of maintaining the three former Boards of Education, Sunday School, and Epworth League. It is confidently believed that the efficiency of the work will in no wise be interfered with. This is a good example and probably some of the other causes could go and do likewise.

Mrs. C. W. Crisler, who was injured in an automobile accident soon after the Annual Conference at Vicksburg, remained in the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg for several weeks, was happily welcomed to the parsonage at Brookhaven by her many friends in that delightful pastorate. The physicians assure Dr. and Mrs. Crisler that she will suffer no permanent after effects from the accident and will soon be herself again.

The parsonage at West Point, Miss., was damaged a few days ago by the explosion of a steam cooker that was preparing orthodox Methodist chicken for the dinner of Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor. It was fortunate that no one was in the kitchen when the disaster occurred. Brother Lott does not announce his intention to purchase another steam cooker, but it goes without saying that he will find a way to continue to prove his faith by his works when it comes to eating chicken.

The Board of Stewards and the Woman's Missionary Society of the Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, tendered Dr. and Mrs. T. M. Brownlee, Bishop and Mrs. H. M. Dobbs, and Dr. and Mrs. H. T. Carley a reception in the parlors of the church on Wednesday evening, December 31. Mr. H. E. Gump, Sunday School Superintendent, writes, "Dr. Brownlee has made a fine start at Noel Memorial; good sermons, large attendance and fine impression upon the church and city."

In writing of the watch night service which was held at Picayune the pastor, Rev. W. H. Saunders, says, "A goodly number of our members spent the last two hours of the old year at the church. We watched the old year pass away and greeted the new as it crossed the line into time and on its way to eternity. We talked, sung, prayed in the spirit of worship and asked the Lord's help to open the way for the revival we so much need. We are going to do our part that it may come."

Mrs. John M. Stone, wife of Colonel John M. Stone, a distinguished former Governor of Mississippi, died at Iuka, Miss., at the ripe age of ninety years. She was a devoted member of the Methodist Church and the last rites were conducted from its altars by Rev. E. M. Shaw, her pastor. Mrs. Stone was a co-worker with Governor Stone in one of the most trying periods of the State's history. She loyally supported him in his endeavors to rebuild confidence in the State Government after a period of misrule.

Rev. W. R. Lott, of West Point, in writing of the death of Mrs. Lucy Duncan DeGaris, which occurred in Baltimore, Md., Jan. 9, said: "Funeral services were conducted from the West Point Methodist Church by the pastor, assisted by Dr. J. R. Countiss. She was a daughter of the late Rev. Perry Duncan of the North Mississippi Conference and a sister of Rev. Julian S. Duncan of the same Conference. She was a graduate of Grenada College and had lived a sweet Christian life. Her mother, brothers and sisters rejoice in the life she lived."

Financial distress seems to be abroad in the land; however, it is but the manifestation of a condition that has been developing for some time. By such, attention is being called to nomenclature that is not frequently used. A bank closes because of frozen assets; then depositors are asked to freeze their deposits. An old negro whose fifty dollars were frozen did not understand what "liquidation" meant. When he studied it over he said, "It means dey 'licks' up all you has and 'dates' you back whar you wuz when you wuz first bawn."

Dr. Frank N. Parker, Dean of the Theological Department of Emory University, called at the Advocate office on Monday of this week. Dr. Parker had come in from Baton Rouge, where he attended the 100th anniversary of the founding of the First Methodist Church in the Capital City of Louisiana, of which Dr. F. L. Wells is the pastor. Dr. Parker preached on Sunday morning for Dr. Wells, and Dr. W. W. Drake preached in the evening. In spite of the inclement weather, there was a large attendance at both preaching services. Dr. Parker left New Orleans for Atlanta on Monday evening.

Captain Samuel B. Watts, Commander of First Brigade of Mississippi Confederate Veterans, died in Meridian, Miss., on January 9. Brother Watts was a faithful member of the Methodist Church and a typical gentleman of the old South. He resided in Jackson for the past few years and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah C. Watts, Jackson; three daughters, Mrs. G. S. Kendall, Meridian; Mrs. Louise Jones, Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. J. P. Ormond, Flagstaff, Arizona. Funeral services were conducted at Meridian on Saturday, January 10 by the Rtv. B. L. Sutherland, pastor of Central Methodist Church.

Rev. Charles E. Downer, who so successfully served the Terry, Miss., charge for a quadrennium 1922-26, has begun another successful term of service on the Terry charge. In a recent letter the pastor states, "We have been very cordially received over the charge and the people at each church are indicating their willingness and enthusiasm in a manner that is encouraging. The Woman's Missionary Society at Terry has been re-organized and the Auxiliary at Forrest Hill is beginning new activities. Twenty-eight members have been received into the church since the Annual Conference."

It was feared that the Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, might be discontinued, but Rev. J. L. Williams, pastor, has gotten on the ground and accomplished great good already. He says, "We have reorganized the Sunday school, the attendance is more than double since the first Sunday. More members have been received into the church than removed last year and sufficient increase in finances to offset whatever financial loss may have been incurred by removals last year. The Advocate will be placed in every home." We congratulate Brother Williams upon his fine adjustment and trust that this important field may continue to grow.

Rev C. A. Schultz, pastor Grace Church, Jackson, Miss., has been doing excellent work as Advocate representative in the Jackson district. He has written splendid letters to every pastor and every chairman of a Christian literature committee. In a report to this office he writes, "In my twenty years' pastorate I have found that every home where the Advocate was taken regularly, the pastor could always count upon the loyal and faithful support of that home in the church's program, and this alone should stimulate every pastor and his official board to look after the interest of the Advocate, to say nothing of the spiritual benefit that comes from reading that splendid organ."

The Commissions representing the North Mississippi Conference and the Mississippi Conference to select and secure funds for, a suitable memorial to the late Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, composed of Dr. R. A. Meek, Rev. J. H. Felts, Judge J. G. McGowen, Rev. M. L. Burton, W. H. Watkins and Rev. J. A. Smith, met in Jackson and organized by electing the following officers: M. L. Burton, chairman; Judge J. G. McGowen, vice-chairman, and Rev. J. A. Smith, secretary. This is an important responsibility committed into the hands of these Commissioners and it is hoped that their plans and efforts will result in erecting a worthy memorial to Bishop Galloway, the only native Mississippian ever elected to the Episcopacy.

A Jackson, Miss., daily paper, in reporting the Baptist Sunday school convention, carried the following: "Dr. Van Ness paid a deserved compliment to Mississippi's own 'big brother,' W. Fred Long, Tuesday morning, when he outlined the development of the present Conference, tracing it from the dissolution of the old International Sunday School Association, 'on whose entire staff, only one stalwart man, W. Fred Long of Mississippi, is today conducting the affairs of the Association in the proper and accustomed way.' Big brother Fred is having a glorious time at the convention, meeting and greeting a number of men and women now Baptist Sunday school leaders, who were given their first start in the work by Brother Long."

In a recent issue of the Fayette Chronicle, a report of the reception extended to Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell was carried as follows: "A reception was given on Friday night, December 12, in the Annex of the Fayette Methodist Church, in honor of Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell. Pretty Christmas features reflected additional brightness to the church. Receiving with Rev. and Mrs. Cottrell were Mrs. Lucy Kinnison, Mrs. W. H. H. Lewis, Mrs. R. T. Liddell, Mrs. G. S. Croxton, and Mrs. W. W. Ellis, with Dr. J. E. Briggs serving as toastmaster. Interesting addresses were made by Rev. and Mrs. Cottrell and Judge Corban, and a short talk was given by Mrs. W. H. H. Lewis. A delightful musical program was enjoyed during the reception, a special feature of which were songs by the High School Glee Club, piano selections by Mrs. Frank Corban, and a violin duet by Misses O'Neal and Bagley. A large gathering of members of the church and visitors attended and the reception proved a notable event, both social and spiritual."

On Sunday, November 23, 1930, MRS. MARTHA J. SHEPPARD, aged 78 years, 9 months and 22 days, passed away at her residence in Doyline, La. She was married to A. C. Sheppard, a local Methodist minister of the gospel, December 31, 1874, and to this union were born five children, Laura, who passed away in infancy; Mrs. William Ward, Garrett, Ind.; Miss Mary Sheppard, Doyline, La.; Herbert Sheppard, Coushatta, La., and Mrs. Frank Cour, Seattle, Wash. Besides her children she is survived by five grandchildren, William Sterling Ward, Marion, Ind.; James, Lester, Robert and Paul Cour, Seattle, Wash.

Her remains were interred in old Castor Cemetery, November 24, 1930, beside her beloved companion, who had long preceded her. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. V. Duplantis, Doyline Methodist Church, in his sympathetic, loving way. Loving friends and relatives covered the grave with beautiful floral offerings. A long and useful Christian life has been brought to a close. Her passing was at 11 o'clock, Sunday morning, the day and hour she loved best, as she dearly loved her church and its services. We miss her loving presence, but cannot think of her as dead, and feel that she is now happy. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

On Saturday afternoon, December 20, 1930, MRS. LELIA EDWARDS COLLINGSWORTH, died in Arcadia, La., after a sudden illness of only a few hours. Mrs. Collingsworth was the daughter of Judge Benjamin P. Edwards and Kate Pearce Edwards. Her early life was spent in Old Sparta, where she was born on July 1, 1875. She was educated in the schools of Sparta and Bienville and was converted in childhood and joined the Methodist Church. She was married on December 5, 1906, to M. O. Collingsworth. In the year 1911, Mr. and Mrs. Collingsworth, together with Judge and Mrs. Edwards, moved to Arcadia, where she has lived since that time. She was a constant member of her church and the record of her life gave emphasis to the truth and beauty of Christianity. Her every thought and deed was of unselfish love and service for others. Truly, her life was hid with Christ in God. Her devotion to her church was a real inspiration to her friends, and while she was limited in her physical strength, she served in so many ways and in every place where there was need, that she will be sadly missed in her home, in her church and in the community.

After the funeral services were held in the church in Arcadia, the remains were conveyed to the cemetery near Bienville, where another gathering of friends awaited and she was laid to rest by the side of her parents, who were highly honored citizens of this community. She leaves, besides her husband, one brother, L. D. Edwards, her uncle, Judge Stephen Pearce, of Ruston, La., and other relatives. The sympathy of many friends is extended to these.

"But loved ones in the Homeland
 Were waiting her to come
Where neither death nor sorrow
 Invades their holy home.
O dear, dear native country!
 O rest and peace above!
Christ brings us all to the Homeland
 Of his eternal love."

Her pastor,

K. W. DODSON.

Arcadia, La.

MRS. ADDIE MUGGAH GOODWILL, daughter of Dr. Thomas R. and Adeline Fash Muggah, was born at Patterson, La., June 15, 1869, and died at McComb, Miss., October 30, 1930. Her grandfather, Leonard Fash, was a pioneer Methodist in New Orleans and one of the charter members of Felicity Street Church. Sister Goodwill spent all of her childhood and youth in New Orleans. Many summers she attended the Seashore Camp Ground at Biloxi, and when about twelve years old united with the Moreau Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during the pastorate of Rev. John T. Sawyer. Brother Sawyer married her to Mr. Edgar Goodwill, of Minden, La., on April 30, 1894. After Mr. Goodwill's death, Mrs. Goodwill came to Mississippi and resided with her sister, Mrs. R. V. Dickey, at Osyka. Her life work was to serve her Lord. She gave her love, her strength and her money for his service. About a year ago at the Baton Rouge District Missionary Institute, after hearing Bishop U. V. W. Darlington present the needs for a William Tyndall Memorial Church at Vilvorde, Belgium, she cheerfully gave $1,000 as a memorial to her precious mother, who had just a few years before gone to her heavenly reward. She was an active worker in the Woman's Missionary Conference, district, zone and local church work. For four years she was superintendent of social service in the annual conference. At the time of her death she was Sunday school superintendent at the Osyka Methodist Church, which building she largely made possible (as well as the comfortable parsonage at Osyka). In her death, as in her life, she did not forget the church. She made provision that the church should be remembered through the years from part of the funds that she felt the Lord had intrusted to her care. The funeral services were held in the Methodist Church at Osyka, Miss., on Friday morning, October 31, by Rev. B. H. Williams, her pastor, with Rev. Sid Williams, pastor of the Baptist church, assisting. Amid a wealth of beautiful flowers her body was borne to New Orleans and laid to rest by the side of her beloved dead in Metairie Cemetery. Long after the flowers have faded and their fragrance has vanished away the abiding influence of the noble life of this good woman will abound in blessings to others.

FRIENDS OF MT. SEQUOYAH

Many thanks to the friends of our Western Methodist Assembly in Louisiana who sent us their Christmas dollar for Sequoyah. Not only did we appreciate the check or dollar bill, but the kind words that came with most of them.

Some of our friends who received a letter asking a gift of a dollar for Mt. Sequoyah have for some reason overlooked it, but I feel sure they will yet respond.

Come on and help us make Mt. Sequoyah a bigger Assembly, where the great programs of our Church can be put over in good shape.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creasote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Woman's Missionary Society

All Communications for this Department should be addressed to Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Fayette, Miss.

Gilbert, La., was hostess to Zone No. 2 on December 6, 1930, with sixty-two members and ten visitors present. "The Life of Christ" was given by the Little Creek Society, in the form of a cantata. Seven societies were represented and a splendid report given by each. Mrs. Hatch, district secretary, gave a general report of work done in the district and told interesting incidents witnessed at Houma during her visit there.

Additional Mississippi Conference Auxiliaries which have met all financial obligations in full are: Magee, Lauderdale, Vaughan, Carpenter and Meadville. The Brookhaven district as a whole has paid $131 more than its quota.

ZONE MEETINGS

Zone No. 2, Hattiesburg District, met at New Augusta, Deember 3, wicth the following societies represented: Piave, 9 members; Ellisville, 8; Lucedale, 4. and New Augusta, 12. important subjects discussed were: "Every woman in the Missionary Society and Their Responsibility," "Why Should a Woman Enter Service Through the Missionary Society," "Pleasure of the W. M. S. and Financial Side of the Work;" playlet, "Which Woman Are You? Do You Run from Duty as Did Jonah?" These talks were interspersed with Scripture lessons and songs. An urgent appeal was made for auxiliaries to go over the top with their pledges. The next zone meeting will be held at Ellisville. Leaksville asked for the next. This splendid report shows with what intelligence and enthusiasm this zone work is carried on.

WEAK AND RESTLESS

Georgia Lady Says She Felt Tired and Nervous.—Took Cardui, Improved.

"I was very weak," says Mrs. Thornton. "My back gave me a lot of trouble. I felt like my back was sprained. I was very nervous and restless. I did not sleep well at night. I was so tired in my back. It seemed to hurt me when I tried to turn over.

"I did not want anything to eat. I was in bad shape.

"I thought I would try some Cardui. The first bottle seemed to ease the pain some in my back. I took another bottle, and then I felt more like eating. I noticed that I had more strength and my work seemed easier. My back didn't feel so awfully bad when I had to stand. I could sleep better and felt more rested when I got up in the morning. I took six bottles of Cardui. I certainly think Cardui is a good medicine for women."

For more than fifty years, women who had suffered, or who had gotten into a run-down, weak condition, have been enthusiastic in praising Cardui for the benefits obtained from its use.

Try Cardui in your case. NC-236

Columbiana Zone meeting was held December 19, 1930, 2 p. m. The Scripture lessons were taken from Luke bearing on the birth of Jesus. Subjects discussed were: "The Value of Prayer," "What Are Our Duties and Should Be Our Attitude as Members of a W. M. S.? Mrs. Taylor Everette of Columbiana was selected zone chairman and Mrs. J. C. Bennett of Valden re-elected secretary.

My Dear Mrs. Alford: I've been thinking of you since the first. I know just how anxious you are for all the auxiliaries in the Mississippi Conference to report in full and I'm praying that the finances will be 100 per cent.

I'm happy to write you that our reports were mailed on the 15th and that we were not only on the honor roll, but 100 per cent for 1930, despite the depression and our bank failures. I am so proud of our year's work. My ladies have been wonderful—all so interested and anxious to do. We didn't miss meeting a single Monday and had such good attendance, some of the ladies driving seven miles.

We met all requirements for council certificates on our mission study, "Trailing the Conquistadores."

We are increasing our pledge for 1931 in the face of hard times and I do hope we can meet all obligations again this year, although it was a struggle this last year and am sure it will be a greater one now. Here is a plan for Faith.

We want you to know we are thinking of you and are hoping that your auxiliaries will not fail you.

With love, sincerely,

MRS. HOMER E. FRIZELL.

Vaughan, Miss.

Whereas God, in his infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst the gentle spirit of our friend and sister, Mrs. Lena McFadden Rogers, therefore be it resolved:

First: That the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church in Brookhaven, Miss., has lost one of its most loyal and devoted members. Always ready to do or to give to the very limit of her strength and means.

Second: That we shall miss her kindly presence at our meetings which she always attended when her frail body permitted.

Third: That we cherish her memory and feel confident that she is now with the loving Father in heaven, whom she loved and served in every way she could, sending lovely flowers and words of good cheer to those in trouble and sorrow, and filling her place in the church and at home as a true Christian and wife.

Fourth: That we extend to her bereaved husband and other loved ones our most sincere sympathy in this time of deep sorrow and pray that God may comfort them all.

Dear Friends: Possibly you know already that I have assumed the duties of district secretary of the Newton District.

Several months ago I was approached concerning this work, but feeling my inability refused to consider it; and it was only after much urging on the part of the past district secretary that agreed to do it.

I am not unaware of the honor that has been bestowed upon me. Neither am I unaware of the duties and responsibilities that this honor brings. But these things are overshadowed by thoughts of the joy that will be mine to have the privilege of serving you. Now, the question with me is, "Will I be worthy of this important trust?" Will you pray for me? Will you work with me? Will you hold up my hands? I must have your co-operation if the work of the Newton District is to go forward as it has done under the hands of our past efficient secretary, Mrs. Hopkins.

Let this be a personal letter to each auxiliary of the district to please send on the names of your 1931 officers so I can get my books completed soon as possible. If there's any way I can serve you I want to do it.

May happiness follow you in your work this new year. Let us all put forth our best efforts, remembering that through faith and prayer the impossible may be made possible. May this year bring a reconsecration of each member so God will honor us with a fruitful harvest.

Sincerely,

MRS. JAS. W. ABNEY.

AMERICAN TREE ASSOCIATION

My Dear Citizen: The American Tree Association invites you to join the tree planting army and take part in the plans for marking the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington.

The commission appointed by President Coolidge to arrange proper observation of the Two Hundredth Birthbay of George Washington (in 1932) has asked the American Tree Association to take charge of the Memorial Tree Planting.

The aim of the commission and of our association is to have over ten million memorial trees planted between now and 1932, and dedicated to the Father of our Country on February 22, 1932.

for ANY CHILD

WE can never be sure just what makes a child restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as your child has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea — a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Sunday was spent at Madison with Brother P. H. Grice and his folks. This is a beautiful house of worship. The arrangements are fine. It does one good to see such a building in a community like Madison. May it prove a joy and a blessing always.

The class at Millsaps College in "Religious Education in the Small Church" began the 14th. We have eighteen fine young men and women in this course. We trust they will prove real helpers to their local churches this summer.

The Sunday School Day programs will be issued so that a part of the program may be used or all of it, as each school may desire. Programs cannot be furnished as formerly. Your board regrets this very much, but there is no other way out as we see it now.

GENERAL WORKERS' COUNCIL

The twenty-second session of the General Workers' Council was, I think, the best session ever held. Because of the merger between the Epworth League leaders with that of the Sunday School leaders into one great council. The spirit of this merger was all that could be desired. It was a real great occasion. It is hoped that the Educational Association will also come into this organization.

This meeting was also great because of the large number of persons who were present to participate in the meeting. There were eleven members of the council present from the Missisippi Conference and three present members of the Educational Association.

The Missionary Conference was honored by the Council in making several of its members officers in the various associate councils. Prof. C. F. Neshitt, retiring president of the Council of Professors of Religious Education, was elected a member of the Central Council. Mrs. W. H. Watkins was elected president of the Adult Council. Miss Doris Alford was elected secretary-treasurer of the Elementary Council, and Mr. O. C. Hull was elected secretay-treasurer of the Extension Secretaries' Council.

The reports read at the Council were the best reports I have ever heard. Several of these reports should be printed so they might be used through the church. Certainly these various groups are hard at work on their task.

In the executive secretaries' group, fourteen had never met in council. This caused this group to be slow in getting under headway.

The financial depression was felt in that a large number of Elementary Superintendents were dropped from the various conferences. Many of the conference boards were facing real difficulties in trying to even hold together. Conference after conference was beginning their work in debt. This means, of course, a burden of interest, etc. This also means a curtailment of the work of these various boards.

I had told several that I thought it would take more men and money to run the Board of Christian Education than it did to run the three old boards. I was startled at the wide open spaces in the publishing house. Last year everyone was cooped up using as little room as possible and this year room has to be had and to spare. Desks and tables and typewriters and other equipment were stored in rooms waiting to be disposed off.

I had a long interview with Dr. Hogau, the treasurer, and I was dumbfounded to learn that 20 less persons were being employed and that the salary budget was $40,000 less than last year. Dr. Hogan said that if the present rate of expenditures was held to by the various departments that there would be a saving of something like $70,000. Dr. Bowen reported that with the publication of the Epworth Era added to the budget that the editorial department was running on a budget of $4,000 less than the year before. How they have been able to do this is beyond me, but I am more than delighted and pleased that it is so.

The publishing house is in good shape. Mr. Howard told me that their business for December was $4,000 more than for December a year ago. The house is surely making every effort to serve the church and make good at it.

There was a joint meeting between the Educational Association, the Epworth League leaders and the Sunday School Council. Bishop Mouzon presided. This was a most happy occasion. We all felt that these joint meetings were most helpful.

The Publishing House secured the singers of Fiske University to give a program for our entertainment and profit in Wightman Chapel, Scarritt College. This was a program of negro spirituals and was greatly enjoyed by all. The heads of the various departments made a most favorable impression upon those attending the meetings.

Rev. Walter Towner has been selected to head the Department of Young People's Work. He made a most favorable impression. It is hoped that this department will function so that the work of the young people will be more far-reaching than it ever could have been otherwise.

A mill will not turn without the power. A mill will not turn out meal without being fed the corn. Now we have the mill, the power and the meal. These three, but the greatest of these is the meal. In the kingdom on earth we have organization, spiritual power and Christian character, these three, but the greatest of these is Christian character.

It seems that for several years we have been placing the emphasis on organization. No one would deny that we need organizations. God does his work through the most perfect organization, goverend by His laws, that can be found today. There is no lost motion, useless duplication or troublesome overlapping in His organization. The Holy Spirit came on Pentecost when that group of devout souls came to be perfectly organized. However important organization may be we can place the major emphasis there until we come to the place where we spend all our time organizing something or turning over an already lifeless organization.

In order for our organizations to be effective they must be empowered. There must be a spiritual dynamic. Often we are running our machinery by mere material power. This being the case, the ongoing of all our intricate machinery has become a bore and an unhappy task. There is no passion there. We are lost in the dense fog of technique. We are blinded in the dazzling reflection of our own well shined machine. Our ears are stopped by the thundering of our own mill. In the meantime a lost, suffering, heartbroken world goes by our doors on its way to an awful doom. We need to have eyes to see and see; ears to hear and to hear. May the passion that Jesus had when he organized his disciples and sent them out tow and two into all the cities be kindled again in our hearts by the power of the Holy Spirit. This shall come when love replaces fear, suspicion, hatred, selfishness and material greed and becomes

When people experience distress two hours after eating—suffer from heartburn, gas, indigestion—nine times out of ten it's excess acid that's causing their trouble.

The best way—the quickest way to correct this is with an alkali. And Phillips Milk of Magnesia is an alkali, in the harmless, most pleasant and palatable form. It's the form physicians prescribe; which hospitals use; which millions have come to depend upon in over 50 years of steadily increasing use.

A spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water neutralizes many times its volume in excess acid; and does it at once. In five minutes, the symptoms of excess acid disappear. To know this perfect way is to be through with crude methods forever.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. A less perfect product may not act the same. All drug stores have the generous 25c and 50c bottles. Full directions for its manay uses are always in the package.

the flaming radiance of our whole being.

When our organizations are thus empowered the unsaved souls and lives shall pass into the kingdom of our Master and become stalwart Christian characters. I pray and ask you to join me in praying that the whole program of Christian education will not lose its heart, its passion, its spirit.

R. G. LORD,
Executive Secretary.

EPWORTH LEAGUES, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERNCE

Dear Leaguers: Our Publishing House is one of the great institutions of our Church. It is rendering a very conspicuous service to our Church and we believe that our young people are interested in the Publishing House. We want to tell you something about it.

The General Conference which met at Petersburgh, Va., in May, 1846, voted to establish a publishing house. Provisions were made for the publication of two weekly periodicals, one at Louisville, Ky., and another at Richmond, Va., together with such books and tracts as might be needed. The Quarterly Review was also authorized at this time. To finance this undertaking, a collection was ordered throughout the Church. Methodists can always take a collection. John Early was elected as agent, to work in conjunction with a committee of three in supervising this new activity.

The first real activity began in 1855. A publishing house was established at Nashville, Tenn. The publishing house was placed under the supervision of two agents who worked in conjunction with a Book Committee of five or more members, with full authority to operate the book publishing house for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At this time Edward Stevenson and F. A. Owen were elected as agents, who, in co-operation with a Book Committee of five, organized the present Publishing House.

STOP BOBBY'S COUGH

Never take a child's cough lightly. You can't tell where it will end. Many a serious sickness has started with "just a cough". For a cough is not only distressing, but weakening as well. At the first sign of a cough or chest soreness in old or young, always give good, dependable old "Piso's for Coughs".

Piso's does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages, soothes the inflamed tissues, and at the same time, has a tonic value that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Piso's supplies these five vital effects and it contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give, even to babies. All druggists sell Piso's in 35c and 60c sizes. Be sure you ask for "Piso's for Coughs".

The report to the General Conference of 1858 showed that 322 books of varying sizes had been published—from a 96-page Sunday School book to a 1114-page Watson's Dictionary. In addition to this there were 399 different tracts and pamphlets on a vast variety of Christian subjects. So we see that our Publishing House from the very beginning has been rendering a valuable service in the publication of Christian literature. A large amount of literature in the form of tracts is being published now by the House and this literature is free to those who will use it. This is a great need that is being met by our Publishing House. More of our people should be using this literature, but many of them do not know about it. Let us tell them about it.

Most publishing concerns import more books than they export. In 1930, our Publishing House imported two books and exported seven. A number of our Cokesbury books were published in England. This is a record that we should be proud of. Our books are being recognized abroad.

For a long time the House had a difficult struggle in a financial way. But it entered its era of success about 1882. It has been steadily growing since that time. Now, the sale of books and other merchandise totals approximately $2,000,000 a year. About five per cent of all the money taken in goes to the support of retired ministers. This means that every time you send a dollar to the Publishing House five cents of this dollar will go to the support of the retired ministers. So, when you buy anything from the Publishing House you are not only saving money for yourself, but you are helping the retired ministers of our Church. In 1929 the House paid to these superannuates $105,000.00. This is another service that is being rendered by our Publishing House. Let us tell our people about this phase of the work. Ask your people to buy their books from the Publishing House.

Good news is still coming our way. Mrs. E. C. Driskell has organized an Epworth Hi League at Lambert, Miss. The interest is so keen that the membership has grown to thirty members within a very short while. These Leaguers are getting the Epworth Era and they plan to use it. They are also making a pledge. That is one of the first things a League should do. Mrs. Driskell is the wife of our pastor at Lambert, Brother E. C. Driskell. Bro. Driskell has only been pastor there at Lambert for a few months. He was sent there by our recent Annual Conference.

Rev. A. Y. Brown is the very alert pastor of the Shannon charge. This is his first year on this charge. Since Conference, Brother Brown has organized an Epworth Hi League at Brewer on the Shannon charge. They have twenty-five members in this League and they are starting off enthusiastically in their work. The Hi League there at Shannon is one of the most up-to-date Leagues that we know anything about. These Leaguers have already paid their pledge in full for this year. They have also bought some Bibles for the children at the Orphans' Home at Jackson. They are to be commended for this splendid work. We hope others will follow their example.

We have just received the news from headquarters at Nashville that a charter has been issued to the Senior Epworth League at Pyland. This League is in the Aberdeen District and is on the Vardaman charge. Brother J. V. Stewart is the pastor, and Paul Weddle is the president of the League. This is another good example that we should follow when we organize a League, get a charter for it.

Let us remind you again that you should check up on your League and see whether or not you have a Standard League. We want to have a large number of Standard Leagues when our Assembly meets in Grenada in June. You can do a lot to improve your League in the time that remains. You will enjoy the Assembly a lot more if you have a Standard League when you come to Grenada.

Do we need to remind you of the importance of sending in what you have on your pledges? It may be a small amount that you have, but it is important. When our contributions are all combined it may be a large sum of money. The money is needed to carry on the work. We are not asking you to make a large contribution. We are just asking you to pay what you can. This is a time of financial depression, but the work of the Church must go on. People always need the Church, but they certainly need it in a time like this. As Epworth Leaguers let us do our part in carrying on the work of the Church. We are counting on you.

We hope that a large number of our young people are studying our book on Missions, which was written by Dr. W. G. Cram. This is a splendid book. Dr. Cram has written out of his rich experience, and he has given us a book that the Church should read. It is a very helpful little book. We recommend it to our young people.

Yours sincerely,
WM. L. ROBINSON.

Mr. J. W. Crabtree, secretary of the National Education Association, speaking on the conditions of 1920 and the conditions of 1930, declares that the condition in the high schools of the country are much better to-day than they were ten years ago with respect both to drinking and to general behavior. He declares that high school enrollment has grown since 1920 from 2,000,000 to more than 5,000,000 students, and he insists that many of the additional students have come from the poorer homes where formerly those from such homes were not able to attend high school because of the drink problem. Mr. Crabtree says: "Unquestionably the Eighteenth Amendment has benefited the schools beyond measure."—(Anti-Saloon League Year Book, 1930).

AS A LAYMAN SEES IT

If any one happens to read these lines who did not read the Jan. 1st N. O. Advocate be sure and find one and read it, for the first issue is worth the price of a whole year. Read the editorial, letters from our two Bishops "Journeying to the Far East," by Bishop Kern; "It is Time for Action," by Walter Jones; "The Grace of Forgetting," "A Message from Our Bishops." Don't fail to read the "Pelican Pines" and all the rest.

The reason our people do not want the Advocate is they do not read it. Mr. Editor, if you will find a way to get the people to read our religious literature the question will be solved.

FROM REV. W. C. BEASLEY

Dear Advocate: According to paragraph 64 of the New Discipline the committee on examination should organize themselves into a Joint Committee on Ministerial Training, etc., etc. This organization was not carried out at our Conference at Starkville. The Discipline further directs that this joint committee shall make provision for a thorough study by the undergraduates of the several courses, etc. From the minutes of 1930 there are some 26 undergraduates in our Conference. Many of these brethren will not, in all probability, be able to buy the books for their particular course of study. This fact being true, may I be pardoned for making this suggestion to the brethren of the seven districts of the Conference. In the next meeting of your Ministers' Association find out how many undergraduates are in your district who will need certain books. Let the president of each association be designated as a depositary for the keeping of the books, and then those who happen to have copies of the books needed place them with the depositary to be lent to the undergraduates. The undergraduates may return the books to the depositary at the meeting of the association at its monthly meeting.

FROM CAMPTI, LA.

Dear Editor: Just a word from our field. This is the third year that I have served this charge at this time, having served three years previous (several years ago). We have added to our work in the way of forces Rev. H. C. Murphy and wife, who have moved here and have bought a home. We are glad to have them with us and hope that satisfaction will prevail among us this year, and much good be accomplished through our efforts.

We are beginning the work as usual, have been able to meet all my appointments up to date. We are praying and trusting for a great year. I am very conscious of many things, but two especially; there must be lots of serious praying, and much real old gospel preaching. The time has come when just mere suggestions, and so and so ought to be done is not enough. It has come to the point in the history of our church when nothing will take the place of a spirit-filled ministry, to lead our people on to higher things.

God bless our great Church and make it a power.

Fraternally,

C. B. POWELL.

A METHODIST JUDGE ON LIQUOR

Judge C. C. Featherstone of South Carolina recently denounced the effort to make it appear that prohibition was responsible for all the ills of the day. He said: "I remember before prohibition that all the courts were filled with cases of those charged with making and selling liquor illicitly. I consider the prohibition law far superior to any other system of dealing with the liquor traffic the State has ever had." And then he added, "The curse of Almighty God is upon liquor."

Her Reward

When children are weak and run-down, they are easy prey to colds or children's diseases. So it is never wise to neglect those weakening and depressing symptoms of bad breath, coated tongue, fretfulness, feverishness, biliousness, lack of energy and appetite, etc.

Nine times out of ten these things point to one trouble—constipation—and mothers by thousands know this is easily, safely relieved by California Fig Syrup.

Mrs. Chas J. Connell, 1434 Cleary Ave., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I gave Virginia California Fig Syrup for constipation and she was more than rewarded for taking it. It regulated her bowels, helped her digestion, increased her appetite, made her strong and energetic."

The genuine, endorsed by doctors for 50 years, always bears the word California. All drugstores have it.

PARABLE OF THE WISE AND FOOLISH PASTORS

THE FOOLISH FIVE

Once there were five Pastors who were very Good, but not so very Wise:

They said:

"We are sorely Cumbered and Bothered with many things. We just can't be Bothered with the Advocate.

"It must wait until our church debts are all paid and our People are all perfect, then we will introduce them to the Advocate."

But no introduction ever came!

THE WISE FIVE

The five wise Pastors, hard put by the Multiplicity of their tasks and Breaking under the strain of the Impossible, spoke thus within themselves:

"We will send the Advocate to every Home, every Week, and every one will be an Assistant Pastor, helping us to lift every Burden in the parish.

"Go, Advocates, and Blessings on everyone of you, every week."—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF FINDINGS—GREENVILLE DISTRICT

To the Missionary Institute of the Greenville District: Your Committee of Findings would report that in the discussions of the various phases and the different interests of the Kingdom Extension movement we have noted:

1. An undivided loyalty and devotion to both its methods and objectives on the part of our ministry and laity present. Not one voice or one word in any voice is raised to question the need or the urgency and immediacy of the interests involved. On the contrary we all recognize the great instancy of these claims upon our devotion and our means; and we pledge our service and our means to the point of sacrifice in the Kingdom Extension program.

2. That the imperative needs of our Missionary fields, of our Educational enterprises, of our Church Extension work and of our Hospitals are calling to us with more instancy than ever before. The financial depression has caused a curtailment of all money consuming activities. The Church, like all other agencies, has borne its share of this curtailment. This shrinkage has now reached the danger point. It is becoming alarming, and our membership must be aroused to the situation. Our loyalty to Jesus Christ, who gave as never gave another, calls us to more sacrificial giving than ever before. The very depression and discouragements of our situation are a challenge to our faith and endeavor.

3. We are heartened to learn through our Conference Missionary Secretary, who attended the recent great Missionary gathering in Washington, D. C., that our Church stands at the forefront of the embattled hosts of America for the conquest of the world for Christ. The intelligent way in which our Mission Board has mapped out its cultivation period and then followed this period with wholesome, inviting and inspiring literature, and convincing discussions of Missionary principles, challenges the admiration of all American churches.

4. We find that our General Board is sending to the churches a splendidly written literature on the different aspects of this campaign. We are able to commend to our people "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," the book for study during this period, along with the highest type of pamphlets and leaflets. Our "Missionary Voice" stands at the head of all Missionary publications in the world, in circulation, mechanical make-up and editorial management.

5. Since the cultivation period during January and February is designed to reach the largest number possible of our Church members it is needful that by every method of approach there should be a quickening of the Missionary conscience of all our membership. In the campaign for voluntary offerings every member should be given a definite opportunity to make his contribution. Both the pastor and the Missionary committee should function to the utmost efficiency. Not only will this procure a larger contribution for the Kingdom Extension objectives, but as well will it deepen the spiritual life of our people. Our pastors should note carefully paragraph 494 of the Discipline.

Sincerely,

J. E. CUNNINGHAM,
T. M. BRADLEY,

KINGDOM EXTENSION INSTITUTE—VICKSBURG DISTRICT

The Kingdom Extension Institute of the Vicksburg District, held January 7, in the Port Gibson Methodist Church was a success in various ways. The dinner provided by the ladies of Port Gibson was splendid, the attendance was good, and the messages brought by the several speakers were quite superior. Besides others, there were present fourteen pastors, two Sunday school superintendents, three lay leaders, two Epworth League presidents, fifteen members of missionary committees.

Success of the N. O. C. A. special effort week, January 18-25, means larger giving to the Kingdom Extension Special.

In his opening remarks, the presiding elder, Rev. L. E. Alford, explained that during the months of January and February there would be, as formerly, a cultivation period, and that the fund to be raised, though not larger in amount, had been broadened in purpose, 75 per cent being for missions, and the remaining 25 per cent for the causes of Christian Education, Church Extension, and Hospital work.

The addresses delivered by the chief speakers were all of a high order, sometimes eloquent and heart-searching. We have space here to mention only a few of the suggestions and points of information given by some of them. Rev. J. B. Cain, Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education, suggested that in all our religious education we conserve all former good methods He recommended that adult classes of the Sunday schools use the new study book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," as basis of study for several Sabbaths at their regular lession periods. Rev. A. W. Martin, of the General Board of Christian Education, stated that by merging of the three boards, Sunday School, Epworth League, and Education, into one Board of Christian Education the working staff had been reduced twenty, with a saving of $40,000 per annum. He said that Dr. Cram, who had recently returned from the Orient, believes that China is in real danger from the Communist propaganda of Russia. Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, stated that no salaries of our 500 missionaries in the foreign fields had been increased, that the largest was $2,020, that of Dr. Onderdonk, of Mexico, who could easily command three times this amount as pastor of churches at home. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader, said that face to face meetings had great advantages over mere radio programs, that our Methodist peoole needed some over-loyalty, that in the Mississippi Conference, if those of the 74,400 members who pay could have their amounts increased by five cents per week from the non-payers, we would "go over the top" for, for 1931, that the Church has too many who are "unemployed" in any kind of Christian work.. Rev. J. M. Lewis, pastor of Louise and Holly Bluff, speaking in place of S. W. Sharbrough, district lay leader, who was unavoidably absent, urger pastors and others to be punctual in answering communications from the leader. The New Orleans Christian Advocate was represented by Rev. J. H. Morrow, pastor of Gloster. W. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, made a great speech, and attended to the distribution of literature and the receiving of orders for the study book. He stated that at a recent meeting of representatives of national Boards of Missions the assemblage was amazed upon being informed that we had a periodical like the Missionary Voice, with 70,000 paid subscribers, and that in 1930 our people used 500,000 of the mission study books.

Announcement was made that a Missionary Conference for the whole M. E. Church, South, would be held in New Orleans, February 24, 1931.

TO THE PASTORS SERVING MISSION CHARGES IN THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

All of you brethren know by now that the Booneville Banking Co.. where our funds have been deposited for years, closed some time ago. As you remember, I sent your checks before the set date, thinking that in these times of depression you would need them. I am sorry to learn that some of you failed to get your checks cashed before the bank closed. All who did not get your checks cashed, send them back to me. Then when the bank opens I will handle them for you.

As I understand it, in all these years that the Booneville Banking Company has handled our funds and some member of that bank has been the treasurer of our board the treasurer has been bonded with just a personal bond which would protect only in the case of mishandling the Board's money: There has been no mishandling of funds in this case, but this bank, just as so many others have had to do, had to close when a run was made by panic-stricken depositors.

The president of the bank, and who is the treasurer of our board, tells me that the State Banking Department has agreed to let them open in the very near future. I have taken the matter up with that department to let us, if possible, freeze our deposits only for this conference year; and if possible, to allow us to check out April the 1st, July 1st, and October 1st.

I want to assure you, brethren, that everything is being done that I can do to relieve the situation for you. In the meantime I hope that all of you will take the suggestion, sent out in my letter to you, that you hold rallies in each church early in the year and organize your congregations in donating any and all kinds of products which may be turned into money for salary and collections or used or sold by the pastor and his family and credited to salary.

Let us be much in the homes of our people and pray in their homes exhorting them that now in this time of depression we demonstrate our faith in our good God, "Who will supply all our needs."

Fraternally yours,

J. D. WROTEN.

RUIN IN RUMOR

On the door of more than one bank has been posted, of late, "Closed because of unfounded rumors and for the protection of depositors." Wild rumors have worked havoc to financial institutions and individual happiness.

Ignorance is a productive soil for rumor. It was reported that on January 19, Lee's birthday, a man went to a bank and saw it closed; not knowing it was a legal holiday he spread the fallacy of his imagination that the bank had been closed and brought distress to many people and inconvenience to the bank. Those who allow ill-founded rumor to throw them into panicky hysteria evidence no higher intelligence than that of the stupid ignoramus who starts such.

Selfishness and malice, also, may be the basis of rumor. Persons who would progress upon the downfall of another find it easy to dig up out of their fertile imagination suggestions that would injure the reputation of another or weaken an institution's cause.

Gulpers of gossip are particeps criminis with the sayers of slander. Shakespeare asks, "For which of you will stop the vent of hearing when loud rumor speaks?" The vent widens into a sluice-gate and the baneful brood of speakeasies comb the range of acquaintance to hear or tell the latest and least thing that would imperil the influence of another or promote their own advantage.

He who climbs up slanderous steps or runs the dark ways of rumor to success, bears a mark of shame and wears a chaplet of disgrace. There is no moral ground for the bushwhacker, who whacks at the integrity of individuals or institutions, and snoopers and snipers will receive no encouragement from respectable people.

F. W. Robertson said, "Beware of that which becomes the slanderer's life, of magnifying every speck of evil and closing the eye to goodness, till at last men arrive at the state in which generous, universal love (which is heaven) becomes impossible, and a suspicious, universal hate takes possession of the heart, and that is hell." It takes a very small person to thread the way down on imaginary "specks," but finally the bottom is reached and the tale-bearer has hurt himself more than anyone else.

DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP

The history of the United States is replete with daring deeds and heroic sacrifices. During the war of 1812 Commodore Perry sailed out on Lake Erie with his fragile fleet of nine small vessels to meet Barclay with his English squadron. Flying at the masthead of his flagship Perry had a pennant carrying the immortal words, "Don't Give Up the Ship." Give up they did not!

Don't give up the New Orleans Christian Advocate! Let the Special Effort be continued until the victory is won. The Advocate needs the successful efforts of the strongest churches as well as the ones of fewer members. An average of ten subscribers from charges of three hundred members or less; and of twenty from charges of six to three hundred; and of thirty from charges with over six hundred members will keep the Advocate going. Less than that will prove serious. The larger memberships must exceed the average by far, in order to make the average.

Say it with subscriptions. Now is the time for all good Methodists to come to the aid of their Advocate. January 18-25 was a beginning and may there be no ending until the paper goes into every home.

J. L. DECELL, Editor,
C. M. CHALMERS, Manager.

With an accession of the spirit of brave patriots and devoted church-people like our forefathers, heroic preachers and loyal people can turn depression into an expression of victory that will conquer difficulties now and for years to come. "Don't give up the ship!" Another worthy seaman, John Paul Jones, when asked by the opposing captain, "Have you surrendered yet?" replying, "I have not begun to fight yet," epitomized the spirit of Louisiana and Mississippi Methodists when faced with a grave crisis in the various activities of their church.

The Christian brotherhood is a compassionate company that conserves the character of another and knows the facts before the withering word is spoken, if it is spoken. Business cannot succeed, in the highest sense, on any lower level. May the luxury of living nobly and building confidence take first place again.

THE IMMEDIACY OF THE TASK

It is now or never with many who face life's opportunities. There is a witness to be borne and a task to be accomplished now. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," without jeopardizing the future with an accumulation of unfinished work and left-over wrongs.

Personal witnessing for Christ is the most effective form of promoting his Kingdom and is the immediate need of the times. This witnessing includes more than spoken testimony; it involves motives, convictions, attitudes and deeds. The motives that move, convictions which control, attitudes and sacrifical service that characterize this generation will determine its abiding influence for good more than all of its monuments of granite and volumes of trade. The Chinese have a saying, "If you want to exercise immediate influence, use your tongues; if you want to influence a hundred generations, write a book." Of the writing of books there is no end, but their truths, if they possess any, will remain dead until they become enfleshed and are made to walk among men in living persons.. Mechanical movements and impersonal mediums cannot convey redeeming power.

Utopian dreams that picture the glorious future and fill life with visions that obscure immediate necessities break the chain that would draw in the better day. "Hitch your wagon to a star" is alright, provided the wagon does not tumble down a precipice or crash to pieces against boulders while the gaze-running is going on.

There are grimy souls and broken hearts this side of the stars. To claim that things as they are have been providentially predetermined and acquiescence is the proper attitude; or, that there is a residuum of institutional force that will eventually lift the world out of its sin and immediate life-giving toil is a work of supererogation, may conform to certain theological formulas, but have no place in Methodism. Methodism with a Christ who died for all men cannot go to the wrong person and it is her immediate task to live, glow and go unto the lost with her message of salvation. With multitudes of the unevangelized far and near, with thirty-three millions of souls dying each year without the knowledge of Christ, Methodism dare not delay her mission, but she must "Charge, charge, in the name of God, charge!"

Christ's Way of Doing Good

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER, D.D., LL.D.

All good people wish to do good to their fellowmen; but doing good wisely and well is not an easy matter. It requires one to see clearly what is really good for others and to use the best means and methods to assure for them the good thus perceived.

St. Peter said of Jesus that "he went about doing good," and the word he uses for "he went about" means "he went through," and suggests that, as a kingly benefactor, he dispensed blessings as he made his royal progress through a needy world.

Our Lord's way is the best example of doing good wisely.

What did Jesus esteem as real good? What were the benefits he dispensed on the way as he passed among men?

There is no record that he gave to anyone money.

He gave health to thousands who were sick, so that the blind received sight, the lame walked, the leprous were cleansed, the deaf heard, and the dead were restored to life. (Matthew xi:5). These blessed deeds he declared were credentials of his Messiahship, in response to the inquiring messengers who came from John the Baptist to ask, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" The highest proof he offered of his divine character and mission, however, were not the miraculous healings that he wrought, but the fact that "the poor had the gospel preached to them." (Matthew xi:2-5).

Evidently, he put the doing of spiritual good above all other forms of benevolence; and St. Peter in his discourse in the house of Cornelius observed the same standard of appraisement, saying, "How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power; who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him." (Acts x:38).

There was a vast amount of poverty in Palestine when our Lord lived and labored in it; but he set agoing no pretentious movement to abolish it by the enrichment of the poor. Neither want nor wealth occupied much place in the Saviour's purpose and plan. He declared most emphatically that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke xii:15); and that "the life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment." (Luke xii:23). He thus taught that the primary wants of men, what they call "the necessities of life" in the form of victuals and clothes, do not rank in importance with the spiritual life of the soul. Some in our day who magnify above measure the "social gospel," and minify, "the saving gospel," would have dissented from his judgment concerning the relative importance of physical and spiritual things, if they had lived in his day and had heard his teachings. But Jesus was, and is, wiser than they.

He taught that, with reference to the requirements of the body, our "heavenly Father knoweth that we have need of all these things," and that he provides them for us with the same merciful care as that which he bestows upon the feeding of the fowls of the air and clothing the lilies of the field. But in the same breath, he says, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matthew vi:26-33).

Our Lord put first things first, although he did not overlook or underrate second things.

He gives assurance and approbation of the unforgetable good manifested by the giving of a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple (Matthew x:42); and when he foreshows the awards of the last Judgment, he puts in the forefront the benevolent deeds of the righteous in that they clothed the naked and fed the hungry, saying to them, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matthew xxv:40). In terms of equal strength with his approving words to the righteous, he condemns the selfish inhumanity of the unrighteous, saying of them, "Verily I say unto you, inasmuh as ye did not to one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not to me." (Matthew xxv:45)

But in all these profound teachings, the Master makes conspicuous the spiritual motive for doing good. He had no word of approval for godless humanitarianism.

BISHOP WARREN AKIN CANDLER, D.D., LL.D.

The capital defect in no little of what passes for benevolence in our times is that it is utterly destitute of spiritual motive and purpose, having in it no regard for God, the Father, and no personal concern for man, the brother. Perhaps much of it arises from the desire to get out of sight painful objects of need as the unjust judge avenged the wrong done to the poor widow, saying, "Though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me." (Luke xviii:4 and 5).

Many in this age of luxury and self-indulgence, can not bear anything that is disagreeable and uncomfortable. Hence, they give to the needy in order to be rid of the sight, or knowledge, of painful destitution. In their giving, there is no spiritual element or personal interest. But in all the good that Jesus did, the spiritual and personal factor prevailed. He brought loving mercy to individual souls, and organized no mechanical scheme of relief whereby they might be removed from his presence. His deeds were warm with love and fervent with faith.

If we follow his way of doing good, we shall not rely upon mechanical devices, but shall put personal tenderness into our efforts to relieve human want.

In view of the financial depression now prevalent in our country, much sore need is now about us, and this destitution may be increased before the winter ends. We can not deal with it as Jesus would have us do, if we look to boards and committees and legislative appropriations to do the entire work of ministering to the poor and suffering.

The sufferers around us need the warmth of our hearts quite as much as they want the money in our purses. And we also need their human touch quite as much as they need our sympathy. "Labor-saving machinery" in the realm of benevolence is too cold and heartless to secure the approval of our Lord, or to assure the highest good for ourselves and others.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson put this truth with admirable clearness recently. When speaking of Christ's way of doing good, he said:

> "The only thing which stirred Him was the sight of human need and the only motive to which He appealed was the desire to help humanity because men and women are children of God. Anything which comes in between the heart and human need robs the heart of its impulse to make sacrifices for the sake of Jesus. To place money on the contribution plate in order to reach a goal which has been decided on by a committee is not giving from a Christian motive. Anything which breaks down the Christian motive is bad. If we fix our eyes on a financial goal instead of on God, we depart from the narrow path which leads to life. We have become the victim of the machine idea. We are mechanizing our benevolence. We are making our giving mechanical. The results are already beginning to appear. Still darker results are forthcoming if we do not change our method. In striving to be more efficient, we have lost the efficiency we had, and in perfecting our system we have lost much of the spirit which gives life. The only solid reason why we should give our money for helping others is that though Christ was rich yet for our sakes He became poor that we, through His poverty, might be rich."

Years ago a young pastor in the city of Atlanta went on an afternoon to visit the widow of a Confederate soldier who had been killed in battle, leaving her scant means for her support. When the preacher reached the closed door of her humble habitation, he heard the voice of prayer within, and he stood with uncovered head until the supplication ceased. Then, he sought admittance, and he found Chief Justice James Jackson, of the Supreme Court of Georgia, had come to bring her monetary help, and before leaving, had read to the sick and sad widow comforting Scriptures, and, kneeling by her bedside, had made prayer on her behalf. That beautiful act of Christian benevolence was not reported in the newspapers, but it conformed perfectly to the Christ's way of doing good. The young preacher, who came upon the Chief Justice when thus engaged, has never forgotten the scene. Best of all, God forgets not such deeds of Christian benevolence.

Rev. Alexander J. Reid, in charge of evangelistic work at Wembo Nyama station in the Congo Mission, has in his possession a huge pile of trinkets and witch doctor charms that the natives on his circuit have given up at the altar during recent evangelistic meetings. In these meetings one witch doctor was herself converted and gave up all her charms and witchcraft.

WHOSE MONEY HAVE YOU IN YOUR POCKET?

By Rev. James M. Martin, D.D.

"Mine," you say, "I earned it, I came by it honestly," and you resent the suspicion which the question implies. No, you say that you did not get it by gambling, nor by cheating, nor by stealing. You got all your money honestly and you are proud of that.

Very good! You are the very person we want to talk to, and it is to you that we want to put this question, Whose money have you in your pocket? And it is to you, honest man, that we want to say that it is not your own money you have in your pocket. It belongs to some one else. And if, in surprise, you ask to whom, then, does it belong, we answer that it belongs to God. God says so. Do you own land and real estate? He says, "The land is mine." Lev. 25:23. Have you a farm with live stock? He says, "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." Psalm 50:10. Have you money in the bank? He says, "The silver is mine and the gold is mine." Haggai 2:8.

There are some people who will not believe this, no matter how plainly it is set before them. When a present bishop of the Methodist Church was a young man, he delivered a sermon on this truth and was afterward taken home to dinner by a well-to-do farmer. When the meal was over, the farmer took his guest to the top of a knoll and there pointed out in one direction and another all the land which he owned, and turning to his minister, asked, "Whose now is all this?" And the minister quietly answered, "Ask me that question a hundred years from now."

There is another class which say, "Oh, yes, I suppose my money is the Lord's, after all." No, my friend, there is no "supposing" about this. It is the Lord's. When He says, "The silver is mine and the gold is mine," there is no "supposing" about the matter at all. Whose money have you in your pocket? God's money. Whose money do you receive in wages or salary? God's money. Whose money did you put into that business venture? God's money. Whose money have you invested in stocks or bonds? God's money. Make no mistakes about this. It is God's money. He says so, and that settles it.

It is a rule of all ownership that the owner has a right to what he possesses. How then shall God's rights be acknowledged in the money which we have which is His? There are three ways of so acknowledging God's rights. The first is the SURRENDER WAY.: this is the giving up of one's income and one's business altogether and living the life of faith. It was the way of the Master in the days of His ministry. It is the faith way. Some few are called to live that way, but it is not for all Christians.

The second way is the SACRIFICIAL WAY: this is illustrated in the case of the widow and her two mites, who gave "all her living." It was sacrifice, pure sacrifice. Perhaps it meant going without a meal. All Christians do not live that way. In fact, very few Christians know anything of sacrifice for their Lord. Many are living on "Easy Street" who have been called by the Master to live on "Self Denial Street."

The third way is the SOVEREIGN WAY: it acknowledges the sovereignty of God over our income. It is the tithe way, the setting aside of one-tenth of our income to the Lord. It is the way which God enjoins upon His people, and therefore we call it the SOVEREIGN way, because it confesses the sovereign rights of God over our money and property and income.

Let us have a word on this method of tithing and ask all who do not tithe to consider the following arguments:

First, tithing puts giving on a Scripture basis. "The tithe is holy unto the Lord," we read in Leviticus 27:30-32. This is the way in which to Israel of old God expressed His mind in the matter of giving, and therefore he who in our day sets aside one tenth of his income for the Lord may surely feel that he is giving as God wants him to.

Second, tithing is the least that ought to satisfy the Christian conscience. In the days of the Old Testament under a dispensation of meagre blessings men gave God a tenth of their income. Surely in these New Testament days under a dispensation of the fulness of blessings men ought to give no less.

Third, tithing solves the problem of giving. How ought we to give is the question, not how much. Every Christian who earnestly considers the matter of his giving to the Lord is furnished with the New Testament principle of systematic and proportionate giving: "On the first day of the week let everyone of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him." I Corinthians 16:2. The tithe is a satisfactory rule for carrying out this principle of proportionate giving.

Fourth, tithing is good financing. The promises in the Bible are written for the tither. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there be meat in mine house, and prove me herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Malachi 3:10. "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst with new wine." Proverbs 3:9, 10; which, being interpreted, is "Give the tenth of thine income to the Lord, so shall thy debts be all paid, thy wages shall be secured to thee, thy income shall be full, thy business shall be prospered, thy savings shall constantly be increased, for the Lord shall continually bless thee." If this little word falls under the eye of any one whose finances have always been awry, who is in debt, who wonders how he is ever going to get his money matters straight again, let me exhort him to try God's way. "Give me the tenth," says the Lord, "and I will give you plenty and prosperity."

If, therefore, you are not a tither, these considerations urge you to become one. Tithing puts our giving on the SOVEREIGN basis and confesses that the money we have in our pockets is not ours—IT IS GOD'S MONEY.—The Christian Intelligencer.

THE GOLDEN CROSS AND KINGDOM ARISTOCRACY

Fred. T. Barnett, Associate Secretary, General Hospital Board.

"The Golden Cross button is the badge of Kingdom aristocracy," declared Dr. C. C. Jarrell, General Secretary of the General Hospital Board, in a Church-wide message last year, and this arresting sentence suggests at once the varying types of aristocracy which have existed in the world. Men have boasted of the aristocracy of power, the aristocracy of learning, the aristocracy of blood and the aristocracy of money.

Over against these superficial standards of aristocracy, Jesus gave the world a new law of greatness and a new standard of nobility in those memorable words, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Speaking in terms of the values of the Kingdom of God, that man is greatest in God's sight who is giving himself most fully and unselfishly to the service of others, under the leadership of Jesus Christ. The men and women, however humble in birth and station they may have been, who have most fully embodied this ideal of greatness in their lives have been the world's real aristocrats.

Pestalozzi failed as a lawyer, broke down in his first sermon as a preacher, but he had a heart as big as the Alps, and he gathered the little children of Switzerland into his home and taught them, and out of his humble efforts to bless the child life of his native land he developed those educational theories which have influenced our modern world. On the little schoolhouse near which he is buried at Zurich is a bronze tablet which bears this inscription: "Pestalozzi, Man, Christian, Citizen. Everything for others. Nothing for self. Blessings upon his name." That is greatness according to the estimate of Jesus Christ, in Switzerland, and that is greatness anywhere in the world.

High on the honor roll of those who have qualified as members of God's order of nobility are the names of many consecrated men and women who, in the realm of healing, have discovered the real joy of living as they have given themselves unselfishly to the service of others. Out of the shadows of the World War emerges the noble figure of an English nurse, who early gave her heart to God and her life to the service of humanity. Shortly before she was shot by the Germans in the old military prison at Brussels, she said in a letter written to her nurses in the Training School she had founded in Belgium: "I told you that devotion would give you real happiness, and the thought that before God and yourselves you had done your entire duty with a glad heart would be your greatest comfort in the hard moments of life and in the face of death." Edith Cavell was a member of the aristocracy of service.

Immediately following his discovery of the method by which yellow fever is transmitted, Walter Reed, an American army surgeon, cabled back to his wife in the States and said, "Wife, the dream of the years has come true, and I have been able to make a scientific discovery which will bring lasting relief to suffering humanty."

The new law of greatness proclaimed by Jesus applies to the life of churches as well as to the life of the individual believer. In face of the fact that even commercial organizations are striving to impress the public that their policies are being formulated upon this fundamental philosophy of Jesus, the Church must see to it that all of its plans and programs are motivated by a Christlike passion to serve others.

Men sometimes wonder at the vigor of the Roman Catholic Church, in spite of its retention of many gaudy trappings of mediaeval ecclesiasticism. It will be profitable for us Protestants to remember that whatever may be said about the superstitions and the intolerance of the Roman Church, the fact remains that its priests and sisters of mercy have gone down into the places of human need and established hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged, and other eleemosynary institutions, and have thus given a practical demonstration of Christian service which has won the admiration of men around the world. It is to be regretted that the leaders of the Protestant Reformation became so involved in theological controversy as to give but little attention to many of these practical forms of Christian service which have characterized the program of the Roman Catholic Church for centuries.

No one acquainted with the social service program of John Wesley in England would deny to him an honored place in the membership of God's order of nobility—the aristocracy of service. The founding of a Poor Man's Bank and the establishment of free medical dispensaries in London and Bristol were among the features introduced by this practical mystic into the program of early Methodism.

It was in recognition of this fundamental law of greatness announced by Jesus that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, made provision in 1922 for the Golden Cross Society. This is a term which is used for the annual enrollment of our members in behalf of the healing program of our Church during Hospital Week, which includes the second and third Sundays in May. Here is an opportunity for every man, woman and child whose name appears upon the membership roll of the Southern Methodist Church to share in the unselfish ministry of our Methodist Hospitals to God's suffering poor.

The name of Robert A. Barnes, of St. Louis, will always be associated with Barnes Hospital; that of James B. Duke with the Duke Hospital at Durham, North Carolina; that of W. S. F. Tatum with the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg, Mississippi; that of H. L. Ott and his now sainted mother with the Good Samaritan Hospital, at Lexington, Kentucky, and that of Asa G. Candler with the Wesley Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, Georgia. These men and others have made possible through their generous gifts our institutions of healing, but the rank and-file of our Church membership must carry on the unfinished work of these laymen of large stewardship vision.

Most of our hospitals have little, if any, endowment, and if they are to fulfill their mission we must enlist all of our membership in their support. The Golden Cross makes possible the unanimous participation of our people in the work of our hospitals. The attractive Golden Cross button stamps its wearer as one who responds to the need of a suffering world. It is truly "the badge of Kingdom aristocracy," and stamps the man who wears it upon his bosom as a member of God's order of nobility—the Aristocracy of Service.

This worthy movement must not suffer from neglect or disloyalty by reason of the financial difficulties of the present hour. The need for the ministry of our Church to the worthy poor is greater as a result of the situation which exists in America to-day. As we give sacrificially during 1931 to the support of our Methodist Hospitals throughout Dixie, may we be cheered by the tender voice of our Divine Master as He says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

JOHN WESLEY

By Rev. John F. Foster

God lives, and all is well, for the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the nation-creating God and nation-guiding God, still rules.

This was so in the dark days of the early part of the eighteenth century, when England, forgetting God and its duty to humanity, was rapidly running on the rocks of destruction.

There were no standards in those days, and the people were ready for any extremity. France had its revolution, its guillotine and its baptism of blood. Had France had had a Wesley, history might have been far different and the man of Corsica never heard from.

England was corrupt to a marked degree; and, between the Scylla of royalty and Charybdis of poverty and squalor among its poor and the mining classes, the British Isles were ready for a similar baptism of blood.

As the temperament of the two nations was different, that of the Anglo-Saxon not being so mercurial as that of the Celt, the chances are that had such a baptism of blood overshadowed Britannia, the result would have been far deeper and more lasting.

England's position gives it influence as no nation, and therefore its influence is broader and more far-reaching than any other European nation, and its colonies make it world-wide in its influence. Had England and its pure type of religion and the character which it begat have gone down in destruction, the loss to the world could not be estimated, and an imagination greater than that of a Jules Verne would be necessary were the results measured.

The one man under God who saved England and the world from such a loss and kept the world from stepping backward two hundred years, lifting it and advancing it forward two hundred years, was John Wesley. The thoughtless measure his work as that of a street preacher, and thus discount the man and his work, not seeing its moral, spiritual and economic uplift, as his ministry changed the response and outlook of an age and a race.

Since Paul and Luther, there has not been his like in the history of mankind.

When God would make a man he begins a century or two before, for no small man can do a great work. The Annesley family were in training during days which tried men's souls. Their history reads like a romance. Dr. Annesley was one of the most cultured and intellectual men of all England. His blood had been tempered of God and of the times.

The Wellesley, or Wesley, blood likewise had come up through trials and tribulations, and there was trained into the same those elements of leadership which made Arthur and John both: the one a leader of men and molder of thought, the other a leader of armies. The first saved England from itself and the other from imperialism and Napoleon.

The world honors the Duke of Wellesley, Arthur Duke of Wellington, and the light and fickle opinion of men omit and forget that other great man and son of the same blood, John Wellesley, or Wesley, not Duke of Wellington and savior of England from imperialism, but the spiritual illuminant under God of an age, a race and a world advancing the thought of all enlightened, thinking humanity, and molder of a civilization the like of which the world had never seen and whose end is not yet.

These two streams met in John Wesley—the pure, intellectual, religious life of the Annesleys, and the religious, sturdy, courageous blood of the Wellesleys, and a man was the result, a man planned of God—may I say, reverently, begotten of God and raised by God for a great purpose, being the epochal man of a new day?

This man little knew his real field of labor, and never saw behind the veil, but quietly did his duty as he saw it, and in simplicity stooped to the level of the under-man and lifted humanity, saving a nation a creed and belief in God, and thus advanced the world, stabilized it with a vision of God and turth, saving it from that which would have put an estoppel to all progress, and which would have carried the world back several centuries, for without the work of Wesley England likely would have had its reign of terror and its guillotine.

He was possibly, or rather probably, the most intellectual man of his age, and had a genius whose like has seldom been seen in the history of the world.

Richelieu was indeed a great man, and as an organizer where shall we find his equal? But in Wesley we find his superior.

His grasp of a situation, his insight into the elemental, his far-reaching understanding of results, of cause and effect, has seldom if ever been equaled.

The height, the depth, the breadth and the simplicity of the man are remarkable and unique. These virtues in such bold contrast are seldom found in one man.

He builded wiser than he knew, not anticipating, but following the leadings of God, not seeing the divine purpose or plan in his life.

Little did he know that the progress of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries was in his hand, together with the greatness of the republic across the seas.

America's debt to Wesley and his pioneer preachers can never be measured until the last billow of the sea of time has broken on the shores of eternity. The history of the life of Wesley is well known, and I shall not go into it; but may I review but for a moment?

He did not intend other than to do his duty as an enlightened servant of God, and loved his Church to the last, and did not plan to teach a schism therein, or organize another ecclesiasticism. His work was to preach Christ and the truth, and, growing out of the attitude of his church, a movement began which gradually grew and developed into a great church.

Wesley was truly a man of God and the epochal man of his century.

METHODISMS

By James William Sells

During January the attention of preachers and people will be directed toward the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering. This should not interfere with perfecting plans for not only the month but for the entire year.

Some pastors prepare a year's outline. Here, for instance, is an outline for the first three months;

January

Missionary Cultivation Period.

Evangelism in Sunday School.

January 24, anniversary of first Boy Scout troop in England.

February

Mission Study Class.

Birthdays: Lincoln and Washington.

Prepare plans for Easter.

March

Complete evangelism campaign in Sunday School.

Lenten Services.

Prepare for Easter music and Easter services.

Prepare for Sunday School Day.

(Rural pastors will engage help for revivals).

Dr. Joseph A. Smith, of Capitol St., Jackson, Miss., recently preached on "Budgeting Life." This leads one to become introspective and to suggest that several moments be spent in making plans for the interior life of the preacher.

John Howie Wright, editor of Postage and the Mailbag, in an editorial advised business men to read at least one book a week, and to subscribe for at least ten monthly magazines. If a business man should do this, how much more should a preacher plan for some reading.

Some suggested magazines for the preacher are: Church Management, Harpers, The Forum, The Expositor, Time, Literary Digest, The Christian Century, The Readers' Digest, a daily paper and the county paper. For the man who has only a few dollars to spend, buy Church Management, and The Readers' Digest.

A large number of churches have observed Watch Night. But how about having a church supper in January? Either every one bring a basket supper or charge twenty-five cents and ask the Leaguers or the women to serve. For a program, each department head could give their aims and objectives for the year; the stewards can talk benevolences, and the pastor can be silent and let the church lay leader preside. Don't forget to present the claims of the Advocates and the Missionary Voice at this meeting. A couple of young women can well present these papers by appearing in a costume made from copies of each paper (as one McComb lady did last year).

"AND AS YE GO, HEAL!"

Does the Lord's direct command have any authority for us to-day? What says it? "Go preach! Go teach! Go heal!".

Too long we have neglected our healing ministry. Too long we have neglected the opportunity—overlooked the need—of alleviating the pain and suffering of the world in the name of Christ.

But to-day a dozen great Methodist hospitals are bearing our ministry to the sick. In all of them Christian doctors and Christian nurses are performing miracles of mercy. It is our way of doing what Christ did in Galilee when He lived among men.

You are interested in this. You must be if you have the spirit of Jesus.

Tell all the people about it. Let them know that their gifts to the Kingdom Extension Offering will help to extend the healing hand of their Church to thousands of the sick and suffering. Then see that each one has a personal opportunity to help as he may be able and as he may be led by the Spirit of the Great Physician.

GRENADA GRAPHS

Dear Brother Chalmers: I hope you are well and everything moving along harmoniously and beautifully with you and also with the Advocate, and I hope the new editor can find time to get from one big job to the other. We are most happily situated at Grenada. The people are first class. They show us great kindness and genuine appreciation. It seems a year of progress lies ahead.

Brother Holder and his faithful wife did a monumental work here. They are warmly esteemed and devotedly cherished by all the people. They left a great Sunday school and a live and active church behind them.

Brothers Lord and Mohler have begun the work of their respective offices in full tilt with many calls for help, more than they seem able to meet at present.

Dr. Countiss and his able faculty with their flock of fine girls have resumed labors since the holidays with mutual good will and happy outlook.

Our district missionary institute was held recently at Winona. Good attendance and fine spirit characterized the whole meeting. It looked as if the whole program throughout the district would be faithfully put on. The people are undergoing great financial pressure. This is no news. Every section is under the same weight and distress. There is but One Source of alleviation and comfort at present and that One is and always has been the same but unseen and unfelt because unrecognized save when circumstances drive us out of other subterfuges, hopes and escapes into bare open fields of storm-swept helplessness. After all, as long as "Vanity Fair" is open and much on display, the bunting floating and the music going and all the people filled with the spirit of their day off, why, don't you know God nor heaven, virtue nor labor, self-denial nor real thought are not to the fore? Play is all right at recess, as a tonic and an appetizer for more and better study, but day in and day out is inimical to the laws of mind, the needs of the body, the nature and purpose of the universe.

We have to be called "To Books." And now we have to encourage us in linking down to old time toil, the very highest of all rewards, the primal and primitive rewards of discipline, industry, self-denial, thoughtfulness, economy, those very laws under whose rigid and impartial enforcement John Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, Jonothan Swift and blind old Homer and Milton sang and waked up slumbering indifference.

All good luck and best wishes to you and the editor in all your labors.

Cordially yours,

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

NEWTON DISTRICT NOTES

The District Missionary Institute met on January 6 at the Methodist church in the historic town of Montrose. Rev. H. A. Gatlin presided over the meeting, which was well attended by pastors, laymen, and laywomen from all parts of the district. Rev. A. W. Martin spoke for the General Commission on Benevolences, Mr. P. L. Blackwell for the lay forces, Rev. J. L. Neill for the Conference Mission Board, Mr. W. D. Hawkins as Conference Missionary Secretary, Rev. J. L. Carter for the Conference Board of Christian Education, and the writer for the New Orleans Advocate. A delightful lunch was served by the ladies of the Montrose church at the noon hour.

Montrose has been a center of Methodist activity for many years and has had an influence in Mississippi Methodism far beyond its size. Many of the present pastors in the Mississippi Conference attended the school there and a large number of influential laymen. The fact that the Newton District has more preachers in the Conference than any other district is probably accounted for by the Montrose school.

A number of pastors in other places whose homes are in this section of the State visited relatives during the Christmas holidays, among them Rev. J. T. Weems of Gallman, Rev. M. K. Miller of Summit, and Rev. Leland Clegg, pastor of Pulaski Heights, Little Rock, and several others, whose names are not at hand.

Under the leadership of the vigorous and aggressive presiding elder, the Newton District is cheerful and courageous and faces the future with optimism and determination.

MR. HAMPTON MORGAN PASSES TO HIS REWARD

Mr. Hampton Morgan, father of Rev. G. A. Morgan, pastor Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, died at his home in Crowley, La., at 8:30, Tuesday morning, January 20. The funeral services were held at Indian Bayou, on the next day, being conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. T. Parsons, and Rev. C. K. Smith.

Mr. Morgan was a faithful follower of his Lord, and a good citizen of his community. Brother Morgan and the other loved ones have the sympathy of the Advocate in their bereavement.

REACTION TO TIME FOR ACTION

By Rev. W. H. Saunders

A recent issue of the Advocate carried an article by Brother Walter W. Jones, that hits a most vulnerable point in our situation, and one that needs careful, prayerful, honest Christian consideration at the hands of all concerned.

Any man, preacher, pastor or leader in any branch of our system who makes a debt without the probability of paying it violates one of the general rules, lays himself liable to grave censure if not charges of immorality.

It is quite fortunate that when young men are admitted into full connection their debt making ability is looked into. It is also quite fortunate that in our system men are appointed—to look over these men, "in the Lord."

The reason for this is that the church may be protected and promoted, without scandal and hurt.

I am of the opinion that it is more difficult for a Methodist pastor to live and practice a fraud in our Church than any other branch of the Church.

I know, as all do, that the last few years has been a time when the cost of living has been run sky high, and we all know that the living allowance made by boards of stewards has not been in keeping with this extreme rise in living expense. This to quite an extent is one reason why this condition complained of by his elder and the good Bishop prevails.

That it prevails more among those who are comparatively well paid is subject to question.

Preachers who have reached the point in life and the ministry when they are considered for these better places have families that require more to live on, and live in towns and pastorates where it is impossible to live as cheaply as in more rural communities. The people set the pace and he cannot live as they require on the allowance made.

One thing we can mention as an expense that a preacher has to have, a car, and boards scarcely ever make an allowance for the purchase or upkeep of it.

If a preacher was sent to one of these better charges who would not keep a car, how long would he remain as their pastor? It has gotten to the point where they just have to have one. Most of these cars are bought on the installment plan and paying for it and the upkeep cuts his already too small living allowance. Even the pastors on rural charges cannot dispense with the car as they must go if they meet the demands.

If a preacher has sickness in his family, or children to educate, where is the money coming from?

One time not many years ago while trying to raise the Superannuate allowance in a charge with which I was fully familiar, one steward and his good wife remarked to the party soliciting that he was not in sympathy with the move, "let the old preachers live with their children, as we take care of the children while being raised." This man was a banker, stockholder, a big merchant and a steward.

The pastor was living on less than $17.50 per month for each member of his family, and trying to educate his child in a state school because it was cheaper than his church school.

It is possible to investigate the situation of most any preacher and his financial dealings, and if these rumors come to the presiding elder and he has reasons to believe that his continuance in the pastorate is hurtful, it is his duty to have this investigation. He should report the same to the Bishop who has the final word in the appointments.

But when the name of Rev. John Samson is called at Conference and the elder says, "Nothing against him," if he has done his duty he should let it rest there.

Let the broadsides come, but be sure it is broad enough to include all parties responsible for the situation.

The trouble may be that if you hit at one of these smaller men you miss some higher up who needs the same thing. Then spread your broadside to cover a larger space of the field. Is it true that when men are discussed, their needs, their actual needs, their ability, their success in the ministry, the services they have rendered; are they, under God, and the leadings of the Holy Ghost, in the light of the truth and justice, put where they can live on the allowance, keep self-respect, hold the esteem and respect of those among whom they live, look their families in the face at night, render a hundred per cent. service as pastors, and play the part of a real man of God? Raise the broadside, and widen it, and lower it and cut the whole swathe that will do justice, even justice without mercy. Brother Jones said something about the lay leader—he did not mention that there are lay leaders, and lay leaders. There is not the least doubt but that a godly lay leader is just as good a man as the Christian preacher. I would not object for one moment for him to have a place in the cabinet and discuss the appointments with the others. Are all these men, holy men of God? Are they truly spiritual? May I say if the lay leader will do his godly duty and help hold up the pastor's hands, see that he gets his salary, at least enough to live on, get it on time and get all, pray for him, work with him, hold up his hands, things will, in my judgment, change a great deal.

Sometimes one gets in who has but little of the quality to fit him for this place. I hope not many.

But sometimes the word of one of this sort gets his case before the right ones, and too often carries his case to the great hurt of the preacher, and reflects on the whole system. If a wise, godly board, associated with a preacher, does not find out his financial standing, difficulties, shortcomings, his tight places, advise, caution, they are short in some things. He soon finds out that he must go it alone. No one to stand by him and make him feel strong, it puts him to a great disadvantage.

On the other hand if he starts on his preacher from the very moment that he is associated with him as pastor, criticises, refuses co-operation, top to bottom will let God have his way, in us, his preacher has not had a fair deal, but still demands his removal, how can he be listened too? Let me say in conclusion that if all of us from top to bottom, will let God have His way, in us, through us, and with us, it will bring things to pass that none of us have ever seen.

Let God deal a broadside and darkness will flee away.

MERIDIAN ON THE AIR

That is better than being "in the air." "On the air" carries the idea of riding the ether waves with rapid progress, and "in the air" is a gas-inflated bag which is liable to explode at any time.

I heard of a little steamboat, that once upon a time plied the waters of the Mississippi River between Natchez and Vicksburg, that could scarcely generate enough steam to carry its load up stream and when it whistled it would tie up until it could steam up again. Someone asked the captain why he whistled and he answered, "So people will know we are still on the river." Now, Mr. Editor, we have very little time and energy to whistle, so this is a "tie up" proposition.

I met the preachers again Monday, January 5, in the Missionary Institute. Everyone is well and at work. Christmas is over and the chicken hash and fruit cake crumbs are all gone and we are back on normal rations. Our elder is still in "high." It seems that he knows exactly what to do and when to do it and how to get everybody else at it; he is as good as the best. He is making this district in "long strides" and it makes us short fellows trot to keep in sight; but everyone is in line and following with due step, though some may be a long way off.

Brother Ben Sutherland was at his best Monday. His sermon at the Missionary Institute on "The Church" made us all feel that we had an important part on a great program and we were compelled to do our best. That makes me think. You read Clark's article on "The Art of Being a Methodist"? He said the two elements in the art of being a Methodist were, "Information and Participation." Now, that is fine, and I have worked that out this way: Information is the mother of inspiration and inspiration finds no rest without participation and participation brings perspiration and the results of all this is consceration. Now, you know, Mr. Editor, if a person does not get his shirt moist with perspiration and his knees tough by consecration he will not get very far with the program of God's Church. I always did want to be a part of some big business. When I was a boy I thought I would like to be a runner in a bank, a water boy for a sawmill or a porter on a train just to be associated with big business. But what Clark says, that a member of the Methodist Church is an equal stockholder in an institution that has 7,000 preachers, 18,000 churches, 2,650,000 members, 3 universities, 26 white and 8 Negro colleges, 41 Junior Colleges, educating 32,000 young people, has 12 hospitals, 500 missionaries, 600 native mission preachers, 1000 mission churches, with 65,000 members, 300 mission schools, 15 mission hospitals, besides Wesley houses, orphanages, rescue homes, etc. Has property worth $250,000,000 with an annual expense of $43,000,000, and it reaches around the world in all languages known and as far out as the last man, and as far in as the deep longings of the soul and as far up as the heavens, and its wealth will endure forever. An institution like this makes Ford's business look like a country barber shop compared to Sears-Roebuck.

Now, Mr. Editor, can you tell me how a person can be a partner in a business like this and never participate except to draw a dividend from a civilization established by the Church, enjoy a liberty bought with the Church and exercise a citizenship produced by the Church? I just cannot understand how one could be indifferent to a big business like this, especially when the Church is the only institution that deals with eternal values.

The preachers and laymen of this district do not expect to be little partners in a big business; but we are going to invest our all in its success and final triumph.

SWIFTY.

The Home Circle

WHEN PAPA WAS A LITTLE BOY

When papa was a little boy,
You really couldn't find
In all the State of Washington
A child so quick to mind.
His mother never called but once,
And he was always there;
He never made the baby cry,
Or pulled his sister's hair.

He never slid down balusters,
Or made the slightest noise;
And never in his life was known
To fight with other boys.
He always studied hard at school,
And got his lessons right;
And chopping wood and milking cows
Were papa's chief delight.

He never grumbled when he had
To do the evening chores,
And ne'er in all his life forgot
To shut the stable doors.
He never, never thought of play
Until his work was done,
He labored hard from break of day
Until the set of sun.

He never scraped his muddy shoes
Upon the parlor floor,
And never answered back his ma,
And never banged the door.
"But truly, I could never see,"
Said little Dick Malloy,
"How he could never do these things,
And really be a boy."

INTERRUPTIONS

By Mrs. Effie Smith Ely

At the click of the gate latch, Ruth Sprang from the porch swing to greet her visitor, while the trouble in her eyes partly faded.

"How cool and sweet your look in that filmy dress, Aunt Mildred—as if you never had a care in your life. I've just been wondering about you."

"Why, Ruth, what's wonderful about me?" Mrs. Ellison laughed.

"I've been wondering how you find time to do your own work and live your own life so well, when you are always stopping to help other people. Everybody calls on you for aid and advice, but it never seems to worry or hinder you at all. I'm always so rushed for time that it frets me when anything interferes with my plans. I've had so many interruptions to-day that I've not been able to get any real work done, and I'm all frayed out. Mrs. Carter was the last straw."

"What did Mrs. Carter do?"

"You know, the day after to-morrow is a holiday, and the girls of our club have planned to drive out to the university to hear a lecture that some noted speaker is to give on Community Improvement. He's an authority on his subject, and we've been studying social service this year, so we're wild to hear him. But after all our planning, Mrs. Carter—she's the little woman who teaches that class of grown boys in Sunday school—called me up this afternoon and asked me to go with her and the boys for a picnic at Shady Springs that day. She wants me to take my class of girls along and help with the games and the lunch. Of course, I can't think of going, but I hate to disappoint her."

"Can't Mrs. Carter manage by herself, or get somebody else to help instead of you?"

"Oh, no; she couldn't take care of that crowd. Mrs. Carter is a perfect dear, and the boys all love her, but she's one of those helpless people who can't manage anything. She said the other teachers had already made their arrangements for the holiday, so if I couldn't go they would have to give up the excursion. The pity of it is that the boys and girls all work in factories or stores every day, and if they miss this outing they won't have another soon."

"What answer did you give to Mrs. Carter?"

"I told her I just couldn't give up that lecture—social service is such an important subject. But isn't it vexatious that every time I get a little leisure and chance for intellectual improvement, somebody wants me to do something? How much simpler and easier life would be if there were no interruptions."

An odd light twinkled in the older woman's eyes. "Yes, life would be simpler and easier without interruptions, but I don't think it would be half so interesting or worth while. Somebody has said that interruptions are opportunities in disguise. I've found that true, over and over."

"Ruth," continued Mrs. Ellison, "shall I tell you of an interruption I had when I was young and eager like you? I was just out of college, teaching my first school, and trying to keep up my music and languages by spare time study. Every minute after my day's work was ended was golden, so I was greatly annoyed when a city mission worker asked me to teach a class in the little night school he had organized. I would have refused, but there was nobody else to teach the class. And what an opportunity that class proved to be. There were two Italian mill girls who taught me more Italian than I taught them English. I gained new points of view, and an interest in mission work which has lasted all my life."

"But, Aunt Mildred," Ruth protested, "interruptions don't usually turn out in that story-book way. Many a time I've seen you stop your sewing to write a letter for old Mrs. Jenkins, or leave your own baking to show that funny little bride, Mrs. Dunlop, what was the matter with her cake. Did you find joy and opportunity in hindrances like those?"

"I certainly did. Poor old Mrs. Jenkins, out of her checkered life, has brought me more worldly wisdom and heavenly wisdom, too, than some learned books have revealed. I've had more hearty laughs with Mrs. Dunlop over the comedy of errors her cooking has been than I could have gotten at a circus—and she's learned to be a fine cook at last. You don't know how much fun it is to hunt for the opportunity hidden in any particularly vexatious interruption."

There was a long silence, broken only by the trill of katydids in the darkening maples.

"I guess you are right, Aunt Mildred," Ruth spoke softly. "I've been so anxious to do big, significant things that I've been missing some of my best chances to broaden my own life and help others. I suppose when people interrupt us it's because they need us."

She rose and went to the telephone with quick, resolute steps. "I'm going to call Mrs. Carter right now and tell her I've changed my mind. Those boys and girls shall have their outing after all."—Exchange.

BUCKING UP

By Vera B. Ford

Betty Ann turned her little frail body over as fast as she dared and gave her pillows a shaking. This she had done at least a dozen times that day. And it was only one o'clock. They would get another dozen before the day was ended.

For Betty Ann all days had been very much alike—until a few minutes before. Just days—days growing into months—then years. It had been seven years. She was twelve now. Yes, for seven years she had been a cripple. But what of that? Others had been even longer. And so she thought of it, taking everything as a matter of course.

But now, just a few minutes ago, everything had changed. Here she lay thinking of things she had never thought of before. She had overheard her mother and one of her friends talking. They were talking about her. And then came the words that had brought about this sudden change.

"Sylvia, I'm so sorry for Betty Ann. She's getting so thin and pale. It might have been best if—." The sentence was not finished. Betty Ann thought she heard sniffs. But these words! She remembered them. And then her mother's words.

"Yes, Mary, but we must never let her know. We must go on trying to cheer her up."

That was all. But she had heard it. Now she was thinking—building new footholds on which to climb.

"They must not be sorry for me," she whispered over and over again. She knew she must stay in bed, but she didn't want folks to feel sorry for her—to pity her. No, she could never stand that. For these seven years her family and friends had been doing all kinds of things for her comfort and all the time they had been feeling sorry for her. Why had she not thought of that?" But she had not. She now felt that she had accepted everything and given nothing.

"I'm going to make them sorry they have been sorry for me. They are going to feel that they have gone to unnecessary trouble." Betty Ann almost shouted these words to the four walls about her. She was going to begin right then. After all she had lots to live for. From her own big window she could see the setting sun—the moon as it climbed on its way—trees and flowers. The birds sang to her. Books and pictures were piled on her table. The most tempting trays were brought right to her bedside. Every wish was granted. Why, God had made everything just for her! And she had failed to do her part. But now new thoughts and feelings were being born. Right there in her own little bed she was going to put her shoulder to the wheel. Her room was to be a place where others would go to catch a bit of cheer and sunshine. She was going to make it so. Nothing would keep her from it.

And Betty Ann did. She made all feel that they were missing something—that right there in that little room you could see and feel things that you could not elsewhere. Of course God is everywhere but they felt that most of him was right there.

Betty Ann knew her strength was limited, but she also knew there was no limit to love and good cheer. She was smiling all the time and her smiles were getting to be contagious. Everybody smiled. Aside from being cheerful she was actually doing things for her loved ones. There were lots of things she could do. Her mother didn't have to stop her work now to do a bit of basting, hemming or darning. Too, she was making pictures for children who were less fortunate than she. There was nothing wrong with her hands and she kept them busy. And story telling had become one of her favorite hobbies. Sometimes her room was crowded with children. She had something to tell the grown-ups too—about the things she was going to do when she got on her feet again.

"I'm just resting up for the days ahead," she would often say.

Then a day came when she overheard whispered voices again.

"Sylvia, I think she's wonderful. I believe she gets more out of life than you or I do. That child is going to get up some day. Now watch my word."

Her mother said something, but Betty Ann did not hear it. The happy thumping in her heart was too loud.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

Editorial

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE EDITOR

The routine work of getting out the Advocate has not been changed. The editor is at his desk in New Orleans on Tuesdays, at which time the material is edited for the first half of the following week's paper; and the last half of the present week's issue is proofed and the paper is put on the press. Again on Fridays he is in the office, at which time the material is edited for the last half of the following week's issue, and the first part of the following week's is finally proofed.

Contributors will be patient for there are many articles in reserve; and each will be given a place as soon as practicable. We would be glad to have the brethren in the three Conferences express themselves through the Advocate.

Mr. Chalmers, the manager, is in the office every day, and the editor every Tuesday and Friday, and we will be glad to have you call when in the city.

J. L. DECELL, Editor.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

We thank Mrs. B. F. White, Pioneer, La., for two new subscriptions and appreciate her good wishes for the Advoate.

Rev. J. A. Alford, of St. Mark's, suffered for some weeks with the "flu" and was kept in his room. He is out and at work now.

Rev. Don E. Dulany, of Morgan City, has been suffering from after effects of the "flu." Last reports were to the effect that he was still unable to do his work.

In sending a subscription to the Advocate, Rev. W. H. Lane, pastor at Wiggins, Miss., writes that "the work on my new charge is opening up well and we expect good results for the year."

Rev. J. A. McCormack says that he has received a fine reception by his people and also the town of Franklin, where he has been returned for the beginning of his eighth year in that important field.

The Rotary Club of Crowley, La., attended the Crowley Methodist Church on a recent Sunday night, when Rev. Claude K. Smith preached an inspiring sermon on the subject, "He profits most who serves best."

Rev. M. E. Scott, pastor, Pickens, Miss., writes, "We had our First Quarterly Conference yesterday (January 11) with good reports; no reduction in salaries for this year and the outlook is most encouraging."

After his operation at the Gulfport Hospital, Rev. C. P. Jones, pastor, Main Street, Biloxi, was able to preach for the first time on Sunday night, January 18. Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder, was announced to preach in the morning service.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor, First Church, Gulfport, is to have Dr. G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, for a week's "Make Church Membership Mean More", revival. We trust that they will have gratifying results.

Dr. W. L. Doss., Jr., presiding elder of the New Orleans District, addressed the W. C. T. U. celebration of the anniversary of Prohibition on Friday, January 16. His leadership counts for all good civic and spiritual movements in the great city which he serves.

Rev. H. H. Smith, Ashland, Va., has issued another edition of his pamphlet, "The Methodist Steward." It is crowded with good things, and pastors would do well to secure copies and present one to each of his stewards. Single copies, 10c or 30 copies for $2.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor, First Church, Gulfport, Miss., has our thanks for a list of five subscriptions with check to cover. Brother Broadfoot is entering upon his second year at Gulfport with encouraging prospects for success in every department of the church.

Dr. J. A. Smith, pastor, Capitol Street, Jackson, was the radio speaker on Wednesday evening, January 21, over WJDX. He spoke on "Thrift of Life Insurance," and Mr. E. H. Hicks, president of Mississippi Underwriters, was anxious that all who could would hear Dr. Smith's message.

Rev. Lewis L. Davis, a local Methodist preacher and a Confederate veteran, aged ninety-two years, died at the Jefferson Davis Soldiers' Home last week. Rev. J. M. Corley, pastor, Collins, Miss., conducted the funeral services at the Davis Memorial Chapel, near Collins.

Rev. Otis Spinks, pastor at Newellton, La., begins the new year under favorable circumstances. The Tensas Gazette says of his appointment, "Newellton is fortunate in having secured Rev. Spinks for the pastorate of the Methodist church; his sermons are attractive and his singing is helpful."

Rev. N. G. Augustus, Ponotoc, Miss., in a letter to the office, states that he has been a reader of the Advocate for over sixty years. Brother Augustus is a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, and notwithstanding that relation is yet able to do much, and is a writer of ability.

Rev. T. B. Thrower, former pastor, performed the marriage ceremony for Miss Lillian M. Pund and Mr. Donald J. Baker in the Crowder Methodist Church. The happy young couple left after the ceremony for Ann Arbor, Mich., where the groom is to continue his studies in the University of Michigan.

Rev. O. L. Tucker has been moved from Wisner, La., to Rayville to succeed his lamented father; and Rev. H. L. Norton has been moved from Edwards, Miss., to Moss Point, to take the place of Rev. C. C. Evans, deceased. The Advocate office has not been informed as to who goes to Wisner nor Edwards.

Rev. Marlin H. McCormack, Jr., pastor, Eden and Bentonia, Miss., writes that he has had the best start of his ministry. He is enthusiastic about the outlook and says he has the full co-operation of his people. Happy the people and pastor who can do the work of the Lord with such sympathetic interest.

Under the leadership of Rev. D. W. Poole, pastor at McDonoghville, that church has recently purchased a splendid new lot in a fine location. They hope to have this fully paid for during the present year and to make plans for a new church at some time in the future, or the removal of their present building to the new location.

Mrs. J. L. Adams, wife of Mr. J. L. Adams, a prominent attorney of Quitman, Miss., died at her home in Quitman on Monday, January 19. Mrs. Adams was a faithful member of the Methodist church and will be greatly missed by those who served with her. Rev. H. Mellard, her pastor, conducted the last rites.

Rev. Waldo W. Moore, pastor, Carriere, Miss., is highly pleased with his opportunity this year, especially with the work for the young people. There are four brick school buildings within the bounds of the charge. Brother and Sister Moore will avail themselves of every opportunity to guide these young people in the nobler paths of life.

Rev. J. B. Peters, D.D., pastor, First Church, New Orleans, and chairman of the Advocate Publishing Committee, has found time to substantially help out with the Advocate and do the work on his charge, too, since Conference. He enters upon his sixth year as pastor at First Church. Virginians are uniformly courteous and helpful and Dr. Peters is in no wise an exception.

Rev. M. S. Monk, pastor, Parker Memorial, New Orleans, delighted the workers in the Advocate office, on Friday, January 23, by calling and securing the list of subscribers for his church. We enjoyed meeting Brother Monk and was gratified to find him fully recovered from his recent illness. He reports having been most cordially received at Parker Memorial and being happy in his work.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor First Church, Greenwood, Miss., is carrying out plans for advance in the Spiritual Life of his people. Rev. Herman A. Butts, one of our General Evangelists, may be reached at Box 2372, DeSoto Station, Memphis, Tenn. Rev. J. L. Sells writes concerning brother Butts, "He preaches with unction and power and the people hear him gladly. He is among the best I have ever known. I heartily commend him as worthy to work anywhere."

The group Insurance plan in the Mississippi Conference is a success. Brother W. D. Hawkins, secretary, mailed Mrs. C. C. Evans a check for her husband's insurance in a few days after he passed away. Brother Hawkins is rendering efficient and unselfish service to the preachers of his Conference, and all who possibly can should enroll as members of the insurance group.

Wm. B. Reily Coffee Co., New Orleans, have the appreciation of the editor and manager for their continued advertisements, which help out no little in the work of the paper. They are makers of Luzianne coffee, which is good coffee. Mr. W. B. Reily, Sr., the president of the company, is an official member of our Rayne Memorial Church, and as a citizen stands for the Eighteenth Amendment and other good causes.

Rev. John F. Foster, the cultured pastor at Bunkie, La., is beginning the new Conference year with bright prospects. The editor appreciates his expression of good will for the Advocate.

The Interstate Progress, of Logansport, La., carried an article concerning the recent visit of Rev. H. T. Carley, presiding elder, of Shreveport. The occasion of the First Quarterly Conference was one of inspiration and plans for the year's work were definitely outlined.

In a communication requesting sample copies of the Advocate, Rev. J. M. Boykin, pastor, Grand Cain, La., states, "We are getting started off in our work on this charge in a rather encouraging way; our reception has been most gracious. We are looking forward to one of the best years of our ministry." The Advocate appreciates the interest of Brother Boykin and wishes for him and his churches the best of success.

Mr. Robert Emmett Silverstein, Jr., was married to Miss Jane Elizabeth Odom at Winona by Rev. A. C. McCorkle, pastor of the Moore Memorial Methodist Church, on Sunday, December 28. Mr. Silverstein is a son of Dr. R. E. Silverstein, who is a steward in our church at Tylertown, Miss. The young couple intend to make their home in Tylertown, and the Advocate joins their many friends in best wishes.

The present era of depression will doubtless prove a blessing in more than one way. Distinguished leaders recently held a convention in Washington, at which they discussed "permanent preventives of unemployment." There should be a method by which such depression should be prevented in the future, and turning the minds toward the cure of unemployment will contribute no little toward that end.

Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor, Amite, La., is happy on his new charge and starts about his work as one who knows what it is all about. He requests a list of subscribers for his charge, and says, "We have been graciously received by the good people of Amite, and the outlook appears promising. The congregation is housed in a most adequate building, especially for Sunday school purposes. We are expecting a great year."

Rev. J. T. Harris, pastor, Felicity Street, New Orleans, is felicitous over the outlook in his historic charge for the year. Brother Harris is Advocate reporter for the New Orleans District and favored us with a visit one day last week. He and Mrs. Harris are rejoicing over the arrival of James Thomas, Jr., who came to bless their lives on December 19, 1930. We congratulate the happy parents and wish for the little man a useful life.

Rev. H. S. Westbrook, pastor, Vaughan, Miss., in a letter to the editor, writes. "We are getting along reasonably well with our work here for the Master. Have had some helpful services since our return from Conference. We have been most cordially received by our parishioners; they have been thoughtful of our needs in many ways, which we appreciate very much. We hope to be able to make this our third year the best of the three." Brother Westbrook is one of the faithful men of his conference and will make his work count for the Master.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, pastor, Drew, Miss., in a letter to the editor requesting a list of the subscribers on his charge, writes: "This great Delta is in distress. Many lack the necessities of life. Though we share with our people the prevailing times, we are happy in our work. We could not possibly be more delighted with the people in any other charge in the Church. Our parsonage home is modern and convenient and our people loyal to the pastor and devoted to the church." We may expect genuine revival fires to burn this year at Drew.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT NOTES

The district stewards met in Court Street Church, December 2, and attended to the business of the district allotted to them. W. A. Holloway of Mt. Olive, was elected secretary. Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor at Main Street, Hattiesburg, presided while the stewards were fixing the presiding elder's salary. After consultation with him, the salary was made $4,000 for the year. Every preacher in the district and most of the distrct stewards were present.

The District Board of Lay Activities met along with the stewards and attended to items of business.

Rev. B. L. Sutherland spoke to the conference in interest of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, also the Orphans' Home. Mr. W. D. Hawkins addressed the meeting in behalf of full payment of the benevolences.

The Richton Zone of the Missionary Society of the district met at New Augusta, Wednesday, December 3, with the zone leader in the chair. There was a good attendance of the ladies and the program rendered was inspirational and helpful. Revs. F. B. Ormond, A. J. Boyles, J. C. Ellis, W. A. Terry, R. H. Clegg and W. A. Hays, were present at the meeting; part of them having part on the program.

All the pastors are hard at work on their charges and the people are co-operating with them and so far we have not heard a pessimistic note sounded. There seems to be loyalty and a heroic faith on the part of all concerned, and these times of depression are proving a blessing unto us.

It seems from reports generally that Brother Terry is a happy fit at Richton and Piave. The people and preacher are delighted. The starting of the mill at Piave makes the prospects much brighter there for success in a material way.

Two building projects are being completed. One at Petal, where the Sunday school annex has been started for some time and now being completed with brick veneer. The report from Petal is that prospects are brightest ever there. The other undertaking is the completion of an annex to the church at New Augusta, which will add very materially to the work of the church in that community. Bro. Boyles begins his fourth year with bright hopes of a good year.

Bro. Holyfield at Magee gives account of the activities of his good people by being able to report something paid on the benevolences at the first Quarterly Conference.

Bro. Oliver at Prentiss reports watch night service December 31, with eighty-three present and the Holy Spirit's presence felt all the way through the service. He also says they have painted the parsonage on the inside and remembered the pastor and family with an old-time pounding.

The work here in Hattiesburg starts well. Bro. Lewis at Main Street has his church about organized for the year's work and the prospects are bright.

Bro. Roberts, the new pastor at Court Street, seems to be getting the situation in hand and making a good start. He bought 250 copies of mission study book at the Missionary Institute; this by far the largest number any one pastor bought.

The people at Broad Street held their prayer service Wednesday night, December 31, in the nature of a watch night service. They observed week of prayer services, January 4-9, and also observed the month of January as Church-loyalty month. They, too, have remembered pastor and family with an old-time pounding.

We understand that in every place where the Quarterly Conference has been held thus far there has not been any reduction in amount assessed for the support of the pastor.

R. H. CLEGG, Reporter.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE, JACKSON DISTRICT

The missionary institute of the Jackson District met in Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., at 10 o'clock a. m., Thursday, January 8, 1931. The worship program of the Institute was led by L. L. Cowen, the pastor of the local church. Several missionary hymns were sung; there was a chain of voluntary sentence prayers, and Dr. Cowen read a lesson from the third chapter of Luke. Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder, took charge and stated the purpose of the gathering. Rev. J. A. Smith, representing the Conferene Commission on Benevolences, and Dr. A. W. Martin of Nashville, Tenn., representing the General Commission on Benevolences, brought the chief addresses of the morning, stressing the importance of the Cultivation period, the Kingdom Extension Offering, and full payments of all Apportionments. J. C. Wood, lay leader of the Jackson District, spoke of the opportunities and duties of the Church and charge lay leaders.

W. D. Hawkins and Rev. C. A. Schultz spoke on the need of a better circulation of Christian Literature and respectively pressed the claims of the Missionary Voice and the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Miss Pattie Lewis, Mrs. P. H. Grice and Mrs. Robert Rodgers were appointed to secure subscriptions to the Voice during the noon hour. After singing the Doxology the Institute was dismissed for lunch, the benediction being pronounced by Dr. A. W. Martin.

After a bountiful lunch served in the basement by the ladies of Galloway Memorial Church, the Institute again convened at 1:30 p. m. "Onward, Christian Soldiers," was sung, and Rev. G. E. Allan led in prayer. A note of hopefulness and optimism concerning the conditions in the churches of the district was sounded by Brother Leggett. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, lay leader of the Mississippi Conference, addressed the Institute. Mr. D. W. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, was presented, and he explained the cultivation period and financial plans for the Kingdom Extension Offering, distributed the literature and took the orders for the study books. Rev. J. T. Leggett read the quotas of the different charges for the Kingdom Extension Offering and presented a plan for the exchange of pulpits during the Cultivation Period.

It was announced that about one hundred fifty had attended the Institute: 7 Epworth League presidents, 18 presidents of Woman's Missionary societies, 6 church and charge lay leaders, 22 pastors and 5 other preachers, 19 chairmen and members of missionary committee, 35 superintendents, officers and teachers of Sunday schools, and 16 chairmen and members of Boards of Stewards were in the Institute. After singing "A Charge To Keep I Have," the Institute adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Rev. B. F. Lewis.

TIME FOR A BIG FUNERAL

L. P. Jacks said "There is a coward and hero in every man." If that be true now is the time for the death and burial and no resurrection of "the coward."

Sentinel of METAL!

Whether water is to be kept in or out, metal is chosen. In grave vaults, especially, metal is ideal, for a grave vault that allows water to enter is money wasted.

Made of 12 gauge, specially processed Keystone Copper Steel or Armco Ingot Iron, the Clark Grave Vault offers the dependable protection of metal. The seams are welded inside and out; there is not even a pinhole through which a drop of water may enter. Using the principle of the diving bell, the Clark requires no man-made seals. No wonder the Clark is guaranteed for fifty years.

The Clark is also made in a perpetually guaranteed de luxe model of 10 gauge solid copper.

Clark Vaults can be obtained through better funeral directors everywhere, in Gray or White Lacquer Finish, Copper Bronze or Gold Bronze Finish, Silvertone or Copper Finish on vaults Cadmium Plated by Udylite Process, De Luxe 10 Gauge Solid Copper.

REV. JOHN O. WILLIAMS was born near Thomasville, Ga., November 14, 1836. Died at Proctor, Texas, January 8, 1931, being a little over 94 years old. He was twice married, and was the father of eleven children; four survive him. He was converted in 1864, while in the Confederate army. In the year of 1868 he joined the Masonic order, and was for over 40 years an active member. Brother Williams was licensed to preach in the M. E. Church, South, in 1883, doing quite an extensive work in the ministry. I am told thaat he was a splendid preacher, and from what experience I had with him I can say that he was indeed a wonderful character. No doubt he possessed many of the qualities of the godly preacher of many years ago; he was a man of large vision, deep in thought, lovable and very spiritual, patient and unassuming in his manner of life—these are some of the qualities that many of the old-time preachers possessed. It was a great pleasure for the writer to be in his presence and enjoy the sweet fellowship with him, for you felt that you were in the presence of one who knew the Lord in reality. His body was consigned to resting place at Bethany Cemetery, the services being conducted by the writer and with Masonic orders. May the richest blessings be upon the loved ones and his many friends.

C. B. POWELL.

MRS. MARTHA ELMORE, daughter of Benjamin H. and Elizabeth McGee, was born near Durant, Miss., March 31, 1846, and died at her home in Durant, December 12, 1930. In her early life her parents moved to Acona, in Holmes County. With the exception of a few years spent in Kentucky she passed all of her long life in the county of her birth. On September 10, 1874, she was married to Mr. P. M. Elmore, who, with four children, H. H. Elmore, Dr. R. C. Elmore, Mrs. Bessie Griffin of Vicksburg, and Mrs. Lillie Williams, survive her. As is the case with most women of highly useful type her life was so spent in the performance of the duties of home as to leave little or nothing of a striking nature to be noted. If it can be said, "Happy is the nation that has no history," so, likewise, it may be said of those whose uniform performance of duty makes them the most useful. She made a home for her husband and children. With industry and fidelity she performed the unnoted but vastly important duties of wife and mother. The worthy life that her motherhood gave to the world, and which her motherly care fashioned in the worthy manhood and womanhood of her children is her best and most enduring monument. Reared in the atmosphere of a devout and godly home, in childhood she gave herself to God and joined the Methodist church and faithfully kept its obligation for over three score and ten years. In the various relations as wife, mother, neighbor, friend and church member she was faithful throughout her long life. After her more than four score years of life she passed peacefully to rest and was buried in Durant. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. Their works do follow them."

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Pontotoc, Miss.

Our church at West Point has lost one of its oldest and most useful members and our State has lost one of its greatest physicians in the death of DR. UNGER, of that place, on December 6, 1930. Jacob William Unger, son of James David and Julia Elizabeth Unger, was born in Lexington County, S. C., on August 8, 1851. Moving to Attala County in his youth, he studied medicine and received degrees from the Louisville Medical College and the Kentucky School of Medicine in 1875. He practiced medicine at Newport, Attala County, and at Sharon, Madison County, until 1885. Since which time he has practiced at West Point, Miss., until his death. On January 25, 1877, he was married to Miss Maggie Crawford Neal, who died April 23, 1897, without issue. On January 18, 1900, he was married to Miss Florence H. McMillan, of Louisville, Miss., who, with three children, Ansel Merton, Jacob William, Jr., and Mrs. Annie Elizabeth Davidson, survive him. Dr. Unger was a man of great fondness for reading, and to gratify this taste he was a buyer and reader of good books, accumulating a fine general library. But the passion of his life was medicine. In quest of knowledge in his great calling, he at intervals attended lectures in several of the great medical schools of the country. And in addition to these occasional studies at schools he bought and continuously studied the chief medical books of the day. With a peculiar broad mindedness, he limited himself to no particular school, but drew from every side the resources which he used in his successful practice. His devotion to his calling was such that he followed it to the end of his days and his strength, and "ceased at once to work and live."

Of a kind and gentle nature, he made and kept his friends and lived in touch with his day and the life of his day. He belonged to the great fraternal orders. He was a consistent member and liberal supporter of the Methodist church at West Point for 45 years. Faithful in the various relations of life as husband, father, citizen, physician and churchman, he literally served his generation by the will of God."

Pontotoc, Miss.

MRS. MARY E. THOMPSON, of Moss Point, Miss., wife of the late Dr. W. R. Thompson, passed to her reward at 1:30 a. m., Friday, January 9, 1931, after an illness of fourteen months. Mrs. Thompson's passing was only a translation to that "home not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens"; and knowing she has only "Fallen Asleep in Jesus," brings assurance and comfort to the many sad hearts who mourn her passing but glory in her resurrection. What a beautiful life was hers, truly filled with fruits of holiness, a loving testimony in consecration and loving service to her Lord, which had the beginning in early childhood, when she would gather the little "slave negroes" about her and teach them of Jesus, reading the Scriptures and singing sacred songs with them. On March 29, 1876, she was married to Walter R. Thompson, of Copiah Co., moving to Hazelhurst the same year. She was present at the Mississippi Annual Conference when the first woman's missionary society was organized, and at the time of her passing, with one exception, was the only surviving member; she was also a life member of the missionary society. With heart and soul consecrated to the service of her Lord, she never considered her frail little body but went about always doing good. There was never (and that covers a large territory, but it is nevertheless true) a more faithful church member, always present at every service, and always contributing of her limited means; "I want to have my name in every good cause," as she expressed it. For 25 years she was organist at the local Methodist church, until ill health overcame her, and she had a record of over 20 years' perfect attendance at Sunday school, serving as superintendent and teacher of the beginners' department, and superintendent of the home department. Truly she loved her church and reared her children, "who rise up and call her blessed," in its glorious, triumphant faith. She was lovable in disposition, cheerful and optimistic, and her life was replete with golden deeds of service for others, especially among the poor. A beautiful tribute to her was expressed by one of her former Sunday school pupils, now a sophomore at M. S. C. W., in Columbus: "My earliest remembrance or religious influence and training in Sunday school goes back to one little Sunday school room where Mrs. Thompson met with us every Sunday morning and so lovingly and tenderly taught us to love the God she loved so much; and all this will go with me through life and help me to be a better Christian. I loved her dearly and now when I think of her I'll know she is one of God's most beautiful angels." Mrs. Thompson, who was 79 years old, is survived by two children, Jesse W. and Miss Ina Thompson, two brothers and three sisters.

METHODIST AUXILIARIES

A meeting was held Friday, January 9, in the First Methodist Church of Gulfport for the purpose of making preparations to care for some 200 delegates of the Woman's Missionary Conference of the Mississippi Conference which will convene in Gulfport April 7, to 10. Mrs. E. T. Riemann, president of the Gulfport Auxiliary, presided, offering prayer and briefly stating the object of the meeting. Mrs. R. E. Johnson was then asked to take charge.

A program was formulated in which plans were made for entertaining delegates in the homes. A motor ride along the coast and teas were other features of entertainment.

Mrs. Riemann expressed appreciation for the splendid representation of the Coast Auxiliaries and the interest manifested. Mrs. R. B. Dacey of Biloxi offered the closing prayer.

The Coast Auxiliaries represented were Bay St. Louis, Mesdames C. C. Clark, S. Siler, C. C. McDonald, E. S. Drake, J. A. Evans; Biloxi, Mesdames R. B. Dacey, J. A. Bishop, M. B. Sharbrough, C. D. Nesossis, Murry Cox, L. Allen, J. Seymour, W. O. Felker; Moore Community House, Miss Ellis; Wesley House, Miss Helen Reeves, Miss Edith Leighty; Long Beach, Mesdames B. J. Parker, J. V. Jeffries.—Gulfport Herald.

A WORD OF COURAGE

Phillips Brooks said: "Do not pray for easy lives, pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers; pray for powers equal to your tasks! Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle, but you shall be a miracle, and every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life that has come to you through the goodness of God."

THE SEVEN PRINCIPLES OF MISSIONS

World-wide Christian missions must be saved from decline and defeat by an apostolic revival of what may be called the seven principles of Missions.

1. Absolute obedience to our Lord's command.
2. Honest acceptance of stewardship in money and other talents.
3. Consecration of children to God from birth.
4. Impression of Missionary obligations on the individual consciences.
5. Widespread information about the world field and its spiritual needs and the work of God in all lands.
6. Separation from unwholesome and weakening worldly contaminations.
7. Praying in the Holy Spirit for the whole field, the work and the worker.—Missionary Review.

SUPERINTENDENT OF MISSION AND BIBLE STUDY, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

I am writing you regarding the co-operation of the women with the cultivation period of the boards during the January-February campaign. We are desirous that this year, as in other years, there shall be as full co-operation as possible and that this co-operation shall be a help in making the effort profitable. In order to participate in this study in such a way as to get credit for it, the women are asked to give attention to the following directions:

A woman's missionary society will receive credit for the book used during the Missionary Cultivation period if it is taken under the direction of the pastor as a part of a Church School of Missions in which the other departments of the church participate. The women, by arrangement with the pastor, may have their own class for which they will receive Council credit if the work comes up to the standard, or they may be in a school with other adults, and the missionary society will receive credit for their work if there are a creditable number of them in the class. They may also receive a Council Certificate if this mixed class comes up to the standard. No group of women buying the book and taking it by themselves without relation to the pastor's plans for the cultivation of the church as a whole can count this as an accredited text. The thing that we are trying to do is to encourage our women to co-operate with the pastors and help to make this special cultivation period a success by lending their influence to it, but we do want to make sure that the pastors do not sell the books to the woman's missionary society and put upon that society alone the responsibility of doing the study. The women will do the study anyway, whether the pastor promotes the cultivation period or not, but the real objective is that the Church as a whole shall have the cultivation in missions.

Hoping that the women of your auxiliary shall have a worthy part in this church-wide educational work, I am,

Sincerely yours,
MRS. JOSEPH A. SMITH.

QUESTIONS ASKED, AND ANSWERED BY MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB

Q.—In attaining the Standard of Excellence, what is meant by "fifty per cent attendance on monthly meetings"?

Ans.—That a society which holds ONE monthly meeting should have an average attendance of fifty per cent of its membership for the twelve meetings. A society that is divided into circles should have an average attendance of fifty per cent, all told, for all the meetings of the year. In other words, a woman's attendance upon the circle meetings should count, even if she does not get to the regular meetings.

Q.—How is the increase in Children's department reckoned?

Ans.—The increase in the Children's membership for the year is counted before any promotion takes place; at the end of the year rather than at the beginning.

The Superintendent of Study and Publicity, Mrs. B. D. Pace, Poplar Springs W. M. S., Meridian, Miss., gives an interesting account of the splendid work done in their society. While there are only twenty members, they try to measure up to the standard. In Bible study, they used "The Life and Letters of Paul,"; studied two mission books in the required time, and had a lesson each month from the Voice, using the questions asked on the page and request that in answering them a sketch of the article be given, which stimulates the reading of the Voice. All members subscribe for the Voice.

A social meeting is enjoyed each month.

"In a financial way we have not been altogether idle," and the following report testifies:

For local work	$536.00
Sent Conf. Treas.	106.55
City Mission Board	27.00
Supplies	81.35
Total	$750.90

"We hope to have a better record for another year."

SOUR STOMACH

Gas Formed, Head Hurt, and Woman Had To Hold To Things When She Walked.

Kaufman, Texas.—"Two years ago, I began suffering with spells of indigestion," says Mrs. Marshall Smith, of this place. "It seemed like everything I ate disagreed with me. I had gas on the stomach, and often my head would hurt so bad I had to lie down.

"Everything would get black before my eyes, and I would be so dizzy when I would get upon my feet that I had to hold on to things, to walk around the room.

"My food soured on my stomach, and I was constipated.

"I had often read about Black-Draught, and my mother told me it was a good medicine to take, and so I began a course of it.

"It was not long until I was feeling better. I took a pinch after meals, and I soon found I was suffering much less. It relieved constipation, and I was not any longer troubled with indigestion.

"We try to keep it in the house, and I use Black-Draught now, whenever I feel a sick headache coming on. It is a fine medicine."

Thedford's Black-Draught is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, of highest quality, finely powdered, carefully combined and packaged by automatic machinery. NC-237

There May be Poison in YOUR Bowels!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system form souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The correct date for the Circuit Preachers' Conference will be February 26 and 27. The place of meeting will be Millsaps College. All circuit preachers are invited to attend this conference. Board and room will be $1 a day. Why not several get in one car and come on.

PLEASE CIRCUIT PREACHERS send me a list of your problems so we may tabulate them and spend our time in most worth-while manner possible. We do not contemplate a series of addresses. We will have Dr. W. M. Alexander, the head of the Department of Schools and Colleges of the General Board. We will have Rev. W. A. Martin, head of the Department of Extension Work.

We are planning a Bible hour. Which we trust will be helpful. We are planning that you have the pleasure and profit of attending two regular chapel periods of the college. The afternoons will be used as you may direct when you arrive.

The North Mississippi Conference is joining us in this conference. We are trusting that every circuit preacher in the Conference can arrange to come and be with us. We hope to make this indeed and in truth your meeting.

In our present situation it strikes me more and more forcibly that our only hope is to go forward. God has always been on the side of the aggressive worker. Now is our time for aggressive work. The world needs the Church more than it ever has. We need the opportunity to demonstrate our faith.

The offerings from our 125 faithful Sunday schools is greatly appreciated. It is hoped that the other 250 will make an aggressive forward step. Why not make the heart of the Church glad by taking an offering for Missions next fourth Sunday and sending it to the Board?

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

I wish to direct your attention to the periodicals and literature of our Church. There is no excuse for any member of our great Church to be uninformed. Those in charge of our publications are giving us a vast body of as fine a literature as was ever put out by any Church. It covers every field of activity, every age group, and every phase of life. We have the Sunday school literature, rich in thought and spiritual food suited to all ages. This is not only true of lesson materials, but there are many other journals that supplement the lesson materials. "The Sunday School Magazine," "The Adult Student," both have splendid editorials and articles every month. We have the "High Road," for the young people, and the "Torchbearer" and "Boys and Girls," for the children. "The Elementary Teacher" is a most excellent magazine for teachers and workers as well as parents of children under twelve years of age. "The Workers' Council" is designed for all workers and is always full of information and help as well as inspiration. It was said recently at a great missionary conference at Washington, that the "Missionary Voice" is the best missionary journal on the North American continent. The "Nashville Christian Advocate" is at its best and the same is true of the paper that you hold in your hand, our own "New Orleans Christian Advocate." These are just some of our periodicals, there are many others and they are all good. "In the making of books there is no end."

As leaders we must call our people to the reading of good literature. The world is pouring out into our laps a veritable avalanch of its often vile and even viciously designed literature. It is producing a fine crop of criminals, weaklings and debauchees. If we ever hope to produce a generation of God-fearing, righteous Christian citizens, we must give our literature to the children, youth and adults of our land.

Requests for schools, classes and helps of every kind are coming fast. There is a fine spirit among our people. There is victory always for the faithful. Call on us for help when you need us.

EPWORTH LEAGUE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: Several interesting letters have reached my desk in the last two weeks. I am delighted that new Hi-Leagues are being organized. There is a new one at Coushatta, with Miss Neva Forney as the counselor. The young people of Hineston church are soon to be organized, as Mrs. T. B. Brodnax wrote for information on organization. The Hi-League at Houma has recently been chartered with Miss Annie Lampard as counselor.

I suppose the liveliest Senior chapter in the State just now, if accomplishments have anything to do with it, is the West Monroe Senior Chapter. In writing to ask about a Missionary Study Book they stated that they had already paid $45 on Missions and Conference Promotion and $35 to Mt. Sequoyah, besides the $6 offering taken the first Sunday in December. They are planning already to have delegates at both Mansfield Assembly and Mt. Sequoyah. I had the pleasure of attending their White Christmas Service, where they received $32 in money besides garments, food, and toys for eighteen families. They now have 42 on the roll and almost 100 per cent present. Can't we get such a report from some more chapters? Your chapter may be running a good race with West Monroe, so how about writing us about it?

This report reminds me of the work being done by the Carrollton Leaguers. They presented a beautiful pageant before Christmas and raised their Mission Special money with the offering.

John Rinehart, of Douglas Chapter, writes that their League and Union are both on the boom.

In the past two weeks I have assisted the Shreveport and New Orleans City Unions in setting up their efficiency institutes. At these institutes, which are to be church-wide, we hope to reach the young people of the Sunday school as well as the Epworth League. We should have the largest attendance we have ever had.

The dates for these two institutes are Shreveport, March 1-6, and New Orleans, March 8-13. We are busy lining the unions up for a large successful institute.

Last week I made a trip to Mansfield in behalf of some of our assembly plans. Reverend and Mrs. Hicks are living on the campus, so the college is not quite as deserted as one may expect. Since Reverend Hicks is our Senior Assembly Dean, it is fine that he is so near the year round.

In our next Christian Education Bulletin I am printing the amounts of chapter pledges that have been paid to date. If your chapter has not yet remitted, I'm afraid you will find assembly time right at your door with pledges to pay, delegate funds to raise, school graduation, and a dozen other demands that will cause a shortage somewhere. Please mail your pledges in to F. Harold Riggs, Box 1048, Monroe, La.

I'm sorry this letter goes to the Advocate office before our Union presidents' meeting on the 24th and 25th. We have registrations for 45 or 50 young people, and if the weather permits we are to have the greatest Conference officers' session we have ever had.

Since coming into supervision of the Sunday school young people I have visited several departments in different churches and hope soon to feel that I am well versed on Sunday school methods for the young people.

Brightest

From three to twelve. That's the most important period in a child's growth. And that's the time many are retarded physically and mentally by energy-sapping constipation.

Watch your child, mother! At the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, headache, biliousness, lack of energy or appetite, give California Fig Syrup.

This pure vegetable product will cleanse the little bowels without discomfort. It tones and strengthens weak stomach and bowels. In colds or children's diseases, employ its gentle aid to keep the system free from germs and waste.

Mothers everywhere are eager to tell how it helps children. Mrs. H. Mayer, 1737 Marburg St., Dallas, Texas, says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Danny all his life in colds, biliousness, constipation, upsets, or children's ailments. It keeps him the brightest, happiest six-year-old I know."

NIGHT COUGHING

Quick and Safe Way To Stop It!

Whatever it is due to—cold, catarrhal condition of the throat, dust irritations or smoking—night coughing can and should be stopped! Nothing will pull you down faster, for it not only deprives you of needed sleep, but it tears you to pieces.

At the first sign of a cough, take good old "Piso's for Coughs." It does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages and soothes the inflamed tissues. At the same time, it has a tonic value that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Piso's supplies these five vital effects and it contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give even to babies. All druggists sell Piso's in 35c and 60c sizes. Be sure you get "Piso's for Coughs."

STOMACH UPSET, SOUR? THIS WILL COMFORT

Don't let sour stomach, gas, indigestion make you suffer. And don't use crude methods to get relief. There's no use when millions know the quick way; the pleasant, harmless way.

Just take a spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water. It is alkali in the best form. It neutralizes many times its volume of excess acid—and does it instantly. It will probably end your distress in five minutes. Then you'll know what to do the next time. Crude, harmful methods will never appeal to you again.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia is the perfect way to end digestive disorders due to excess acid for men, women, children—and even babies. It's the method doctors endorse; which hospitals use. For fifty years it has been supreme.

To know the many important uses of Phillips Milk of Magnesia is to keep a bottle in the house, always. Full information with each bottle: Your drug store has the 25c and 50c sizes. Insist on the genuine. A less perfect product may not act the same.

Beginning on February 8, in Lake Charles District, Rev. A. K. McLellan and I are to hold rallies in the different sections of each district. In Lake Charles District our meetings are to be in Many, DeRidder, Lake Charles, Crowley, and Lafayette. Other charges in the district are asked to meet at the church designated in the schedule being mailed out. From there we go to Baton Rouge District, meeting in Baton Rouge, Hammond and Bogalusa.

Continue to send in your fine reports, and let us help you whenever we can.

Sincerely,

ELIZABETH LANGFORD,

THE NATIONAL TRAGEDY OF SABBATH BREAKING

By Noah W. Cooper, Nashville, Tenn.

We think the murder of Arnold Rothstein in New York and of Jake Lingle of Chicago by underworld assassins were terrible tragedies. But as I look upon our Congress and commerce today, I see a hundred fold more terrible tragedy—in the murder of God's Holy Sabbath, in our American nation by the Moloch of Mammon, and Congress aiding and abetting it.

We claim to be a Christian nation. Christ was a Sabbath keeper. No man or nation is Christian unless a Sab bath keeper.

Congress inherited from our Christian pioneers the habit of resting from their labors on Sunday. Our Constitution gives Congress the power to regulate our interstate commerce, and in doing so they have passed various laws regarding trains, newspapers, traffic, rates, etc. But they have let the vice of Sabbath breaking capture our interstate commerce, the biggest in the world, and Mammon now runs his trains, newspapers, express, steamships, bus and aviation lines, every day and Sunday, too, as if there were no God and no Sabbath. It is an insult to God, and a peril to our nation.

I believe God's word that Sabbath breaking quickly brings perdition. It has done so for Israel, and other nations, and is doing so for America. It is spiritual, financial, and political suicide.

Congress has spent millions trying to suppress the fruit fly, the gypsy moth, the San Jose scale, the cattle tick, the yellow fever, and tree vermin. And if Mexico were to try to take one county of land from us, Congress would declare war and spend millions to prevent it. Yet here is the demon of Mammon polluting and stealing our Christian Sabbath from our commerce; a Sabbath worth more to all America than all our banks, gold and silver, and Congress seems sleeping at the switch.

Senator Walsh favors a five-day work week, and the railway brotherhoods favor a six-day work week. God's plan is very simple, and very best of all; to work six days and then all observe a Sabbath day of rest.

The great captains of industry, and giant corporations, who used Sabbath to make money, are fast finding out that billions thus made will soon fade away, along with liberty, safety and happiness.

Fortunes polluted with Sabbath breaking, and nations and people who condone that vice, are bound to fail. God said it, and history has proved it.

May God help our churches and commerce and Congress to awake to this fearful peril, and to return to the Godly plan of working every day except Sunday.

I am here as chairman of the Tennessee Southern Methodist Sabbath Crusade Committee, to help secure a Sabbath Day's rest for every toiler, including every engineer, brakeman, fireman, newsboy, printer, editor, reporter, bus driver and birdman. They are also entitled to the Sabbath Day of rest, just as well as our President, Senators, Judges, Clerks and Schoolmen.—From the Methodist Herald.

Experience of this Missionary Doctor Convinces Her of the Value of Vicks

"I can honestly say I think it is one of the best things I know for children's colds," writes Dr. Jeannett Beall, from China.

"I assure you," writes Dr. Jeannett Beall, of the Kathleen Mallory Hospital at Laichowfu, Shantung, China, "Vicks is a great help to us in our work with these Chinese children. I am using it on a little child right now, and her breathing is much better since we started the croup kettle, using Vicks. This is the child in the picture standing just behind the doll—the smallest child.

"I also enclose a picture of a pair of our twins with their mother. These children were constantly having colds when they were tiny and I always gave them a little of my Vicks. It seemed to be all they needed. Some of our patients have found out that we have a medicine that opens up the babies' breathing, and they ask for it. Just last week a mother insisted on having Vicks for her little baby. She went away happy when I gave her a little.

"I can honestly say that I think it is one of the best things I know for children's colds."

Vicks solves one of the vexing problems of mothers in treating the frequent colds of children, because it avoids constant "dosing" with internal medicine—which so often upsets delicate digestions. Just rubbed on, Vicks attacks colds two ways at once: (1) Its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in direct to the irritated air-passages. (2) At the same time, it acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster, aiding the inhaled vapors to break up congestion and relieve soreness.

Every year millions of adults find that Vicks is just as effective for their own cold troubles, too.

FROM ATHENS (LA.) CHARGE

We have had a wonderful reception here for our second year; the people are responding to the call of the Church in a splendid way. Fresh meats, canned goods, etc., have been sent in to help out in the larder, all of which has been very acceptable.

Our choice young people at Athens held a Young People's revival beginning on December 26 and closing with a watch night service on the 31st. This was conducted by the young people themselves, and we had an average attendance of 18, except the last service, when we had 88 present, most of whom stayed through the entire service.

We are planning to have an "Old-time Camp Meeting," at Old Tulip Church, which is located about centrally among my three churches, and has been abandoned for some years as a meeting place, caused by the shift in population, but with the coming of better roads and transportation we will be able to use this, and hope to use the grounds for an encampment for this whole section of the State, as we have nothing of the kind in this part of the Conference.

Have already set the date for the first meeting, July 15 to 26, and have secured Brothers P. B. McCullen and Otis Spinks to preach and lead the singing for us. We have also asked the co-operation of the Board of Christian Education in putting over a training program for us. We are not far from Homer, Haynesville, Gibsland and Arcadia, and we expect to invite their co-operation, as all are connected by good roads. Our wide-awake presiding elder, Robert M. Brown, we are hoping to have, and his family, come and camp with us and take advantage of the training that we have to offer. We are busy and happy.

Fraternally yours,
W. F. HENDERSON, JR., P. C.

FROM FRISCO, TEXAS

I notice that Sam Steele says he is not a forgotten man, and neither am I. It was my privilege to know Steele when he was a boy preacher, and I had a rather trying time once following Steele and I. R. Hicks, the weather prophet of St. Louis. It was this way: Rev. A. J. Sea was sick, and they both preached for him. I went down to visit him and the brethren were continuing the meeting as a prayer meeting. I was asked to hold the prayer meeting, but they did not ask me to preach. I said to them, "You must take the bridle off of me if I conduct the service," and they said, "You have the hour." I read a scripture and made a sermon from it, we had an altar of penitents, and a great time, so as I closed they came around me and said, "You must preach tomorrow night." I said, "Why did you not ask me to preach tonight?" and they said the two young preachers used so much Latin and Greek in their sermons they were afraid I would do like they did. I preached the next night, and Dr. John Boswell came and took the pulpit. I had many friends in Sardis, and preached for them a week following Bishop Galloway and Dr. Ramsey, then of Jackson, Tenn.

No, I am not a forgotten man: Some time back I got a letter from Brother Jaco and one from a lady in San Antonio I had known in 1869: and I have just received one from Dr. Bell, whom I married in '78, and last, but not least, one from brother W. F. Beasley, who was one of my stewards in '77 and '78. He said his son was a preacher, and he was living with him. These letters from old friends make me feel like I am nearing the shore where so many of my friends have gone.

If I live till the eighth of February, I expect to preach my eighty-fourth birthday sermon in McKinney, Texas, where I preached thirteen days years ago and saw ninety souls converted during the meeting.

I only wish I were able to go back in the regular ranks, and preach the Divine Christ and the witness of the Spirit, and the evidence of Divine Salvation, in contrast with some of the stuff I sometimes hear now, but thank God we are waking up in this western country.

When the Church drifts from the divine revelation of the Bible and lets skeptical science draw it off just to that extent it will lose hold on the God of our salvation.

I love my old North Mississippi Conference, but prudence will enable me to keep forever in my breast why I left there. With the exception of three men they were all my friends, and my presiding elder, who licensed me to preach and married me advised me to go west.

With love to all, I am yours in Christ.

S. W. MILLER.

Was the Lord."

Presentation of Work Done at Jubilee Inn.

High lights from Conference. Prayer for two French ministers.

A letter was read from Miss Hooper concerning the little orphan girl supported by this zone and an offering was taken for this fund.

In the afternoon session, the Scripture lesson was taken from Luke, embracing the Christmas story, comments bringing out these thoughts: 1. Where art thou? 2. What hast thou done? 8. Where is thy brother? 4. What doest thou here?

This program interspersed with songs and prayers closed with a love feast enjoyed by all.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

An interesting meeting of the Nebo Woman's Missionary Society was held in the parsonage home, November 19, when, after the song and scripture lesson, officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows:

President, Mrs. Flora Dawkins; vice-president, Mrs. W. W. Murray; recording secretary, Mrs. W. A. Coleman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ralph Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Leland Saxon; superintendent local work, Mrs. W. H. Gibson; superintendent of Publicity, Mrs. A. L. Saxon.

Effective talks on work of past year and outlook for next year were given by president and vice-president.

A one hundred per cent attendance at all regular meetings was urged, and a prayer service supplementary to business meetings will be held. The meeting closed with prayer.

Splendid reports from Porterville society show that the work is being carried on in a most splendid way—meeting every Monday, and aside from their business meetings have a Mission Study and a Bible Study class. Round table discussions are held after the study of "The Home as a School of International Brotherhood," which brought out practical thoughts.

The reporter for Centreville auxiliary sends interesting accounts of the programs taken from the Year Book interspersed with songs and prayers. These meetings are held in the homes and a social hour enjoyed.

A splendid idea was a report of a zone meeting held previous to our meeting.

FEDERATED MISSIONARY UNION, BATON ROUGE, LA.

A valuable part of the women's work of the Protestant churches of Baton Rouge is the Federated Missionary Union, which grew out of a joint meeting of the Missionary Societies of the Baptist, Christian, Episcopalian, Methodist and Presbyterian churches of the city, held a few years ago. The invitation for the joint meeting came from the Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church. An all-day Mission study meeting was held and luncheon was served by the hostess society. The gathering was so well attended and so enjoyed that a movement was at once begun to create an organization for further regular joint meetings. Since that time a constitution has been adopted, the local union has joined the National Federation, and regular meetings have been held several times a year in the various churches, in turn.

The organization is managed by a governing board composed of three members from each church society. Dues sufficient to carry on the clerical business of the organization are assessed against each society in proportion to its membership.

The Federated Missionary Union has proved an inspiration and an opportunity to the six societies composing its membership. The programs presented at its meetings have covered information on the Missionary work of the various churches and have taken up various interchurch charities of Baton Rouge. A Mission Study class of interdenomination scope was very successful last year and will be continued.

In line with the departments of the National Federation the organization has formed a Missionary Study committee, a Social Service committee, a Committee on Spiritual Life and a Committee on World Friendship Among Children. Under these committees work has been planned for the Orphans' Home of Baton Rouge, and the Baton Rouge Parish Nursing Service. Friendship chests were packed for the children of the Philippines, and the World Day of Prayer is regularly observed.

MEETING OF ZONE 4, VICKSBURG DISTRICT

A meeting of Zone 4, of the Vicksburg District, was held at Port Gibson, Tuesday, December 9. There was a splendid attendance, and an unusual amount of interest and enthusiasm manifested by the ladies present. Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Fayette, Conference Superintendent of Publicity and Editor of Woman's Page, and Mrs. W. T. Hegman, Holly Bluff, District secretary, were present. Their addresses were wonderfully helpful. Others taking part in the program were Mrs. Harvey Rollins, Utica; Mrs. J. M. McKeown, Mrs. W. L. O'Donnell, and Mrs. T. H. Stout, Crawford St., Vicksburg; Mrs. Jessie Brent, Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg, and Mrs. L. B. Allen and Miss Marjorie Allen, Port Gibson. The presence of several of our ministers who led and helped in the devotional service, was much appreciated. An interesting feature of the program was the introduction of two of our pioneer workers, who have been for many years earnest workers in the missionary society. Their presence was an inspiration. They are Mrs. Scott of Hermanville and Mrs. Taliaferro of Port Gibson. Then came the introduction of Harvey Rollins, Jr., Utica; of the Baby Division, and Cornelia Bowman Hegman, Holly Bluff, Primary Division.

The reports for the year from the auxiliaries were good and showed faithful work throughout the year. Officers elected for the coming year are: Mrs. Z. D. Clark, chairman, and Mrs. W. E. Potts, secretary, both of Crawford St., Vicksburg.

The auxiliaries represented were, Burtonton, Carpenter, Cayuga, Hermanville, Utica, Oake Ridge, Rocky Springs, the two Vicksburg churches, Fayette, Holly Bluff and Port Gibson.

KATE DRAKE, Zone Secty.

FROM THE CARRIERE CHARGE

Dear Brother Decell: I expect to make the greatest effort ever to circulate the New Orleans Christian Advocate. We have had splendid editors for several years and the one we now have is not a whit behind any. It is our paper, and it came into my father's home when I was a very small boy hanging on the chair post listening to my father and the presiding elder and preacher in charge talking about our missionaries—Young J. Allen and J. W. Lambuth, and China. They also talked something about the Golden Gate, but I would not undertake to give to the readers of the Advocate what my childish mind understood from these men of God. Suffice it to say that I have had a missionary urge from those early days in my life.

This charge received me kindly and cordially. The people remembered to fill the larder and a few have continued to supply us with things useful and refreshing. I never saw so many fine brick school buildings in this country as in this county. We have four appointments and a splendid school at or near each preaching place. Because of these good school facilities and because of the location of the churches with reference to the schools, I think this would be an ideal charge to make a real rural charge.

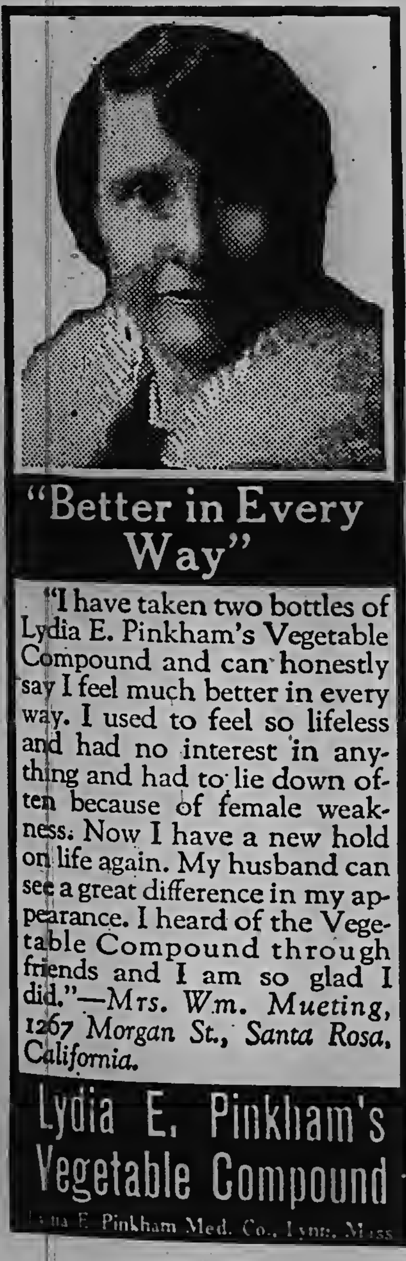
If you think it would make a model rural charge and we can put it over (I mean with your help), I will give you a pocket full of homegrown Satsuma oranges, if you will run out here next fall. I have much more I could write.

WALDO W. MOORE.

FROM CEDAR BLUFF, MISS.

Dear Brother Editor: Will you allow me space in your paper to say just a few words in regard to my new charge? We are very pleasantly situated at Cedar Bluff. We had our first Quarterly Conference January 11. Although it was a rainy day, we had very good day. The ladies served lunch at the church, and if you do not believe we had a good dinner just ask our presiding elder. We expect to have a great year in the name of the Lord. Maybe you do not like a "pounding", if you do not don't ever transfer to the North Mississippi Conference and let them send you to Cedar Bluff charge, for they "pound" their pastor, not once but twice; at least they did us. We are truly greateful for the way they "hit" us, they hit hard and with many nice things, sugar, coffee, rice, meat, such as "spare ribs, back bones", sausage, etc. Jars of preserves; pickles, peaches, both canned and dried, jelly and jam, peas and potatoes, chicken and turkey. Oh, I just can't tell you all they gave us, but our pantry looks like they tried to give us everything. We cannot find words to express our appreciation and our thanks to the people of Cedar Bluff and Siloam. We came to them as strangers and they received us so cordially. Time and time only can prove how much we already love them, and we pray that each one may have as happy and prosperous new year. Thanking them again for all these nice things we are very sincerely,

R. G. A. CARLISLE AND FAMILY.



"Better in Every Way"

"I have taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and can honestly say I feel much better in every way. I used to feel so lifeless and had no interest in anything and had to lie down often because of female weakness. Now I have a new hold on life again. My husband can see a great difference in my appearance. I heard of the Vegetable Compound through friends and I am so glad I did."—Mrs. Wm. Mueting, 1267 Morgan St., Santa Rosa, California.

SCRIPTURE MEMORIZING

The instructor in Personal Evangelism at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, reorts a revival of interest in the memorizing of Scripture. Exact knowledge of the Bible as an aid to soul-winning has always been stressed at the Institute. Recently, however, there has been a marked quickening of interest in the memorizing of Bible passages.

During the fall term, 693 Day School students memorized 30,048 passages; 392 women reporting an average of 43, and 301 men an average of 45. One woman memorized 293 passages; one man, 210. More than 100 passages were memorized by 21 women and 27 men. From 50 to 99 passages were reported by 121 women and 74 men. The Evening School is also gleaning much benefit from this work. Favorable spiritual results, seen in the lives of the students and in the number of souls won to Christ, are reported as among the fruits of this revival of Bible interest. The winter term, which began on January 8, will doubtless witness even larger results.

If baby has COLIC

A CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

CONTENTION, INTENTION, EXTENSION

Doctrinal emphasis is necessary and to contend for the Faith is a duty, but contentious churchmanship is never constructive. Argumentative alertness is not so high an art as agonizing prayer. Enough energy has been expended arguing on creek banks to build a bridge of brotherhood that would connect two worlds.

The more serious contention though, is less objective than subjective. It isn't so much the other fellow that retards the Kingdom, as the divided self within. One part of the person within soliloquizes that things are wrong, they should be perfect and the way easy, times are inopportune, the program is complex and arbitrary, and there is too much expected; while the other clamors for a wholeness of devotion and readiness of action. This contention within consumes enough of life's fine powers to forge unity in the soul and make difficulties sentinels of success. "Double mindedness" is "do nothingness" in the Kingdom of God. The need is not so much to sharpen the sword to cut low the pestiferous prater of small wares, as it is to substitute entire consecration for inner contention.

Intention, born of the deep springs of love and loyalty, rightly followed is a white winged angel that leads to the land of "well done, thou good and faithful servant;" but, intention begotten by fear or fleeting impulse is like "the grass that flourisheth in the morning and in the evening it is cut down and withereth." This Intention is satisfied with mere resolution and it is soon resolved into nothing. It would seem that Church and State are surfeited on resolution conventions. Many of them resolve everything but the needs which they so exquisitely, firstly and secondly about.

Intelligent diagnosis is good, but to tell and tell the patient he has a ruptured appendix and leave the gangrenous thing in his side is but to help kill the patient. Intention that stops at resolution sets up devilution.

Extension, the act of holding out for acceptance, extending and enlarging, what significant meaning. The Holy Spirit must have inspired the change in nomenclature from "Missionary Maintenance" to "Kingdom Extension." Extension is so full of glory there is no room for quibbling nor reachless resolution. It is a word filled with Christly passion. "Go ye into all the world," He said, "and I am with you."

Why the Lambuths' filling graves in foreign lands; Asbury riding thousands of miles through wilderness and storm; Wesley, crossing oceans and enduring long hardships; and Coke filling a watery grave? Extension. What meaneth Paul's suffering the loss of all earthly things and burning to a crisp in Nero's Rome? Extension. Why cometh that One from Edom "glorious in his apparel and traveling in the greatness of his strength" to Calvary's Cross? Extension, of the nail pierced hands that lift a lost world to God.

Aside, contenders and intenders, the day of the extenders has come.

CLEAN OUT ORPHANAGE DEBT WITH SOAP

Buy Octagon soap, soap powder, cleanser, toilet soap, floating soap, and soap chips and send the coupons from any or all of them to the Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, Mississippi.

The Mississippi Orphanage has an unsecured balance of an indebtedness on the new building of $40,000. It has been running several years and has become embarrassing both to the bank and Home. The Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, makers of the above six octagon soap products, have deviated from a forty-year rule, and offer to pay off the entire $40,000 indebtedness and give a new Ford truck to the orphanage for eight million coupons.

Mississippi Methodists and other friends of orphan children, who use any of the above named Octagon soaps, can render fine help by sending in their coupons. Let us wash our hands and save our faces with octagon soap. It can be done and there should be a wide and ready response.

This privilege closes October 1, 1931.

FIFTH GENERAL MISSIONARY COUNCIL

We join New Orleans Methodism in inviting you to attend the General Missionary Council at First Church, February 24-26.

J. L. DECELL, Editor,
C. M. CHALMERS, Manager.

A COUNTRY PREACHER IN THE CITY

It being the closing Sunday of the Special Effort Advocate Week, the editor was invited by Rev. John Brandon Peters, M. A., D.D., pastor of First Church, New Orleans, to preach to his people and represent the Advocate on Sunday morning, January 25.

It was a glorious day in Dixie. It was like the sunshine of Spring, and the calendar was all that could say it was winter. Warmer than the balmy weather and more cheering than the sunshine was the spirit and cordiality of Dr. Peters and the large congregation that assembled for worship. The First Church people are in the metropolis of the South but they still have "country courtesy."

Dr. Peters, as pastor of a great church and chairman of the Publishing Committee, has done for the editor and manager what Col. Henry Watterson told, one of his relatives did for Franklin Pierce (afterwards President). The Mr. Watterson and the president-to-be Pierce in their young days had been out on an old time "big night spree." Pierce found the road too narrow and walked off into a canal. His companion tried long and hard to get him out, but failing, said, "I will just get in with you." So the next morning both of them were found wading in water up to their waist trying to find the road. Dr. Peters and a certain bank-note clerk can tell how deep the water is. Of course, this is pleasantry, for the chairman of the Publishing Committee is willing to share heavy burdens and is unselfishly co-operating in trying to find the road out and up. It will be found.

After a bountiful dinner and a delightful visit in the home with Dr. and Mrs. Peters, Mrs. Rettew, and Mary Manning, the happy little lady of the house; Mr. C. M. Chalmers, manager of the Advocate, and heir apparent to the House of Chalmers, came, and in his car we enjoyed the beautiful afternoon in driving over much of the city. Had it been out on lonely rural roads running by little gas stations, and an occasional farm house with the cows standing on the sunny side of their pen and chickens squawking as they fluttered out of the way of the preacher's car, the editor would have known, but as it

Why I Am a Protestant

BY BISHOP H. M. Du BOSE, D. D.

An Address Delivered in the Speakers' Forum, Ryman Auditorium, Nashville, Tenn.

The question, "Why I am a Protestant," is neither academic nor controversial; but is emphatically an issue of history and experience. Its answer does not come of secretarian promptings, but is humanistic and of the essence of universal Christian consciousness. Protestantism has brought a maximum of illumination to the religious mind, and has stimulated intellectual accord with truth in its highest and widest manifestations. At the very outset, therefore, I find myself able to say that I am a Protestant because Protestantism, amongst all the extant forms of religious faith, is most in accord with the spirit of historic Christianity, as also most in line with the militant traditions of truth in life and history.

Protestantism Is a Scientific Statement of Religion

The science, literature and thought activities of the most highly developed age of history have been coincident with the rise and growth of Protestantism; and have occurred most markedly in Protestant lands. Indeed, Protestantism is a scientific statement of religion in the sense in which religion is the rationale of the existence and hope of the soul. In this purview, Protestantism is both conformable to the letter of the written Word, and favorable to the largest and most genuine advancement of science.

The progressive theological thought of the past four centuries, especially that of the strictly defined modern period of Christianity, has established the claims of Protestantism on the broadest basis of revelation and reason. This statement, as already explained, is made not as from the lists of controversy, but as from the records of religious fact and interpretation. So far as I am able to see the argument for Protestantism, it relates itself more to the essential engagements of the open mind, and to the matching of the religious choices of men to the revelation than it does to ecclesiastical differences and the output of scholastic theology.

Born Under Protestant Influences

Perhaps I should not be quite faithful to the facts involved, if I failed to say that the foremost reason, certainly in point of time, for my being a Protestant, is that I was born in a Protestant home and grew up under Protestant teaching and influences. Both my Catholic and my Jewish brother on this platform, no doubt, will admit as much for their own adhesion. But there came a time in my life when the letter of my religious inheritance was subjected to a long and rigid test; so that the convictions witnessed to this night are no longer reckoned to have come through mother milk, but rather through the sincere milk of the Word. In fact, Protestantism, to both the individual believer and the body of the elect, is a revalidation of the faith of the infant years of the Christian Church. This is said and held along with a cordial appreciation of great and praiseworthy things that characterize the communion of the Roman Catholic body.

Discussion Without Prejudice

Has not the time come when Protestants and Roman Catholics should be able to discuss their particular beliefs and credal views without bias or sectarian prejudice? There are vast leads of truth which are common to the faith of Romanists and Protestants. In Protestantism abide the elements of strict catholicity; while in Roman Catholicism there remain active many evangelical forces of the apostolic gospel. The calendar of the Roman Church contains many illustrious names, duly venerated by Protestants. The zeal of Saint Francis d'Assissi and the fervor of Massiion and Bosuet have not deserted the Roman Church, even in these days of confluent modernism. Protestantism might well borrow a measure of this fervor and zeal.

Kinship of Protestants and Romanists

But there is an even nearer kinship of Protestants and Catholics. In the great historic doctrines of the Nicene Creed, namely, the doctrines of the Godhead of Jesus Christ, the Trinity, and the atonement made for sin in the blood of the Crucified, all true Protestants and all true Roman Catholics are reverently agreed. Neither will relinquish this heritage of common belief. But I cannot fail to note that the Nicene statement of doctrines came from a time when neither Protestants and Roman Catholics, as such, were known in the body of Christ. This is a point in history at which Protestants and Roman Catholics might well meet to make common cause for the truth. But whatever fondness may prevent the two communions from coming together on this historic fact, it is the established claim of Protestantism that the Nicene Creed was a fixed post of universal Christianity before the Sacerdotalism of the West became settled on its present foundation. This is simply an appeal to written history.

BISHOP H. M. Du BOSE, D.D.

However, it is the spirit and historic interpretation in which Protestantism is grounded that most widely separate the two great sections of Christendom. The Reformation was not so much a religious revolt as it was the assertion of an instinct of human freedom and a reserve of individual conscience. The conditions which brought on the Reformation had subsisted in the Church from apostolic times. Also it represented, at least, an important section of the western, or Roman Catholic, body of Christianity as it existed in the middle of the Sixteenth Century. This also is of written record.

Freedom of the Will

I am a Protestant because I believe in the freedom of the human will and in the right of private interpretation, both in matters of secular thought and in the issues of religion.

Protestantism is the restoration of the revealed Scriptures, as being of supreme authority in matters of faith and religious worship; as also it is the reaffirmation to men of their right to judge, and to be judged by, the said Scriptures.

Tragic as is the right of private interpretation, it is the law of universal being, the settled order of destiny. The freedom of the human will is both the hope and the peril of life. The universe of thought and choice is open to every soul of man, under moral and spiritual obligation. A right choice leads into that faith which is righteousness, eternal life. A wrong choice brings judgment and eternal death. No dogma of men can suspend this right of choice, nor contravene the penalty of this inexorable law. This doctrine is paramount, both in the theology and the philosophy of Protestantism. It is also the last deduction from the word of revelation. Protestantism will go to the judgment of future centuries on the basis of its having emancipated the individual mind in every relation of thought and conscience.

Apostolic Christian

I am a Protestant because I am, by persuasion and conviction, an apostolic Christian Catholic.

The name Catholic has never been disowned by Protestants, and its exclusive use is disallowed to any particular Christian body. This statement is neither bizarre nor constrained; but is in strict conformity with historic fact. The apostolic Church of the first two centuries was neither Roman Catholic, Greek Catholic nor Protestant, in the sense in which we use these terms to-day. In its forms of worship, the apostolic Church bore little or no resemblance to the liturgical churches of later centuries; and these forms were even more simple than those of most of the so-called evangelical Churches of today. The New Testament assembly, or ecclesia, was a fellowship of believers, and not an establishment of ecclesitstical overlords.

It was this precedent of apostolic simplicity and carefulness in all things, this loyalty to the apostolic word, this right of private interprettion, and this quest after a spiritual experience, that gave spring and historic activity to Protestantism.

Protestantism is thus not so much a written creed, indeed, is not so much an ecclesiastical organization, as it is a reincarnation of early Christian life and ideals; and also as it is an appreciation of the pledge and prophecy of the Christian message of the future. It is Christianity of the past, present and future, pouring its fullness through the channels of responsible and responsive human consciousness.

The only creed of Protestantism that has been truly expositive of the Reformation has been one of protest against those teachings which are adjudged to be departures from the gospel word; for the rest, Protestantism has found its sufficient instruction in the canonical Scriptures; and in the direct use of individual reason.

Those symbolical writings of Protestantism which deal with the anthropological side of Christian theology, and which exploit the metaphysical aspects of sin and human conduct, with attempted exhibits of the secret counsels of Jehovah in judgment of men, logically have been left behind in the march of the Protestant centuries. They were never elemental in Protestant thought and faith.

Protestantism is thus a perpetual protest against historic theological errors and unbiblical practices, and also a committment to the largest reinvestments of faith and thought, on the basis of a finished and unchanging revelation.

Authority of the Scriptures

Again, I am a Protestant because I subscribe to the authority of the unglossed and uncorrupted canonical Scriptures, as accepted during the first three Christian centuries.

Before the middle of the Second Century, the canonical Scriptures, as received by Protestants today, were accepted as the Word of God and the infallible guide of the universal Christian congregation. It was a century later that, in the West, the doctrine of an infallible church began to take the place of the infallible book. Still later this doctrine was supplemented with the dogma of an infallible head.

To Protestants, this infallible book, the Bible, is not only the embodiment of truth, but is the arbiter of conscience, and the perpetual corrector of the errors of ethical and spiritual thought. It is the light which must abide until the consummation of all things. Nothing is to be believed and taught as necessary to the salvation of men except what is contained therein, or may be proved therefrom.

Authority in the Congregation

I am a Protestant because I believe ecclesiastical authority centers in the congregation of believers and not in a pontifical head. This also stands in the light of an exact record, and is not the offspring of discussional adventure.

From the integration of the apostolic Church on the day of Pentecost, to the end of the first century, the life of the Christian body was expressed in the congregation of disciples. Apostles, bishops and elders, were fellowship overseers of the flock, while the whole communion of the saints took on the semblance of a family, rather than of an ecclesiastical organization. There is no more certain contact of Protestantism with primitive Christianity than at this point. Indeed, the term Protestantism might well be converted into that of Christian democracy, which has been seen as an insistent and irreducible force in the history of world evangelization. It was imperative in the teachings of Jesus, the Galilean, who said: "Let him that would be greatest amongst you, be servant of all." It was also the watchword of the Pauline Mission, as it was of the entire household of the early saints. It waited through the centuries for the set time of Providence and the awakened faith of men. To claim this fundamental Christian democracy as the charter of Protestantism is not to deny to other Christians the right to appropriate it, or to return to its largess. It is not disallowed to any of our Christian brethren; but is claimed as a distinguishing characteristic of related Protestantism. To Protestantism, tolerance is as necessary as is the demand for freedom of thought and conscience. Tolerance, indeed, is the very essence of religious freedom; though tolerance, in no wise, diminishes either the right or the duty to preach and defend the truth of the written gospel. When rightly defined Protestantism abides in this attitude toward the record of the beginning.

Priesthood of Believers

I am a Protestant because I believe in the priesthood of believers, and in absolute personal approach to Christ for the forgiveness of sin. I do not believe in official absolution; nor otherwise, save through Christ Jesus, who is the one High Priest.

Protestantism might well rest its case with this posit concerning the central fact of religion. Indeed, the issues of religion are summed up in the relation subsisting between the individual soul and Jehovah, its Creator and Judge. Whatever else revelation and religion are assessed to be, is to enforce and consummate the doctrine of individual redemption. "My just man shall live by faith" was the voice out of silence which ushered the Reformation across the threshold of centuries of darkness and error. It is the voice which shall bring, not only Protestantism, but all the fellowship of true believers into the light of a present and future glory of redemption.

Lord's Supper a Communion, Not a Sacrifice

I am a Protestant because I must hold the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to be a communion and not a sacrifice. The Lord's table, with its tokens of bread and wine, is a spiritual and highly privileged board of Christian fellowship, and not an altar of oblation. It was so instituted of Christ, was so appraised of all the apostolic writers, and so remained until the emergence of sacredotalism in the Church, near the beginning of the third century.

Christian Goodwill

These considerations are offered in a spirit of seriousness and conviction, as also with the assurance of open mindedness and Christian good will. Appeal has been made to records which are open to the light of day. This is a right which must be allowed one Christian by another, as, preeminently, it is a right which must be conceded by one Church of Christ to each and all of its sister bodies. Frankness and sincerity should not be mistaken for intolerance and bigotry. The truth will indicate both itself and those who hold and defend it. Both Protestants and Roman Catholics should be content to take refuge under such cover.—From the Christian Advocate.

PRESIDENT AND WICKERSHAM COMMISSION OPPOSE PROHIBITION REPEAL

By Harry Earl Woolever, Editor of The National Methodist Press

President Hoover, eighteen months after having appointed a National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, received on January 19 that Commission's report regarding prohibition. The next day the Chief Executive transmitted the report to Congress with a statement in which he again declared his support of the Eighteenth Amendment and his purpose to continue, with increased energies, his efforts toward the enforcement thereof. The spirit of the President's message was in full accord with the first and most outstanding conclusion presented in the report. This one section alone, even without the reinforcements that follow it, gives new spirit and power to the cause of prohibition. It reads:

"The Commission is opposed to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

President Hoover, in his message to Congress transmitting the report, pointed out the ability of the personnel of the Commission, which spent a year and a half in an exhaustive and painstaking study of the control of the liquor traffic both before and since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment. He called attention to their independence of thought and their geographical distribution. Then, after emphasizing the fact that the Commission had found a continued improvement since and as a consequence of the placing of prohibition officers under Civil Service and enforcement under the Department of Justice, he made the most significant and constructive prohibition statement he has given to the public since his inaugural address. He said:

"The Commission, by a large majority, does not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as a method of cure for the inherent abuses of the liquor traffic. I am in accord with this view. I am in unity with the spirit of the report in seeking constructive steps to advance the national ideal of eradication of the social and economic and political evils of this traffic, to preserve the gains which have been made, and to eliminate the abuses which exist, at the same time facing with an open mind the difficulties which have arisen under this experiment. I do, however, see serious objections to, and therefore must not be understood as recommending, the Commission's proposed revision of the Eighteenth Amendment, which is suggested by them for possible consideration at some future time if the continued effort at enforcement should not prove successful. My own duty and that of all executive officials is clear—to enforce the law with all the means at our disposal without equivocation or reservation."

Conclusions and Recommendations

The Commission, after writing an extended report based on the evidence heard and on a review of foreign methods and proposed alternative systems studied during eighteen months gives the following as its "Conclusions and Recommendations":

1. The Commission is opposed to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

2. The Commission is opposed to the restoration in any manner of the legalized saloon.

3. The Commission is opposed to the federal or state governments, as such, going into the liquor business.

4. The Commission is opposed to the proposal to modify the National Prohibition Act so as to permit manufacture and sale of light wines or beer.

5. The Commission is of opinion that the cooperation of the States is an essential element in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the National Prohibition Act throughout the territory of the United States; that the support of public opinion in the several States is necessary in order to insure such co-operation.

6. The Commission is of opinion that prior to the enactment of the Bureau of Prohibition Act, 1927, the agencies for enforcement were badly organized and inadequate; that subsequent to that enactment there has been continued improvement in organization and effort for enforcement.

7. The Commission is of opinion that there is yet no adequate observance or enforcement.

8. The Commission is of opinion that the present organization for enforcement is still inadequate.

9. The Commission is of opinion that the federal appropriations for enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment should be substantially increased and that the vigorous and better organized efforts which have gone on since the Bureau of Prohibition Act, 1927, should be furthered by certain improvements in the statutes and in the organization, personnel, and equipment of enforcement, so as to give to enforcement the greatest practicable efficiency.

10. Some of the Commission are not convinced that Prohibition under the Eighteenth Amendment is unenforceable and believe that a further trial should be made with the help of the recommended improvements, and that if after such trial effective enforcement is not secured there should be a revision of the Amendment. Others of the Commission are convinced that it has been demonstrated that Prohibition under the Eighteenth Amendment is unenforceable and that the Amendment should be immediately revised, but recognizing that the process of amendment will require some time, they unite in the recommendations of Conclusion No. 9 for the improvement of the enforcement agencies.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION, FIRST CHURCH, BATON ROUGE, LA.

The First Church, Baton Rouge, La., has been celebrating during the month of January the hundredth anniversary of its organization.

One hundred years ago a little group of people at Baton Rouge banded themselves together and requested the Bishop to send them a preacher. For the first year they worshipped in temporary quarters and then raised sufficient funds to begin the erection of a house of worship. After four years of circuit connection the church was made a station. From that humble beginning the congregation has increased until now they have over 1800 members, and five years ago moved into one of the completest and finest church buildings in the State.

Rev. Frank L. Wells, D.D., pastor, and Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder, both are beginning their fourth year, which promises to be a year of spiritual growth and general development. The centennial celebration was launched on the first Sunday in January by Bishop Dobbs, who preached two sermons appropriate to the occasion. Although the weather was unfavorable, the Bishop was greeted by two capacity congregations. On Monday evening a birthday dinner was served the stewards, trustees, officers of the Woman's Missionary Society, Sunday school officers and the young people's workers.

It was regretted that Rev. R. H. Harper, D.D., who was to speak on "The History of Louisiana Methodism," on January 11, was prevented from being present on account of a funeral in his own charge, at Lake Charles. The pastor, Dr. Wells, preached strong aand helpful sermons on "What Makes Methodism Great" and "The Heart of Our Message as a Church."

On Wednesday evening, January 7,, an old-fashioned testimony and experience meeting was held, followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

On Sunday, January 18,, two former pastors were present. Dr. Franklin N. Parker, dean of the School of Theology at Emory University, preached in the morning to a large congregation. At the evening hour, another enthusiastic congregation enjoyed the sermon by Dr. W. W. Drake, pastor at Monroe, La. On Wednesday evening, January 21, Rev. N. E. Joyner, a former pastor, delivered the message.

This celebration will culminate in a revival which is to begin on Sunday, February 8, with Rev. Frank M. Neal, General Evangelist of Memphis, Tenn., preaching twice a day for two weeks.

To stand in the Capitol City of Louisiana for a hundred years holding up the Cross and calling the heavy-laden to Christ is a record of which to be proud. We congratulate the congregation and the pastor and presiding elder, and pray for the church an enlarging usefulness all through its new century of life and service.—J. L. D.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE, HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

By Rev. John D. Ellis

The Institute, January 12, at Main Street Church, was preceded by a steady downpour for thirty-six hours, and convened beneath weeping skies. Some cars stuck in the mud, and the one of the writer was punctured on the road in rain and slush. The weather was so wet and slippery, Rev. James C. Ellis marched in with his baptismal walking stick! Several years ago, Brother Ellis consented to immerse some candidates. He cut a hazel sprout in the wilderness, which he used to feel out the quicksand and treacherous depths. He continues to use the stick on untrustworthy roads, and slick pavements. Should he bequeath the walking stick to the third generation they will know how their great-grandpa was saved in the mirky clay and from a liquid grave.

According to the Scriptures, baptism is an ordinance for the home (parlor), street, jail, highway, as well as for the wilderness.

Men, women and children can meet the ordinance and be comfortable on a cold day without fear and trepidation.

If John the Baptist used a reed ("a stubble," or "stalk of grain," Matt. 11:7), the water-drops were shaken off or sprinkled under the wind.

With a reed, stubble, stalk of grain, or hyssop, John could have baptized the multitudes.

Under the guiding hand of Rev. W. A. Hays, the Institute progressed and was a success.

It was not an "ensemble," but a splendid assembly: Twenty pastors, and about seventy-five laymen and women were present. The speeches were of the highest quality.

The words by the presiding elder were to the effect that we should put the kingdom of God first, and live for the work we can do.

Rev. W. M. Williams gave emphasis to the idea that we can do everything the Church is asking us to do. Also that the grace of God is sufficient and we should abound in liberality and good works.

Prof. J. M. Sullivan left his claassroom at Millsaps College and laboratory of tubes, retorts, Bunsen flames, and chemical smells, to be present and stress our opportunity of rallying to the call of the Church in its program. He said that the greatest unemployment in America to-day is in the Church.

"A gift of five cents per member each Sabbath would pay the askings of the Church in the Kingdom Extension Fund."

Rev. A. W. Martin, from Nashville, gave emphasis to the thought that we should do what the Church asks us to do for personal reasons, for what happens to us by responding.

"Look the Lord in the face and win his approval."

"Carry your part, and use your opportunity as an individual." He mentioned incidentally that "an expert is one who used to spurt, but has quit spurting over the country, telling others how to spurt."

Rev. R. H. Clegg made a good speech in the interest of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. W. D. Hawkins represented the Missionary Voice, a great publication of the Church, which should be in every home.

Mrs. A. F. Watkins spoke in the interest of the W. C. T. U. and prohibition of the liquor traffic.

O. C. Hull said: "No church will ever go further in work and experience than its leaders." "Our attitude toward missions determines success or failure." W. D. Hawkins explained the Cutivation Period, plans and program, and said that "success is worth sacrifice."

Something was said about "hard times," but we decided to do our best regardless of financial problems. The Institute, through its committee on resolutions, and by unanimous vote, pledged co-operation with the program of the Church and in the support of the Missionary Voice, New Orleans Christian Advocate, Orphans' Home, and superannuate endowment.

All who were present expressed thanks to the ladies of Main Street Church for a good lunch at the noon hour. The Institute sat in judgment upon do-nothing-ism, and resolved to go forward with the conquering fires of the early centuries. The presiding elder and pastors divided the district into two groups for pastors' meeting. The Northern Group is composed of the following charges: Broad Street, Main Street, Collins, Magee, Mt. Olive, Prentiss, Silver Creek, Sumrall, Taylorville, Williamsburg, Sanatorium. President, W. M. Williams; secretary, J. B. Holyfield; time and place of meeting, February 24, at Collins. The Southern Group is composed of Bonhomie, Ellisville, Eucutta, Court Street, Heidelberg, Leakesville, Lucedale, New Augusta, Petal, Purvis, Richton. President, W. A. Terry; secretary, A. J. Broyles; time and place of meeting, Richton, March 26.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, BATON ROUGE, LA.

Dear Brethren: It is not surprising that a very small amount has so far been received by our Conference Treasurer to be applied on our benevolence work, although nearly three months of the Conference year have passed. The example set by the nine charges that have made payments should be followed next month by a very large number of others in a determined effort to show improvement over last year.

We have entered a quadrennium free from increased financial burden, our Annual Conference has actually decreased the apportionments, and now a challenge comes to every loyal Methodist to study the literature and do his duty in prayerful earnestness.

If every charge that can will send to the Treasurer some amount monthly, and all others make a sincere effort to pay the proportionate amount quarterly, there will be encouraging improvement. The report is for receipts by Dr. W. D. Davis to January 29, 1931:

Brookhaven District—Conference Work: Wesson, $10. Hattiesburg Dist.—Conf. Work: Bonhomie, $10; Magee and Sanatorium, $36; Prentiss, $7; Purvis, $10. Meridian Dist.—Conf. Work: $33; Gen. Work, $18. Seashore Dist.—Conf. Work: Bay St. Louis, $33.60; Van Cleave, $6, Gen. Work, $35. Vicksburg Dist.—Conf. Work: Gloster and Liberty, $25.

J. M. SULLIVAN.

THE CHURCH HAS SPOKEN HER LOYAL SONS RESPOND

When the Church speaks only reasons of conscience and serious concern can excuse her people for hesitancy in responding.

When the need of lost and suffering and yearning millions pleads, those we name the name of Christ should bestir themselves to activity and sacrifice.

Both the voice of the Church and the need of the world appeal to Methodists now. Who can delay? Who can fail?

Kingdom Extension is the effort of Methodism to reach out beyond itself to save a needy world. The Church has designated this period for study, prayer, preaching and generosity for this supreme enterprise. Co-operate! Let nothing stand in the way! What reason can you offer to God for your failure?

Let all the people study the new book, "Methodism and Kingdom Service."

Give them the literature provided free.

Pray and preach about our benevolent interests.

Give every member an opportunity to make a free-will offering for Home and Foreign Missions, Christian Education, Church Extension, and Hospitals.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.—James 3:8.

AN ARAB SAYING

"Remember, three things come not back;
The arrow sent upon its track—
It will not swerve, it will not stay
Its speed; it flies to wound or slay.

The spoken word, so soon forgot
By thee; yet it has perished not;
In other hearts 'tis living still,
And doing work for good or ill.

And the lost opportunity,
That cometh back no more to thee;
In vain thou weepest, in vain dost yearn,
These three will nevermore return."

—The Century.

The Arabs have some very wise sayings and these are fair samples of them. We remember the song, "I shot an arrow in the air, it fell to earth, I knew not where." Sometimes it is in the heart of a bird, stopping forever its sweet song, sometimes it is in the heart of a man to wound or to take the life that God gave and that we cannot restore. Cruel indeed is the arrow, but hardly more so than the harsh, the unkind, the critical, the defaming word that is sometimes spoken. We may say it thoughtlessly, in fun, carelessly, but it finds lodgment and it rankles and hurts. We may bite our tongues and wish it back, but it is gone and cannot be recalled. How careful, then, should we be! On the other hand there are words that no one seems to heed, but they may bear fruit in years to come. They may be kind, helpful, encouraging words, they may be words of counsel, of advice, of entreaty. The preacher and the teacher may speak and feel that it is all in vain, but after perhaps a score of years, when the hearers are far away there may be blossoms and fruit from these words. One word can grow to wondrous proportions, be it for good or ill.

And, then, the lost opportunity that we may weep over and regret, but it can never return. Of course, there may be fresh opportunities which God, in His mercy, gives us, but the lost ones are gone forever. We lose a day loitering, undecided, procrastinating. We wait until tomorrow and it is the same; still the delay, and then it is too late. The stranger has gone from our midst, with his lonely heart, the despondent one has ended his life, because there was no friendly hand, the sick one has died, the neighbor has moved away. Let us, then, seize every minute, grasp every opportunity for service, and see to it, as Oxenham says, "that all our seed be such as bring forth noble deeds."

11. All the Commission agree that if the Amendment is revised it should be made to read substantially as follows: "Section 1. The Congress shall have power to regulate or to prohibit the manufacture, traffic in or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into and the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes."

Recommendations are made under item No. 12 for the making effective of No. 9. In these recommendations, the Commission suggests the liberalizing of the law respecting physicians' prescribing of liquor, the removal of certain inconsistencies by fixing the alcoholic content of cider and fruit juices, and a law facilitating access to the books of manufacturers and users of denatured alcohol. It further distinctly recommends increases in the number of enforcement officers, in the Customs service personnel, and in the equipment of all enforcement organizations. The report concludes by again recommending other legislation which it had previously proposed, after which individual opinions by the commissioners are given.

Repeal Would Be Nullification

Standing out in the very center of the long report of nearly a hundred thousand words, is this sentence: "Repeal of the National Prohibition Act would amount to nullification of a constitutional provision." Furthermore, the report repeatedly makes it clear that the facts studied by the Commission led to the unanimous consent that national prohibition has resulted in great benefits which must not be lost. This is evident in such statements as the following: "There has been a real and far-reaching improvement in the efficiency of labor, especially in mechanical industries . . . In an industrial country, in an industrial age, this established fact must be of great weight." In speaking of social benefits, the report declares, "It is enough to say that upon weighing all the evidence, there is a clear preponderance to establish a gain."

The Commission considers the proposed alternatives to the present system of liquor control and then follows with this statement:

"Hereinbefore we have given our reasons for the conclusion that repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is not advisable. We are convinced that it would be a step backward, that it would not conserve the achieved benefits of national prohibition, and that it would be likely to lead to conditions quite as bad as those we are seeking to escape."

Wet Press Deceives

One who read over the long report giving the differing opinions of the eleven commissioners, could easily see how the wet press would endeavor to emphasize the secondary opinions of some one or two commissioners to distract attention from the significant conclusions of the body as a whole. Some of the dailies which seek to deceive their readers played up section eleven of the conclusions, although this is a section which Chairman Wickersham could not support and is the one section which the President went out of the way to state that he did not recommend.

The individual views of the members which are given following the general conclusions require over a hundred printed pages and go from the extreme of State control advocate by Newton D. Baker, a political champion of State's rights, to systems just as extreme on the other side. Each member admits national benefits have resulted from prohibition. There is a preponderance of opinion that federal control is necessary in this age of high production and easy transportation. The opinion that enforcement has improved since 1927 is emphatically expressed by nearly all the Commission. Some indicate a desire for revision. Mr. M. M. Lemann, of New Orleans, doubts enforceability but denounces the suggested "if revision" under the No. 11 recommendation on the grounds that under such a revision the liquor question would play a large part in every election to Congress and a fixed national policy of dealing with liquor would never be assured. All agree that the government should not go into the liquor business, that greater co-operation on the part of the States is needed for enforcement, and that steps should be taken to promote an educated and quickened public opinion which would support the prohibition laws.

Wickersham Backs Drys

Space will not permit a review of the opinions of all the commissioners but that of the chairman, who had been depended upon by the wets to bring in a report more favorable to their desires, must be given in part:

"I cannot believe that an experiment of such far-reaching and momentous consequences as this of National Prohibition should be abandoned after seven years of such imperfect enforcement and only three years of reorganization and effort to repair the mistakes of the earlier period. The older generation very largely has forgotten and the younger never knew the evils of the saloon and the corroding influence upon politics, both local and national, of the organized liquor interests. But the tradition of that rottenness still lingers, even in the minds of the bitterest opponents of the prohibition law, substantially all of whom assert that the licensed saloon must never again be restored. It is because I see no escape from its return in any of the practicable alternatives to Prohibition, that I unite with my colleagues in agreement that the Eighteenth Amendment must not be repealed and, differing with some of them, I have been forced to conclude that a further trial should be made of the enforceability of the Eighteenth Amendment under the present organization, with the help of the recommended improvements. . . . Despite the well financed active propaganda of opposition to Prohibition and the development of an increasingly hostile public opinion, I am not convinced that the present system may not be the best attainable, and that any substitute for it would not lead to the unrestricted flow of intoxicating liquor, with the attendant evils that in the past always were a blight upon our social organization."

Our Part

It was on January 29, 1919, that the Secretary of State proclaimed the National Prohibition Amendment a part of the Federal Constitution. Now, upon the anniversary of this proclamation comes a report from a great national commission declaring that during the first seven years of prohibition the enforcement agencies had been inadequate and handicapped by politics, with resulting maladministration, but stating that the improvements of the past three years justify larger appropriations for continued and increased enforcement. It is our belief that any honest citizen who reads the whole of this report will conclude that prohibition is put on a firmer foundation than ever before. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the Crusaders (called in Washington the Booze-alders), and their allies, who have been advocating repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, have been given a blow from which they can never recover. But they will now turn to revision, so that the citizens who believe in temperance and prohibition will need to continue exposing the deceitful and undemocratic tactics of such disloyal organizations and individuals.

The Commission report is a challenge to all the friends of the Eighteenth Amendment. The President leads in response to this challenge and all should join him by making an effort to stimulate enforcement co-operation on the part of local officials and State governments and by calling upon school authorities and all makers of public opinion to come now to the aid of the Government in educating youth and adults as to the menace of alcohol and the benefits of prohibition. The whole basis of democratic government and the progress of civilization are at stake, and in the consciousness of our Christian and social responsibility the mass of the citizens will join with Judge Mackintosh, one of the commissioners, in his declaration that "Civilization will not allow this nation to end the long attempt to control the use of alcoholic beverages."

The Home Circle

OLD TIME RELIGION

By Mrs. A. W. Turner

Our battered ship was tossing,
The waves were rolling high;
We were not sure of crossing,
And we could only cry.

There were great billows dashing
Around our broken mast;
Our ship was really crashing,
No longer it could last.

The life boats were so useless
Against the raging seas.
This life had been so fruitless,
We fell upon our knees.

Then came a sound of singing.
Zion's ship help was bringing
And we were safe at last!

A CHANGE OF HEART

By Willie C. Page

"Aunt Ruth," cried Lynn Weston as she ran into the living room and banged the door behind her, "Miss Joyce, our music teacher, told the class this afternoon that Annie Humphreys was the most lovable girl she knew." Lynn laughed lightly as she made a ball of her tam and sweater and tossed them across the room to the davenport. "Do please tell me what she meant, for I would like to be a lovable girl, if I only knew how."

"My opinion of a lovable girls," said Aunt Ruth, as she folded the tea-cloth she was embroidering and sat restfully back in her chair, "is, first, she is true and sincere; she does not fret or repine over reverses that come to all, or if she can't have her way; she is a good sister—will sew buttons on Fred's overcoat without scolding him all the while for being careless and rude; she will brush little sister's hair and not jerk and pull until the child cries out in pain."

Lynn blushed, but said nothing, for she had done these only this morning.

"A lovable girl," continued Aunt Ruth, "is always willing to help others. If Nell's shoe-string is in a hard knot, she with deft fingers will come to the rescue without threatening to dislocate the little girl's limbs. She will entertain the little ones in loving consideration of her tired mother. She is neat and tidy; she has a place for everything."

"O, Aunt Ruth, it is so hard to remember all these little things and have a good time," said Lynn, looking about the disordered room—her tennis raquet on a chair, her books scattered on the floor, her muddy overshoes under the library table.

"Lynn, the foundation of every girl's life is laid while she is young. Acts formed then become habits; soon she will perform them naturally. If every girl could be made to realize the importance of this, her life and others would be immeasurably benefited and enriched."

Lynn got up and began vigorously to put the room in perfect order.

"Go on," she said earnestly.

"Dear," said Aunt Ruth softly, "every girl was intended to be lovely and lovable, just as a rosebud is fair and fragrant; but if she is selfish, ill-natured, the atmosphere she creates will be anything but sweet. Every girl can be lovable if she will only try hard enough; or she can be just the contrary.

"Let her be helpful, cheery, tactful, unselfish, refusing to fret over her disappointments, doing all in her power to make others happy. This, Lynn, is what Miss Joyce meant by saying Annie was a lovable girl. It is not difficult, if you begin early to form kindly, lovable thoughts and habits, for they grow with your growth."

From that day, Lynn began to play the new game of being lovable. Dear children, won't you try, too?

THE BOYHOOD OF A FAMOUS AMERICAN

By J. V. Fitzgerald

GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING

The competitive examination for West Point was on. It was a close contest between two of the candidates. The Missouri congressman, conducting the examination for his district, had a hard time grading them. Finally, he decided that one of the two leaders rated just one point better than the other. He named John Joseph Pershing as the winner and appointed him as a cadet to the United States Military Academy.

It was by this narrow margin that Uncle Sam obtained the general who was to command the greatest armed host ever raised in the United States and to lead it to victory with the allies in the greatest war in the world's history.

No ambition nurtured from early boyhood prompted John Pershing to seek admission to West Point. He had no set ideas on becoming a soldier when he was a little fellow. In fact, he was headed for a career as a teacher or a lawyer, and was a student in the Kirksville normal school when he won the appointment to the Military academy.

He saw his congressman's notice of the examination in a newspaper and asked his sister, who was also attending the Kirksville school, if she would advise him to try the test. She certainly would, she told him. This coincided with his own ideas on the subject, so his military career may be said to have had its impetus in the reading of a newspaper advertisement.

General Pershing was born in 1860 at Laclede, Mo., a hamlet of some 700 inhabitants. His father, whose ancestors had come from Alsace, had the general store at Laclede and also owned a farm on the outskirts of the town. The future commander of the A. E. F. was the oldest of six children. He assumed much responsibility in helping to care for them.

The Pershing youngsters spent considerable time on the farm. Young John developed into a capable worker in the fields even as a boy. The outdoor life and exercise made him a fine upstanding and vigorous youth. He was known as a good fighter when he had to use his fists, but he was never one to go out looking for trouble.

He could ride horseback, fish, swim and hunt when he was a little shaver. Such training fell to the lot of all boys in the West in those days. His mother taught him his first book lessons and instilled in him the desire for a good educatoin.

If he wasn't a brilliant student, he was a conscientious one and stood well in his classes. Fellow-pupils of the Laclede days can recall that when John Pershing had a problem to solve he worked at it until he had the correct answer. While he was quiet as a boy, he was full of fun and enjoyed playing pranks with the youngsters of his own age.

Before he entered the Kirksville normal school he taught for two terms at Prairie Mound, a few miles distant from Laclede. He was eighteen at the time. Some of his pupils were older than that. One day he had to chastise an unruly pupil. The lad's father, well over six feet tall and big in proportion, appeared the next day to demand satisfaction of the teacher.

He had a gun in his pocket. He stormed and roared threats. First the young teacher took the gun from the man. Then he handed him a sound thrashing with his fists.

Young Pershing was a leader among the students at Kirksville. He was equally prominent at West Point. They tell the story that when a group of hazers tried to put the new cadet through the mill, he thrashed two of them soundly.

He was serious, persistent and determined in his efforts to become an excellent soldier during his student days at the Military Academy. He made a good record in his studies, ranking thirtieth in his class when he was graduated in 1886. He was senior cadet captain and was elected president of his class.

The newly-made second lieutenant was assigned to the cavalry. He saw service as a young officer under Nelson A. Miles in the Apache, Geronimo and Wounded Knee campaigns. Then he taught military tactics at the University of Nebraska, also acting as assistant professor of mathematics.

He studied law while assigned to Nebraska, was graduated with honors and admitted to the bar. Then he was ordered to West Point as an instructor. From there he was detailed to duty in Cuba, serving under General Shafter in the Spanish-American war. He was promoted for bravery at the battle of El Caney.

He made a brilliant record in the Philippines and led the expedition into Mexico before being put in command of the A. E. F. Uncle Sam was fortunate, indeed, that John Pershing topped his rival in the West Point competitive examination for his district by the narrow margin of that single point.—Lawrence County (Miss.) O CITY OF GOD

Ps. 87:3

It hath not entered nto the heart of man (1 Cor. 2:9),
The things He hath gone to prepare (St. John 14:2),
In that City whose Builder and Maker is God (Heb. 11:10),
And by faith we hope to reach there (Hebrews 11:1).

There will be no more hunger or thirst (Rev. 7:16),
And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes (Rev. 7:17),
In that city whose streets are paved with gold (Rev. 21:21),
In the realms beyond the skies.

Then seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven, and other things will be added to thee (Luke 12:13),
If ye love me, keep my commandments (St. John 14:15),
And the promise is to you and me, we think of the white stone to be given,
And our names will be found inside (Rev. 2:17),
I hope to hear as I receive it, . . .
You have done what you could, my child (St. Mark 14:8).

—Compiled by Mrs. Maybelle J. Butt, Norfolk, Va.—Exchange.

Many native villages of the Congo are literally overrun by goats, which devour all vegetation and break down and destroy all fruit and palm trees. Natives in such villages must have their farms several miles away from the villages or across some stream, for goats do not like to swim. Because of the goats it often happens that the "hungry season," as they call it in the Congo, comes around very often in such villages. When asked by the missionaries why they do not get rid of the goats, the reply always is, "What would we buy our wives with, then?"

was: passing magnificent buildings, attractive homes and beautiful parks, and hundreds upon hundreds of cars swishing by, with an occasional jam in traffic made by a shrill whistle of some fellow dressed up like an army general who stood right in the middle of the street; and then the procession moving cortege-like until this blue-coated man would gesticulate in the manner of Rodeheaver leading the singing at a Billy Sunday meeting, and the cars darting off at a terrible rate of speed, he didn't know "where he was at," only it was somewhere in New Orleans.

When we stopped in lovely Metairie Cemetery, in front of Albert Sidney Johnston's tomb, it was to uncover and bow in memory of the valiant hero who fell at the front, on Shiloh's battle field. Mr. Chalmers extended every courtesy and aided no little in the work of the day.

At the evening hour we were privileged to preach for Rev. Martin Hebert at Epworth Church. Brother Hébert is the joyful and capable leader of one of the most promising churches in the city. He introduced the editor as being from Mississippi, where a number of his members are from, and the State that has given to the Church Bishop Galloway and other great preachers, who are all dead. The illuminating thing was that Brother Hebert knew of Bishop Galloway. Solomon said, "A living dog is better than a dead lion." The editor agrees with Solomon so far as running around is concerned, but is confident in the usefulness that abides, "A dead lion is better than a living dog," not that it isn't a privilege and a high honor to be a "living dog" that faithfully serves his Master.

There was a splendid audience at Epworth and they were as responsive and courteous as the morning congregation had been. When the editor of twenty-five years from now writes of having preached at Epworth, he will mention it as one of the largest churches in the city. Brother Hebert and his people could not have been more cordial than they were.

On Monday the climax was reached by attendance upon the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting at the Memorial Mercy Home; and with the presiding elder, city pastors, Rev. and Mrs. H. H. Ahrens, Revs. Martin and Tulley, enjoyed a delicious luncheon so graciously served by our hostess, Mrs. Snelling.

Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., worthily leads a band of capable and loyal preachers who are seriously going about the work of His Kingdom in the Crescent City of the South.

It was a revelation to hear of and see the great work Dr. and Mrs. Snelling are doing. We could but thank God for their devotion and pray that He who blesses the merciful would lead our people to support with their prayers and means that worthy work.

Withal it was a happy experience for the country preacher who was generously favored with hospitality and brotherly kindness; and not the least, assurances of increasing Advocate subscriptions.

MRS. W. H. SAUNDERS, WIFE OF PICAYUNE MISS., PASTOR, PASSED TO HER ETERNAL REWARD

Mrs. W. H. Saunders, wife of the Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor, Picayune, Miss., died in their parsonage home on Wednesday morning, January 28. Mrs. Saunders had been ill for some time, but it was thought that she was making rapid improvement until Sunday night, when she was suddenly stricken with pneumonia and continued critically ill until the end came at 1 o'clock Wednesdaly morning.

She is survived by her husband and five daughters, Hattie, Mrs. Willis Sanders, Mrs. Ruth Mars, Jimmie and Dorothy; also a sister, Mrs. C. W. Crisler, Brookhaven, Miss., and two half-brothers, Dr. W. G. Gill, Newton, and Dr. A. M. Gill, Sidon.

Mrs. Saunders was born in Clinton, Miss., her parents being Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dunton, who were highly respected citizens of that historic and cultured community. She spent her childhood days in Clinton and attended Hillman College there and from her father's home she went out as the bride of William H. Saunders to face the "lights and shadows" of the Methodist itinerancy. To him, her children, her church, and her Lord, she remained faithful and true. When the Saviour called to take her unto himself He was not a stranger at the door, but a friend whom she had loved through the beautiful days of childhood, romantic days of young womanhood and the years of her home life and church devotion. She was a modest and devout follower of Jesus Christ. Her home was the charm of her life and her church was the joy of her service. Such a noble mother, devoted companion, and humble Christian, leaves a legacy worth more than the world could give. Her husband and children rise up and call her blessed.

The funeral services were held from the Methodist church at Clinton, on Thursday afternoon, January 29, with Rev. J. A. Smith and Rev. J. E. Gray in charge.

Rev. W. H. Saunders has been a capable and faithful member of the Mississippi Conference for 30 years and was a member of the North Mississippi Conference before his service began in the Mississippi. Through all the years his devoted wife aided and encouraged him in his life of ministry. Now that she is gone he will have the affectionate sympathy of his brethren, who commend him and his to the blessed Saviour, of whom he has so well preached through the years.

REV. B. W. LEWIS, PASTOR AT GEORGETOWN, MISS., PASSED AWAY, JANUARY 29.

Rev. Barney W. Lewis, pastor at Georgetown, Miss., died in his parsonage home on Thursday morning, January 29, at 2:30 a. m. He was taken with influenza, which developed into pneumonia, and died in less than a week's time. His death was a shock to his loved ones, members and other friends. He had begun his work with joyous devotion and at each of the churches had made a favorable impression. His people were happy with his assignment and he had given himself to preaching the gospel and promoting all the program of his Church.

B. W. Lewis was the first of nine children born to Rev. and Mrs. Henry P. Lewis. Rev. H. P. Lewis, his father, was for more than fifty years a member of the Mississippi Conference. His uncle, Rev. W. B. Lewis, was also an honored member of the same conference. Those who survive him are: his wife, Mrs. Ella Fry Lewis, Barney W. Lewis, Jr., Marion, Ark.; Miss Evelyn Lewis, Georgetown; Mrs. Van Kizer, Alexandria, La.; Mrs. H. McDaniels, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Christine Crawford, Marion, Ark., and Mrs. Sam Williams, Jackson. In addition to his wife and six children there are four brothers and two sisters who survive; Revs. J. Tillery Lewis, Drew; H. P. Lewis, Rosedale; J. M. Lewis, Louise, and O. S. Lewis, Canton; Miss Pattie Lewis, Jackson, and Mrs. W. A. Terry, Richton.

Brother Barney had been a member of the conference since 1889. He served all his charges with diligence and gave intelligent leadership to all the departments of the work. He gave his voice in song, and many times Annual Conferences have been lifted by the soulful songs of the Lewis Brothers' Quartette. His brethren loved him and will miss him from the ranks of their brotherhood.

The funeral services were held from his church at Georgetown, where he fell at his post. The services were in charge of Rev. J. L. Decell, his presiding elder, assisted by Revs. J. T. Leggett (conference classmate), G. F. Winfield, J. E. Gray, C. A. Schultz, and F. L. Applewhite. The following brother ministers were also present: J. G. Galloway, W. H. Lewis, W. M. Williams, B. F. Lewis, C. C. Griffin, L. F. Alford, W. A. Terry (brother-in-law), C. H. Strait, Del Longgrear, R. H. Clegg, T. A. Ferguson, V. R. Landrum, Paul H. Grice, J. B. Holyfield, and Rev. Mr. Jones, Georgetown Baptist pastor.

His sorrowing loved ones, twenty-five of his brother preachers, and a large concourse of relatives, members and other friends gathered to pay their respects to the servant of God who had finished his course.

The bereaved ones have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends and the prayers of the editor that through faith in Christ they will meet him and other loved ones gone on before, in the Father's House above.

REV. J. A. BAXTER DIES AT LUMBERTON, MISSISSIPPI

Rev. J. A. Baxter, superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, died at his home in Lumberton, Miss., Sunday, February 1. His funeral was held on Monday following. We have not been informed as to details, and trust that some one will furnish us at an early date an aaccount of the services, etc.

Brother Baxter was a faithful and useful preacher of the gospel. He was ordained deacon in 1918 and elder in 1920. He spent most of his ministry in Missouri, where he rendered acceptable service as a member of the Missouri Conference. A member of that Conference, in writing of his work when he returned to Mississippi, said: "He is a splendid pasator, good preacher and a thoroughly dependable man." Upon his return to Mississippi, Brother Baxter was assigned to the Scooba charge in the Meridian district, after three years he was granted a superannuate relation.

His loved ones are assured of the esteem in which he was held by his brethren and of their sympathy in this time of bereavement. Evans Lewis and Baxter have answered the roll call of the King since the Conference at Vicksburg.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

The sudden death of Brother W. H. Coulter, Sharon, Miss., was a shock to his many friends. He was a devout member of the Sharon Methodist Church and his home was always open to the preachers. He and his faithful wife were ever ready to respond to the opportunities the church afforded.

Rev. D. B. Raulins, pastor, Algiers, La., has been sick with influenza and was unable to fill his pulpit on Sunday, January 25, which was occupied by Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., in the morning and Dr. J. G. Snelling in the evening. We trust that Brother Raulins will soon be himself again and able to go forward with the work he is so anxious to do.

Rev. James W. Sells, pastor, Ocean Springs, Miss., and executive secretary of the Seashore Methodist Assembly, was in New Orleans last week on official business and favored the Advocate with a call while in the city. He will have interesting news in the near future for the Conferences with reference to the work of the new assembly at the Camp Ground.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor, Hammond, La., taught the Recreational and Culture Course at a Standard Christian Education Institute at Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas. Brother Grambling is the only man outside of the General staff who has been accepted to teach this standard course and we are sure he rendered most acceptable service for the Texans.

Dr. John Brandon Peters, pastor, First Church, New Orleans, is delivering an interesting and helpful "If I Were" series of sermons to his congregation on the following subjects: "If I Were a Roman Catholic Priest"; "If I Were a Protestant Episcopal Clergyman"; "If I Were a Christian Science Reader"; "If I Were a Jewish Rabbi"; "If I Were a Protestant Preacher."

Mr. A. C. Hoffpauir, Midland, La., died January 21. Brother Hoffpauir was in the prime of life, being but forty-seven years of age and his passing away will leave sorrow in many hearts and be a loss to his community and church. His two brothers in the Louisiana Conference, Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, Natalbany, and Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, Istrouma, Baton Rouge, and the other loved ones have the sympathy of their many friends.

Dr. J. C. Rush, physician and surgeon, died in his own hospital at Meridian, Miss., on January 22. A good physician, a faithful Methodist steward, devoted husband and father "ceased at once to labor and live." He did his work in the spirit of Him of whom it was written, "Others he saved himself he could not save." His wife, one daughter, Mrs. Forest Adams, and two sons, Drs. Lowry and J. A., Jr., survive him. The funeral service was conducted on Saturday morning following his death on Thursday, by his pastor, Rev. Benjamin L. Sutherland.

The Advocate office is grateful to Rev. W. B. Jones, secretary of the Mississippi Conference, and Dr. J. R. Countlss, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Dr. R. H. Harper, of the Louisiana Conference, for copies of their respective Conference Journals. The Gower Printery, Meridian, Miss.; McCowat-Mercer, Jackson, Tenn., and Mr. C. M. Chalmers, New Orleans, published them, respectively. The Mississippi Journal reached us before Christmas, the North Mississippi soon after, and the Louisiana on January 20. All three Journals are attractive in appearance and ably edited.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Petty, of 1128 Amelia Street, New Orleans, have enjoyed the privilege of completing fifty years of happy married life. They celebrated the anniversary of their golden wedding on the evening of January 25, surrounded by a large concourse of relatives and friends, who wished them godspeed in their journey in the afternoon of a useful life. Rev. J. G. Snelling was assisted by Rev. O. W. Bradley in the performance of a beautiful and interesting re-dedication ceremony at the family residence. Brother and Sister Petty are well known in Methodist circles in this city and up-State; they were until recently members of the Louisiana Avenue Church, having joined that congregation back in 1905. Mr. Petty has long been engaged in the building business, and many of the beautiful church edifices in and around New Orleans of various denominations were constructed by the firm known as J. A. Petty & Sons. Mr. and Mrs. Petty reared a large family of sons and daughters, many of whom have taken prominent part in church work. Mr. Morrls Petty, who was translated several years ago, was their son, and the late Mrs. L. I. McCain, beloved wife of Rev. L. i. McCain, honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, was their daughter. Other sons and daughters who were present at the anniversary are: Mr. A. T. Petty, Mr. J. A. Petty, Jr., Mr. W. Boyd Petty, Mrs. A. D. Knight, of Monroe; Mrs. Jno. McNulty, and Miss Helen Petty of New Orleans.

A beautiful life of service to humanity came to an end shortly after 8 o'clock on the evening of January 18, 1931, when MRS. I. L. McINTYRE died in her home in Oil City. She was born in 1862 in Grenada, Miss., but moved with her parents to Texas at the age of 11 months. The daughter of a Baptist minister, at the age of fourteen years she united with the Baptist Church, and at 16 she was married to W. L. Lindley. Seven daughters were horn of this union—Mesdames Ella Farrell of Carlsbad, New Mexico; C. C. Craighead of Athens; E. Hay of Henderson, Texas; D. Newland of Corsicana, Texas; J. C. Hooten of Marked Tree, Ark.; Joe Houser of Ponca City, Okla., and P. Rhodes of Miami, Fla. The funeral services were conducted from the Methodist church in Oil City by the Reverend Mr. Ware of the Park View Methodist church in Shreveport, assisted by Reverend W. C. Yancey of Shreveport, pastor of the Christian church at Oil City, and Reverend C. W. Lahey, pastor of the Methodist church in Oil City. Interment was in the Greenwood cemetery in Shreveport, beside the body of her late husband, I. L. McIntyre.

Mrs. McIntyre was a pioneer resident of Oil City, coming here in 1907, when the turbulent life of the newly opened oil fields made the community a ripe harvest for the mission work which she promptly entered into. Her broadminded view of religious creeds opened for her activities seldom acquired by an individual, and she used them all for the work of her Master. The first fruit of her endeavors was the erection of the first church in Oil City. It was a small building, constructed mostly of brush and was called Brush Arbor, but later acquired the name of Lindley Chapel. It was used as a community house for all denominations. In 1916, she was married to I. L. McIntyre, who was a devoted member of the Methodist Church, and together they were instrumental in building the Methodist church, which was the first denominational church in Oil City. They were also helpers in the building of the other churches as well as any charitable movement whithin their sphere of action.

In 1912, Mrs. McIntyre received from the Union Mission in St. Louis license to preach and preached on the streets of Oil City in its early days. Her license has been renewed each year since. She was a member of the board of directors of the Hephzibah Home in Shreveport, which is auxiliary to the St. Louis Union Mission. She had been head of the Red Cross unit at Oil City since the end of the World War, devoting her entire time to these organizations; never holding back from any task to which they led. At the last business meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church of Oil City, she was presented with an honorary life membership. In December of the past year, a community house was established in Oil City, to provide alms for the needy. She was appointed manager and promptly left her home and gave her entire time to the work. She moved a bed into the place and did not leave it even for a night, lest some needy one come for aid and find it not. When she was stricken with penumonia, three days before her death, she still refused to leave her post, and it was not until she became unconscious that she was taken to her home.

She heeded naught but the cry of the poor;
Saw naught but the sparrow's fall;
Gave ear to naught that would turn her aside
Till she anwered the Master's call:

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

BALD NO LONGER
Mr. E. R. Colwill, 1419½ 4th Ave., Seattle, Washington, was partially bald for almost ten years. He had given up hope of ever having a full head of hair again. One day he tried JAPANESE OIL. Now his entire head is covered with thick, luxuriant hair.
If you are bald, if your hair is falling out ask your druggist for a bottle of inexpensive JAPANESE OIL—the antiseptic liniment. Use it according to directions. If your hair roots are not yet dead JAPANESE OIL will probably help you as it helped Colwill.

STOP BOBBY'S COUGH
Before it Weakens Him to the Danger Point!
Never take a child's cough lightly. You can't tell where it will end. Many a serious sickness has started with "just a cough". For a cough is not only distressing, but weakening as well. At the first sign of a cough or chest soreness in old or young, always give good, dependable old "Piso's for Coughs".
Piso's does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages, soothes the inflamed tissues, and at the same time, has a tonic value that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Piso's supplies these five vital effects and it contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give, even to babies. All druggists sell Piso's in 35c and 60c sizes. Be sure you ask for "Piso's for Coughs".

Keep up the Effort for New Orleans Christian Advocate

MARTIN TERRELL RUSH was born in Newton County, near Lake, Miss., May 20, 1909, and departed this life December 25, 1930. He joined the Methodist church at Lake, June 27, 1927. It was my privilege to know him two years, also was his pastor, and I am glad to say this in his behalf, there wasn't anything he prized too highly for his church, he was a strict tither, he served his church as Sunday school secretary, he was always on time with a good report, he was ready and willing to serve in any way for the best interest of his church and for the good of others. His going was no little loss for the church and community in which he lived. For, since his conversion, he caught the true spirit of the Apostle when he said, "For me to live is Christ, but to die it is gain." With all the glorious gifts that God Almighty gave him, not one was ever bent in willing service to an unworthy cause. He lived to make the world about him better, and with his splendid might he helped to build a happier, heartier and more wholesome sentiment among his kind, and with fondness mixed with reverence, I know the Christ of Calvary, who died for man, has found a welcome full and sweet for one who flashed within his person the golden spirit of the New Commandment and spent his life in glorious living for his race.

And to the devoted mother and two brothers left behind we extend our deepest sympathy, and pray God's richest blessings upon them in this hour of grief.

REV. T. C. COOPER.

JOHN MILTON WATSON, born April 11, 1870; died November 25, 1930. Between these dates there lived in Claiborne Parish, La., one of its most useful and honorable citizens, one who was most highly respected and beloved by the people of his church and community, a most devoted and loyal husband and father, for years an official member of Wesley Chapel, Methodist Church, on the Athens charge. One of the sturdy, dependable kind, that constitute the most valuable type of American citizenship. Honest, clean, highminded, generous, kind, loyal and true. Few men had a grip on his friends like Milton Watson.

Married to Miss Bessie Monk of Colquitt, La., November 18, 1908, she, with one daughter, Mrs. Prentiss (Mary Alice) Owens, and one son, John Milton, Jr., mourn his going.

He had been in ill health for about two years, was patient and submissive, enjoying visits from his pastor and friends as few men did.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. J. S. Henley and W. C. Childress, interment in Arlington Cemetery, Homer.

To the devoted widow and children we extend hearty sympathy and point them to the Christ who alone can comfort in their grief.

A GOOD CELEBRATION OF THE ELEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION

By Rev. J. L. Carter

This Victory Day program was held at the Union High School Auditorium, Sunday, January 21, at 7 p. m. It was conducted under the auspices of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches, together with the public school. Mr. J. M. Pearson, superintendent of city schools, was in charge of the service. The three pastors with several laymen and women took part. A very fine feature of this meeting was the singing of the appropriate songs in the W. C. T. U song book. This was entered into very heartily by the children and young people, who were there in fine number. By the way, every public school and every Sunday school should have a sufficient quantity of these song books. They may be had from W. C. T. U. headquarters at Evanston, Ill., for ten cents each. Our best means of becoming drier is to work through and for the children. This service is being praised by folks of the town. Some who still like their drink and some bootleggers are not profusely extolling it. But I think the more good people do and say for prohibition the weaker the enemy will become.

Strongest
"Gerald suffered with his stomach and bowels until he was listless and weak," says Mrs. B. E. Geren, 822 West Main St., Oklahoma City, Okla.
"Now he's the strongest boy I know. I gave him California Fig Syrup because Mother used it. It increased his appetite, regulated his bowels, helped his digestion."
Nothing could be more convincing than the way thousands of mothers are praising California Fig Syrup to show how it acts to build-up and strengthen headachy, bilious, half-sick, constipated children.
Your doctor will approve the use of this pure vegetable product as often as impure breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness warn of constipation — or to keep bowels open in colds or children's diseases.

REVOLUTIONARY CONDITIONS IN CUBA

The daily papers have been bringing us news of the revolution in progress in Cuba. These conditions are seriously affecting our schools there. Some real dangers to life have arisen in Matanzas which makes the reopening of the Irene Toland at the appointed time in January very doubtful. Parents are naturally anxious about the safety of their children.

The unarmed citizens of Cuba are protesting against the present government by means of passive resistance, which was begun with a strike of the university students, spreading through normal schools and other institutions. On the 16th of December the students of Candler College walked out en masse. A plea was made to Buena Vista to act, but by vote of the students school was continued until December 20.

The 6th of January was announced as the date of re-opening, but what the result was we do not know. At the present writing our missionaries are in anxious suspense, not knowing what will be the outcome. Whether or not the strike will be continued indefinitely is a question entirely unknown.

Doubtless as in former attempts on the part of the people to rid themselves of an undesirable government, they are restrained by the Platt Amendment. The people of Cuba are never sure when the strong hand of Uncle Sam may project itself into their affairs. We are sure the women of our auxiliaries, after their study of Dr. Inman's book, will be extremely interested in the situation, and that their sympathies will be enlisted to our missionaries.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

The interdenominational World Day of Prayer for the women of the churches is to be held Feb. 20, 1931. The literatures listed below may be secured at Literature Headquarters, 706 Church Street, Nashville, Tenn. Stamps cannot be accepted in payment.

Program, "Ye Shall Be My Witnesses." 2 cents each, $1.75 per hundred. "A Call to Prayer." Free. "A Call to Young People." Free. Poster. 10 cents. Seals. 25 cents per hundred. Service of Consecration. 10 cents each.

THE MISSIONARY VOICE

In spite of bank failures, encouraging things are happening about the Missionary Voice. One hundred and thirty-eight auxiliaries have already reached their quota. In one auxiliary in Alabama their 1930 list was five, their quota six, and they sent in thirty-nine subscribers. Let no auxiliary be content until the Missionary Voice is a monthly visitor to every home in its church.

FOOTBALL STAR LEADS CLASS IN PROHIBITION PLEDGE

The Christian Science Moultor reports that under the leadership of Mil Stroupe, star tackle on the varsity football team of North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering, the sphomore class of that institution at a called meeting outlawed the drinking of liquor by any of its members. Stroupe is a former member of the United States marine corps. The class unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"We, the class of 1933 of North Carolina State College, put ourselves on record as outlawing drinking liquor among the members of our class."

Discussing the action of his class under his leadership, Mr. Stroupe said: "I am no angel, but I am here to say that drinking liquor is not the manly thing to do. By our action we mean to do all we can to prevent the use of, and traffic in, liquor, and to have nothing to do with it ourselves."—Missionary News.

Report of Aberdeen District Rural Worker for 1930: I feel that this should be an expression of appreciation—First to Mrs. J. A. Price's and Mrs. T. M. Clark's vision of the need for the work, then, for the women of the missionary societies who have made it possible. Next for the Board and the presiding elder, who helped plan and encourage the work. The hearty co-operation of the pastors of the twenty circuits was unanimous. Reverend and Mrs. J. V. Stewart and Reverend and Mrs. G. W. Robertson each organized one of their own missionary societies. Rev. A. N. Gore secured reports from four new societies. Last, but not least, we appreciate the women of the seventeen following churches who responded to the Master's call, organized and reported the work of their missionary societies—Evergreen, Shiloh, Salem, Liberty Hill, Lafayette Springs, Tchula, Price Memorial, Tossapola, Algoma, Troy, Palne's Memorial, Pyland, Morn, Spring Hill, Raper's Chapel, Cross Roads, and Soule's Chapel.

Pleasant Grove (on Shannon Circuit), Turon, Tremont and Boone's Chapel made a new start.

Salem, organized in June, completed 12 months' work and is on the Honor Roll with 13 paid-up members.

Of the six Greenwood Spring's societies that were organized in 1929, Riggan's Chapel, Pleasure Grove, New Hope, Friendship, and Greenwood Springs are on the Honor Roll. Quincy, in some ways, did better than some of these, but on account of bad roads, did not complete the outlined work. They welcome Gottman and Soule's Chapel societies to their circuit.

New junior missionary societies reporting good work this year are: Turon, Pyland, Palmeto, Salem and Union Jubilee.

Leagues organized and doing good work are: Pleasant Grove (Greenwood Springs Circuit), Riggan's Chapel, Una, and Salem, organized in June with 30 members and now has 70.

Much appreciation is extended those who put on the 13 D. V. B. schools. We hope they are planning to do the same again this summer. Miss Tennie Faulkes put on three.

Miss Ruth West has proved her gratitude for the scholarship granted her at Scarritt College. She has done Sunday school work and helped get up a Christmas program and tree for Soule's Chapel. That church was very much interested in getting their windows in, and stove up, ready for winter work.

Seventy-two of the 121 churches of the district have been visited. We have tried to accomplish a little on each of the 20 circuits. I owe a vote of thanks to the Soule's Chapel boys and Bro. Biffle's son for helping me get over the district. Bad roads will make it hard for many of our societies. But where we have a Mrs. J. W. Stewart, as Spring Hill has, who is willing to study, pray and report whether they can get together or not, we can do much to extend the Kingdom.

We praise God for the fruit He has granted the stronger missionary societies of Aberdeen District who have made possible this work.—Aberdeen District Rural Worker.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

WHEN CHILDREN FRET

THERE are times when a child is too fretful or feverish to be sung to sleep. There are some pains a mother cannot pat away. But there's quick comfort in Castoria!

For diarrhea, and other infantile ills, give this pure vegetable preparation. Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; whenever there's any sign of sluggishness. Castoria has a good taste; children love to take it. Buy the genuine—with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper.

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish,—no danger.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Circuit Preachers' Conference will be held at Millsaps College February 26 and 27. All the circuit preachers of the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences are urged to attend.

Board and lodging will be $1 a day. Get up a carload and divide the travel and come.

We desire to discuss those things that you are interested in.

Please notify me some problem you desire help with and we will try and make it possible to render the service.

I am asking that a few books be displayed. I do not know if this will be possible. We will have book lists posted and I hope these will be suggestive.

Dr. W. H. Alexander, head of the Department of Schools and Colleges, and Rev. A. A. Martin, head of the Department of Extension Work, will be present to lead us in our work.

Please notify me as soon as you can so that proper provision may be made for your entertainment.

A most helpful Child Study Conference was held at Brandywine church on the Barlow charge. Miss J. H. Green, the district superintendent of children's work, was in charge and had worked up the meeting. Five charges were represented and six Sunday schools. Miss Doris Alford led the meeting. This was a most interesting and helpful meeting. All were delighted with its results and were determined to make aan effort to make better homes and better churches.

The City Elementary Council met the twenty with Grace Church. Mrs. G. Rice Wilson is the presiding officer. This first program was greatly enjoyed by all. This group plans for quarterly meetings.

You will be mailed a sample copy of the Sunday School Day program, if you desire it. A copy is being mailed to the Sunday school superintendents. The price of the program is printed on it. We think it a mighty good program. You may order your programs direct from Lamar and Whitmore.

If every Sunday school will observe Sunday School Day and send in an offering it will be a great aid to the Board of Christian Education.

This is to thank the workers for their response to the change in our mailing and for reading the cheaper postage materials. This month the saving in stamps was $20. We have been encouraged to feel that fully as many responded.

If you desire the news letter, send in your list. It is free to those schools supporting the fourth Sunday missionary cause. Pray for the work and the workers.

Items for the Attention of the February Workers' Council

1. Continue Evangelistic Campaign. Visiting the homes of the pupils should be begun this month. Cultivation of the pupils in the school should be attended to.

2. Patriotic Sunday should be observed February 22.

3. Plans for a Training class or school should be considered.

4. Committee appointed to see that Easter is observed appropriately. Get programs from Lamar and Whitmore.

5. Call attention to the needs of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

6. Have a Valentine Social for the young people and children.

7. Make plans for the observance of Missionary Day. See that the offering is sent in promptly. Missionary Day is February 22.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

As we go about we find a fine spirit among the people in spite of the financial conditions. Comparative figures at most every place show an increase in attendance at the Sunday schools over the same Sunday last year. The pastors are preaching to larger congregations in most instances.

A day spent at Drew and Ruleville found two happy pastors and equally happy congregations. Rev. J. T. Lewis at Drew and Rev. A. T. Clanton at Ruleville are beginning most happy pastorates. Even though it was a cold, rainy day we preached to splendid congregations at both places and a fine group of the workers met for a conference in the afternoon.

At Durant, Rev. S. A. Brown and the good people there are faithfully carrying on the work. The Sunday school is increasing in numbers all the time. It is making some changes in its organization that will greatly add to its efficiency.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. Y. Brown, who is taking a short course at Vanderbilt University, the writer preached at Shannon and met with the workers in the afternoon last Sunday. That is a most faithful congregation, and they are happy to have Bro. Brown as their pastor.

Bro. R. T. Hollingsworth, at Nettleton, is beginning a most happy pastorate. There is a fine interest there in the whole program of the church.

There have been organized recently three new Epworth Leagues. They are, Artesia, Rev. W. L. Pearson, pastor; Potts Camp, Rev. L. M. James, pastor, and Pyland, on the Vardaman charge, Rev. J. V. Stewart, pastor. We welcome these Leaguers into the fine fellowship of this fine group of young people working throughout our church.

Many places are requesting Standard Training Schools. The first school of the year will be held at Amory, February 22-27. Three courses will be offered in this school. Religious Education of Adults, Intermediate-Senior Materials and Methods, Training Juniors in Worship. These courses will represent the threee general divisions of the local church. Rev. C. A. Parks and Rev. W. R. Hannontree are hard at work together with their fine people to make this school a great success.

Application for a school has been made at Lexington March 8-13. Also for Inverness, for that side of the Greenwood District, April 12-17, and West Point May 3-8. Tentative arrangements have been made for schools at Columbus, Tupelo, Houston, Starksville and Ruleville.

We wish everyone to make a big red ring about the date, June 8-13. This is the date of the Standard Training School at Grenada College. We have the promise of some of the greatest talent in our church for this school. Definite announcements will be made about this school a little later. We wish the presiding elders and pastors would leave this date open and make arrangemenis to attend.

The Epworth League Assembly will follow the Training School and will be held June 15-19. Plans are under way to make this the greatest assembly ever held in our Conference. Mark this date also on your calendar.

If you want a Daily Vacation Bible School, a Standard Training School or Class, a Cokesbury Training School or Class, an Institute or Workers' Conference, you should get in touch with our office at Grenada at once. Our time is rapidly filling up.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE

Hattiesburg, Miss., Jan. 18, 1931.

To Our Pastors: One of our pastors, in conversation a few days ago, stated that he had gotten the impression that there was not to be very much activity in the Epworth League work this year. We do not know how this impression has gotten out, but in case others of our pastors have in some manner gotten this impression, we are addressing this letter to you. We are pleading for greater effort than ever before in our League work, especially between now and Assembly time. Our League work is to go on just as before, only in greater emphasis; won't you please have it thoroughly understood with your young people, that there should be no lessening or slacking up in their efforts to make their League work one hundred per cent? We are working under the same standard of efficiency as last year, and we are extremely anxious that we have more 100 per cent chapters than ever before; and to stimulate interest along this line, we have included chapter ratings on the standard of efficiency as one of the points on which the Winfield loving cup will be awarded. This cup is presented each year by Dr. Winfield to the best District delegation at the Epworth League Assembly.

Please understand also that pastors are still welcome and we sincerely desire that as many as can will come with their young people to the Assembly.

Also bear in mind that the Assembly delegation is not limited to Epworth League members alone, but as heretofore we are urging young people of Senior League age from churches where there are no Epworth League organizations to attend.

We will also hold a Hi-League camp this year to take care of young people of Hi-League age, and we are plead-

EXCESS ACID SICKENS—GET RID OF IT!

Sour stomach, indigestion, gas. These are signs which usually mean just one thing; excess acid. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. Too much acid is making food sour in the stomach and intestines.

The way to correct excess acid is with an alkali. The best form of alkali for this purpose is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Just take a spoonful of this harmless, almost tasteless preparation in a glass of water. It works instantly. The stomach becomes sweet. You are happy again in five minutes! Your heartburn, gas, headache, biliousness or indigestion has vanished!

Know Phillips Milk of Magnesia and you're through with crude methods forever. It is the pleasant way—the efficient way to alkalinize the system; to relieve the effects of over-acidity.

ing for your co-operation in Hi-League work also.

You are invited to write this office for any information desired about these meetings.

When you meet with your Epworth League cabinet next, we would appreciate it if you will insist on them checking up on the standard of efficiency and see how they stand, and see if anything can be done to raise their standing. Also impress upon them the importance of paying their mission special pledges in full before the Assembly time.

We are anxious to have the best Epworth League year the Mississippi Conference has ever known, and we are pleading with you to help us make it so.

Yours in the work,

J. H. WEEMS, Secretary.

EPWORTH LEAGUE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI

How many of our young people are reading the New Orleans Christian Advocate? Can some one answer this question for us? A large number of our young people should be reading the Advocate? There are many reasons why they should read it.

We believe that our young people will take more pride in their church when they learn more about what the church is doing. We have a great church and we should be proud of what our church has done and is doing today. The more I learn about the Methodist Church the more pride I take in the fact that I am a Methodist. This is not narrowness, it is common sense. We may speak in a general way and say that we love people, but we prove that statement by loving individuals. Our young people need to know what our church staands for. One way to teach them is to get them to read the literature of the Church.

Reading the Advocate ought to help develop the spirit of loyalty in our young people. This is a spirit that certainly ought to be developed. How are we going to perpctuate our ideals unless we instill them into the minds of young people? The success of the Church in the future will depend upon the loyalty of those who are being trained now. Are we going to be careless about this important matter? Of course, the Advocate alone will not develop this spirit of loyalty, but it will help. And we need all the help we can get.

The Advocate should help to broaden the vision of our young people. If we just read about our own local church we don't get much of an idea of what the Church at large is doing. We may think that the Church has a small task. But when we get a vision of what the whole Church is trying to do it becomes more of a challenge to us.

Young people like to be challenged. Give young people a big task and they will respond. Enlarge their vision and see how they respond. Youth has the spirit of adventure and we need to direct this spirit into the proper channel. Let the church paper assist you in broadening the vision of your young people.

The church paper will also help to develop the spirit of co-operation. We need more team work. The Methodist Church is a connectional church, but some people don't seem to realize that fact. Young people respond very readily to the idea of team work. They will co-operate. We need to teach them the importance of team work in the Church. We are workers together. One of the fine features of our Board of Christian Education is the spirit of co-operation. This was every evident in the meeting of the Council of Christian Education in Nashville a few weeks ago. There seemed to be a desire on the part of those who were present to work out their problems together as brethren. This is the only way we will ever succeed in doing the work of the Church.

We hope that our young people are reading the Advocate. We hope they will help their pastors in circulating the Advocate. It is our purpose to represent as best we can in this column all the institutions of the Church. We want to keep the whole program of the Church before the young people and not just a part of it.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

THE BIBLE STILL SELLS

In this period of world-wide depression and economic unrest, I am happy to state that the Bible is still the "Best Seller."

The distribution from the New Orleans Depository of the American Bible Society, at 716 St. Charles Street, for the year 1930, has been: 1,920 Bibles, 9,641 Testaments, 159,037 parts of the Bible; total, 170,598 volumes. Counting six days a week, nine hours a day, this is one volume a minute.

Our co-laborers have distributed more than 10,000 on ships, more than 10,000 in hospitals and jails, many thousands along the coast, and 5,000 to the poor children at Yuletide.

The Baptist Bible Institute bus left this depository one morning with 12,350 volumes of the Scriptures, in nine different languages, to be used in their Missionary program.

I have been with the American Bible Society nearly 18 years. During that time the distribution has been 40,305 Bibles, 77,183 Testaments, 715,382 parts of the Bible; total, 832,870; in 13 States, and in 34 different languages. God be praised! Don't you want a part in this work?

At a recent meeting of pastors of this city, the Rev. George Parker, a missionary of the Methodist Church, South, in Brazil, when asked to address the members, stated, that his travels and study had brought him in touch with the great mission fields of the world, but that he knew of no greater nor more promising mission field than the one in which this group of ministers had the privilege of working. He spoke of the many nations represented here, the proximity to Mexico and Central and South America, just on the verge of rapid development, and that the commerce of this port made this a gathering place for their nationals for the study of everything that is American: our manufactures, commerce, literature, social customs—and why not our religion!

Behold, a sower went forth to sow; and when he sowed, some seeds fell by the wayside . . . . some fell upon stony places . . . . and some fell among thorns . . . . but others fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some a hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold.

Where cross the crowded ways of life, where sound the cries of race and clan; above the noise of selfish strife, we hear thy voice, O Son of Man!"

Yours in His service,

G. A. PERKINS.

The W. M. S. of the New Hope Church, Spillman, La., reports an interesting program at their January meeting. The devotional was taken from Philippians 3:13-14, the central thought being. "Reaching Toward Life's Goal." The special feature of the program was the discussion of the duties of the superintendents. Each superintendent asked the question, "What Is My duty?" The answers were given by her committee.

"A LETTER OF APPRECIATION"

To My Friends: As most of you know I have been confined to my room and bed since January 17, 1930. I just want to tell you through the columns of the Advocate of the joy I experienced through Christmas holidays by a surprise brought about through the efforts of my dear friend (I shall not withhould her name), Mrs. P. R. Arrington, Magee, Superintendent of Epworth Juniors. She was inspired with the thought of a sunshine bag for my Christmas present; so, putting that thought into action, she conveyed the word to each W. M. S. of Hattiesburg District of her plan. And on Christmas Eve, my pastor, J. B. Holyfield, Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Arrington, Mrs. Myra Mitchell, accompanied by Epworth Juniors of Magee, came to see me. The joy of seeing those children and the surprise of it all, too! Santa came up the bedside saying he was carrying his whole pack for me. My! how anxious I was to see those presents, and I was not long going into them, either—nor would you have been, would you? Well, to my surprise and delight, there were presents from all over the district, also from some individuals. My heart was so happy, I said, "What does this mean, so many nice, useful presents and how did they all know to send them?"

You see, at first I did not know the secret. Now, to each W. M. S. and each individual who had a part in this, I wish I could express my appreciation and sincere thanks, but words fail me; anyway, many thanks for same for my life has been made brighter and happier by the love and thoughtfulness of so many friends for me.

I wish I might enumerate each gift but space forbids. Each one I can use and enjoy. Wishing for each and all that this New Year of 1931 may be a year of blessing in your lives on account of your fellowship with and working for God.

Sincerely, yours and His,
MRS. R. S. WALTERS.
Magee, Miss.

A QUICK AND BEAUTIFUL RESPONSE TO THE BESSIE C. ALFORD RESERVE FUND

Dear Mrs. Hegman: I always read the Woman's page first, when I get the New Orleans Advocate, and this morning as I read about the Bessie C. Alford Fund, I said: "My, what a fine thing to do. I believe it will be carried out." Thus, I am yielding to my first impulse, I have only $1 to my name, but there it is, for the reserve fund. I give it gladly, praying God's blessings upon this fine thought of Mrs. Brown's May it grow and grow until every obligation is met in full.

Sincerely and prayerfully,
KATIE C. ———————.

The last name of this dear saint is being withheld, because we believe that she would want us to do so. We publish it, that it may inspire others, as it has us, to yield to the first impulse and give according to the measure of our love.

Complying with Mrs. Alford's urgent request, send your checks immediately to Mrs. John T. Sharp, 512 E. Capitol St., Jackson, Miss.

IF I REFUSE

"If I refuse to give anything to missions this year, I practically cast a ballot in favor of the recall of every missionary, both in the home and foreign fileds.

If I give less than heretofore, I favor a reduction of the missionary forces proportionate to my reduced contribution.

If I give the same as formerly, I favor holding the ground already won, but I disregard any forward movement. My song is "Hold the Fort!" forgetting that the Lord never intended that His army should take refuge in a fort. All of His soldiers are under marching orders always. They are commanded to "Go!"

OUR REPRESENTATIVES

While we go complacently about our duties in home and office and shop, do we often stop to think of our representatives in the far corners of the earth? In hundreds of centers they are working and toiling, often against the most adverse circumstances, in order to promote peace and understanding and Christian good will among the peoples of the world.

They are our representatives. They are there because you and I, for reasons best known to ourselves, cannot go.

LETTER FROM BROTHER HOFFPAUIR

Dear Bro. Decell:

Brother L. N. Hauffpauir, pastor of Istrouma, Baton Rouge. and myself have suffered the sad loss of our dear brother, Allen C. Hoffpauir, who died Wednesday night, January 21, at his home in Midland. Brother was recovering from a severe spell of pneumonia when, on Saturday prior to his death, he relapsed and succumbed to that dreaded disease. He was 48 years of age, engaged in the mercantile and hotel business in Midland.

The funeral services were held at Estherwood in the Methodist church, of which he was a faithful member, having united with the church early in life. The pastor, Rev. J. Hervy Hoffpauir, officiated, preaching a touching and appropriate sermon to a large crowd of relatives and friends, testifying to the esteem in which he was held. His body was laid to rest in the Crowley Cemetery.

Besides the two pastor brothers, the following brothers and sisters survive: (a younger brother, pastor at Covington, died in 1915), Ellis and Girard Hoffpauir, Estherwood; T. B. Hoffpauir, Crowley; L. P. Hoffpauir, Leesville; Mrs. C. C. Wagner, Midland; Mrs. R. J. Hientz, Reeves, and his widow at Midland.

Incidently, I might mention, Bro. L. W. Cain, our kind and efficient presiding elder, held our first quarterly conference here at Natalbany on Wednesday, January 21, from the good conference and reports among which was an increase in pastor's salary, seems to indicate we have made a good start here in our new field, after three years on the Plaquemine charge. We are looking after the Advocate and will do all we can by the help of the Lord.. The good people here have given us a very cordial reception, and many tokens of appreciation are manifest. We are looking forward to a good year.

Sincerely,

A. R. HOFFPAUIR.

CALL OF THE CHURCH

"Mr. Richey, Jim Bottomly is not able to play today," said the captain of the St. Louis Cardinal baseball team to Branch Richey, the Christian president of the Cardinal club. "He has a solid sore from his knee to his waist on his right leg, caused by sliding. Every move he makes is excruciating pain."

Jim Bottomley, however, had made no excuse. He donned his uniform and was engaged in batting practice before the regular game. Plainly, the agony was written upon his face each time he swung at the ball. He wanted to play. The team needed him, for this game would decide the National League pennant. Jim was only doing his best to make the manager let him play. He did. The game is on. He lines out a single to center. He is on first base, ready to steal second. The pitcher delivers the ball to the batter and Jim starts for second base. A few feet away he hurls himself on his right side, tearing the flesh anew, but lands safely. A single follows and Jim scores with the winning run to decide the flag for St. Louis.

"Why did you slide on your right side," says Branch Richey. "I could not arrive safely any other way," replied Jim. "I forgot myself. I knew I had to get there safely."

This is the story told by Branch Richey to a convention of laymen recently. There was a need and Bottomly accepted the challenge to give himself and not realize the cost.

Jim Bottomley and Branch Richey are Christians—each Sunday finds Mr. Richey teaching his Sunday school class. His mind is far away from baseball on Sunday. As all people should, he finds his way to the church of his choice and refreshes his spiritual life. He accepts life's challenge for real service and forgetting himself as did Bottomley, he gives all that is within him.

An evidence of the lack of spiritual life is the absence of interest in the services of the church and the lack of support in every way. The time will come when those who have enrolled themselves as members of the church and fail to live up to their vows will be disgraced. May that day soon arrive.

There are many channels open to everyone for the development of the spiritual life. Neglect these channels and the soul will die. "Middling Cotton" is a staple article in the world, but a "Middling Christian" is not standard in the church of God.

There exists a need in the church. Consecrated workers are needed in the Sunday school, W. M. S., Epworth League and the various activities of church life. Leaders are needed. Followers are needed, and until the men and women of the church supply the needs of consecrated lives, forgetting themselves in the breach, the church is impotent and merely stands dead and only at symbol of real power.

Listen to the call of the church bells as they ring out, calling men and women to worship on Sunday morning. Stop for a few minutes during the week and attend the prayer services of your church. Take the yearnings and longings of your heart to God in prayer and worship.—R. L. Walton, in the Lawrence County (Miss.) Press.

PRESCRIPTION
in use over 47 Years
Really Helps Bowels

Don t you want this way of making the bowels behave? A doctor's way to make the bowels move so well that you feel better all over! Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin doesn't turn everything to water, but cleans out all that hard waste clogging your system. It cleans you out without any shock, for it's only fresh laxative herbs a famous doctor found so good for the bowels, combined with pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

A doctor should know what is best for the bowels. Let Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin show you how soon you can train the bowels to move freely, every day, the way they should. It's wonderful the way this prescription works, but it's perfectly harmless; so you can use it whenever a coated tongue or sick headache tells you that you're bilious. Fine for children, too (it tastes so nice), and they ought to have a spoonful the minute they seem fretful, feverish, or sluggish, or have a sallow look.

You can get the original prescription Dr. Caldwell wrote so many years ago; your druggist keeps it all ready in big bottles. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and use it always for constipation.

WICKERSHAM COMMISSION REPORT NOT A SHAM

The report of the Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, which the President appointed eighteen months ago, was made to the President on January 19, and he transmitted it to Congress the next day. The members of the Commission were selected from different geographical sections of the country; and their qualifications of citizenship, ability to discover facts and reach their own conclusions seems unquestioned. It appears to have been an honestly drawn jury, to weigh evidence and render a sincere verdict. Had they been selected because they were all wet or all dry the hue and cry would have been a packed jury and a prejudiced verdict. But evidently approaching their task with opinions that could be changed, they reached their commission conclusions; with some of them exercising the right to record personal convictions. The report is a human and an American document.

After comparing conditions as they were previous to National Prohibition, which went into effect in 1919; and conditions as they have developed since that time, the Commission recites that "There has been a real and far-reaching improvement in the efficiency of labor" and in social benefits. "It is enough to say that upon weighing all the evidence, there is a clear preponderance to establish a gain." It is significant that regardless of what their personal preferences might have been, that when faced with the facts of human betterment and progress under National Prohibition the Commission does not favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and recommends enlarged appropriation for an increase of enforcement personnel. The proposal, that if the continued effort at enforcement does not prove successful, then at some future time possible revision could be considered, should not outweigh the merits of the findings. When a nation-wide enforcement is adequately and honestly undertaken by State and National officers the results will place the "revision consideration" so far in the future until young people who study social history will consider saloon days, blind-tigers, and rum runners as dry as dust.

President Hoover is to be commended for his high and positive stand for the Constitution and against the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and for the enforcement of the law "without equivocation or reservation." With more than ninety per cent of the territory of the United States dry by legal enactment prior to National Prohibition, the President should not find it difficult to have the moral support necessary to carry through a clean-cut and clean-up program.

The report is not without its unsatisfactory and perplexing paragraphs, yet, its controlling sections are constructively dry. However, according to a digest of editorial comment and news columns, the daily papers, with too few exceptions, give the wet slant to their interpretations. Certain parts of the report itself and a preponderance of press comment in the dailies give assurance that we are not in a sham battle. All but a rum rebellion is on in certain sections and the Christian forces may as well gird themselves for the fray. During the World War General John J. Pershing said:

> "Banish the entire liquor industry from the United States; close every saloon, every brewery; suppress drinking by severe punishment to the drinker, and if necessary, death to the seller or maker, or both, as traitors, and the nation will suddenly find itself amazed at its efficiency, and startled at the increase in its labor supply. I shall not go slow on prohibition, for I know what is the greatest foe to my men, greater even than the bullets of the enemy."

Such summary treatment of liquor offenders, while not required in peace times, does emphasize the evils of the Alcoholic Alliance. Men need morals and reason for pursuits of peace as well as for war.

Educating the public as to the danger of strong drink and the advantages of temperance is important, but is not enough. Multitudes do not want the facts, and thousands will not act upon the facts if given to them. In addition to fact-giving, the Church must pre-eminently live and lead in a great revival of true religion. Let the power of Christly love flood the lives of the multitudes and they will want to avoid evil and obey the law.

For civilization it is collapse or conversion.

A LOAD THAT IS TOO HEAVY

There are twelve hundred suscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate whose subscriptions are past due. Most, if not all, of them intend to send in their $1.50 for renewal and would dislike having their paper discontinued. Of course, the single subscriber feels that $1.50 isn't very much, but stretch them out to more than a thousand and in these days the amount almost paralyzes. These past due subscriptions dull the blade of the paper trimmer. It makes the publisher feel like he is using a dull cutter. Dr. William Peter King tells of the following epitaph on a tomb in a negro cemetery: "He fit a good fight, but his razzu was dull." It would sharpen things up if our friends would send in their renewals right away.

FIFTH GENERAL MISSIONARY COUNCIL, FIRST CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS, FEBRUARY 24-26.

We are in receipt of announcement concerning the Fifth General Missionary Council, which opens in First Church, New Orleans, 7:30 p. m., on Tuesday evening, February 24, and continues into the afternoon of Thursday, the 26. The General Board of Missions sends out the following statement:

"The fifth Annual session of the General Missionary Council will be held in First Methodist Church at New Orleans, La., February 24-26, 1931. This is the most notable missionary gathering of the year and will bring together all the Bishops, Editors, Missionary Secretaries, Chairmen of Annual Conference Boards of Missions, and Conference Missionary Secretaries, as well as a large number of visitors from every section of the Church.

"The sessions of the Council this year will differ from those of the last quadrennium in that major place will be given to forum discussions of the whole missionary policy and program of the Church. There will be three such discussion periods, one each devoted to Foreign Missions, Home Missions, and Education and Promotion, each session being presided over by the chairmen of the corresponding committee of the Board of Missions. A fourth discussion period will be devoted to hearing and discussing reports from Findings Committees, which will deal with each of the three major phases of missionary administration.

"Each forum period will be introduced by an appropriate address by some outstanding missionary leader. Each session of the Council will close with a special address on Spiritual Life by Dr. Forney Hutchinson of Oklahoma City.

"Among the other speakers will be Dr. Fletcher S. Brockman, who will speak on "China's Call to the Christian World," and "A New Approach With the Old Power." Dr. Brockman is the well-known Southern Methodist who has for many years been a leader of the International Y. M. C. A., with Dr. John R. Mott. Dr. W. G. Cram will speak on "The Methodist Church in the Orient." Bishop E. D. Mouzon will deliver an address on "The Methodist Church of Brazil." Bishop Juan N. Pascoe of Mexico will speak on "The Methodist Church of Mexico." Home Mission themes will be dealt with by Principal W. B. Hubbell, who will speak on "Training a Leadership for the Indian Church," and Dr. W. Y. Bell, of the Colored Methodist Church, who will speak on "Co-operation Between the White and Colored Methodist Churches."

The Orient Takes Us to Heart

BY BISHOP PAUL B. KERN

ARTICLE II

All the way from Vancouver to Yokohama we passed only one ship. Over six thousand miles of ocean traveling and only once did we see signs of human life anywhere except on our own boat. But that does not count Honolulu. God must have known that travelers on that long journey from the West to the East would want a half-way station in the middle of the Pacific, so He just let the sea rise and the volcanic islands of Hawaii are there in all their glory to await the voyagers as they go and come across the ocean.

While we were in mid-ocean between the United States and Honolulu the radio operator handed me one day a Marconigram. There is a peculiar thrill about being thus communicated with when one is on a great ship far from land, knowing that in some strange way the radio man has picked out of the numberless voices of the air the message to his particular ship and then your own very name. Well, the message was from the Methodist group in Honolulu telling us they would meet us, and that we were to lunch with them. When the "Empress" docked there were Dr. and Mrs. Fry and Dr. John Hedley of the Methodist Episcopal Church Mission with a welcome that would have put to shame a Down-in-Dixie crowd.

And what a day we had in their fellowship! With us in our luncheon at the Country Club was Mr. Trent, a Southern Methodist layman formerly of Memphis, Tenn., and a great friend of John R. Pepper. We talked of many mutual friends and enjoyed a never-to-be-forgotten trip to his wonderful home overlooking the city and the bay of Honolulu. I could write endlessly of the beauties of this wonder spot. Perpetual springtime, liquid sunshine, ever-blooming flowers, gorgeous trees redolent with odors and blossoms, palms that point to heaven, babbling brooks of clearest water trickling through vistas of primeval foliage, Waikiki Beach known the world over for its unsurpassed beauty. It is all so beautiful that you fairly ache with the splendor around you and your vocabulary suddenly seems poverty-stricken in the region where you keep your adjectives. We all secretly resolve to come again and linger longer, and wonder why friends like these must belong to one Methodism and we to another.

In the Sunrise Kingdom

But the days on shipboard, while very much alike, pass by rapidly and soon we are slipping into the harbor of Yokohama, Japan. The sun was rising as we got our first glimpse of the shore line. Old Sol seemed to be coming right up out of the ocean and the sunlight on the mountains was full of splendor. I knew as I looked at it why they called Japan the "Sunrise Kingdom." As we slowly came to the dock we had the unusual thrill of getting an almost perfect view of Mount Fujiyama. Often it is covered with clouds, but today it peers through the clouds at its base and rears its perpetually snow-capped summit up into the blue sky. No wonder the Japanese passionately love this mountain. It seems the very symbol of purity and loftiness of spirit.

Familiar faces after so long a voyage give you a delirium of joy. Dr. Cram spies Dr. and Mrs. Wainright on the dock. In another moment we see Bishop and Mrs. Akazewa of the Japan Methodist Church. We are in the hands of our friends and no visitor to the Far East need fear that he will not be piloted around and have every courtesy and attention shown him. They outdo us in politeness and unselfish consideration for others. We had a full day in Yokohama and Tokyo and got back to our steamer in time to lift anchor for Kobe. Here we left the "Empress of Japan," and after a few days in Japan hastened on to Korea in order to be on hand at the opening of the meeting of the Commission on the new National Church in Korea.

The Korean Church

We had two weeks in Seoul, working on the Constitution and the Discipline for the new autonomous Church. There were ten members from the two branches of Methodism in America and ten from the two branches in Korea and ten co-opted members from Korean Methodism. As the discussions went on and conclusions were reached, I was greatly impressed with several facts. In the first place, these Koreans take their Christianity very seriously. Many of them have had to suffer to become believers. They know how dark is the heathenism from which they have been delivered. They feel that they have a liberty in the gospel which does not belong to them economically, socially or politically. The religion of the Spirit offers them a freedom for their true inner life that they find nowhere else. They hold a very high standard for their ministry. If a preacher does not live up to his high calling they drop him right now. To be a Christian in Korea means a new way of life. Old things have passed away.

KOREAN AUTONOMOUS CHURCH COMMISSIONS

And another fact impresses me. These Korean preachers held their own in every debate in the Commission meetings. There was no difference in the high level upon which they moved and that upon which the American Commissioners moved. They debated points with all the incisiveness and clarity that was found in their brothers from across the sea. At no point were they inferior to the representatives of their mother Churches. They were respectful but independent, teachable but original in their thinking. It was most encouraging to see the high character of their approach to their many problems. The home Church may be sure that in time they will build a Church in Korea that will be worthy of their mother Churches and of their Founder and Lord.

Another fact is very clear. They were not going to be bound by tradition. They wanted a Korean Methodist Church, not an American Methodist Church in Korea. For example, they did not want our episcopacy in the form we have it new. (Some of our people evidently do not either). They chose to call their leader a "Chong-ni-sa," a general superintendent. He is elected for four years and can be re-elected only once. He is not ordained, but induced into office. They were a unit on all these matters.

And then they recognize their women as on a parity with their men. They figure that whom the Spirit calls they will ordain. The Korean sisters bore their worthy part in all our deliberations. They are modest but unafraid, devoted but independent in their thinking. It is rather interesting to see that these nations, whose women have been so long held in bondage, now, under the spiritual emancipation of Christianity, have not hesitated to declare in words and ritual that Jesus Christ "there is neither male nor female." The unity is in the body of Christ and each has his and her own gift "according to the measure of faith."

I was reminded of another fact which the Church in America must not overlook. Korea never needed our help more than she does today. True, they have a Church of their own, but they are deeply desirous of keeping strong and intimate their relationship to the mother Churches. They need our counsel, our confidence and our financial assistance. It is a critical time in the history of the Christian movement in Korea. Let no one at home think for a moment that we can withdraw one missionary or one dollar from Korea at this time We simply have a better chance to make our men and money count.

Gracious Experiences

I must tell you about one day's experience that is typical of many that I have had since I reached the Orient. At the invitation of Rev. L. P. Anderson I went to Wonsan to spend a Sunday. We left Seoul at 11 o'clock Saturday night and arrived at Wonsan at 6:30 Sunday morning after a night on a second class Japanese sleeper. To say the least, they are not "flowery beds of ease." When we reached the station the sun was barely up and the thermometer was flirting with the freezing point. I remarked to Brother Anderson that there certainly were a lot of people stirring at that early hour, as the platform was filled with men and women. To my surprise I found that they had all come down to meet us! About fifty native Christians were going to show how glad they were to have us come to their Church.

On the way to the parsonage we passed the church and I noticed it was lighted. I asked the pastor the reason and he explained that since last March they had been so burdened in heart for a great revival and for some way to build a new church that every Sunday morning at 5:30 the congregation had been meeting in a special prayer meeting for these ends. We might have a revival in some churches in America if our people wanted it that much.

I wish you could have seen that congregation at the morning service. The old frame building, built by the people in Dr. Hardie's days in Wonsan, was packed and jammed. No aisles were discoverable and all the men were on one side and all women on the other. How they did sing those tunes that I knew, but to words that sounded strange to my ears! The pastor conducted the worship service with dignity and reverence.

Everybody took part and I can feel now the thrill of their spiritual eagerness and alertness. The building held about four hundred, "maximum sardine capacity." The ushers had to ask a large group of children to leave and give place to older listeners. Women brought their babies, neatly nestling on their backs, and I noticed one woman who stood through the entire service holding her baby. I preached the best I could with Brother M. B. Stokes interpreting for me. I hope the sermon helped them more than it satisfied me. I felt very much like Dr. J. W. Moore whom I asked as to how he got along under similar conditions in Seoul the same day. "Oh," the doctor replied, "not very well. I can't preach if I can't holler." And just about the time you get warmed up and ready to holler you've got to stop for your "interrupter."

The afternoon was spent in a tour of inspectin of the Lucy Cuninggim School and the Hospital and the Bible Women's Training School and a tour of the city and the beach. A delightful evening meal with all the missionaries in the home of Brother and Mrs. Anderson and then to the evening service. On our way through the narrow, dark streets suddenly we hear music. It comes from a Buddhist temple. Children's voices are singing lustily a Buddhist hymn set to the tune of "Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Us." I did not feel so bad about it after all, because if the Christians can teach by example the Buddhist children to sing, they have started a work of grace in their hearts. And you would realize it more when you know that heathen children seldom if ever sing unless they have been touched directly or indirectly by the Christian spirit.

Another packed house greeted Dr. Cram that night and he preached to them in the Korean tongue. You ought to see our General Secretary function in his native atmosphere, for he is really a Korean by experience and training; ask any Korean Christian and he will tell you that Brother Cram was one of the best missionaries that ever worked in Korea. I am here to testify that he can talk Korean vernacular, eat Korean food and sit on the floor just like a native. I had to hurry him out of Korea before the Korean General Conference to keep them from electing him "Chong-ni-sa" of the new Church. After the service they gave us a public reception. Music and speeches and presents "and everything" kept us there for another hour. They apologized for the simplicity of the reception, stating that had they known sooner they would have "killed a pig and had a picture taken." But they left us in no doubt as to our welcome. When I got back to the parsonage, I was ready to call it a day; but not yet, for there was nearly a dozen Korean preachers and workers waiting for a "conference with the bishop" and would he say just a few words of encouragement and help to them? When I finished it was time to go to the midnight train and the day was done. I could duplicate that experience any Sunday in any of our churches in Korea. If any one is tempted to wonder if the Gospel has lost its power, let him watch it sweep a congregation in these virgin lands of faith and bring the light of Christ into faces that have been shadowed by ignorance and superstition. They wait only for a glimpse of Him.

I am writing these lines in Shanghai on Christmas Day. Yes, it's a strange Christmas, but an inspiring one, for even here in the midst of this great city of China the Christmas spirit breaks through. Many Chinese stores are closed, Christmas celebrations in Christian churches, and on every hand the signs that Christ is being born into Chinese hearts and homes. The leaven is working and some day the wise men from the East will bow again at the Cradle of the Babe of Bethlehem.

METHODISM'S WORLD MISSION

By J. F. Rawls, Treasurer, General Board of Missions

The General Board of Missions wishes to express to the ministry and membership of our Church its deep gratitude for its loyalty and support during the past quadrennium. Because of the magnificent co-operation on the part of the Church the Board of Missions closed one of the best quadrenniums in its history. The entire Church has worked under the most trying circumstances. It has been a period of confusion, of chaos, and of criticism, but in spite of our selfish ambition, our smallness of soul, our coldness of heart, God has been merciful and has blessed his Church. The Board of Missions in its long years of service climaxed its program at the last General Conference in Dallas, Texas, in the setting up of three autonomous churches, one in Brazil, one in Mexico, and one in Korea. Our Brazilian brethren elected as their first bishop of the new Brazil Methodist Church one of our superannuated missionaries, Rev. J. W. Tarboux. In the union of the two Methodisms in Mexico, one of our own preachers, Rev. Juan Pasco, was elected bishop of the new Mexican Church. In the union of the two Methodisms in Korea, Rev. J. S. Ryang, our own Southern Methodist preacher, was elected bishop, or general superintendent of the Korean Methodist Church. Thus being honored should not cause us to give expression to our pride, but in a spirit of humility we should thank God for the type of our missionaries, for the character of their work and for the training of men for leadership.

REV. J. F. RAWLS, D.D.

Our income for the past four years has averaged yearly the sum of $1,536,606. Of this amount we received from Sunday schools, $136,306; Epworth Leagues, $66,561; from Missionary Maintenance and Specials, $720,000. During the past period the General Board of Missions, through the generosity and liberality of our people, was able to provide for the staggering indebtedness which faced us in the beginning. We have operated on a cash basis and have reduced our overhead, or administrative expenses, $77,463 over the previous quadrennium. Ninety-three cents out of every dollar contributed has gone to pay the appropriations of the Board, both Home and Foreign, leaving the cost of administrative expense seven cents out of every dollar. This is less than what it costs to operate a first-class grocery store, factory, bank, or even one of our leading churches. The reduction in expense has not been made at the expense of our Mission work. During this period our appropriations for Home and Foreign Missions have increased approximately 15 per cent. In the past four years every General Board of our Church hasa operated without a deficit, all obligations have been paid, leaving a balance in the bank.

In addition to the Board of Missions being a great business organization it is also a great spiritual force and power. During this period we have stemmed the tide of retrenchment in world evangelization. The evangelistic fires are again sweeping through our mission fields, and hungry souls are being fed with the Bread of Heaven. Our increase in membership on a per capita basis has been larger in the mission field than at home. May God hasten the day when the evangelistic fires will burn anew on the altars of our churches and in the hearts of our people in the homeland! We have preached a red-blooded gospel, a gospel of repentance and full salvation, a gospel for the whole world. Our invitation has been:

> "There is a fountain filled with blood,
> Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
> And sinners, plunged beneath that flood,
> Lose all their guilty stains."

During this period new workers have been sent out to every field to strengthen the hands of those who have gone before. Through their combined efforts, their heroic and noble service, Methodism stands out across the world as a mighty power and force for good.

As an educator she yields her place to no group or organization. In Soochow, China, we have the great Soochow University; in Korea, Songdo Schools; in Japan, Kwansei-Gaukin College; in Cuba, Candier College; in Brazil, Granberry College; in Mexico, Laurens Institute. In the homeland there are also a vast number of Methodist schools and colleges. In these institutions our choicest men and women are taking the rough and unpolished youth and lifting them out of a life of superstition and ignorance into the blessed sunlight of truth and righteousness. Methodism, as a healer, following in the footprints of the Great Physician, is ministering to broken and diseased bodies and is interpreting the love and mercies of the God to suffering humanity. There are Doctors Manget, Sneli, Demaree, Lewis, Mount, Througman, Hughiett, and Sheffy. These consecrated physicians, with the aid of the nurses and others in our hospitals, are pouring the oil of joy on the wounds of the world and speaking peace to the sorrowing heart.

Methodism in its social service gospel is feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and caring for the orphan. One of the greatest pieces of social service work ever conducted by any single organization was the sending of two ships of old clothing and shoes to Poland. Besides that she has been feeding the hungry in her soup kitchens in this land. In the social service work Methodism is a great mother to the orphans of the world. Upon her breast she nestles them, in the eventide she rocks them to sleep, she imprints upon their cheeks the kiss of a great Church, she tucks them in their little beds and draws around their dimples the cover of a warm heart. As the shadows of the night fall we kneel and from the bottom of our hearts we utter the prayer of our childhood days: "Now we lay them down to sleep, we pray the Lord their souls to keep, if they should die before they wake we pray thee, Lord, their souls to take." As we come from our knees we thank God for such a gospel and for our great Church.

Methodism as a world preacher, a world evangelist, has given to the world the best of her men and women. They have gone out as torchbearers of light into the dark places of the earth to broadcast the message of good news. In Korea, we find Gerdine and Stokes; in China, Hawk and Cline; in Japan, Hager and Wainwright; in Cuba, Clements and Nehiett; in Brazil, Kennedy and Lee; in Europe, Dobes and Thonger; in Africa, Davis and Tabb. These men, in language plain and simple, are proclaiming that the gospel of the Son of God is the "Power of God unto Salvation to all that believe." The world is filled with hearts seeking the red-blooded gospel of the Cross of Calvary. They are hungering for the Bread of Heaven, and they are looking to you and to me to break this bread and feed their starving souls.

We are surrounded at home and abroad with living testimonies of the saving power of the gospel. In the language of the twentieth century, if we could tune in with the redeemed of Manchuria, Korea, China, Japan, Mexico, Cuba, Brazil, Europe, Africa, and the homeland there would come expressions of joy, a message of gratitude, and songs of praise. And out of the blue their united testimony would be:

> "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine,
> Oh, what a foretaste of glory divine!
> Heir of salvation, purchase of God,
> Born of his spirit, washed in his blood."

The hallelujah chorus joins in:

> "This is our story, this is our song, > Praising our Saviour, all the day long."

The hour has struck when the Christian's patriotism is challenged. Sacrifice is the word, self-denial is the practice. The kingdom of God on earth cost Heaven its richest blood and underneath the Church's foundation are the ashes of the martyrs. In the program of world evangelization God needs both the preacher and the layman and their resources to lift up the world's Redeemer—Jesus Christ. The missionary gospel holds up to the world a broken-hearted Saviour. God grant that we may find in our pulpits a broken-hearted ministry, and in our pews a broken-hearted membership with a great passion for saving lost souls! May our feeble efforts be crowned with success; and the day soon come when every human heart shall find and know God, and, in knwoing God, do his will.

In the final triumph, let every knee bend, every arm hold forth a wreath of redeemed love and from Pisgah's loftiest height, "We will crown Him, Crown Him, Crown Him Lord of all!"

ANNUAL MEETING WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in the First Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., March 11-17, 1931.

Hotel headquarters will be at the Claridge.

The schedule of meetings for March 10, 11 and 12 is as follows:

Tuesday evening, March 10, Executive Committee Meeting.

Wednesday, March 11, Executive Session of Council.

Wednesday evening, March 11, Commissions, Bureaus and Standing Committees.

Thursday morning, March 12, Executive Session of Council.

Thursday afternoon, March 12, Sessions Committees.

Thursday evening, March 12, first public session.

At this opening session, Thursday evening, Mr. Raymond Robbins will deliver an address on Christian Citizenship and Law Observance.

An inspiring program presented through the succeeding days will reach its climax Tuesday evening, March 17, in the service for the consecration of candidates for Home and Foreign service.

Bishop A. Frank Smith will deliver the annual sermon; Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will consecrate the candidates; Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, director of the Quaker Center of Study and Research, Wallingford, Pa., has charge of the noon worship period, and Mrs. J. L. Cuuiuggim, of the morning worship period.

Attention is called to the facts that, while in Executive Session Wednesday afternoon, the Council will decide on the place for its next meeting, and Thursday morning will take the pledges for 1931.

Reduced railway rates according to the Certificate Plan, have been granted. This means that a full one-way fare of not less than sixty-seven (67) cents must be paid for a ticket to Memphis, and a certificate secured which will entitle the holder to half rate for the return ticket over the same route; provided, that not less than one hundred and fifty (150) regularly issued and properly dated certificates are presented in time to be counted and duly validated.

The required number of certificates (150) properly signed by the Council Secretary, must be in hand before the Railway Agent can validate one. When conditions are met, he will validate a certificate any day from March 11 to 17, except Sunday.

The dates of sale of tickets, except from the more remote points, are March 7-13, inclusive. From the more remote points, the dates will be early enough for the purchaser to reach Memphis in time for the meeting. The final date of honoring certificates is March 20.

Publicity agents are requested to take note of these dates, and to urge all who are to attend to purchase tickts to Memphis on the proper selling dates, also to urge those who attend to travel by rail, that there may be no shortage in attendance.

If the number of tickets purchased may, as nearly as practicable, reflect the actual attendance at the meeting, our appreciation of the courtesy of the railroads will be expressed. A full attendance will also serve as a guide in determining whether reduced rates are justified another year.

MRS. F. F. STEPHENS,
President;
MRS. FITZGERALD S. PARKER,
Recording Secretary.

ANNUITY BONDS

Protection Against the Needs of Old Age

By J. F. Rawls, Treas.

The Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, represent the highest type of investment. They are safe and dependable. During the financial panic of the past year the Board's Annuity fund and Bonds did not decrease. They registered one hundred per cent in value. All annuities, or interest, have been paid promptly and in full.

The Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will issue an annuity bond for life upon any sum, $100 or over, and pay to the annuitant a rate of interest based on his or her age.

The Board issues both single and joint bonds. A single bond is issued to one individual and the interest is paid to the annuitant for life. A joint bond, is a bond issued to two, or more, people, and the interest is paid to the several annuitants during their life.

A gift on this basis is called an annuity or conditional gift, and the agreement issued by the Board is called an annuity bond. These bonds assure a safe, fixed and generous income for life. They are a protection against the needs of old age, and at the same time provide funds to promote a world-wide and fundamental Christian service, MISSIONS.

The amount of the annuity, or interest, to be paid is based on the age of the individual. The rate paid is much larger than that paid on other bonds or securities.

If you have bonds or cash on which you depend upon the income for a living, you can increase your income and direct your money by investing in the Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn.

A SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT

By Rev. J. L. Carter

I have been requested by some who know about this experiment and who are also very much interested in getting the best program of Christianity across to the rural church to write this account. If other pastors or other church leaders are in doubt as to the wisdom of such plans, this is to say that it has been tried and it worked.

The attempt which began as an experiment, proved to be a very helpful experience. It was at Mt. Zion Church, on the Union charge. This church is eight miles from Union. I preach two Sunday afternoons each month there. Up until six years ago the Sunday school was considered practically a year-round failure, of the kind that must be reorganized each late spring, to expire when the protracted meeting season gets in swing.

Last year early, we included in the year's plans a revival and a Daily Vacation Church School at this church. To make the story short, after laying the plans before the Workers' Council and Board of Stewards with other interested ones, we decided to conduct the two jointly. This we did the fourth Sunday in July and the week following. The pastor preached at eleven and 7:30 each day. Miss Doris Alford had led a vacation school summer before last. Several local workers were familiar with the work and ready to go forward. We were also fortunate to have a worker from Union who had led the school there in June. She rendered fine help at Mt. Zion also. The work was carried on about in this way: The beginners and primaries met together with a leader and a helper. The juniors, with leader and helpers, worked in separate groups. This work began at 9 o'clock each morning, running till 11. At that time the preaching service was held. The interest was very fine. Parents came to look in on the work. Some drove the children to the church and later brought the rest of the family. This was a remark from a man considerably over seventy: "When I sit here in the old church and listen to those children singing and talking and see them doing things, it makes me just feel the presence of the Holy Spirit."

The effects of the work together was helpful each to the other. Farmers had "laid off" to come to the meeting. It was easier for them to co-operate with the church school. The school leaders helped the children to be a vital part in the preaching services. One fine result was that with a single exception the entire junior class, who were not already church members, made their profession. Some primaries also came into the Church. Then the effects can be easily seen and felt yet. Local workers and teachers got a vision of needs and possibilities that they had never before had. Many improvements on the class rooms were launched. Many other effects which it would prolong this article too far to mention.

If I were going to suggest the weak points I would say that one week is entirely too short. Though if one can only have one week, by all means have that much. Another need is a class for a group say from 13 to 16 years of age. It is our plan this summer to expand the work by adding to the revival and church school for Beginers-Primaries and Junior groups, the Intermediate group, the Senior-Young People group and also the Adult group. Suitable courses will be mapped out for these older groups. These courses will probably take the morning sessions from, say, ten to twelve, while the evenings will be the get-together preaching service. This will not run less than ten days. This ought to provide an intensive program to include the entire church and community. We feel very grateful to God our Father for the experience that came out of the experiment, and confidently expect greater things this year.

TO THE MEMBERS OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE GROUP INSURANCE

On February 10 you will be due for another quarter's premium, which will be the same as heretofore, $4 per quarter, per thousand.

I trust that you will be prompt in your remittance, for remember that I have to pay in advance for all who are in the group. I hope that each member will be sure to get his premium to me before the close of February.

PORTRAIT GALLERY OF NATCHEZ PASTORS

Through the thoughtfulness and attention of Charles Head and Bryant Guice the Men's Bible Class room of the Jefferson Street Methodist church, Natchez, has been made into a sort of Portrait Gallery. Some years ago the framed photographs of fourteen former pastors and several other preachers who had served the church in some capacity were sent to Jackson, Miss., for exhibition purposes, and returned, but never replaced on the walls until a few days ago when the above two members of the congregation rescued them from what had almost become rubbish, cleaned them, repainted the frames, and rehung them, making thus an interesting and vaaluable display.

The following is a list of the fourteen pastors, with the years of service: W. H. Watkins, 5 times pastor, from 1851 to 1872; W. L. C. Hunnicut, 1873-76; W. C. Black, 1881-84, 1904; H. R. Singleton, 1887-88; W. E. Ballard, 1889-92; W. B. Lewis, 1893-96; T. B. Holloman, 1897-98; R. D. Norsworthy, 1899; John E. Carpenter, 1900-03; C. W. Crisler, 1905-06; Robt. Selby, 1907-10; H. B. Watkins, 1912-15; W. H. Saunders, 1918-21.

Messers Head and Guice are hoping to add right away the pictures of Revs. C. C. Evans and O. S. Lewis, recent pastors; and if relatives or friends of any of the former pastors can send pictures of them, all will be framed and placed in this gallery. How interesting it would be to add C. F. Emery, W. H. Huntley, E. H. Mounger, Geo. H. Clinton, W. E. M. Linfield, W. G. Millsaps, R. B. Downer, J. J. Wheat, James P. Limberman, A. T. M. Fly, John G. Jones, O. L. Nash, Levi Pearce, John L. Forsythe, and other worthies further back, such as B. M. Drake and William Winans.

The five other prominent preachers hung in the gallery thus far who were not pastors, are: Bishop A. W. Wilson, who probably preached here as Missionary Secretary (the photo is by Norman of Natchez); G. C. Andrews, Secretary of Mississippi Conference, 1865-99; John A. B. Jones, Secretary of Mississippi Conference, 1900; F. M. Williams, Presiding Elder; Bishop William F. Wightman, who presided over the Annual Conference in Natchez; and on that occasion preached the first sermon in the present auditorium, Nov. 30, 1876.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE, CENTENARY CHURCH, McCOMB, JAN. 9, 1931

The session opened with the singing of Hymn, "Hark, ten thousand harps and voices," Rev. J. L. Decell, presiding elder, conducting the devotional. Rev. Wesley Ezell then led in prayer. Hymn, "Sipirt of Faith, Come Down," was sung, after which prayer was offered by Mr. S. C. Armstrong. Dr. Decell read the first eight verses of the Book of Acts, making appropriate comment on this passage. Rev. T. A. Ferguson led in prayer. Rev. L. M. Reeves was elected secretary. The assembly joined in singing, "The Morning Light Is Breaking." The following visitors were introduced and welcomed: Dr. A. W. Martin, Rev. E. W. Ulmer, Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Mr. O. C. Hull, Rev. J. B. Cain.

Mr. J. O. Emmerich, editor of the McComb Enterprise, made an interesting address on "The Place of Christian Literature in World Evangelization." Mr. O. C. Hull made a few remarks, then presented J. B. Cain, assistant to the executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the Conference, who spoke on the relation of the Conference Board to the missionary movement. Hymn, "O, for a Thousand Tongues to Sing," was sung. Dr. A. W. Martin, representing the General Board of Christian Eduation, spoke on the necessity of raising the full quota, and showed how this accomplishment depends upon our own willingness. Hymn, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" was sung. W. D. Hawkins urged upon the Institute an increased interest in the Missionary Voice, looking toward a larger circulation. J. R. Goza, Miss Alice Decell and Mrs. Mamie Boone were appointed to take subscriptions to the Voice. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader, made an address emphasizing the need of the right attitude toward the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering. Announcements were made and Revs. J. H. Morrow and W. M. Sullivan were presented. The meeting adjourned for lunch with the singing of "Lead On, O King Eternal," W. M. Sullivan pronouncing the benediction.

The afternoon session opened with Hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun." Dr. G. F. Winfield spoke on the importance of getting Christian literature into the homes, with especial reference to the New Orleans Advocate. Curtis Youngblood, District lay leader, addressed the Institute in the interests of The Methodist Layman. W. D. Hawkins presented the mission study book for the year. The missionary literature was distributed. The report of the Committee on Apportionments was read by Dr. C. W. Crisler. After some discussion, the report was adopted. Mrs. L. W. Alford pledged the support of the Woman's Missionary Society to the Kingdom Extension cause. "The Kingdom Is Coming," was sung as the closing hymn, after which Dr. Decell closed the meeting with prayer and the benediction.

L. M. REEVES, Secretary.

Are You Among Those Who Are Praying for a Revival of Spirituality in the Church?

That such a revival is needed every Christian knows. It is the dearest dream of thousands of praying hearts.

But will it come upon people who live in luxury, without ever knowing, from the cradle to the grave, what sacrifice means? Will it come upon the richest people the world over, who yet allow every interest of Christ to languish and fail? Will it come upon those who concentrate 95% of their gifts upon themselves while three-fourths of all the people on earth do not acknowledge His name?

The heart of spirituality is sacrifice. It has been so in every religion. Christ on the Cross is God's seal upon sacrifice as the way to the Father.

Methodists are not sacrificing for Christ! Scarcely one in a thousand ever sacrificed anything for Him! How can we, then, be the vessels of His grace?

Let us call them to it! In the Kingdom Extension Offering—in what many call "hard times"—we have our opportunity to begin. Call them to really sacrifice for the larger interests of Christ's Kingdom. Plant the seeds of revival in the Church.

When we talk about and pray for the revival, reflect upon His words: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things I say?"

WHAT ABOUT PREACHERS WHO ARE IN DEBT?

By Rev. F. L. Applewhite

During recent weeks there has been some agitation of the painful and persistent "problem of the financially delinquent preacher." It is evident that presiding elders, bishops and others are concerned about this—and rightly so. The only just criticism, it seems to me, that could be leveled at this discussion, would be at its method rather than at the spirit and aim which has prompted it. Just how long it will take the lecturing of bishops and presiding elders and others to effect the desired results, it is hard to determine. It has been going on for a number of years and a recent contributor quotes an elder as saying that the matter becomes worse with the passage of time. Surely it is high time to try something else.

Anyway, due caution should be exercised by the doctors that some simple and guaranteed remedy is not advertised which would probably cause more trouble, if administered, than the original ill afflicting us. In my humble judgment, the plan which Rev. W. W. Jones puts forward so confidently in the first issue of this year must be put in that class. He thinks that a carefully prepared blacklist of the offending brethren sent broadcast to the lay leaders would "turn the trick." Now, let some other brother rise to propose that the bishop at each Annual Conference appoint a firing squad and have these offending gentlemen summarily executed. It may be plausibly argued that this plan would be more effective besides being as humane, for a dead man is better off than a preacher who has been disgraced by his brethren. At least that is my peculiar slant at this question.

However, there is no desire to controvert any view of this subject that has been or may be advanced, especially if the proposal calls for extra-legal and illegal action, which places it beyond the pale of consideration as a possible solution of the vexing problem. It is its own destruction. It is probable that our brother was not serious in the proposal he ventured, but that, in his zeal for the Church, he was simply calling attention to an ugly situation which needs radical and effective treatment. In this we all agree. The general idea, ever so often advanced, that preachers ought to pay their debts is not even open to debate. But there is this further matter for us to think about, that the agitation of a subject like this, unless it issues in some corrective action, is liable to do great harm in casting discredit on the ministry as a whole and in giving an exaggerated picture of the evil to the public upon whose confidence the success of our labors so largely depends. Moreover, we are likely to imagine that when something has been denounced that our responsibility has been discharged. This is not meant as decrying honest and earnest attempts to do away with an embarrassment like this about which I am talking, but simply to maintain that unless we deal actually and helpfully with the fundamentals of the total situation, then silence would be the better part.

What are these fundamentals which need our thoughtful and prayerful attention?

I beg leave, in the first place, to rule out that inconsiderable class of preachers who are reckless and consequenceless spenders; who ride too much and in autos too expensive for them; who incur debt without a purpose to pay; who live beyond their means in foolish extravagance. If our present laws and our men in authority are not equal to dealing with such men as these, then no amount of newspaper discussion and no amount of lecturing by the bishop over the heads of a class of young preachers at Conference can avail anything whatsoever. There is a lawful way to handle these offenders, and if there is lacking courage to evoke the proper action, some other "simple" plan that would make an elder liable for maladministration will hardly be tried, however desperate the situation. But let me repeat that this class of offenders is inconsiderable. Most preachers, the vast majority of them, are honest and honorable men. If they are in debt and cannot pay it is a matter of sorrow to them and should be to every Christian man or woman. If there are a considerable number of preachers who are in this state, then let us try to find out what is the matter and what can be done about it.

With these convictions stirring me, I am offering this diagnosis of the trouble which may be unsatisfactory, but, at least, it has the merit of being my honest conclusion arrived at after some years of observation as well as through the fires of a sometimes poignant experience. It is not hoped that everything will be said that ought to be said, or that the perfect way out will now be indicated. But I am going to risk the charge of being egotistic by saying that most of those who talk and write on the subject generally ignore a very important though, it would seem, a very patent part of the subject. And that is this, when an honest man who is in debt cannot pay, it is due to one, or to both, of two things, (1) He has had unusual expenses of an unavoidable nature, which his income could not altogether meet, or (2) His income has been below the level of necessary, normal living expense.

That the first named of these conditions sometimes does overtake a preacher, is unfortunate, but true. The ordination rites do not immunize a preacher against the misfortunes which occur to other men, neither do they miraculously expand the purchasing power of an inadequate salary. Particularly with reference to the second matter of the undersized salary, I venture this rather obvious statement: there has slipped up on us almost unawares this condition—that living costs have increased out of proportion to our ability to meet them. The standard of living now, to which we must conform or get into some other business, presents a variety of expenses which our fathers knew nothing of. This standard may be wrong, but the practical difficulty may be imagined, for instance, if the preacher should try to clothe his girls with gingham dresses and cotton stockings, and transport the family about in a surrey drawn by a pasture-fed plug horse. He would quickly find the argument going against him.

Undoubtedly, the auto has had much to do with this increase, and possibly too often we do unnecessary riding. But that the auto is a necessity rather than a luxury with most of us, is granted, I feel sure. And this is true, that on those works where it is most necessary, often the salaries are smallest.

Of course, these are difficulties with which every family has to wrestle, more or less. The minister is not the only man who is perplexed over the times and the peculiar trials of this modern day. And it is true, too, that there are other men than we whose salaries are insufficient to meet the needs of their families. But it is true, too, that the job which keeps a man stationary has decided economic advantages over that which keeps one in a moving expectancy. In many families these days father is not the only working man. Mother is sometimes a stenographer and sons and daughters are part time employees. So, in this way a living is honestly won and a competence is stored against the "rainy day." It is not so easy for their pastor, whose family is regarded as, like him, set apart for spiritual functions, to adopt any such method of making ends meet. Generally speaking, the preacher is expected to live, flourish and support his family on what is paid him, and I do not quarrel because of this fact, provided the salary is sufficient.

To put the matter concisely as I know how, our generation confronts its peculiar problems and these problems cannot be met by exactly the same methods of solution as those of a half-century ago, or of any past time. Most laymen do not know that at times in Methodist history the ranks of our clergy have been depleted ruinously by location of the best of the preachers on account of purely economic reasons. Steps have had to be taken to fend ruin from the Methodist Church by the abandonment of outgrown laws restricting salaries to ridiculous amounts and fixing time limits which made family life impossible. That we have arrived at that stage of perfection where we can now rest easy and assure ourselves that nothing further need be done for the assistance of the ministry in the simple art of making a living, would perhaps be disclaimed even by the most conservative. It may be that the time is not here for any further adjustment, but in my opinion, IT IS. And this is not said captiously or with disregard to the many comforts and honors that the ministry enjoy today, but with a sincere wish that something might be done which would forestall the discredit and ruin which will come to us and to our Church unless we are enabled to live debt-free and in some measure of economic independence.

It may not be amiss here to point out that the predicament of the Methodist preacher embarrassed by business reasons is possibly greater than it was in that former time. Then a local preacher really functioned, and, moreover, in those more primitive times, it was easy to switch from one business to another. Location now is with most the last desperate resort, and in many cases it can offer nothing but privation and distress. The corrective must be applied to conditions within the ministry itself and not leave a man the alternative of fighting a losing battle within the itinerant ranks, or a losing battle out in the business world.

Now, with some hesitancy, I beg leave to propose what seems to me a more excellent way. Let the presiding elder of each district appoint a committee of laymen and preachers to examine into the living conditions of each and every preacher family where the preacher receives less than—say $1,800—and wherever it is evident that there is embarrassment let them estimate what would be a reasonable increase of salary to take care of the deficit, and when a summary of the entire district has been made, then put on an educational campaign in those underpaying charges to see whether they can be made to do better; then levy an assessment for Home Missions sufficient to make up the difference between what the charges pay and what they should pay. In short, I am advocating a thorough-going method of inquiry to find the facts, followed up with the only plan I can imagine to fatten the lean situations.

In my humble judgment, the Church should fix some amount as a minimum salary and every preacher should have the assurance that he will receive at least that amount. All this is said with the clear consciousness that some dear friends of mine thoroughly disagree with me. For it has been argued to me or in my hearing that a Methodist preacher is a soldier who should go where he is sent uncomplainingly, take what he gets and live on it if he can, and the Lord will take care of him! Well, if this attitude of beautiful resignation should govern in—say the work of Foreign Missions, then we might agree. But that is not the case and ought not to be. My judgment is that we have glorified poverty for the Methodist preacher unduly, overlooking the possibility that the great achievements of the itinerant Methodist preachers have been in spite of, rather than because of, their poverty. We do not need, neither do we ask for wealth, but we have a right to expect adequate support.

All this I speak in Christian love, without desiring to excuse any preacher for dishonesty or even for the failure to handle his affairs with economy and good sense. The uppermost thought with me is that the emphasis has been wrongly placed and that before men are condemned for a condition, let us see if there are causes for the condition which may be remedied by the Church to whose services these men have dedicated their lives.

BELLS OF VARIED TONES

Bells are to the ear what sunsets are to the eye. I sometimes see the color in the tones of bells, and I often have heard the music of flaming horizon, tinted cloud and penciled sky. Last year I had promised my family a single holiday treat: a motor trip to Florida to hear the carillon on Bok's "Singing Tower." We did not go; but merrily rang the bells of the Christmas-tide in our town and church. And Vinton Methodism had a glorious Watch-Night service; and, after four hours of worship and conference, we rang out the old and rang in the new, with "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Light as seems the jingle of the telephone bell, it can be the harbinger of sad news. On the night of January 9, it called me to Ferriday—Brother J. M. Alford speaking—and I started immediately. Leaving my wife at Oakdale, I drove next morning to my field of labor for last year; and on Sunday, the 11th, I preached the sermon at the funeral of Dr. James Truman Reeves. He had been a useful man in his profession, successful in business, a good citizen, loyal Christian, devoted husband and true father; and he had been a patient and uncomplaining sufferer through more than a dozen years of serious bodily affliction. He was a trustee of our Ferriday church and a loyal and helpful friend of its pastors. Brother Alford had charge of the funeral, at which more people assembled than I ever saw gathered on any previous occasion in the town. A good man has gone to his reward.

All voices rang harmoniously in the Lake Charles District Stewards' and Lay Leaders' meeting, January 14—even if the pastors were there! But it was not the harmony of self-satisfied good-nature and mutual admiration, feigned or real. The voices rang in unison; but there was resolution, challenge and appeal, as laymen and preachers pledged themselves to a year of consecrated and sacrificial toil for the Master under the leadership of our alert and capable presiding elder. The writer rang the Advocate bell in that meeting, and is ringing it this week in his own pastorate. The old "New Orleans" is straightened; but I think it is in the pangs of a New Birth.

Last night, January 21, Vinton (as Sam Jones would say) "done it a'gin". I had announced last Sunday that Wednesday would be my birthday; that I wanted a party at the church at 7:30, and "lots of presence." I invited the whole church to the mid-week service, promising to tell my age (!) to all who came, and not to like those who didn't—any more for a week! Not only many of our own people came, but many Baptists, Catholics and the rest. I gave my age in seconds, and while they were trying to reduce more than seventeen hundred million seconds to years by mental arithmetic, gave them a historical and biblical intelligence test, by saying, "I am as old as Columbus was when he discovered America, and if I live nine hundred-thirteen years longer, I shall be as old as Methuselah"! We had a good service and profitable study in the Acts. Then ye pastor was treated to a surprise reception. There were music, singing, readings, refreshments and congratulations. Then the Missionary Society presented us with a four-story cake, adorned with flaming tapers, which, not knowing my age, they had wrought into a question mark. Then they announced that they would adjourn to the parsonage, so that all might see the beautiful new furniture. As we carried our cake into the dining room, we found not only presence, but presents; a pounding, a shower—a cloudburst of them! So rang the birthday bells. That was the best birthday I ever had, except the first!

THE ROMAN CENSORS

By Rev. John D. Ellis

REV. JNO. D. ELLIS

FOUR hundred and forty-three years B. C., among the Romans, men were appointed to the office of censor. The Latin and the English are the same—"censor," and the word means to value, to tax, to estimate, etc.

The censors made a register of the property of the people, and they were overseers of morals and conduct.

It was their duty to survey, rate and correct the manners of the people.

They had the power to punish and to inflict a public mark of ignominy. It was within their power to be very severe, and sometimes they were hard and unreasonable.

Occasionally, they took a man's horse away from him by saying, "You are not plowing to suit us." Their power extended to private families, and they restrained from extravagence. Sometimes they would say, "You are wasteful—too prodigal—amend," etc.

The censors went so far as to impose fines on unmarried men. They said to a man, "You are of full age and you must marry." If he failed to marry, a fine was imposed on him. The censors were configurators who shaped things according to custom or their own ideas, and the people were subject to their decisions. We can conceive how at times they were not very popular, and that often they could have been offended at the noble talents and superior property of others. Were they to come along today with the same power, many of us would feel like giving them "a crack on the head." We prefer to take our liberty and morality from the teaching of Scripture, rather than be governed by the "ipse dixit" of men whose own ideas may not be superior. We can conceive of some things in which even a "censor," with the Roman government behind him, is a meddlesome-Mattle.

It is sometimes said of a man, "He has a censorious spirit," and the meaning is that he is addicted to a carping, critical, censuring spirit. "Censor" is the great grandaddy of "censorious," to blame, to condemn.

In English, we say "censure," which means to blame, to condemn, from "censorious," from "censor."

It is just sometimes to censure a man; still, we do not like the censorius spirit in a man; such a spirit is against the teachings of Scripture. A man with the censorious spirit can bestow too much attention upon the conduct of others, which would be better bestowed upon himself. Self-examination would make his judgments more charitable. There are some "nimrods who are mighty hunters for faults in other people." They are apt to sometimes "pardon the ravens and condemn the doves."

It takes a very wise man, and a very perfect man to occupy the office of "censor." Sometimes men occupy the office who are self-appointed. They find motes in the eyes of others when beams are in their own. It is possible also for a "censor" to find fault where there is none. There is nothing out of place in the "censorship" of things today which need regulating and which do not violate man's inalienable rights. We are willing to have in America "censorship" of magazines, moving pictures, etc., and can have, without outraging the inalienable rights and liberties of any citizen.

All men have certain natural rights which are inalienable, but public decency is not an inalienable right. When the "censor" violates either Scripture, natural rights, or common sense, then "censorship" should be exercised over the "censor."

MY BROTHER BARNEY

By Rev. J. M. Lewis

He is gone—that brother o' mine;
The oldest of we preacher-boys,
Nathaniel was his spiritual name.
A man without guile was he;
Naught did he say against his fellowman,
Though some spoke ill of him;
He bore it with Christian fortitude,
And left it with Christ his Lord.
He loved as few men love
The people of his charge;
He did his best for his Master,
'Til life from him did part.
Never on earth will he sing
With his brothers here again;
But in that brighter world above,
He awaits the objects of his love.
With Father, Mother he has joined,
With two brothers, two sisters, too;
To await the coming of the rest,
For we all will join them soon.
Oh, what a gathering that will be
On that bright and shining shore,
When we, one by one, all get to Heaven,
There to part—NEVERMORE.

A SURPRISE PARTY

Saturday, Jan. 24, at 7:30 p. m., the doorbell of the Jackson District Methodist parsonage rang lustily and when Rev. J. T. Leggett opened the door, he was greeted by the more or less harmonious sound of laughter and shouts of joy expressing the familiar greeting: "Happy birthday to you!"

Before the surprised and delighted "Elder" could regain his usual dignity, this hilarious group who had planned this attack on his domicile marched by him into the beautifully lighted and cheery living-room. Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Barry of Glendale Church, Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Cowen of Galloway Memorial Church, Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Schultz of Grace Church, Rev. and Mrs. T. O. Prewitt of Millsaps Memorial Church, Rev. and Mrs. Joseph A. Smith of Capitol Street Church, and our involuntary but gracious host and hostess, Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Leggett, and their splendid son, Candler Leggett.

The party reached its climax when Mrs. A. B. Barry opening the doors into an adjoining room revealed a beautiful day-bed and a smoking stand. She then called upon the pastors to make impromptu presentation speeches. Each pastor made a few felicitous remarks expressing affection for Brother Leggett, and appreciation of his efficient and capable leadership and his sincere and brotherly spirit. Brother Leggett made an eloquent and touching response.

A large pound cake decorated with sixty-five tiny candles was then presented the gay and agile sixty-five years young honoree. Someone in the crowd declared that if he would blow out all the candles in one breath, he would get married again. The alleged candidate for another matrimonial venture exhaled so vigorously that he not only extinguished every candle but came near blowing them off the cake.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

One hundred years ago there was a tall, awkward youth who arrived in New Orleans on a flatboat. He came with a Mr. Gentry with a load of produce. That youth was Abraham Lincoln.

While we do not believe in canonizing Mr. Lincoln, we would not join with Edgar Lee Masters, lawyer-poet, in "ripping the mantle of greatness from Lincoln's shoulders." All, save the Crystal Christ, have their flecks. Posterity need not demand perfection of her entombed great. There are spots on the sun.

In writing of Mr. Lincoln's marriage to Miss Mary Todd, Lexington, Ky., which proved an unhappy marriage, the historian, John Lord, says: "It is unfortunate for the fame of many great men that we know too much of their private lives."

However much skeptical atheism occupied him in his earlier years, as time went on and responsibilities grew weighty he could but say "As God gives us to see the right." Bishop Simpson is said to have been often with President Lincoln in prayer; and though he never united with the Church, it isn't necessary to leave Abraham Lincoln in the camp of avowed atheists in order to magnify the Christian virtues of Robert E. Lee. Lee needs no bolstering; he only needs to be seen!

There must have been some elements of innate greatness in Lincoln. For any man to come from the humble place he did and climb on until over the astute Chase, and Seward and Cameron he was nominated by his party for President and elected to the first place among his countrymen, there must have been something about him that set him apart.

It probably goes without much question to-day that had Abraham Lincoln lived the South would have been saved much of the ignominy that she suffered. Hence sons and daughters of the South join with those of the North in respecting the memory of Abraham Lincoln who was born one hundred and twenty-one years ago to-day.

REV. W. J. O'BRYANT PASSES TO HIS ETERNAL REWARD

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, and a Confederate Veteran, died at Gulfport, Miss., Sunday, February 8. He was born at Florence, Ala., in 1839. He had reached the ripe age of ninety-one years. He had been a resident of Mississippi for the past fifty-seven years.

In one of the editor's pastorates, Brother O'Bryant's son was a member of his church, and when he would visit the son he always attended the Sunday services. He was a sweet spirited saint in Israel, full of hope and waiting for the summons to come up higher. While he waited he spent much time in prayer. His public prayers were with unction and the audience often was made to feel,

"And heaven comes down our souls to greet,
While glory crowns the mercy-seat."

He was of the old-time Methodist type. He builded on the verities of the Scriptures and the adequacy of the gospel.

"The builder lifted his old, gray head,
'Good friend,' in the path I've come,' he said.
'There followeth after me to-day
A youth whose feet must pass this way,
The chasm that held no fear for me
To the fair haired youth may a pitfall be,
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim,
Good friend, I'm building this bridge for Him.'"

Those who cross on a bridge like that Brother O'Bryant built will find it like Jacob's ladder that reached to heaven.

Funeral services were held Monday from the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Johnson, by his pastor, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED

The following is a report of subscriptions sent in from January 1 through February 7. It may be that some name has been overlooked; if so, please correct us.

We appreciate the good work that has been done by those who have responded; and know that there will be many others to put their special Advocate effort on yet. He who runs may read that 617 renewals and new subscriptions in five weeks falls far below actual necessity.

We thank each and every one for their response and trust that on March 7, we can add twice as many to the report.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

The executive Committee of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will meet in the Capital St. Church, Jackson, Miss., Tuesday at 2 p. m., March 10, 1931.

Write to Rev. I. H. Sells, Carthage, Miss., for blank application to the General Board.

W. M. WILLIAMS, Chairman.

PERSONALS AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. Robert M. Brown, presiding elder, Ruston district, announces that the District Conference will be held at Jonesboro, La., April 2-3.

Rev. C. C. Weir, pastor, Winnfield, La., and Mr. R. S. Walsh, an official member of his, delighted the Advocate office by calling on Tuesday of last week. They were in the city attending the Grand Lodge of Louisiana.

We thank Brother P. B. McCullen, who is having a splendid year at Ringgold, La., for the seven subscriptions he sent in from his charge. We are carrying a full statement of his work in another section of the Advocate.

Rev. L. R. Nease, Jr., pastor, Colfax, La., had time to find seven subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and we thank him for his interest and trust that the year's work may prove satisfactory in every way.

Rev. T. J. Holladay, pastor, Ida, La., is having an encouraging start for the year. He has sent in a list of eight subscriptions which we believe will help him in accomplishing the goal which he has set for himself and charge.

Bishop Paul B. Kern, who is now in the Orient, sent the following cable to the Board of Missions, "Dr. Cram, Missionary leaders, and natives in Orient plead with home church stand by them in this hour, needs heartbreaking, fields white."

Rev. J. F. Dring, pastor, Pleasant Hill, La., favored the Advocate with a list of seven subscriptions and check to cover. He writes, "We have had a splendid beginning here. The outlook is fine, we preach to splendid congregations at every church."

Rev. J. P. Bonnecarrere, pastor, Donaldsonville, La., faces the new year with a determination to succeed in all the work of his charge. He has supplemented his activities by seeing to it that the Advocate is to go into a number of the homes of his charge.

Rev. C. W. Wesley, the aggressive pastor at Shubuta, Miss., was royally received on his return from Conference to begin his second year. People have been kind and thoughtful and are loyally supporting him in his work. We thank him for a list and check for nine subscriptions.

Bishop Collins Denny has appointed Rev. Lester T. Nelson as pastor at Georgetown, Miss., to succeed Rev. B. W. Lewis, deceased. Brother Nelson was serving the Porterville circuit in the Meridian district. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder, will use Rev. J. B. King to supply Porterville.

Brother James H. Ramsey, a faithful layman of New Albany, Miss., in a business communication to the office, writes in the highest terms of the work of Rev. J. H. Holder, the new pastor at New Albany. Brother Holder completed a quadrennium of splendid service at Grenada and his pastorate at New Albany will be successful.

Rev. W. D. Milton and the people of the goodly town of Greensburg, La., are to enjoy the privilege of having Dr. Theodore Copeland, general evangelist, of Dallas, Texas, to lead them in a revival. Dr. Copeland is one of the stronger preachers in the church and we trust that there will be a great awakening at Greensburg.

We are not surprised that Rev. H. E. Raley is continuing his successful work as pastor of the Harperville and Lena, Miss., charge. Brother J. C. Marler favored us by sending in seven subscriptions from Harperville. We thank Brother Marler for his splendid work and trust that the Advocate will contribute toward the success of the charge.

Rev. Irl H. Sells, pastor at Carthage, Miss., suffered an attack of influenza and was unable to preach on the fourth Sunday in January. Rev. John L. Sutton, manager of the Children's Home Finding Society, Jackson, delivered helpfu[illegible]ermons on that day. We hope Brother Sells has been able to resume his duties, which he never neglects.

It was interesting to read from a report of a good pastor that his people had pounded him among other things with "backbones." That could be more significant than at first realized. Of all times this is the time when the Methodist preacher will have an opportunity to show that he has backbone.

Miss Martha Pardue, Winnsboro, La., writes, "Our New Orleans Advocate is growing so rapidly in interest and value I am sure its number of subscribers would grow if our church membership could only be made cognizant of its readableness and worth." We appreciate the renewal and kind expression of Miss Pardue.

At a recent meeting of the Mississippi Society, First Church, Gulfport, little Peggy Oberschmidt sang to the delight of all present. One of the greatest services the Woman's Missionary Society renders is turning the minds and hearts of the little ones toward the Saviour and the mission of his church.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

The meeting of the North Mississippi Council of the Board of Christian Education was held at Grenada on January 27. A large attendance was had and the important announcement was made that Bishop Paul B. Kern would be one of the principal speakers at the Methodist Young People's Assembly which will be held at Grenada College June 8-13.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, Commissioner of the Orphans' Home, Jackson, preached at Main Street Church, Biloxi, Miss., on Sunday, January 25. Brother Sullivan is giving himself unreservedly to liquidating the embarrassing indebtedness at the Orphans' Home. He should have the hearty co-operation and sacrificial support of all Missisppi Methodists.

Mrs. F. A. Grimes, widow of the late Rev. F. A. Grimes, suffered painful, though not serious, injuries caused by an automobile accident which occurred when she was driving to Sunday school at Hazlehurst on Sunday morning, February 1. Mrs. Grimes was carried to Jackson, where she is recuperating at the home of her brother-in-law, Mr. Charles Grimes.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor, Hawkins Memorial, Meridian, Miss., and secretary of the Methodist Ministers' Association, writes that special effort for the Advocate was postponed in that city, but gives assurances that the work will yet be accomplished. However, Brother Dawson has personally found it possible to proceed with the Advocate work and has our appreciation for six cash subscriptions.

Sometimes a sense of humor will save a situation. It is reported that one of the pastors in the Advocate territory heard that his members were not pleased with his assignment. Instead of becoming discouraged he said in his opening sermon, "I hear that you say I am not much of a preacher. Very well, I know it. And you know that if I could preach I would not have been sent to this community." The congregation and preacher both are now happy.

Rev. J. E. Gray, pastor, Crystal Springs, Miss., has the work of his important church well in hand. His officials and other members are loyally following his leadership as he begins his second year. He has the appreciation of the Advocate for a list and check for fourteen subscriptions. If all the charges that can would go and do likewise the Advocate would be relieved and render much better service.

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. D. W. Ulmer will be distressed to learn that the physicians have directed Mrs. Ulmer to spend several months in the Sanatorium at Magee. Mrs. Ulmer faces her recuperation with resignation and determination. Let prayer be made that God will help in the full restoration of her health and strength. Brother Ulmer favored the Advocate recently with nine subscriptions, for which we thank him.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, pastor, Tylertown, Miss., and his enterprising people have completed the restoration and repair of their church building. They now have one of the most substantial and attractive buildings in the Conference. Brother Alsworth delighted the Advocate office with a list and check for twenty-one subscriptions. What has been done at Tylertown for the Advocate could be done in most every charge within the three Conferences.

Rev. John D. Crymes, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, died Saturday, February 7, while en route to a hospital in Jackson, Miss. Brother Crymes was 65 years of age. In the early years of his young manhood he attended Vanderbilt University, from which he entered the Conference. For the past number of years he made his home at Meridian, Miss., at which place his funeral was held. Interment was in Magnolia cemetery at Meridian.

The adult division of the local church board of Christian Education of the First Methodist church at Lake Charles held its first meeting on Thursday night, January 29. The various departments were properly co-ordinated and the entire division manifested a spirit of co-operation. At the conclusion of the business session a delicious supper was served under the direction of Mrs. Lonnie Clark, Mrs. L. A. Wallace, Mrs. George Monroe, Mrs. R. I. Gould, Miss Lillian Morrison and Miss Ethelyn Crawford. Mrs. Harper is a teacher in the adult division and Dr. Harper was present at the meeting to lend his aid in perfecting plans for the year's work.

Mr. Frederick Sullens, editor, Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, gave editorial notice on Sunday, January 25, of a sermon Dr. L. L. Cowen, pastor, preached at Galloway Memorial Church on "The Introvert and the Extrovert," in which he said, "The Galloway Memorial, a congregation founded in the early dawn of Jackson's history, has been served by many able pastors, but the list reveals no man, with the single exception of the loved divine whose name it bears, more eloquent, scholarly and convincing than the present occupant of its pulpit." Dr. Cowen's first year was one of unusual success and the second bids fair to become even more so. Jackson is a growing and progressive City and Dr. Cowen is giving spiritual leadership to the hosts of Methodists who visit the city, as well as the members of his congregation.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY

Not always is a valentine
  Composed of fancy paper,
With buds and birds and clever words
  And cupids all a-caper;

Sometimes it's just a line to tell
  How one friend loves another well,
How one heart hopes the year may bless
  Another heart with happiness.

O birds and darts and sugar hearts,
  Are very gay and fine,
But often just a faithful word
  Will make a valentine.

—Youth's Companion.

GRANDMA'S VALENTINE

I bought a lovely valentine
  For Grandma, and as clear
The little golden letters said—
  "I'm thinking of you, dear."

But, oh, I wanted something else,
  So hard I almost cried.
So just before I sealed it up,
  I dropped a kiss inside.

—Allx Thorn.

BOYS AND GIRLS: VALENTINE GIFTS

It was a snowy day in early February, and Lois and Donald Kirkland were in the living-room. Lois was sitting at the piano, strumming a few notes now and then, and gazing out of the window, lost in thought, building castles in the air. Donald was deep in a thrilling adventure story. However, the short winter twilight was rapidly closing in, and it became difficult to see the printed pages. So, when Lois came over and dropped down into the big chair in front of the fire, Don closed his book, stretched his feet out at full length, placed his locked hands behind his head, and said, "I say, Lois, don't you think it's up to us to do something on St. Valentine's Day this year. It seems to me we've been accepting things all these years, and not doing very much in return."

"That's right, Don, I was thinking about it today," his sister replied. "But what can we do? I haven't more than seventy-five cents to spare, and you spent all your pocket money on that ski harness."

"Oh, I guess I could scrape up as much as you have," Don answered. "And out of a dollar and fifty cents, I guess we could buy the Valentines, paper and ribbon and cards."

"My goodness, Don!" exclaimed Lois. "You are thinking of stretching that money all right!"

"You just listen to me, Madam," was the reply. And then Donald unfolded his plan

"Goody-goody!" and Lois clapped her hands. "I think that's a splendid idea! Let's make out our lists."

Two chairs were pulled up to the table and a sleek, brown head, and a curly, bobbed one were soon intently bent, as pens flew, adding name after name to the list of beloved ones, to whom would go the Valentines. Of course, there were too many names on the first list, but after careful studying, they brought the number down to ten.

Lois and Donald spent a very happy hour down town one afternoon, and came home looking very much pleased with themselves, and with some mysterious parcels in their hands. Because they had done their shopping early, they were able to get very dainty and prettily appropriate cards for all, and had bought white tissue paper and red baby-ribbon and little red sticker hearts. And, of course, they had bought Valentines, which were all alike, but I'm not going to tell you, just yet, what they were.

What fun the two did have getting those little gifts ready! They tied the cards to the Valentines, then wrapped them carefully, fastening them with the them carefully, fastening them with heart, as a seal, out of the tiny red heart cut-outs they had bought. And then, a couple of days before the fourteenth, they posted all but four.

Valentines in the Kirkland household were always delivered at evening dinner-time, for then mother always had something special in the way of a treat. You can imagine that no one was late for dinner that night, and of all the gifts, none looked prettier than those Lois had placed for dad and mother, grandmother and Aunt Lou. And how pretty the table looked. Mother had just put spicy red carnations in low-centre bowl, and had scattered here and there, over the tablecloth, little and big red cardboard hearts. For dessert, there were raspberry jelly hearts, cut with a cookie cutter, and tiny heart-shaped cakes.

Lois and Don were so excited that they could hardly wait while the tissue paper on their gifts crinkled and crackled through the unwrapping. But, at last, under the innermost layer they lay—guess what?—large, red heart-shaped lolly-pops! How dad laughed, and how pleased everybody was at the thoughtfulness of the children." Dad said he hadn't had a lolly-pop for years. and grandmother told them all such interesting stories of the time when she was a little girl, and lolly-pops were fashionable. But best of all was the loving hug from mother as she thanked Lois and Don. And Don, very much embarrassed, mumbled something about not having cost very much, but mother only smiled and said, "It is'nt the cost that counts; it's the thoughtfulness and love that prompted the gift that meant so much." And I guess that's about right. Anyway, both agreed that this was the very nicest St. Valentine's Day they had ever had, all because of the lolly-pop love-gifts they themselves had prepared and sent.—Exchange.

THE NORTHERN GROUP OF THE NEWTON DISTRICT

The pastors and laymen's meeting of the Northern group of the Newton District was held at Walnut Grove, January 21, with eleven pastors, seven laymen from various parts of the group and a good number of the local people present. We were sorry that our elder, Rev. H. A. Gatlin, could not be with us. Rev. H. E. Raley conducted the devotional, reading the 13th chapter of I Cor., and stressing the need of love in our work and urging all to work harder for the causes of the church.

Rev. J. L. Carter took the chair and after a few remarks called for the reports from the pastors on what had been done on the benevolences and kingdom extension program. All pastors present gave their reports. Rev. I. H. Sells spoke from the following subject: "Is the evangelistic campaign in the Sunday school worth the effort?" in which he showed very clearly that it was. Rev. A. J. Davis then spoke on the pastors' duties in regard to the Advocate campaign, in which he stressed the need of all to do his best for the Advocate.

The time having arrived for the preaching, Rev. J. B. Cain came forward and, after the singing of a song, called on Rev. W. B. Jones to lead in prayer. He then took his text from Gal. 6:14 and brought a message that I am sure inspired and helped all who were present.

Rev. J. L. Carter appointed a committee to nominate officers to be elected at the afternoon session for this year, and Rev. E. M. Allen, pastor host, announced that dinner was ready to be served in the Sunday school rooms of the church, and we were adjourned and the ladies of Walnut Grove Church served a delightful lunch that was enjoyed by all.

We came back for the afternoon session and Rev. H. J. Oakley conducted the devotional, reading the 23rd Psalm. We then took up a round-table discussion of the following questions as outlined in the program:

1. A new pastor finds that the evangelist who held the meeting last year has been invited back, but the pastor does not care to use him. What should he do?

2. A S. S. superintendent does not favor the plan of a study of the book as suggested by the General Board. What would you do?

3. On a four point circuit each of three churches have different plans of raising collections. One church has no definite plan. What ought the pastor do? Is there any need for the charge meeting of the stewards?

4. A lay leader says it is generally talked that the pastor expects too much of a particular church. What attitude should the pastor take?

5. In a small rural church there are five people who want to take a Cokesbury course this summer; the Board of Christian Education would furnish a teacher; the superintendent will not co-operate or even attend. Should a pastor have it?

6. Suppose a S. S. superintendent wishes to have a daily vacation church school; the pastor does not see the value of it. What can be done?

7. The Epworth League is very well attended, but as soon as they are dismissed they leave. They do not remain for the evening worship. What should you do?

O. C. Hull expressed appreciation to the program committee for the splendid program and Rev. W. B. Jones expressed thanks to the pastor and people of Walnut Grove for their entertainment.

Rev. W. B. Jones, chairman of the nomination committee, announced J. L. Carter for chairman and T. E. Nicholson, secretary, and they were elected. Our next meeting will be in March. The time and place to be announced later.

T. E. NICHOLSON,
Secretary.

REPORTS FROM MAGEE EPWORTH JUNIORS

This little band of Juniors, which often number 27, is quite active in Missionary work, as is evidenced by the splendid reports of their weekly meetings held every Sunday afternoon, the children carrying out the well-planned programs.

Through their efforts, joy and sunshine have been carried to the children at the Sanitorium through a Hallowe'en party and a Thanksgiving fruit shower.

The Week of Prayer was observed by them and a substantial offering was made.

One outstanding feature of their program is stimulating daily Bible reading in the homes.

Programs that sparkle with interest showing much painstaking care and often a personal touch by poem or round table discussion, have been very profitably rendered by the Magee auxiliary, under the efficient leadership of Mrs. T. J. Burnham, who was re-elected for 1931.

W. M. S., CENTRAL CHURCH, MERIDIAN

Interesting accounts of circle meetings held weekly in the different homes—aggregating 109 total attendance at many meetings. The circles of this church are named for different missionaries and each circle keeps in touch with her missionary by letter. The business meeting is held at the church, when all circles meet together. The programs have been well outlined and much care has been given to Bible and Mission study. Attractive programs have been given from the Voice.

All circles had showers for the Wesley House, which is always substantially remembered in a financial way by this and all other auxiliaries in the city.

The Clara Chalmers and Mozelle Tumlin circles enjoyed a spend-the-day Mission study in their study of "A Turn Toward Peace." New members have been added throughout the year.

NIGHT COUGHING

Quick and Safe Way To Stop It!

Whatever it is due to—cold, catarrhal condition of the throat, dust irritations or smoking—night coughing can and should be stopped! Nothing will pull you down faster, for it not only deprives you of needed sleep, but it tears you to pieces.

At the first sign of a cough, take good old "Piso's for Coughs." It does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages and soothes the inflamed tissues. At the same time, it has a tonic value that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Piso's supplies these five vital effects and it contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give even to babies. All druggists sell Piso's in 35c and 60c sizes. Be sure you get "Piso's for Coughs."

Mrs. Otis McMullen has been elected president for 1931, and the personnel of all circles, except the business women's circle and the young matrons' circle, have been changed.

The treasurer's report shows that these faithful workers have not been idle in the financial world.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Ellisville, on January 5, held its regular business and social meeting in the home of Mrs. W. J. Moody.

After the devotional and short Voice program, a business session was held in which plans for the new year were formulated. The meeting was one of interest and inspiration, urging to greater accomplishment throughout 1931.

The Woman's Union Missionary Society of Electric Mills, Miss., met at the Community House, January 5, with Mmes. H. H. Barnes and L. M. Barksdale, hostesses. After the devotional service, a special song and a reading, "The Rose That Grew Too High for Me," an inspiring paper on "Knowledge and Courage" was given by Mrs. A. C. Grantham.

After song and prayer, the installation of officers for the year was led by Mrs. Grantham.

Mrs. Libby reports that this has been a strenuous year at the Wesley House, but with the good workers and co-opeartion of churches they have managed to tide over and let no one suffer. At present there are so many unemployed, sick and distressed that it is enough to almost kill the workers to have to hear it all the time. $392.10 were given for relief during the Christmas holidays. This included clothing, groceries, fuel, etc.

Responding to an invitation from the auxiliary at Nebo, quite a number of the women of Fayette auxiliary enjoyed an all-day meeting, and by request presented the program as follows:

Theme—Service.

"Breathe on Me, Breath of God," was read as a prayer.

Appropriate songs, Scripture lesson and prayer, by Rev. T. B. Cottrell.

The Joy of Service Through Children's Work, Mrs. Coleman.

The Joy of Service Through young People's Work, Miss Luberta Freeman.

The Fullness of Service Through Bible Study, Mrs. Coffey.

The Broadening of Service Through Mission Study, Mrs. Puffer.

Song—Open My Eyes That I May See.

The Co-operative Service Through Christian Social Relation, Mrs. Harrigill.

The World-Wide Service Through the Voice, by Mrs. Cammack and followed by Mesdames Croxton, Coleman, Darsey and Corbin.

The Service of Love Through Local Work, Mrs. Lewis.

An Inclusive Service Through a Well-Rounded Program, Mrs. Cottrell.

Words of appreciation were voiced by the Nebo auxiliary and a most bountiful dinner served by them. It is hoped that more of such inspiring get-together meetings may be held from time to time.

There were present 15 members from Fayette Society, 8 from Nebo, which is a new society with 16 members, 3 visitors from Union Church, and 6 men, whose presence was enjoyed and appreciated.

Mrs. L. W. Alford, president.

Dear Friend: I am sure that you will pardon me for making the following suggestion to you, so that you may pass it on to the proper persons in the local Auxiliary, for I believe it will be helpful, that is, "That you again get in touch with the person in the local auxiliary (I think it is your Voice agent) and urge her to make a canvass of the ENTIRE CHURCH in their canvas for the Missionary Voice, for I have found in a number of places they are only working the members of the auxiliary, and not the entire church, and your request along this line will do more than any other though I am stressing it wherever I have the opportunity; but there is NO VOICE (except the Missionary Voice) like YOURS to get this done. I am trying to reach the churches where you do not have an auxiliary, through the chairman of the Missionary Committee, and the Voice agent of the committee. We just must make an increase in our Conference, send Mrs. Cottrell to Memphis, and get more folks to read the Voice. With kindest regards and best wishes for the work you are doing, sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS.

FROM COALVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Decell: I herewith inclose money to pay for my subscription to the Advocate.

I have taken the Christian Advocate for the past 45 years, and I believe my subscription to it is one of the best investments I have ever made. It has brought me comfort in time of sorrow, given encouragement to my tired mind, kept me properly informed with reference to my church work and my duty to my church, given instruction to my family, and been one of the greatest influences of my home in the rearing of my children. It has always had a great and good man at its head and, while it has never had the support of the church it ought to have had, yet it has always been on the job supporting the pastor and helping in every move for the uplift of our people.

DICKEY DRUG CO., Bristol, Va.

I personally believe it is a better paper today than ever, and, speaking as one who has been in mission work for 46 years, I believe it to be one of the strongest arms of our church and by all means should be in every home today instead of so much bad reading that is being fed to the minds of our young people.

Our pastor is doing everything humanly possible to get our people to take it, but I am ashamed of our small subscription list.

We had a wonderful watch night service at our church; I think we had possibly over a thousand people present and beyond a doubt the best service ever held at Coalville church. The last thing the pastor did ere the old year passed out was to receive into our church an old man nearly 80, who gave his life to God.

The old year passed away while we were in prayer and the new found us on our knees praying.

At 12:15 a. m. of new year we went to the table so beautifully builded and decorated in that wonderfully beautiful parsonage yard where many large heaters were driving away the cold of the night and there we all ate to the fill of our bodies of almost everything good the land could afford. It took three trucks of lumber to make the table and it was so crowded that only a part of the large crowd could get to it at a time, but after all had eaten we had a very large lot of good food left. A wonderful service. Wish you could have been there.

Many men and trucks are working this week hauling material to the grounds for the building of the new church.

We have lost many of our best members and we have a great number of sick people now, with financial conditions worse than at any time known to me in this community.

You are giving us a great paper and I appreciate it and pray God's blessings upon you and your work. Come to see us.

Your brother,

REV. LOUIS FAYARD.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Circuit Pastors' Conference. Millsaps College.

February 26 and 27.

Board and lodging $1 a day.

Do you wish to study how to serve better. Come to the conference. If you have problems that are now pressing you come and be with us. Send in your problem and we will try and get it on the program.

Would you like to learn a great hymn or so? We are going to work that in too, if possible.

This is to thank you for your response to the letter sent in regards to the Missionary Offering. We believe in you or we could not keep on, but your response was beyond our faith. I wonder if we cannot increase our faith until we will actually expect every Sunday school to send in a missionary offering.

Keep in mind your District Educational Institute and be present on time with your problem list in hand. We are looking forward for the best series of institutes ever held in the conference.

It is time to be thinking of Vacation Church Schools and Cokesbury Schools. Let us have your applications as soon as you can. Our funds are limited and our help will necessarily be limited. We would like to reach as many places as possible.

Sunday School Day Programs will not be sent out as formerly. Order your programs direct from the Publishing House, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. The price is 50c a dozen. I do not think you will need more than 6 in order to have a program in your church. The Board is having a copy of the program sent to each Sunday school Superintendent. Please examine the program and get your order in early.

Our first Standard Training School for this year was held at Brookhaven. The attendance was off, but the work was well done and there was a great interest manifested by those who could take part.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN G. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Rev. W. R. Hammontree recently taught a large class in Worship at Nettleton. He is teaching this course in several other places. Just to visit a place where such a course has been taught you can feel a different atmosphere. There is an interesting reverence there that is not felt where the people have not been taught to worship.

Our Extension secretary, Rev. E. G. Mohler, has been very busy during this month, as he is at all times, preaching, holding workers' conferences, institutes, etc. The work is growing and going forward under his leadership.

It was my privilege to be with Rev. W. W. Woollard and the fine people of Shelby recently. It is useless to say that Brother Woollard is going about the work with faithfulness and intelligent efficiency. He has some very definite plans for the advancement of the work at Shelby.

Rev. Melville Johnson leads a most loyal flock at Cleveland. The Sunday school has increased almost 100 per cent recently. Plans are being made for definite work between the local church and the student life of Delta State Teachers' College. Under the leadership of Mr. R. E. Davis, the intelligent and effective superintendent of the Sunday school, and Bro. Johnson, a Standard Training School is being planned for that area of the Greenville district.

In the three months that I have been in this field I find that I have done a great deal of going about as well as office work. I have traveled about 4,000 miles while in the field. Over 2,000 pieces of mail have been sent out from my office. I have preached 15 times, held 9 workers' conferences, attended 9 district meetings, had many personal conferences with preachers and workers concerning the work. Attended the general council meeting at Nashville six days, read several good books and attended to many details incident to the work. We are happy in the work.

Rev. John C. Chambers, of the Mississippi Conference, is holding a conference for the circuit preachers at Millsaps College February 26 and 27. Dr. W. M. Alexander and Rev. A. W. Martin of the General Board will be there and meet with the men who come. He is inviting as many of the men from our conference to come as possible. It will not cost them but $1 per day while down there. Those of us who heard Dr. Alexander while he was in our conference during the Missionary cultivation period, as well as those who know Bro. Martin, will be anxious to attend this conference. Several of the boys might go in together and go in a car without a great deal of expense to any one. Remember the date, February 26 and 27.

For the first time our church has made it possible for the colleges and universities to regularly and effectively place their work before the local churches. This is provided for in regular college days quarterly. On these days it will be expected that every church, Sunday school and Epworth League will put on a short program during the worship period dealing with our colleges. Such a program will be provided for you in the Millsaps College Bulletin, which will be mailed to all pastors, Sunday school superintendents and Epworth League presidents during March. The day for putting on the program is the fifth Sunday in March. We are not asking you to take an offering, but just put on the 20-minute program and give the people the information contained in the program. Rev. Jno. C. Chambers, of the Mississippi Conference, and I are co-operating in this matter. The people of the North Mississippi Conference will be expected to use the part of the program that deals with Millsaps College and Grenada College. Be on the lookout for the Millsaps College Bulletin in March and do not fail to put on this program.

Now is the time when our young people are deciding as to which college they want to attend next year. We will appreciate the preachers and the people sending us a list of prospective students, especially the names of all Methodist students graduating in high school this spring. Any student desiring information about our schools may apply to Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., and Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., or to the writer.

The calls that went out to the Junior Departments in our Conferences last November for Bibles to be given to the Juniors in our Home at Jackson was answered in full. Here is what Miss Louise Denson, superintendent of the Junior Department in the Home, says: "I wish you could have seen the faces of those children when I gave them their Bibles. I went to the Home several Saturday afternoons since, taught them two or three songs and then gave their Bibles to them. It was all I could do to keep from crying before them when I realized how much it meant to them to be able to say, "I have a Bible of my own.' They all came to Sunday school next morning and told their teachers how much they had read. It was a revelation to me to know how much the little boys thought of the Bible and how they bring them to Sunday school. All of the children are as careful with them as they can be. It makes me want to do more for these little tots and it is my prayer that I may be able to do things for them that will mean much to them in the days that are to come. I am planning to hold a Daily Vacation Church School for them in the future."

It will be a good idea to read this letter to the boys and girls in the departments that helped in this enterprise. All who had any part in this project thank the givers and thank God for the generous response on the part of teachers and children. Blessings upon all who did this kind deed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE, LOUISIANA

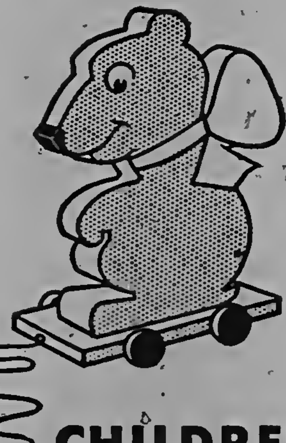
Dear Young People: Did you ever spend three or four months getting ready for, and looking forward to, some interesting event and then, at the last minute, be denied the pleasure of enjoying it? That was my predicament in our Union Presidents' meeting in Alexandria on January 24 and 25.

I went to Alexandria on Tuesday, expecting to spend the week getting ready for the best meeting we had ever had, but instead I went to bed sick and when about fifty young people from all parts of the State arrived in Alexandria they found me pretty sick. Dr. Holmes tells me that the meeting was wonderfully successful and that the young people seemed most enthusiastic in our plans of work. You can imagine how I hated to miss all the discussions, especially since I had spent a week in Nashville, studying the very plans that we were to discuss. Anyway, I'm glad that we have the type of leaders in our conference that can go ahead and put over such a program when I am forced to be absent.

I spent two weeks in bed, but am up again and anxious to get back to work. We have so many interesting plans to put over in the near future and a full schedule for some time to come.

Such interesting reports have come in about the different unions. I understand that the Earnest Workers' Union in Monroe district met at Delhi with about one hundred fifty present, so reports the presiding elder, and the Ever-ready Union of Ruston district had as large an attendance at Antioch. On the same Sunday there was a meeting of one of the Unions in Lake Charles district and the Elizabeth Langford Union in Baton Rouge district. Blanks have been given to all chapters so that, in the future, they will report to me the place of meeting, number present, etc.

When young people all over Louis-



CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria have him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

iana are coming together monthly in such inspirational and instructive meetings as our unions are now having I feel as though we are accomplishing great things. We have twenty-two unions that are active and are planning to organize others. If your chapter or young people's group is not active in a union, you had better write me. I'll help you get into one.

The Shreveport City Union did itself proud last week when it gave a banquet for all the Methodist preachers of the city. All the Leaguers and preachers were present, and I hear that it was a great success. Miss Gatewood, of First Church, wrote that a place was reserved for me, but that is another event that I had to miss.

The most important event for both preachers and young people is the date set for Anniversary Day. We have chosen March 8, or the nearest Sunday thereto, as Anniversary Day. Every preacher in the conference is expected to arrange for one church service to be given to this observance for our young people.

A pageant entitled, "All for Christ," has been prepared and can be gotten from Lamar & Whitmore for a nominal price. If it is not advisable to use a pageant the program can be given on the same subject. It sets forth the history of the Epworth League and our plan of reorganization for our young people and is most instructive. Your church needs this information.

The offering taken at this service is to be sent in to F. H. Riggs, Box 1048, Monroe, La. This offering goes towards the financing of our young people's work within the conference.

Do not put off this observance if you can avoid doing so. There are many things on your church calendar, but none more important than your young people and their activities. Last year about seventy of our churches observed Anniversary Day, a large number using the pageant prepared, and our offerings amounted to approximately $700. If EVERY church did its bit I wonder how we would stand. Can't we find out by doing?

INDIGESTION GOES—QUICKLY, PLEASANTLY

When you begin to suffer from heartburn, gas or indigestion, it's usually the fault of too much acid in your stomach. The best way—the quickest way—to stop your trouble is with Phillips Milk of Magnesia. A spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids—and does it instantly. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know Phillips Milk of Magnesia. And you will never allow yourself to suffer from over-acidity again. It is the standard anti-acid with doctors and has been for over fifty years.

Your drug store has Phillips Milk of Magnesia, in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Full directions for its many uses in every package. Insist on the genuine. A less perfect product may not act the same.

The Shreveport Senior Institute takes place on March 1-6. The usual program of supper each evening and then class work and recreation will be followed. Leaguers and Sunday school young people are expected to join each other in this institute. The classes will be adapted to both groups. Young people in adjoining towns are invited to attend.

The New Orleans Institute for Senior Young People follows on March 8-13. Miss Ina C. Brown, of Nashville, will be at this institute. We were only able to get her for the one week.

Isn't it a pity that I can't report more news here? The space is too limited for that. Let me say, though, that if you really want news happenings among the young people you should subscribe to the Christian Education Bulletin being published monthly by our office. It is only 25c per year and will be mailed direct to you. We want 2,000 subscriptions from our preachers, adults and young people. Send your quarter and address in to Box 742, Alexandria, La., and receive the next issue.

More news next week.

Sincerely,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Young People's Secretary.

EPWORTH LEAGUE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Although the date of the Epworth Era Subscription Drive is over, if there are any of your Leagues that have not reached your quota, do not stop working. Our loyalty to the Era extends through all the year, and the efforts that you have made during the two weeks in January may be rewarded later. Our ideal is not only that each League shall subscribe to its quota, but that each Leaguer may have access to an Era. Will each of you do your part in making your district and even our Conference reach 100 per cent in Epworth Era subscriptions?

Let us show our appreciation of the Era and what it has meant to our Chapters by doubling our efforts to secure other subscriptions, for we will enjoy it most when others enjoy it with us.

Dear Leaguers: We don't know what you Leaguers are taking up in your book-a-month clubs. There are many interesting books which you can study. We want to recommend two books to you which we read recently and they helped us very much.

One of these books is, "Studies in Power," by Dr. H. M. Edmonds. In this book Dr. Edmonds takes up a study of several outstanding characters of history and tries to find the secret of their power. He has one chapter on Joan of Arc, the seventeen-year-old girl of France who lived during the fifteenth century. She was a practical dreamer. She had convictions concerning certain things and she was willing to die for those convictions. She was burned at the stake, but people rise up and call her blessed because of her courage.

There is another chapter on Robert E. Lee, the Peerless Lee, if you please. All Americans ought to be proud of Lee, whether they live in the South or not. He was a great man. Dr. Edmonds says that one of the greatest things about Lee was his conception of God. He says that Lee was one of the most religious men he has ever read about. Several other interesting characters are discussed in this book. It is written in a very interesting way.

The other book is the little book which has just been written by Dr. C. J. Jarrel. It is called, "Friends of God." This is a devotional book and it is very refreshing. Dr. Jarrel is one of our outstanding pastors. He has written out of his own experience. That makes the book all the more in-

Missionary Decides at Midnight to Write Her Appreciation of Vicks

So Rejoiced Was She That its Treatment Had Brought Relief to Her Little Boy

A Group of School Children

"I am a missionary," writes Mrs. G. W. Strother from Pochow, Anhwei, China. "We have two lovely children.

"Last night, our baby son, Greene Wallace, Jr., gave me such concern with his terrible cold. I made a 'tent' over his bed and let him inhale the 'Vicks Vapor.' In an hour's time he was relieved and sleeping quietly. I was so rejoiced that I made up my mind at midnight to write you to-day."

Like Mrs. Strother, Vicks is the first thought of millions of mothers all over the world for children's colds, because it avoids the constant "dosing" which so often upsets delicate digestions. Being an external treatment, Vicks can be used freely and as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

Just apply it over throat and chest and cover with warm flannel. Vicks acts two ways at once for relief: (1) By stimulation, through the skin, like a poultice or plaster, and (2) by inhalation, its medicated vapors, released by body-heat are breathed in direct to irritated air-paassages.

For deep chest colds, increased stimulative effect can be had by reddening the skin over throat and chest with hot wet towels before applying the Vicks. For concentrated vapor action, melt a teaspoonful of Vicks in a kettle or bowl of boiling water, place a newspaper, towel or blanket over the head, covering the kettle, too. and inhale the steaming vapors for several minutes. This is the "Kettle and Tent" method to which Mrs. Strother refers.

Mrs. Strother and those who use these improved treatments for different types of colds are the ones who are really getting the greatest value from "The Little Blue Jar." Read your directions folder and try them.

BIG BROTHERS' BIBLE CLASS AT GREENVILLE, MISS., HAS FEAST AND FELLOWSHIP

Members of the Big Brothers Bible class never had a better time than their experience at the quarterly banquet last evening when they were guests of the class in the Sunday school room of the First Methodist church and enjoyed a delicious menu served by ladies of the church, with Mrs. D. S. Thomas as chairman, heard oratory of the wittiest and most laughable character, and splendid music by the Broyles family orchestra. It was simply two hours of genuine enjoyment.

When the guests walked into the banquet hall, where covers were laid for a hundred guests, the orchestra, composed of Rev. and Mrs. Nash Broyles and their four children, Christine, Katherine, Nash and Jimmie, were playing a beautiful musical program.

Invocation was said by Rev. T. M. Bradley, pastor of the Methodist church.

Arthur Brooks served as toastmaster and "roastmaster," keeping things lively throughout the evening. In fact he was appropriately called as the probable successor to the famous Will Rogers as he shot quips here and there and drew fire several times that provoked roars of laughter.

Oratory, that alternated between good and rotten, was dispensed and when called on a dozen or more members of the class produced something worth while. The meeting was interspersed by some club singing by the banqueters under the direction of song leader E. B. Henderson, with piano accompaniment by the class pianist, Miss Minnie Lee Thomas.

James McKee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McKee, won a place among Greenville's greatly admired musicians when he rendered two saxophone solos, "Beautiful Colorado," with difficult variations, and "Old New England Moon." His piano accompaniment was played by his teacher, Mrs. Eva Wiggins, to whom much praise is due for her splendid tutorage.

Another musical treat was given by Misses Cristine and Katherine Broyles, playing Xylo-Marimbo duet, "The Glow Worm," with variations that would tax the ability of musicians of much longer training.

Rev. Nash Broyles, presiding elder of the Greenville district, was selected for the evening's oration and fifteen minutes of rare wit and fun were dispensed that included a satire on Greenville's new traffic rules, and other modern events "all for the sake of fellowship."

President Price Massey, who has done such splendid work in building up the class during the past one and a half years, remained in the background until the finale when he appeared just long enough to express his appreciation to the banquet committee, George Helms, Floyd Drew and George Haynes, and to Mrs. D. S. Thomas, ladies' chairman for their splendid evening's pleasure.—Reporter.

REV. J. A. BAXTER, superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, died at the home of Mr. J. T. Purvis, at Purvis, Miss., at break of day, Sunday, February 1, 1931. The funeral rites were conducted at the Purvis Methodist Church, Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. The Methodist preachers who were present and took some part in the service were M. L. McCormick, J. E. Williams, W. A. Hays, L. L. Roberts, R. H. Clegg and John D. Ellis. The Rev. Mr. Hogan, pastor of the Purvis Baptist Church, was present and took part. Brother Baxter was buried at the Myrtle Cemetery, near Baxterville, Miss.

JNO. D. ELLIS.

MRS. CELIA A. E. HATLEY was born in Jones County, Miss., November 21, 1843, and departed this life November 14, 1930. She was the last member of the Loposser family, who came to the Coast several years ago and made this community their home. She was happily married to William J. Hatley, May 28, 1863. There remain to mourn her going one son, four daughters, nine grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. She joined the Baptist Church about 1895 and was a faithful member of that Church for many years. On July 14, 1929, I received her into the Handsboro Methodist church, and from that time until her death she was a faithful member. She was not able to attend all the services, but we often went to her home and had prayer meeting, which she enjoyed so much. She was always thinking of the church and praying for its progress. She called for her purse and paid her pledge in full to the pastor just before Conference. In the absence of the pastor, who was attending Annual Conference, Rev. J. R. Cruthirds and Rev. Olia Nix, two local preachers on the charge, conducted the funeral, which was held in the Handsboro Methodist church, and her body was laid to rest in the Handsboro cemetery. Aunt Celia, as she was known, is missed, but we are sure that heaven is richer.

ENGINEER GAVE UP

Says He Could Not Stand Indigestion Any Longer.—Relieved By Black-Draught.

Pulaski, Va.—How a railroad engineer was relieved of indigestion was described by Mr. C. K. Nelson, a Fourth Street resident of this city. Mr. Nelson said:

"I was suffering from stomach trouble in 1917, and had been suffering for some time. I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet suffered on just the same. When in West Virginia, on a work train, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I couldn't stand to work, in my condition.

"Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work.

"One morning while on my engine I felt like I would smother. I stopped in a little town, bought a package of Black-Draught, took a dose and later in the day took another dose. It relieved me and I have not had a bad spell like that in more than two and a half years."

AT REST

Written in Memory of Mrs. S. A. Williams

Twas growing late on Tuesday eve;
Friends gathered around her bed
To comfort and to ease,
But she passed on to rest.

The pearly gates were opened wide;
A gentle voice said, "Come."
Leaving the ones she loved so well,
She calmly entered home.

But we know she has gone before us
To that land of heavenly rest;
She has joined the sainted chorus
Of the ones forever blest.

The sweet life she lived among us,
The good influence she bore,
Are beacon lights to guide us homeward
Where we'll meet to part no more.

Oh, the joy of that reunion!
What a meeting it will be
As our loved ones come to greet us
In that beautiful home above!

MRS. B. P. MOORE,
Georgetown, Miss.

On December 5, 1930, the noble soul of PERCY ALLEN McGUIRE took its flight to the home of rest. Son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McGuire, he was born October 27, 1883, near Arcadia, La. Here he grew to manhood. He was educated in Arcadia; also took a business course in Soule College, New Orleans. He was happily married to Miss Cornelia Richardson, of Claiborne Parish, La., May 30, 1907. To this union were born three children, Katherine, now teaching in Arcadia; James, now in school at L. P. I., and Lillian, senior in Arcadia High School. At an early age he united with the Methodist Church. To his church he was loyal and devoted. He served faithfully on the building committee in erecting the present Methodist church in Arcadia, La. He was a steward for a number of years and was faithful in the performance of his duties. He stood firmly by his convictions. Sometimes stern in manner, yet tender at heart as a little child. Brother McGuire felt a great interest in education, and manifested great interest in the education of his children. He was active in every civic interest in his community. There has been hardly an outstanding development in his town within the last few years without his name being closely connected with it. He had a host of friends and was trusted by them and to them he was loyal. The writer was with him on a camp hunt. He gave himself literally to the enjoyment of others on these camps. He directed with ease to the welfare of all there. No wonder at his funeral strong men broke down and wept. Not a respecter of persons, so men in every walk of life loved him. Among those who mourned his passing were a number of colored people. He was failing in health for several months during which time his faithful and devoted wife made a heroic effort for his restoration to health, but his call had come. At his funeral a large crowd overflowed the spacious auditorium of the Methodist Church. With bowed heads and grieved hearts we submit to the Great Redeemer's will. He is survived by his wife, parents, two brothers, S. J. and D. R. McGuire, and two sisters, Miss Jewel McGuire and Mrs. Raymond Madden. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. K. W. Dodson and the writer. His body was placed away in the Arcadia Cemetery beneath a bevy of flowers to await the resurrection of the just.

"Servant of God, well done!
The glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

H. W. LEDBETTER,
Former Pastor.

REALITY

The only religion that touches the conscience as well as the imagination of persons these days is the faith of the man who has courage in his religion. You know how very anxious we have all been these last few years to get and keep the ear of the people. We have felt it to be only too true, as the bishops said, that the idea of God seemed to be fading out of the mind of the people. Our tendency has been to be conciliatory, sometimes to trim, often to whittle down our religion's demands, and in short, to compromise, in order to keep men friendly to the Church. All that has got to go—if it has not already gone. The fear of man, of any man, must utterly depart from the soul of the Christian. He must know where he stands and what his Lord demands from him as one of His followers, and then face up to that with might and main. We must bow before the Lord in adoration and humble devotion, but we must bow to nobody else. The great people in the Christian ages have always been Christians of this type, so sure of the claim that Jesus had upon them, so clear as to what God wanted from them in moral character, in social effort and in true worship of the soul, that they had authority. Not authority, outwardly conferred, which is never true authority at all, but the authority of those who knew their Saviour, and who, by Him, had been led into "the peace of God which passeth all understanding."

I am sure we cannot speak with courage unless we have the deep, deathless underlying conviction that we know Jesus Christ and we know that He is right in what He demands from us, and right in what He wants His followers to say and do today, tomorrow and the third day. With that conviction burning like a hot fire in our inmost nature, where our will lives and our resolves are born, we can look out upon the world and stand before anybody for a religion with no vacillation, a Church with no trimming and a personal Christianity that, though marred by failure, is yet an honest, whole life, sincere attempt to live here on earth a life in all respects in accordance with the spirit of Jesus.

By controversy we may interest people's minds, but there is something wonderfully compelling about the influence that streams from the man who has found peace with Christ, and who therefore has a clear-eyed courage because he knows Christ, with conviction nothing can move, and knows He is right.—John Bevan in The Christian World.

21 MILLIONS ENROLLED IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS

According to an estimate based on the latest available statistics collected by the Federal Office of Education, the enrollment in elementary schools for the year 1930 was approximately 21,370,000. The number of pupils enrolled in public high schools was 4,030,000. The total number of teachers was 848,500; the number of schoolhouses, 254,200. School expenditures totaled $2,289,000,000. The number of pupils enrolled in private and parochial elementary and secondary schoos was 2,704,000.

The declining birth rate in the United States is being felt in the schools. In an average group of 200 Americans in 1915, five children were being born each year. In that same average group in 1928 less than four children were being born, according to statistical studies made by the Office of Education.

The problem of teacher supply and demand has become a matter of concern to school authorities. An apparent oversupply of teachers of liberal arts subjects and of elementary school work n some localities has led to more exacting requirements for entrance to teacher-preparing institutions, and in requirements for certification. More than one-third of the teacher-preparing institutions reported the application of such special selective measures to entering students as the requirement of superior high school scholarship, satisfactory intelligence scores, and high scores on achievement or other special tests. A growing number of progressive cities and states now require a minimum of three years above high school for certification of teachers.

More than a million persons, young and old, were enrolled in vocational schools in 1930, including 170,000 who were learning to farm better, 250,000 to make better homes, and 625,000 to do some specific job better in trade and industry, according to the report of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. This enrollment was largely in schools which received aid under the terms of the National Vocational Education Act, and all of it in vocational courses organized and conducted under joint Federal and State vocational education.—Exchange.

Happy Again

"Nothing seemed to please Betty Jean," says Mrs. James W. Nolen, 113 Ceanter St., Dallas, Texas. "She was feverish and fretful. Her appetite was poor; she seemed bilious.

"A child specialist recommended California Fig Syrup and it certainly made my little girl happy, well again in a hurry. We have used it over three years for all her upsets."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it for feverish, headachy, bilious, constipated babies and children; to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases.

Appetite is increased by its use; the breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are assisted; weak stomach and bowels are strengthened.

WHAT A LAYMAN THINKS

Dear Editor: May I have a little space in your good paper to give expression to a few things? I have been a reader of your paper from childhood, but never before asked for expression through its columns.

But since our Church is preparing to enter the great Missionary cultivation program, in the first place it seems to me that the opportunities and possibilities of the Church are unusually great. And the question is, are we fitted for the task? Someone says yes.

We have our educational program made out and our literature ready and we have our financial peg set to which we are to go and its apportionment made to each charge and the time set for beginning. But, oh brethren, have we considered the great necessity of spiritual preparedness and leadership to give it a place in our program? Our Blessed Lord would not dare to enter upon his great mission as the world's great Saviour without spiritual leadership. When he left the scenes of his baptism, he left filled with and led by the Spirit of God. And when it came time for his disciples to take up his work as his witnesses he insisted on them being in possession of spiritual power and leadership.

And as I see the program of our Church now, it is no more than a continuance of his great mission and have we as a Church, as pastors, as laymen, been still long enough and listened close enough to hear His still, small voice saying to each of us, "It is not by might or by power, but by my spirit," sayeth the Lord of Hosts?

Would it be good and wise for each congregation and each member in His great kingdom to first enter into a consecration service with our Lord and have him to refresh our spiritual power and leadership? Can we dare to enter the work without it and expect the success that meets His approval? We must be more than church advocaters and money gatherers. We are duty bound to be soul winners. We must labor for souls regardless of salaries. We must preach and teach to save instead of to please. We must go into the highways and hedges where the indifferent are and with the spirit of helpfulness and meekness awaken in them a hungering to know God, which to know aright is life eternal.

You may get both of these books from Lamar & Whitmore, Agents, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Both of these books have been published since January 1. They are new books. Our Publishing House is getting out a number of interesting books. You might write them for a catalogue. They will be glad to furnish it.

We would like to direct your attention again to our Mission study book. "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," by Dr. W. G. Cram, is the book we are studying this year. All of our young people should read this book. As young people we want to be loyal to our church. The Church needs our support now as it has never needed it before. We have some of the greatest opportunities we have ever had. The good ships which are laden with privilege and opportunities are passing by our port. May we call them in.

Charters are still being issued to Senior Epworth Leagues in our Conference. Charters were recently issued to Senior Leagues at Artesia and Potts Camp. Brother W. L. Pearson and Brother L. M. James, our pastors at these places, are on the job. They are looking after the work of the young people. Brother J. D. Simpson, at Byhalia, is also busy with his League work. The League at Byhalia has been reorganized recently. We feel that real progress is being made in the League work of our Conference.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

Though Being Dead He Yet Speaketh

Lessons From Master Missionaries

BY BISHOP CHARLES BETTS GALLOWAY

Bishop Galloway's golden voice has been silent in death for more than twenty years, yet his noble example and imperishable words abide in an influence that eloquently promotes the missionary and other enterprises of his beloved Church.

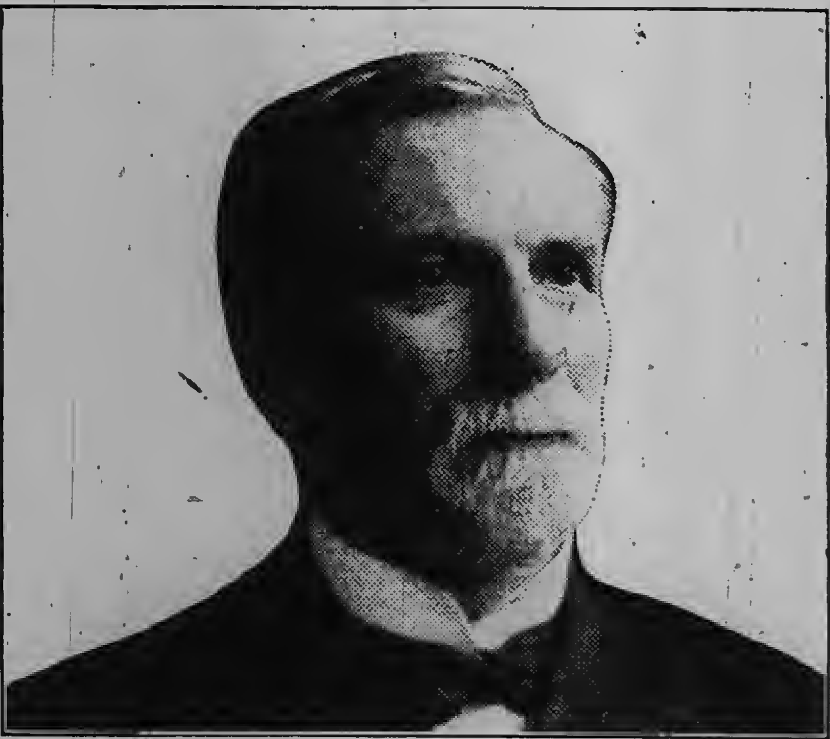
The address, "Lessons From Master Missionaries," is taken from the records of the great Missionary Conference held in Tulane Hall, New Orleans, April 24-30, 1901. Bishop Galloway spoke on Sunday night and that address was among the highest achievements of that magnetic master of assemblies. The address is abundantly worth republishing and rereading many times.—Editor.

I have been appointed to discuss this evening not the gospel of missions, but the gospel of the missionaries; not the faith once delivered to the saints but the faith illustrated by the saints. The man rather than his message shall be our prayerful study. The personal character of the apostle, and not his divine commission, will be our object lesson, and a lesson, I trust, that will be both an edification and inspiration. Important as is the Word of God, it is scarcely of more value and virtue than the character of the man of God who is to be its ordained exposition and illustration. The messenger more or less affects, if he does not determine, the power and influence of his message. The accredited ambassador of a great government is the personal and moral as well as official expression of the character and genius of its people. And so the kingdom of the Lord Christ is best known and most accurately measured by the character of its representatives in all the lands of earth.

Dr. Fairbairn states a portentous truth when he says: "Every good that enters the world enters through an individual—a conscious, reasonable, moral man; and it depends on the quality of the man what measure of good he brings." The character of the messenger, I repeat, largely determines the power of his message. "The world moves by personality." Great as an idea may be, yet to be potential it must be embodied. Truth is mighty and will prevail, we are told, but it is never mighty and all-conquering until it is incarnated. Doctrines must be transmitted into life before it becomes a force in the world. Tennyson beautifully expresses the idea in these exquisite lines:

"And so the Word had breath, and wrought
With human hands the creed of creeds,
In loveliness of perfect deeds
More strong than all poetic thought."

An apostle's life is the best commentary on the gospel he preaches, because it is most easily understood. A child cannot make doctrinal distinctions, is unable to grasp the metaphsics of theology or define the terms in the "Shorter Catechism," but that child can feel the weight and might of character as readily and savingly as the profoundest philosopher. There is infinite wisdom, therefore, in the fact that Christianity is the religion of a Person. Its doctrines are the teachings of a Person; its spirit is the life of a Person; its history tho history of a Person; its power the inspiration of a Person; its crowning triumph the resurrection of a Person; and its apostles are simply the revealers of a Person. And the more perfect their reincarnation of this divine Person, the greater will be the redemptive and triumphant power of their life and ministry.



THE LAMENTED BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY

This stupendous spiritual fact finds double emphasis in heathen lands. The missionary sent to preach the gospel will be more constantly and critically studied than the gospel he preaches. He must, therefore, become in himself—in the consistency and purity of his own unselfish, consecrated life—God's unanswerable argument with the heathen to forsake his discredited idols and turn unto the Lord and Giver of life. And for such unveilers of our Lord the heathen world pathetically pleads. A distinguished native of India once said in the agony of his inquiring soul: "What we ask of you is not Christianity, but Christians."

Another said: "What India requires for its regeneration is not so much Christian Bible passages, sermons, and addresses, but the presentation of a truly Christian life. An intelligent Japanese gentleman uttered this sad lament: "The conduct of the foreigners, with the exception of the missionaries and a few laymen, is a scandal on the name of Christianity and of civilization, and retards the progress of both." "If all the Englishmen lived such lives as Donald McLeod," said a Hindoo, "India would soon be a Christian country."

Such declarations evidence the supreme value of character in a missionary. His pure personal life is as potential a gospel as the divine oracles he is ordained to declare. And, thank God, the men and women sent out to the different and distant fields have abundantly vindicated the choice of the Church and the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Some of them have become the master spirits of the centuries, the massive and majestic figures of the ages. Theodore Parker was not extravagant when he said: "Had the whole missionary work resulted in nothing more than the building up of such a character as Adoniram Judson, it would be worth all it has cost."

And the world is beginning to share in this generous appreciation of missionaries. Their names have been so interwoven with the histories of the countries to which their apostolic lives were devoted that they have become the most conspicuous figures therein. In the story of Africa what names are written in largest letters? Not the governors of provinces and generals of armies who have guided the affairs of government and carried the English flag in triumph, but the names of Robert Moffat and David Livingstone.

In India, viceroys and generals may be forgotten—Hastings, Lord Clive, and the rest—but Carey and Swartz and Martyn and Marshman and Reginald Heber and William Butler and scores of others shine resplendent as the stars in the blue vault of heaven.

Bishop Thoburn, our honored guest on this great occasion, once made this eloquent statement: "During a residence of a dozen years in Calcutta I met many tourists from England and America. Among them all I recall but one who wished to see the house in which Macaulay had lived; one who asked to see the house in which Thackeray had been born; and two or three inquired for the residence of Warren Hastings. But, literally, scores upon scores have asked to be led to the grave of William Carey, and the little burying ground in the old Danish settlement at Serampore has become like a pilgrim's shrine to which Christian men and women come from all parts of the world."

A scholarly and distinguished gentleman, in a letter addressed to the American Board, paid this eloquent tribute to missionary character and courage: "The missionary appears to me to be the highest type of human excellence in the nineteenth century, and his profession to be the noblest. He has the enterprise of the merchant without the narrowing desire for gain; the dauntlessness of the soldier without the shedding of blood; the zeal of the geographer but for a higher motive than science." And like appreciative tributes have been paid by eloquent tongues and pens in all lands where the brave apostles of our Lord have borne the flag of their faith. Lord Lawrence, when viceroy of India, made this emphatic statement: "However many benefits the English people have conferred on India, the missionaries have accomplished more than all other influences together." Mr. Darwin, the great scientist, after his obsrevations in the South Sea Islands, said: "The lesson of the missionary is the enchanter's wand." At the feet of these mighty apostles of our Lord let us reverently sit this evening and "hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

The statue erected to David Livingstone in Edinburgh represents the great missionary as standing upon a lofty pedestal, with the calm confidence of a conqueror, his eager eyes turned toward Africa, with a Bible in one hand and the other resting on an ax.

Those are the suggested symbols of what all missionaries stand for—the world's redemption and civilization. They have made the echoes of the woodman's ax keep time with the story of the gospel in preparing the nations for the coming of the King. Industrial empire has followed the steps of their apostolic wanderings; commerce has reaped the fruits of their faithful sowing; civilization has been built upon the foundations of their wise planning and planting; nations have been the beneficiaries of their splendid and unawed daring. They have opened hospitals, established orphanages, founded schools and colleges, and introduced the great doctrines of personal and civil liberty. They have taught the tribes of earth the use of plow and plumb line, saw and hammer, compass and trowel, steam and electricity, and all the triumphs of immortal mind unfettered and inspired by the spirit of the living Christ.

And all this they have done with an almost reckless disregard of personal comfort or even life itself. The difficulties they have mastered, the dangers they have encountered, the opposition they have overcome, the friendships they have won, the martyrdoms they have suffered, and the achievements they have wrought, make a story that reads like a perpetual miracle. In some instances they had to construct a language and then preach in it; they had to create a moral sense and then appeal to it. Difficulties and discouragements never dreamed of in the home lands they have had to meet and master.

And many of their fiercest battles had to be fought alone and in a dark room. No man, however masterful and resourceful, ever becomes independent of personal sympathy and support. Even the mighty and majestic St. Paul himself suffered most from the loneliness of leadership and the loss of friends. These brave souls have often to prosecute their Lord's work without even the cheering, sustaining presence of the loved ones in their own homes.

I know of no picture more pathetic than that of Mrs. Judson, standing in the doorway of her home by the sea in Burma watching the ship sail away that was bringing her children to America for their education. The long-dreaded hour had come, the most painful hour in the life of every missionary mother. She must be separated for years, if not for life, from the dear ones of her heart in order that they may have the advantages of collegiate training in a Christian land and a Christian school. She had to make selection between separation from her children at a time when they needed her most, or leaving her husband alone in a heathen land to prosecute his work and bear the awful burden of anxiety and isolation. She chose to give up her children and serve the needy children of her Lord in Burma. With many a long and warm caress she had bidden them good-bye and the great steamer had turned her prow to the open sea. The almost broken-hearted mother stood and watched the vessel until through the mist in her eyes it had ceased to be even a speck on the distant horizon, and then, turning into her room, sunk into a chair and exclaimed: "All this I do for the sake of my Lord!" Glorious spirit of martyrdom, the martyrdom of mother love! How it transfigures every service that fills the life of duty with a minstrelsy as sweet as the angels sing in heaven!

Master missionaries have taught this encouraging lesson and given this inspiring assurance—that the Church will never lack for leaders to meet the emergencies of the Lord's kingdom. They have illustrated the sublime readiness and eagerness of God's apostles to co-operate with the Holy Spirit in opening and redeeming regions beyond. When the ages call, the heroes come. The man and the hour are made to meet. However perilous the enterprise or threatening the danger, when God calls, prophet and apostle are ready to obey. While the fields are ripening the Holy Spirit is preparing the husbandman; while the war clouds are gathering the passionate fires of patriotism are kindling in many a brave soul.

This is the divine statesmanship of the Holy Ghost. Eloquent and suggestive are those words spoken by a great student of the history of God's kingdom: "You can point to no critical epoch since the foundation of the Church—whether it was the downfall of the Roman Empire, or the incoming of the new races, or their settlement in the new homes, or the bursting upon Europe of the sea rovers from the North, of the moving of the Slavic races to their present localities, or the discovery of the new world, or the present age during which science has given to the political organism a new circulation, which is steam, and a new nervous system, which is electricity—when the spirit of missionary enthusiasm has not been rekindled just at the juncture when it was most needed." There was never a port unlocked that a missionary boat was not ready to cast anchor; there was never a gate flung open that one of God's intrepid apostles was not the first to enter.

And the passionate eagerness of these brave missionaries with tongues of flame to go up and possess every opened land has given a new interpretation to the great doctrine of a divine call to the ministry. It is no longer a providential compulsion or a reluctant yielding to the stern demands of dreaded duty, but a grateful and joyful readiness to hear the voice of God. Bishop Thoburn's experience is becoming universal. "It was not so much," said he, "a call to India that I received as an acceptance for India." Dr. Alexander Duff, the great apostle of education in India, in giving an account of his divine acceptance for missionary work, uttered these thrilling words: "There was a time when I had no care or concern for the heathen; that was the time when I had no care or concern for my own soul. When by the grace of God I was led to care for my own soul, then it was that I began to care for the heathen abroad. In my closet on bended knees I then said to God, 'O Lord, Thou knowest that silver and gold to give to this cause I have none; what I have I give unto Thee, I offer myself; wilt Thou accept the gift?'" That heroic spirit, that inspired patriotism, that sanctified loyalty to the divine kingdom and its King, are becoming the rapturous experience of the modern Church.

Master missionaries, by the successes they have achieved and the wide fields they have opened, have enlarged the sense of divine responsibility in the Church of God. The doctrine of our spiritual obligation to the whole world has had to win its way in the Church by conquest. National, racial, and geographical prejudices have put limitations upon the divine scope and mission of religion. But few faiths have aspired to become world-wide. In the early days of the Church, God had to employ miraculous agencies to broaden the conceptions and inspire the obligations of prophet and apostle. That was the meaning of the vivid experience of Jonah and the vision of Peter at Joppa. Jonah's prejudice had first to be conquered before he could preach the gospel of hope to Nineveh, and only after three commands from heaven not to call anything common or unclean that the Holy Ghost had sanctified would Peter receive the Roman centurion Cornelius into the Church. Dr. Ryland commanded William Carey to "sit down" and leave God to take care of the pagan world. The Scotch Assembly characterized the idea of world-wide missions as fanatical, dangerous, revolutionary. Why missions are modern is only answered in this way. But, thank God, the times of such ignorance are no longer to be winked at.

The heroic and unfaltering labors of apostolic missionaries have deepened the convictions and enriched the experience of the Church with a more vivid apprehension of universal redemption and universal obligation. With every demonstration of the gospel's perfect adaptation to the needs of another people there is a corresponding enlargement of obligation to speedily provide them with the means of salvation.

The sublime achievements of God's master workmen in the distant fields have wrought another needed revolution in the thought of the Church—they have abolished the arbitrary and unscriptural distinction between the cause of religion at home and abroad.

The work is one. There are not two commissions. Christ is not divided. The principles are identical and the same Spirit inspires. The particular field entered is determined only by present and imperative needs. Our mission is to God's neediest children in their greatest need. Wherever that need is most urgent, whether in pagan China or priest-ridden Mexico, whether in the jungles of Africa or in the slums of an American city, whether to the dreary and desolate lands of Mahomet or to the supremely unconcerned and skeptical of our own land, there the call is loudest, and in response to its authoritative voice we should hasten with swiftest foot.

They have taught the Church new lessons in personal consecration. Not the consecration of mere profession, but of prodigious and unselfish service. Not simply the claiming of ecstatic experiences, but the joy of giving light to those in darkness, the blessed luxury of seeking and saving the lost. This is the joy of the Lord that giveth strength.

With the extension of Christ's kingdom into the distant regions and among the most degraded peoples increased emphasis is given the great truths that consecration to God is service to man and that the only way to serve God is to help man. God, who is self-existent and infinite in all his perfections, has no lack that we can supply, has no need that appeals to our sympathy. But the needs of man are his needs; their sorrows are his burden. By ministering to them we serve God.

And the grandest types of Christian character are developed amid the activities of such a strenuous life. They are not the noblest disciples with the purest faith and in most perfect harmony with God who live under the shadow of a cloister or the shelter of a nunnery. You may raise flowers of gorgeous and glorious tint in a conservatory, but they are of delicate fiber and fade at the gentlest touch of the earliest frost. But trees that are to become monarchs, strong and enduring, out of which cities and navies are built, must be rocked by storms and toughened by the changing seasons of the revolving years. So the grandest characters—purest in faith, noblest in life, attempting and accomplishing greatest things for God—are those who grapple with the hardest problems of every day, and who dare, under divine guidance, to walk steadily into the thick of any battle.

And these heroic men have been an inspiration to their fellow-laborers in other mission fields. To the example of certain flaming and fearless aspostles of God the earliest missionaries looked for encouragement in their self-denying and perilous labors. To his coadjutors William Carey used to say: "Let us often look at Brainerd in the woods of America pouring out his very soul before God for the perishing heathen without whose salvation nothing could make him happy." Indeed it was the story of Brainerd's toils in the forests of this new world that stirred the heart of Carey on his shoemaker's bench and caused him to ask: "If God can do such things among the Indians of America, why not among the pagans of India?" It touched the heart of Henry Martyn, the young student at Cambridge, and helped to make him one of the greatest missionaries in the world. Edward Payson, when twenty-two years of age, wrote in his diary: "In reading Mr. Brainerd's life I seemed to feel a most earnest desire after some portion of his spirit." This evening as I pronounce his precious name every devout soul looks up and instinctively exclaims: "My Father, my Father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof!"

The achievements of master missionaries have quickened and enlarged the expectations of the Church. That sublime exhortation of William Carey, "Expect great things from God," has become the experience of these later times. The skepticism of the past is the faith of the present. Hope has become the habit of the Church. There is less amazement at the report of mighty results. Victories are our daily expectation. Indeed, it has come to pass that the Church is disappointed if every day does not bring good tidings of great joy from the distant and different fields. These splendid successes are divine assurances for yet grander triumphs. "History is also prophecy." Current events predict if they do not predestinate what will occur to-morrow.

Never in all the history of our planet have spiritual and secular forces so conspired for the conquests of the gospel. Every invention and agency designed for the furtherance of commerce give speed and wing to the apocalyptic angel carrying abroad the message of salvation. International treaties and relationships make possible and give encouragement to spiritual fellowship. The electric cables that interchange daily, if not hourly, the market reports of the world also flash across seas and continents the glad tidings of gospel triumphs. Doors are open and fields are white everywhere.

What mighty displays of pentecostal power have been witnessed! Every day brings joyful tidings from some field where a great victory has been won. The Lord's hosts are being recruited with valiant forces ready and eager for service. The valley that Ezekiel saw covered with bleaching bones now glitters with the blades and trembles with the tread of an "exceeding great army." If, then, it be true that "each one counts two," that each trophy is prophecy and promise of another—that every Andrew will bring his brother Simon Peter to Christ—how inspiring is the prospect to-day!

Though progress has at times seemed to be very slow and often discouraging, we remember that "each one counts two." The winning of one heathen from his idols is only securing a multiplier whose multiplicand is the exhaustless grace of God. It is the entrance of light that will give abundant life.

But if expectation is bright, responsibility is correspondingly great. The work is before us and necessity is upon us. A door is never opened without a command to enter. Into every whitened field our Lord calls both reaper and gleaner. "Go ye into all the world" is the standing order of heaven, never to be repealed until the last conquered banner has been furled and the last lost sinner redeemed.

Other helpful and inspiring lessons from master missionaries in many fields I cannot even mention. If time allowed, I should like to note how they have given us a larger interpretation of providence, how they gloriously illustrated the doctrine of answered prayer; how they have reenforced the divine origin of Christianity by attesting its fitness to become the one universal religion; and other lessons that are but successive unfoldings and unveilings of God's glory and power—a series of epiphanies of the risen and reigning Lord.

And the men who wrought such wondrous things are worthy to be kept in everlasting remembrance. Mighty leaders of nations and the generations, how tenderly we cherish their precious memories; how reverently we pronounce their noble names; how ardently we ought to follow their apostolic examples and reincarnate their variant virtues! With such a heritage of faith and achievement and answered prayer, and such examples to incite us to holy endeavor, we ought to speed the triumphs of our Lord's kingdom. Let me call the names of a few of the master missionaries of the past and invoke a double portion of their spirit to descend upon the Church to-day.

There is David Brainerd, the apostle to the North American Indians, whose spirit was as saintly as a seraph, whose life was a joyous martyrdom to duty, and whose early, triumphant death was the descent of another chariot of fire. Traveling through the dense and trackless forests, destitute of all creature comforts, denied the companionship of a single human being who could speak a word of English, living on the coarsest fare, he moved among the savages of the woods like an angel of light and taught many of them the way of life. It is said that his prayers in the depths of the forest were so intense that "his garments were saturated with the sweat of his intercession."

"Fatigues and hardships," said he, "serve to wean me from the earth and, I trust, will make heaven sweeter." In the agony of his anxiety to be more useful and successful he exclaimed: "O that I were a flame of fire in the Lord's service! O that I were spirit that I might be more active for God!" In the thirtieth year of his age, and after only four years of prodigious labor and suffering, the seraphic spirit went home to rest. David Brainerd bequeathed to the Church the lesson of sublime and entire consecration to the Master's service.

There is William Carey, whose very name is the synonym of a forward movement in the kingdom of God, and who will ever stand as the most majestic figure in a generation of giants. He awoke the slumber of the Church, and infused into its withered veins the crimson tide of a new, triumphant life. His mavelous, unawed faith was equalled only by his peerless purpose and untiring labors. His love for the heathen became a consuming passion. For forty-one years he labored among the darkened millions of India, and was never so happy as when leading some dear soul into the glorious light. The "consecrated cobbler," by dint of his devotion to God and his unconquerable purpose, rose from obsurity to world-wide and enduring fame. Lord Wellesley, in acknowledging an address by William Carey, said: "I esteem such a testimony from such a man a greater honor than the applause of courts and parliaments." He became the "Wycliffe of the East." With his own tireless hand he translated the Scriptures into four different languages. Others he critically supervised, until twenty-eight versions were issued from the press at Serampore. His liberality was equaled only by his stipend. When his income as professor in Williams College amounted to F1,500 he reserved F50 for personal needs, and gave all the rest to the cause of God. He sleeps in a hero's grave at Serampore. Standing there and recalling the wonderful incidents of a great history, the scenes of an epochal life—scenes that changed the map of the world—we are reminded of Thomas Carlyle's reference to the birthplace of Martin Luther. "There was born here," said he, "once more a mighty man, whose light was to flame as the beacon over long centuries and epochs of the world; the whole world and its history were waiting for this man. It is strange, it is great. It leads us back to another birth-hour in a still meaner environment eighteen hundred years ago; of which it is fit that we say nothing; that we think only in silence; for what words are there? The age of miracles past? The age of miracles is forever here." William Carey has left the Church the lesson of a dauntless faith united with the profoundest humility.

In this company of God's great missionary worthies is a man of short stature, well-knit frame, nervous movement, fiery nature, open-handed and open-hearted, and with an energy that seemed never to have had a suggestion of weariness. The father of Wesleyan foreign missions, his zeal for the world's conquest has won for him the title of "the foreign minister of Methodism." That man is Thomas Coke. No knightlier soul ever obeyed the trumpet call of God or wielded with braver arm

"A two edged sword
Of heavenly temper keen."

His ardent desire for the world's conquest was voiced in his own loud exclamation: "I want the wings of an angel and the voice of a trumpet, that I may preach the gospel in the east and in the west, in the north and in the south!"

His life has all the fascination of a tale of chivalry. He crossed the Atlantic eighteen times at his own expense, and traveled up and down this new world preaching the gospel, with all the fiery earnestness of a prophet of the olden time. He gave his large patrimonial estate to the cause of Christian missions. A veteran of more than sixty years, he stood before the Wesleyan Conference and begged that he might be sent as a missionary to India.

He overruled all objection, chartered a vessel at a cost of $30,000, secured a few fellow-laborers, and sailed for India, but died on hoard the vessel and was buried in the wide and boundless sea. Before starting he remarked: "I am dead to all things but India." At Porstmouth he thus addressed the little group of brave spirits who were to accompany him: "Here we all are before God, six missionaries and two dear sisters, now embarked in the most important and glorious work in the world! Glory be to his blessed name that he has given you to be my companions and assistants in carrying the gospel to the poor Asiatics!" Thomas Coke has left the Church this lesson: a divine impatience for the salvation of the world.

There was Henry Martyn, an honor graduate of Cambridge, as frail as a flower, but as heroic a soul as ever led the hosts of God to battle. He went to India, preached like a seraph, translated the Bible into three different languages, traveled over many lands, and died when only thirty years of age. Christ crucified was his ruling passion, and he seemed to have unbroken communion with God.

"The thought of God
Filled him with infinite joy; his craving soul
Dwelt on his as a feast."

The burden of Christless souls was ever on his great heart. He cries out: "How dreadful the reflection that any should perish who might have been saved by my exertions!" At Dinapore we find this in his diary of a single day: "Morning in Sanskrit; afternoon Bahar dialect; continued late at night writing on parables in Bengali: The wickedness and cruelty of wasting a moment when so many nations are waiting till I do my work." His thirtieth birthday found him traveling on foot to Persia. He was pale, very emaciated, and too weak to speak except in a whisper. He lived only by force of his imperial soul. In his journal he says: "I am now at the age when the Saviour of men began his ministry; when John the Baptist called a nation to repentance. Let me now think for myself and act with energy. Hitherto I have made my youth and insignificance an excuse for sloth and imbecility; now let me have a character and act for God." Shortly thereafter the exhausted saint sunk down and never rose again. In a far-away missionary grave he sleeps, while God's good angels keep loving and wakeful sentry. The lesson of Henry Martyn's life is perfect self-renunciation in a compassionate love for mankind.

Here Martyn lies! In manhood's early bloom
The Christian hero found a pagan tomb!
Religion, sorrowing o'er her favorite son,
Points to the glorious trophies which he won.
Eteranl trophies, not with slaughter red,
Not stained with tears by hopeless captives shed,
But trophies of the Cross. For that dear name,
Through every form of danger, death, and shame,
Onward he journeyed to a happier shore,
Where danger, death, and shame are known no

At a Methodist Annual Conference in session at Norfolk, Va., with Bishop Hedding in the chair, a young man was sitting modestly in his place eagerly watching the proceedings, pale, sad, and evidently making a heroic fight against moral disease. He had recently buried his fair young wife, and his own failing health had compelled him to leave his work and spend the harsh winter months in the far South. But in his brilliant eye there was the spirit of heroic daring, and in his great heart the quenchless fires of a passionate love for souls. That young man was Melville B. Cox. He sought an interview with the Bishop, and said: "I desire very much to be sent as a missionary to South America." "Why not to Liberia?" asked the Bishop, who had been trying to secure a man for that far-away and dangerous field. After a prayerful pause, he replied: "If the Lord will, I think I will go." Shortly thereafter he said: "Liberia is swallowing up my thoughts." A few days later he exclaimed: "I thirst to be on the way. A grave in Africa will be sweet to me if He sustains me." Writing to an intimate friend, he said :"If it please God that my bones shall lie in an African grave, I shall have established such a bond between Africa and the Church at home as shall not be broken until Africa be redeemed." And that prophecy is being fulfilled. The missionary's heroic grave has bound the heart of the evangelical Church to the Dark Continent. When the young hero lay dying with the African fever, he repeated with pallid lips the eloquent words he had uttered before leaving America: "Though a thousand fall, let not Africa be given up." Melville Cox has left this lesson as a glorious legacy to the Church—that love for Christless souls is stronger than love of life.

Among all the sons of the mighty there is no nobler figure than David Livingstone. A native of Scotland, converted at twenty, and for forty years a missionary in Africa, he worthily sleeps in Westminster Abbey amid the "bonny dust" of the United Kingdom. He prepared for work in China, but was providentially directed to Africa. When consulted by the London Missionary Society as to what field he preferred, he said: "I am ready to go anywhere, provided only it be forward." His last public utterance in his native Scotland was to a school, and these were his concluding words: "Fear God and work hard." That was the inspiring motto of his laborious life. As either explorer, traveler, geographer, astronomer, botanist, zoologist, physician, or missionary, he would have been among the most distinguished of men. He added to the known regions of the world a million square miles. His labors knew no bounds. When entreated to rest, he replied: "Death alone will put a stop to my efforts." So deep and pure was his piety that savages trusted him, the world admired him, and his friends almost adored him. When we think of this man, decorated by geographical and scientific societies, offered the freedom of great cities, publicly thanked by Queen and Parliament, sleeping on the coarse, damp grass, eating bird seed, roots, and African maize, forty times scorched with fever, his arm torn by the tooth of a lion, and all to serve and save the savage tribes of the Dark Continent, he stands out transfigured like one of the tall angels Isaiah saw next the throne of God. Three scenes in his noble life are most prominent and pathetic. First, when he turned away from his dear Mary's grave at Shapanga in 1860 to "find the only balm for his broken heart in seeking Africa's redemption;" second, when in 1863 he expected recall from the field and his great heart protested, crying out, "If I am to go on the shelf, let that shelf be Africa;" and the third, when, though feeble and nearing the grave, he resisted Stanley's entreaties to return with him to England, bade his dear friend good-by, and turned back in the wilderness to labor for a while and die on his knees in prayer. David Livingstone has left the Church the lesson of an incarnated conscience.

But time would fail me to tell of Robert Morrison and James W. Lambuth, of Adoniram Judson, of James Calvert, of Robert Moffat, of J. W. Koger and R. W. MacDonell, of Dora Rankin and Laura Haygood and scores of others who have wrought righteously, and whose immortal achievements are written in the chronicles of the skies. Lord God of these ascended Elijahs, be our God and answer by fire!

My brethren, the conviction grows on me that momentous issues are before the Church. We are facing a wonderful tomorrow. Mighty changes are taking place in all Eastern countries and with marvelous rapidity. The sons of God, girded with new power, must be up and doing. If this transition period is slighted or unimproved, another century of sin and sorrow may be our condemnation.

A letter written by one of the returned missionaries attending this Conference, referring to a great work of grace in his charge and to the rapidly changing conditions in China, uttered these words, which have the quiver of power: "The kingdom is under the hammer, and the devil is an active bidder." What a figure—"under the hammer!" A mighty nation of four hundred million immortal souls on the block! The spiritual and political destiny of the oldest and largest empire of the world about to be knocked off to the highest bidder! My brethren, when I read those words from that warm-hearted and strong-souled missionary, I had a vision. I saw the day of sale when a mighty nation with a long history and almost infinite resources was about to change hands. The scene was in Peking the capital of the vast empire. The Genius of History, standing on the ruins of an old Buddhist temple, with the golden mace of authority in one hand and the blank form of a title deed in the other, acted as auctioneer. Around him gathered on one side the representatives of every false religion and every form of scepticism, while just behind them stood the great enemy, alert and eager, and full of fiendish suggestions lest the kingdom over which he has long held sway should slip from his grasp. On the other side were the representatives of the Christian Church, men and women of many names, but animated by the same spirit; and behind them stood the Lord Christ with divine anxiety, watching the result of the contest, waiting to see what his children will do with his inheritance, the priceless purchase of his blood. Over them hovered a great cloud of witnesses—the spirits of those who had toiled and suffered and died for the heathen of many lands. There were William Carey and Adoniram Judson, Thomas Coke and Dr. Duff, Melville Cox and David Livingstone, Robert Morrison and James W. Lambuth, Mrs. Judson and Dora Rankin, and a vast company I could not number, all bending low their eager ears to hear the final result. The Genius of History stated the terms of sale: It required a vast outlay in order to secure this magnificent possession, adjust it to new conditions, and garrison it against foreign invasion. It was a supreme hour, an hour on which eternal ages seem to hang. The representatives of the Christian Church had it in their glowing hearts to offer any terms, to call out the highest figures and claim the inheritance, but were afraid the Church would not indorse the purchase. Often they had appealed in vain for help in adding another province to the Lord's kingdom, and now in an agony of anxiety, knew not what to do. And just then, in that moment of awful suspense, the vision mercifully vanished. But, my dear brethren, the fact remains and the mighty responsibility abides. I believe it is in the power of the Church to secure that uttermost part of the earth for our Lord's possession. Shall we redeem that purchase of his blood or allow the devil to renew his lease for another mournful century? If we cannot do more, let us make the purchase and give bond for payment. Is there not another Wilbur Fisk who will rise up in the majesty of a sublime faith and say: "I'll be bondsman for the Church?" The security on such a bond will never suffer; that paper will never go to protest. The men and women are ready and eager to go, and I believe the means will not be withheld. Heaven grant that Zion may be equal to her sublime opportunity!

AN INCIDENT

By Rev. James H. Felts

Recently while aboard a slow train in Mississippi I "listened in" to a conversation between two men who were passengers on the same train. It was at least interesting. One of the men was good-naturedly quizzing the other about what he was doing, how he was succeeding, and the like, and laughing in a significant way at the replies. The following reply taken in long hand is a sample:

"Nothing don't bother me. If the sun don't rise in the morning I don't care. The future means nothing to me. I work and have a good time. When I die I can't help it. The world is in a hell-uv-a-shape. I wish somebody would give me something. I ain't got no credit. My family? I send them something when I win. When I lose I don't."

There was much more of the same kind. Nor was this man in dress or appearance to be classed as a "down and out." He was a typical present-day wanderer. His philosophy had in it nothing new. What have we to offer such a man? Certain it is that ordinary "uplift," something on the order of the civic clubs, will be in vain. Equally certain is it that he is too far gone for any educational system to reach him. That man, like thousands of others, needs Jesus Christ and Him alone. What does he care about a finished sermon? Would your choir ever help him? I am of the opinion that his kind will never be reached short of prayer and fasting. We have about lost our yearning for souls. The intense personal worker who is broken-hearted because of the unsaved is scarcely known among us now. I believe this man may be saved. I believe my Lord can make today, tomorrow, and all the days to come, meaningful for such a man. And his family? God pity them. They also sorely need a Shepherd.

MISSION WORK IN NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT

By Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., D.D., Presiding Elder

That part of the Louisiana Conference in which the Board of Missions is doing work represents a very large and important field for missionary operations. Rev. G. D. Parker of Brazil, a native of New Orleans, said in the preachers' meeting here during a visit in 1930 that he considered this city to be one of the greatest mission fields in the world. The same is true of the regions in Louisiana immediately surrounding the city of New Orleans. This field is of great importance. There are large numbers of people here who are in as great spiritual darkness as those who live in any of the mission fields of the world. They are without God and without hope in the world. Their souls need salvation. Also we have here a large body of population that is native to our land, but foreign in speech and in standard and manner of life. Their standards are not up to those usually held by Protestant peoples and have a most disastrous effect on the lives of many Protestant people residing here. This influence touches the entire State of Louisiana and also affects some sections of the surrounding States.

With the same problems and responsibilities to be met that are to be found in all other Conferences, the Louisiana Conference has these additional problems. Here we have the largest distinctively Southern city in our connection. The population of New Orleans is largely foreign. The foreign element dominates the life of the city and is controlled by Romanism. There are great masses of unchurched people in this city and many large sections where protestantism is not at work. Our churches here have carried on a noble struggle in the past to establish and to maintain themselves. Their people give sacrificially and have responded nobly to the call of the presiding elder and the City Board of Missions for making advance movements here. But the are yet large unoccupied sections into which we should go as a church. The Louisiana Conference has never been able to enter the French field in this State in an adequate manner. There are towns of thousands of people into which we have not been able to go. There are multiplied thousands living along the bayous and in the marshes without any religious advantages whatsoever. Beside these there are many in the rural sections whose religion is a religion of superstition and fear. We must still appeal to the Board of Missions and to the Church at large to carry forward the work that has already been begun.

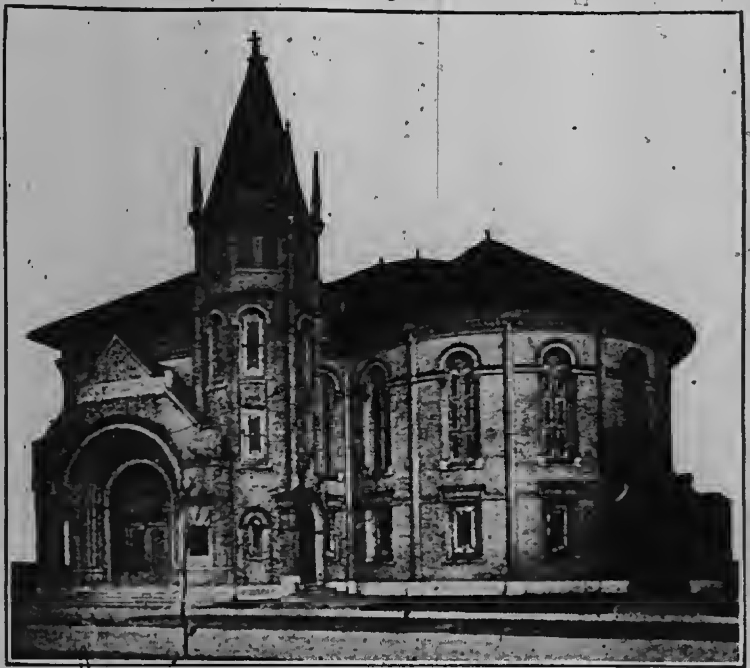
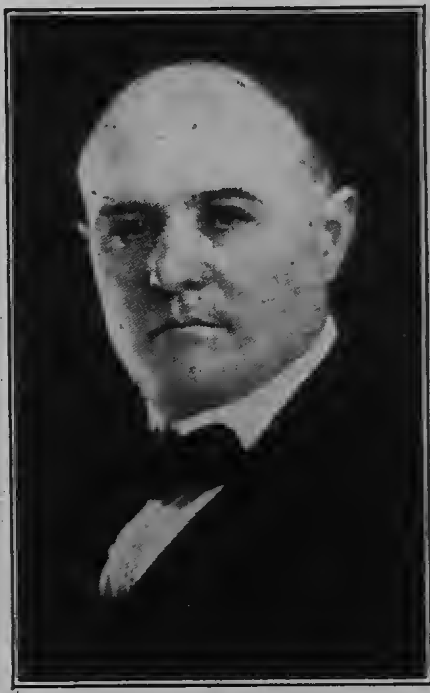
The work of the Board farthest west and from New Orleans is that centering at St. Martinville. Here it is claimed that Evangeline lies buried hard by the Roman Church. This is a town of about twenty-five hundred people. Our missionary is the only white Protestant preacher in this town and in the parish of St. Martin. But his work is not confined to this point. He also has charge of a rural church in Iberia parish, some twelve miles or so from the large town of New Iberia. This is the Lydia church, which is our oldest French church. There they preach, sing and pray in French. This church has the same problems faced by every other rural church together with the problem of facing a dominant and militant Romanism with a strong congregation in the community. Then the St. Martinville pastor is charged with the pastoral responsibility of a church located on Pecan Island in Vermillion Parish. This congregation is now in the process of erecting a new building at a cost of $1,000. This point is reached by a boat trip of about fifty miles down the bayou, through lakes and the marsh. There are 150 members in this charge and four Sunday schools with 140 members.



FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, THE COUNCIL CHURCH

Another charge being aided by the Board of Missions is the Patterson charge, which is composed of Patterson, Berwick and Jeanerette. These are three towns of importance with large Roman Catholic populations and struggling groups of Protestant people. The continued life of this charge is made possible only by the help that comes from the Board of Missions. There are 215 members of the Church and three Sunday schools with 126 members. There are also three Epworth Leagues with 69 members.

Morgan City is the center of missionary endeavor reaching out into the bayous and surrounding country. A splendid work was done during last year. While the Roman Catholic Church is also strong here, yet there are thousands of unchurched people who are not dominated by Romanism and who look largely to our Church for religious ministrations. It is not possible for one man to look after the work in the town of Morgan City, preaching twice on each Sunday and conducting weekly prayer meeting, and then also doing the outside work that should be done here. The boat is several years old and will soon need to be replaced by a new one. We need a much larger boat and also a full-time man to go among the people in the bayous and marshes here. On this charge there are 477 members in the church and a Sunday school membership of 126. Many of the people in this region are able to read neither French or English and hence the Sunday school work is limited. Last year thirty-eight were received on profession and six by certificate. A number of people came into our Church from the Roman Catholic Church.



REV. W. G. CRAM, D.D., MISSIONARY SECTY.

Our chief work among the French centers about the town of Houma, where we have a good church and where the MacDonnell Wesley House and school is located. The pastor here has two French-speaking junior preachers, both of whom have come into our Church through our work here. There are nine congregations served by this work. All except three of these congregations are almost entirely French-speaking. The church at Houma is largely so, though the services there are conducted in English. There are seven church buildings in the charge and two parasonages. One of these is owned by hte Board of Missions. The workers at the Wesley House and School do a very great work in the outlying sections about Houma. During the past year our workers have been very greatly hampered by weather conditions and bad roads. Under the leadership of Brother B. H. Andrews, preacher-in-charge, and Brother A. D. Martin, one of the junior preachers, a new church has been erected in one of the communities. This is the culmination of several years' effort on the part of different ones who have had to do with this work.

In this charge, there are 592 members. There are six Sunday schools with an enrollment of 422. There are three Epworth Leagues with 93 members and six missionary societies with 53 members. During the past year there have been 31 members received on profession and 20 by certificate.

Another charge being supported by the Board of Missions is the Delta Circuit and Chalmette Mission. This includes Reserve, forty miles above the city of New Orleans, a mission in the city and points at the mouth of the Mississippi, where live the engineers and others having charge of the jetties, the buoys, lighthouses and other such work. These points are about one hundred miles below the city of New Orleans. Within this charge there are 140 members in the five organized congregations, where we had none at all a few years ago. There is but one church building. Last year 25 were received on profession and 16 by certificate. There are four Sunday schools with 110 members.

One other point is outside New Orleans. This is Pointe-a-la-Hache, sixty miles below the city and parish seat of Plaquemines parish. We have a small organization who own a lot, but have no building. Services are held in a private home. Ours is the only Protestant work of any sort below the city of New Orleans. Statistics are not available, is this point was with the Louisiana Avenue Church last year and the statistics are included in those of the charge.

The new city enterprise in connection with the Louisiana Avenue Church during last year has gone forward under the leadership of the pastor of that church and of the City Board of Missions. This is in an important section of the city and has resulted in the organization of a Sunday school of some seventy odd members and in services being held twice on Sunday and on a week night. No church has yet been organized, but there are applications of some thirty-five who want to be formed into an organization which will be done soon.

The work at St. Mark's Church and Community Center is supported by the Woman's Council as well as by the Board of Missions. Here is carried on a varied program of social activities and of religious effort which is having a telling effect on that section of the great foreign population in New Orleans. There are 179 members of the church, 184 in the Sunday school, 52 in the two Epworth Leagues and 19 in the Missionary Society.

All this great work in Louisiana is entirely dependent upon the Board of Missions and could not be carried on without the help of that Board. There are yet large fields to enter into which it has been impossible for us to go.

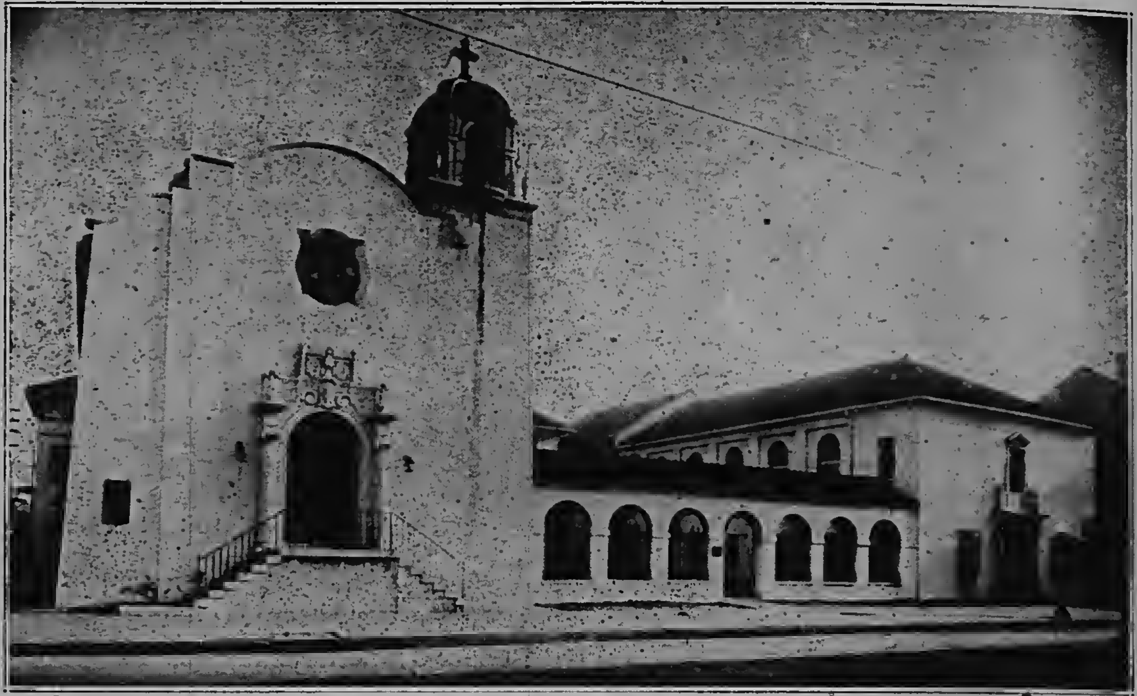
ST. MARK'S CHURCH

By Rev. J. A. Alford, Pastor

St. Mark's is the outstanding Missionary enterprise of our Church in the South, where many angles of church activities are carried on in the interest of humanity. It is the realization of a dream of devout women of the Woman's Missionary Society twenty years ago, who loved God more than self, and yearned over the lost. In a limited way they began to do specific missionary work in these parts. The handicaps under which the work was done in those days is left to be told by the few workers on the field.

The present location of St. Mark's is 1130 North Rampart Street, in that part of the city of New Orleans which includes the quaint old historic section known as the "Vieux Carre." Here live some 30,000 inhabitants of varied nationalities, many of them in densely congested quarters.

REV. J. A. ALFORD



ST. MARK'S METHODIST CHURCH AND COMMUNITY CENTER

Those who have known of and kept up with the progress of the years have with pride and joy noted the growth of the work, where no small amount of means and consecrated service have been centered and expended. It stands today, said competent critics, to be one of the most complete plants of its kind in America, a monument to faith, an expression of sacrifice, and the realization of dreams.

The work that is being done includes almost everything to be done for the relief, comfort and well-being of soul and body, to young and old. Those who have been this way in service know what it means to listen to the stories of broken and wasted lives, the distress of deserted mothers left with helpless children, hear the wails of the addicts, and the pleas of those out of work and in need. While this phase of our work entails great responsibilities, and creates burdens heavy to bear, the teaching and the training of the young life that is touched by the many angles of work being done through the Church proper and the Community Center, unfolds the greater opportunity, and brings much of joy to the heart of the workers, especially as they note the unfolding of the life Godward in response to the appeal made and the effort put forth.

Each of our resident deaconnesses, five in number, and our part-time older boys worker, do a distinctive part of the church work proper, which corresponds to the same age groups in which they work through the Community Center. Miss Nettie Stroup, head resident, works with the adult group; Miss Helen Shriner with the young people, Miss Maggie Marshall with the intermediates, Miss Wortley Moorman, our resident nurse, with the primary; Miss Lillian Addison with the juniors, and Mr. P. L. McCreary, Tulane medical student, part-time worker with the older boys, and clinic laboratory interne. All of these are trained and equipped for their tasks, giving to the Church and to Christ their all. Each has her or his separate group with whom to work, but when the occasion demands it, all, including the pastor and wife, our devoted church workers, and even our faithful old janitor, Jules Cantrell, enter into the work to be done, and co-operate in a harmonious way and with a beautiful spirit in helping to "carry on" in the name of Christ and humanity.

Our church is well organized with a complete corps of officers, and every department is being carried on in a normal way, though not in large numbers. Much is being done for the well-being of our adult constituency, but the hope of the future of our work is in the large number of promising young people and children, some of whom already, because of years of training, are rendering most valuable service to the work of the Community Center and the church proper. Our church membership of 183, Sunday school 150, Senior and Hi Epworth Leagues 60, Junior Epworth Society 35, and Woman's Missionary Society 20, many of whom count in more than one department, are but a part of those who are touched by the institution, through the clinic, various clubs and classes, and receive ministries and help in some way or other by the work being carried on. Records in the church and in its immediate departments, by no means tell the story of all that is being done. We must bear in mind that in some places where the church does its work it requires a great deal more of time, means and service to reclaim, win and train than it does in others.

In writing about "What St. Mark's has meant to me" (and this is typical of many others) one young lady says, "To me St. Mark's reveals itself in an opportunity to every girl and boy, man and woman. It has been the pathway by which I have found happiness, friendship, pleasure and most of all, I have learned to reach God through prayer, which comes so freely from the heart. The institution may be compared to a fountain, wherefrom all are welcome to drink the waters of health, pleasure, friendship, happiness, and knowledge of God. I have drunk of these waters and know their good results, and many others have been as fortunate as I." Such messages would hearten the most dispairing worker and inspire the most fainthearted to a deeper consecration for those who need a Saviour.

DEACONESS NETTIE STROUP

Through the leadership of Miss Nettie Stroup, who, in her training majored in pageantry, and spent a Christmas in Bethlehem, many of our young people have taken a great deal of interest in dramatic art. We have had given at our church some of the most inspiring messages on Christmas, Easter and Missions through these attractive and appealing pageants. Through this medium, those who take part are blessed as well as to bring joy to others in producing Bible stories in a very real and natural way.

From the institutional side of St. Mark's, the types of work carried on are Health, Recreation, and Educational. The health work is done through a well-equipped clinic, directed by our nurse and a staff of competent physicians, who give many hours of their valuable time in professional service. More than 4,000 treatments are given each year. The educational and recreational activities consist of such as, The Home-makers' Club, composed of adult women of the community; the Young Women's Business Club, composed of working girls, the Girl Reserves, three Triangles for different age groups, Sewing and Domestic Science Classes, two Athletic clubs and troop of Boy Scouts for the older boys, and a Junior club for the younger boys. All these clubs and classes have access at regular season and times to the swimming pool, gymnasium, game rooms, shower baths, etc., with entertainments, banquets, and many specials.

A library is maintained in the institution, containing upwards of 1,000 books, by standard writers, and some of the leading magazines, all wholesome literature, and very much used by the boys and girls, men and women of the community.

Immediately following the closing of school in the summer, a Daily Vacation Bible School is held for one month. Here scores of children who otherwise roam the streets and alleys in unwholesome idleness and degrading amusements are kept busy with worth-while programs consisting of games, handwork, and stories both from the Bible and other sources. In this way little hands are trained to do interesting tasks, make useful articles, and youthful minds are taught beautiful stories of life and clean living.

In all the activities of the institution a skilled hand and a trained heart and mind guides. Whatever it is, wherever, whenever, and whoever, the standard of life given us by the Man of Galilee is the basis for action. With the high standard of deportment upheld, sometimes it means the sacrifice of some present. But all the while the work is growing, numbers increase, and demands more and greater.

There is never any time to hang heavy on the hands of those who are assigned to do service here. To come to the close of the day with tired bodies and burdened hearts is not strange here. But the glorious opportunity for service that comes fresh with each morning, fires the lover of humanity with new strength for the day.

Come to see us if you can, but don't forget to pray for us.

POINTE-A-LA-HACHE MISSION

By Rev. D. W. Poole, Pastor

Fifty miles below New Orleans, situated on the east bank of the Mississippi river, surrounded by what the natives call the prairies, lies the village of Pointe-a-la-Hache.

The occupation of these few hundred that live in the town and the several hundred others that live up and down the river is chiefly trapping during the winter months and fishing and trucking during the other months.

This Methodist mission is the only Protestant mission between New Orleans and Pointe-a-la-Hache, which in itself makes it a very unique and important fact. The three main buildings of this vilage are a courthouse, a public school building and the Roman Catholic church.

Passing by these public buildings and getting on the lower side of the town we come to the home of Mrs. A. H. Labourg, a widow with four sons. This type of home reminds us of the ones into which Jesus visited while on earth and where He found a blessed welcome. Indeed His spirit is at home in the heart and home of this good lady as it is the home for public worship. She did not give one of her side rooms for this important work, but as all true Christians feel, she has nothing too good for that cause, and the front room is used as the church. A pulpit with a large Bible placed upon it, the benches, the hymn books, the sacred pictures are all arranged so as to create a spirit of worship.

The beginning of this little Methodist mission was in the heart of the lady already mentioned who has been a faithful Christian and Methodist for many years. The fire and love was in her heart and fire and love spreads and grasps others with their power. A few years ago after moving here from a neighboring place and feeling a great hunger for worship and a desire for her sons and neighbors to have the gospel, she appealed to her church for service, which it immediately met.

There are at present only eight members of the Methodist church, but this year's attendance has been an average of about thirty, with many fine young people present. Much has been accomplished in so short a while, as they have Sunday school every Sunday, and already they have a nice lot of ground given by Mrs. Labourg for the building of a new church.

The field is open and the harvest is waiting. The responsive looks when the gospel is given is indeed an indication that once they know Him they love Him.

REV. DAVID TARVER

DELTA AND CHALMETTE MISSIONS

By Rev. David Tarver, Pastor

My parish, like Wesley's, is long, stretching one hundred fifty miles up and down the great "Father of Waters" from New Orleans. In New Orleans, our Mission on Desire Street is in the most populous ward in the city in a Roman and Lutheran field. My other work leads me into varying atmospheres, including that of the sugar chemist, the river and bar pilot, the government river and radio engineers, trappers, shrimp and oyster fishermen, orange and pecan growers and other fabulously interesting glimpses in Old Louisiana. I have traveled a sum total of thousands of miles by train, bus, car and boat. My task is to radiate the light and warmth of the gospel in places where I am the only Protestant minister and to beings who thirst for these good things.

GENTILLY MISSION CHURCH

By Rev. I. W. Flowers, Pastor

For a number of years there has been a real need for a Methodist church in Gentilly, but it was not until the spring of 1929 that any definite steps were taken to start a mission in that section. At that time a group of Methodist, under the direction of Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., started holding prayer meetings every Friday night in the home of Mrs. L. W. Pigott. In the following fall this faitful and loyal group organized themselves into the "Gentilly Methodist Club."

At the meeting of the Annual Conference in the fall of 1929 Rev. J. B. Shearer was appointed to the work in Gentilly. The prayer meetings were continued under his leadership until the summer of 1930. In June 1930 the City Board of Missions rented a house and opened the Gentilly mission with Rev. Shearer as pastor. Services were held every Sunday morning by the pastor and every Sunday evening by laymen. The mission grew rapidly. A splendid Sunday school was organized.

In the fall of 1930 the present pastor was appointed pastor of the mission. With the help of Dr. R. S. Crichlow, president of the City Board of Missions, and a number of enthusiastic workers in the mission, the work continued to grow. On Sunday, February 1, the mission was organized into the Gentilly Methodist Church, with 36 members. The church expects to increase its membership to at least one hundred before the close of the year. The Sunday school is doing a wonderful work under the leadership of Mrs. L. W. Pigott. The enrollment is 79.

There are great possibilities in this new and growing section of the great city of New Orleans. There is no reason why we should not have a great church in Gentilly and we believe that we will have it.

SUCCESS OF THE NATCHEZ MISSION

By Rev. J. B. Cain

When Bishop Francis Asbury, itinerant bishop of the Methodist Church in America, missionary in spirit and evangelistic in action, turned his eyes toward the vast territory along the lower Mississippi it was but natural that he should select Natchez as the center from which Tobias Gibson should go out to proclaim the gospel according to the beliefs and customs of the people called Methodist. Natchez was the oldest and the largest city in the territory to be served. While younger than Biloxi and Mobile, Natchez was about the same age as New Orleans and much older than Vicksburg. Honorable Dunbar Rowland, State Historian of Mississippi, in his introduction of Shield's history, says: "While the first settlement was at Old Biloxi, all the noteworthy events in its history from 1720 to 1820 took place within a radius of ten miles of Natchez. It was the social, political, and educational center of the State for a century.'"

At the South Carolina Conference, meeting in Charleston on January 1, 1799, Bishop Asbury selected Tobias Gibson for this important mission. The latter was a native of South Carolina, born on the Great Pedee River in what was then called Liberty County on November 10, 1771. His parents were people of the better class, having considerable property. Whether they were Methodists or not seems not to be known, but they were Protestants and Tobias was converted under

THE LENTEN SEASON

Yesterday was Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, a forty-day season of special prayer and penitence, examination and meditation. For hundreds of years different branches of the Church have observed the forty-day period prior to Easter as a time of self-denial and spiritual devotion.

Noncomformist Churches have not made as much of the Lenten Season as have the Roman Catholics. Methodism is finding more and more that it is an appropriate season for toning up the spiritual life and earnestly seeking to bring the lost to Christ, particularly is it true of the sacred days of Passion Week. Every day we are privileged to live is a sacred day, but it is fitting that we retrieve the Season the Man of Sorrows went deeper and deeper into the "shadow of the valley of death." They are not days for cant phrases and mere ritual reading, but a time for a closer walk with Him and a pursuasive pleading with the lost to accept His grace.

After sharing with Christ the "fellowship of his suffering and the power of his resurrection," Christian experience should continue on such a high level as to make all the days a more effective witnessing for Christ; and when forty days have passed to lapse back into hilarious frivolity and extravagant indulgence would be a sacrilege.

METHODISM IN NEW ORLEANS

Methodism is making progress in New Orleans. All the hardships endured and sacrifices made, by the pioneer preachers who opened the work, have been justified. Elisha Bowman, Lewis Hoobs, William Winans, Mark Moore, Benjamin M. Drake, Samuel W. Spear, Elijah Steele, and John Maffit, though finding it difficult, laid well the foundations of the Church. John G. Jones wrote, "Never perhaps in any civilized community have the Methodists had to grapple with greater and more formidable difficulties in establishing a well-ordered and respectable church than in the city of New Orleans."

It is a long ways from the combined dwelling-place church and school of William Winans on Bienville Street, the first building on Gravier, and then Poydras and Carondelet, to the splendid edifices of the present day.

There are twelve well organized churches with 4,311 members in the city. The work is carried on by a forward-looking presiding elder and competent and consecrated pastors. The odds with which they have to contend being taken into consideration, they are going forward in an encouraging way.

New Orleans continues to be a difficult field. It's a strategic center for Methodism, and we hope that those attending the General Missionary Council will become immediately enlisted in behalf of an enlarged establishment for Methodism here, where the nations of the world meet.

As result of the first General Missionary Conference held here thirty years ago, Soochow University in China was set on its way to greater usefulness; while we would not wish the foreign work to receive any less, we would press the church-wide responsibility for New Orleans. The city needs now several new church buildings, a general hospital, and improved facilities and increased support for the Memorial Mercy Home.

We most cordially welcome the Missionary Council, Press Association and visitors and earnestly call "come over and help us."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. Alonzo Early, pastor at Belcher, La., in sending in a renewal, wrote, "All goes forward on this charge." We thank Brother Early for his plans to complete the Advocate canvass.

Rev. J. W. Booth, pastor, Winnsboro, La., has not forgotten the Advocate. In sending a list of subscriptions he wrote, "Last Sunday was a great day for us here at Winnsboro. The outlook is promising."

Rev. R. S. Lawson, one of the superannuated preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, who resides in Memphis, with Mrs. Lawson, attended the Sardis District Preachers' Association, which met at Coldwater recently.

Mrs. Lee H. Bird, Sicily Island, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate wrote, "I have been reading this paper ever since I was a child and I love it more and more as the years go by."

Rev. J. C. Wasson, of Marks, Miss., is doing more than marking time on his new charge. He is following the Spiritual Life Commission's suggestion for an evangelistic program, and is not overlooking the interest of the Advocate.

Rev. Murry Cox, pastor, Wesley Memorial, Biloxi, Miss., is going about his work in a determined way. He is teaching "Methodism and Kingdom Extension" in his churches and expects to get good results from the cultivation.

Rev. C. H. Ellis, superannuate, Camden, Miss., continues to have a live interest in all the affairs of the Church. His health is good and his strength abides, so that he is ready to render whatever service the brethren may call him to do.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, dean of the Department of Science, at Millsaps College, delivered an address at Tylertown on Sunday, January 25. Dr. Sullivan is active in the work of lay activities and gives himself without reserve to the work of his church.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, of Natalbany, La., was a visitor at the Advocate office last week and we regret being out of the city at the time. Brother Hoffpauir was down to visit Mrs. Clyde J. Burns, who is ill at the Touro Infirmary. He reports his work doing well at Natalbany.

Mr. T. T. Pollard, father of Miss Daisey Pollard, who has been a missionary to Mexico for several years, under the direction of the General Board of Missions of our Methodist Church, died recently at the ripe age of 83, at the family home in Batesville.

Angie, the cheerful little son of Dr. and Mrs. Angie Smith, First Church, Shreveport, is critically ill with pneumonia. We join the many other anxious ones in prayer that God will bless the means that are being used to the restoration of the little man's health.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference, in sending in his second round states that the work goes forward in his district and not withstanding some discouragements a year of progress is expected. We thank Brother Dorsey for his interest in the Advocate.

Mrs. E. L. Adams died at her home in Greensburg, La., on Monday, January 26. Mrs. Adams was a faithful member of the Methodist Church and will be missed in the activities to which she gave her talent and time. Rev. W. D. Milton, pastor, assisted by Rev. C. T. Bowden, conducted the last rites.

Rev. J. F. Foster, of Bunkie, La., was the grand orator who delivered the address before the Louisiana Grand Lodge on Monday night, February 2. Those who were privileged to hear the grand orator spoke in highest terms of his deliverance. We appreciated a call from Brother Foster at the Advocate office on Tuesday, February 3.

Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor, West Point, Miss., and Mr. L. J. Howard, Jr., brought good cheer to the manager and editor by sending in a list of fifteen subscriptions with a check, which makes a list of forty-one families in that enterprising church who get the Advocate. We wish for them every good success.

Rev. John C. Chambers is to be congratulated upon arranging the Circuit Preachers' Conference which is to be held at Millsaps College, Thursday and Friday of next week, February 26-27. It is hoped that a large number of the brethren will avail themselves of this privilege afforded them.

Rev. Roy Wolfe, pastor, Hansboro, Miss., has started what seems to be the best year of his pastorate in that growing opportunity. In a business letter to the office he writes, "I am glad to report that the work on the Hansboro-Nugent charge is moving along nicely; the people received us cordially on our return. We have organized a Wesley Brotherhood, which is doing splendid work and interest is growing."

Rev. R. G. Lord, executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education for the North Mississippi Conference, preached at the morning 11 o'clock service Sunday, February 15, at Batesville. It was from the Batesville church, where Bro. Lord had been pastor two years that he went into the work of the Board of Christian Education at the last session of the Conference. He was welcomed by a large congregation.

A telegram from Brother W. B. Owen to the editor announced the death of his wife, which occurred at Leeds, Ala., Wednesday, February 11. The funeral and interment was at Leeds on Friday. Mrs. Owen was born near Kosciusko, Miss., and after marriage she and Brother Owen moved to Osyka, Miss., where they were active and loyal members of our church there. Mississippi friends recall with appreciation the excellent Christian character of Mrs. Owen and extend sympathy to the bereaved husband.

The Christian Century of Chicago erroneously stated that "The Southern Methodists have recalled two hundred of their missionaries and have dismissed hundreds of native workers." Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of our Board of Missions, says that the statement of the Christian Century "is unwarranted and unauthorized. We have made no recall of missionaries nor have we dismissed any native workers." Let us sacrificially meet the Kingdom Extension Asking so that all missionaries may continue at their posts.

Rev. T. C. Cooper, pastor, Pachuta, Miss., in the first two months of his first year, has accomplished a great amount of good in his new charge. The church building at Pachuta was in an unsafe condition and they have repaired it at an approximate cost of $1,800 and made it comfortable and secure. Brother Cooper says, "We are hoping to be able to put on the full program of the church and are asking an interest in the prayers of all Christian people, that the Lord will add his blessings to our efforts."

The Methodist church building at Utica, Miss., was destroyed by fire Sunday morning, February 15. Rev. E. A. King is the pastor, and being in his fourth year is well acquainted with all the possibilities, and we doubt not this wide awake pastor will lead his people in erecting an adequate and creditable new building.

Louisiana and Mississippi Methodism will regret that Bishop Warren A. Candler has found it necessary to go to the Wesley Memorial Hospital, Atlanta, for treatment. Bishop Caandler has ren-Atlanta, for treatment. Bishop Candled has renwho know of his illness will sympathetically pray for the speedy and complete restoration of his health.

Mr. James H. Ramsey, New Albany, Miss., writes, "I trust every loyal Methodist in Mississippi and Louisiana will rally to the support of the grand old Advocate. I have been a subscriber forty years and I do not see how I could be satisfied without it. I have always enjoyed its weekly visit, but the longer I take it the more I appreciate reading it." We appreciate brother Ramsey's renewal and good words and trust that he will enjoy the Advocate many, many more years.

Mrs. G. R. Ruff, eighty-one years of age, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. P. Riser, Raymond, Miss., on January 24. The funeral services were held at Chapel Hill Methodist Church, near Chester, on the following Monday. Sister Ruff was a devout and faithful member of the Methodist Church. She is survived by Rev. Robert H. Ruff, D.D., president Central College, Fayette, Missouri; J. Ed. Ruff, Mississippi Agricultural Extension Agent; D. T. Ruff, Lexington; S. J. Ruff, Chester; Charles A. Ruff, Waco, Texas, and Mrs. Riser. President Ruff and the other loved ones will have the sympathy of their friends throughout the church in this great sorrow.

the preaching of Methodist itinerants and cast his lot with that Church. Having been licensed to preach before he was out of his 'teens he was admitted on trial into the South Carolina Conference on February 14, 1792, when only a little more than twenty years of age. Seven years of itinerant work were spent in North and South Carolina and East Tennessee before his coming to Mississippi. At the very Conference at which he was appointed to this mission his name appears in the minutes as having been appointed to the Little Pedee and Anson Circuit, in order, according to Rev. John G. Jones, Methodist historian, to allow time for winter to pass and to give him a safe journey. A greater probability is that the appointment was not made at the Annual Conference at all, but that Bishop Asbury, after the Conference was over, selected Mr. Gibson as the proper person for this important task. He was, of course, unmarried, and while he was never strong in body he was fervent in spirit and had an abundant measure of evangelistic zeal.

Leaving his home in early spring he rode a horse for about six hundred miles through the wilderness to the Cumberland River, near where Nashville now stands, and descended the river in a canoe into the Ohio and then into the Mississippi, arriving at Natchez in the spring of 1799. Whatever Tobias Gibson may have thought about apostolic succession, he must have felt his kinship with the Apostle Paul on that long and weary journey. It is probable that he did not come alone but joined himself with a flatboat for part of the journey.

The Natchez country was a fertile field for missionary effort. A large group of settlers had been coming into this section for many years and with the beginning of American occupancy in 1798 a flood tide of immigrants poured into Natchez and out into the surrounding country. Prominent among them were the Swayze brothers, Richard and Samuel, the latter a Congregational preacher who had come to the Jersey settlement, later called Kingston, in 1772, where he served his neighbors and friends as pastor under adverse circumstances until his death in 1784. The Griffing family, also from New Jersey, had settled near Selsertown, twelve miles from Washington on the Natchez Trace and formed a center of religious interest. A number of members of the Gibson family, including his brother Stephen, came to Mississippi either before this time or shortly afterward. His cousin, Samuel, was the owner of the land on which Port Gibson stands, to which he gave his name; and another cousin, Randal Gibson, was living in the vicinity of Washington when Tobias came.

PROTECTION

The first church was organized in the village of Washington, six miles from Natchez, soon after the arrival of the missionary. The services were held in a schoolhouse and six persons were received into the fellowship of the church. Their names, according to the historian Jones, were Randal Gibson and his wife, formerly Harriet McKenly; Caleb Worley; Mrs. Edna Bullen, sister of Randal Gibson; William Foster and Rachael, his wife, with two persons of color, both slaves. An old Bible, published in 1825, contains in part a different list: "The First Methodist Society was formed by Reverend Tobias Gibson in the house of Randle Gibson, of Adams County, Miss., in the year 1800. Members' names: Randle Gibson, Reuben Gibson, William Foster, Harriet Gibson, Mary Harris, Fanny Gibson, Edna Bullen, Robert Foster, Ann Dowling." This notation appears on the fly leaf and contains a difference in date, place, and some of the members' names.

Other churches were established by Mr. Gibson during the year at Kingston and Selsertown and no doubt at several other places. No doubt the missionary visited all the territory along the Mississippi as far north as Walnut Hills, now Vicksburg, and wherever he found enough folks who were willing and anxious to flee from the wrath to come they were formed into societies. For several years, at least as late as 1802, all of the churches were embraced in one pastoral charge with Randal Gibson and William Foster as stewards. The beginnings of Methodism in Wilkinson County, probably about Woodville and Fort Adams, in Claiborne County, and in the southern part of Warren County, date from this year.

Mr. Gibson did not attend the session of the South Carolina Conference, meeting again in Charleston on January 1, 1800. His report, however, showed that he had received a total number of sixty-two into the various societies that he had organized. He was reappointed to Natchez with Benjamin Blanton as his presiding elder. In the beginning of 1801 the first districts were formed and Natchez was placed in the Georgia District with Stith Mead as his presiding elder. The following year Natchez was in the Kentucky District of the Western Conference with William McKendree as presiding elder. Each year had seen an increase of twenty members from the sixty of the first year, so that at the end of 1801 there were a hundred members. At the session of the Western Conference in October, 1802, which Conference Mr. Gibson attended, there were only eighty-five white and two colored members, a decrease of fifteen.

At this Conference a new district was formed, called Cumberland, with John Page as presiding elder and four circuits: Nashville, Red River, Barren, and Natchez. Moses Floyd was appointed to help Tobias Gibson on the Natchez circuit. The following year the latter was given the supernumerary relation, which he sustained until his death on the fifth of April, 1803. He had labored and other men entered into his labors.

Any account of Methodism in the Natchez country must take into account such men as Lorenzo Dow, wandering evangelist; Newitt Vick, local preacher, in whose home the first Annual Conference was entertained, and a host of other worthy souls of whom the world was not worthy. Let it not be thought that Lorenzo Dow furnished only sensation and amusement for the pioneer settlers to whom he preached. Coming to Mississippi in 1803 and preaching in all the settlements where churches had been organized and many where they had not, he was no little help, though possibly sometimes an embarrassment, to the regular pastors. As the result of his efforts the first camp meeting south of Tennessee was held on Clear Creek, near Washington, and many of the staunchest Methodists of early days were his converts. He gave the bit of land for the church at Kingston and sold to the Methodists at Washington at a merely nominal price the lot on which the church was built in the Jefferson College campus.

Newitt Vick came to Jefferson County, from Virginia, where he had formerly been a member of the Conference, but sustained only a local relation to the church in Mississippi until his untimely death in 1819. During that time he was probably the most influential man in Mississippi Methodism.

What shall be said on the subject, namely the success of the Natchez mission? Shall we take the meager reports of those few years, or shall we take the large contribution that this section has made to Methodism in the one hundred and thirty years that have passed since that time? Out from this Natchez mission has gone the far-flung battle line of Methodism into all parts of Mississippi, to Alabama, New Orleans and other sections of Louisiana, Texas, and West Florida. In the immediate territory of the original Natchez circuit are thousands of Methodists and in the territory to which these have gone tens of thousands.

From His Diary

Oh ye gods, why should, my poor restless heart
Stand to oppose your might and power,
At last surrendered to Cupid's feather'd dart,
And now lays bleeding every hour
For her that's pitiless of my grief and woes,
And will not on my pity take
He sleeps amongst my most inveterate foes,
And with gladness never wish to wake.
In deluding sleeping let my eyelids close,
That in an enraptured dream I may
In a soft, lulling sleep and gentle repose
Possess those joys denied by day.

By your bright sparkling eyes I was undone;
Rays you have, more transparent than the sun;
Amidst its glory in the rising day
None can you equal in your bright array;
Constant in your calm and unspotted mind;
Equal to all, but will to none prove kind,
So knowing, seldom one so young, you'll find,.
Ah! woe's me, that I should love and conceal.
Long have I wish'd, but never dared reveal,
Even though severely love's pains I feel;
Xerxes the great was not free from Cupid's dart,
And all the greatest heroes felt the smart.

WASHINGTON'S WEDDING

Colorful Description of Brilliant Assemblage; George and Martha's Wedding Garments are Described

By H. O. Bishop

One of the most important weddings in the history, of this country was staged on January 6, 1759, one hundred and seventy-two years ago last month.

It was the wedding of Col. George Washington and Mrs. Martha Custis. George Washington was then a young army officer and was held in high esteem by the Governor, and by all of the leading men of the Colony of Virginia. Despite the fact that he was only 27 years of age, he was already a leader among men.

His bride was a beautiful young widow, eight months his senior, and unusually wealthy for that period.

It is strange and regrettable that so little authentic information has been handed down to us concerning this popular marriage. One of the few definite things that is known about the event is that the knot was tied by Rev. David Mossom, who, for forty years, was rector of the neighboring parish of St. Peter's. But whether they were married in St. Peter's Church or at the home of the bride. the White House, in New Kent County, still remains unknown. Historians differ on this subject. Such famous writers as Washington Irving, Bishop Meade and B. J. Lossing say the festivities took place at the home of the happy widow. On the other hand, such writers as Worthington Ford and Henry Cabot Lodge declare the "love, honor and obey" words were uttered in St. Peter's Church. At any rate, they were married—there is no doubt about that fact.

George Washington Parke Custis, the grandson of Mrs. Washington, in writing about his grandmother's wedding, said he had heard much about the affair "from gray-haired domestics who waited at the board where love made the feast and Washington was the guest. And rare and high was the revelry, at that palmy period of Virginia's festal age; for many were gathered to that marriage, of the good, the great, the gifted, and the gay, while Virginia, with joyous acclamation, hailed in her youthful hero a prosperous and happy bridegroom."

In her life of Washington's mother, Mrs. Pryor tells us that Martha's wedding gown was thus described by one of the guests: "A white satin quilt, over which a heavy white silk, interwoven with threads of silver, was looped back with white satin ribbons, richly brocaded in a leaf pattern. Her bodice was of plain satin, and the brocade was fastened on the bust with a stiff butterfly bow of ribbon. Delicate lace finished the low, square neck. There were close elbow sleeves revealing a puff and frill of lace. Strings of pearls were woven in and out of her powdered hair. Her high-heeled slippers were of white satin, with brilliant buckles."

The newlyweds spent their honeymoon at Williamsburg, then the capital of Virginia, where the young husband served as a member of the House of Burgesses. They occupied a house which was owned by the bride. Here they received the various Colonial dignitaries, gave balls and parties, and laughed and loved and ate good dinners as only the recently-joined know how to do.

Williamsburg was then the center of fashion and culture. At one end of the town stood the Capitol. and at the other end William and Mary College. Between them, and a little to one side, stood the mansion occupied by the Colonial Governor. During the years of the Revolution, and until comparatively recent times, the old town slowly decayed. The old Capitol and the Governor's mansion disappeared from view. Thanks to the enterprise and generosity of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the town is being restored to the condition it was in when George and Martha went there as bride and groom so many years ago.

Martha did not see Mount Vernon until the House of Burgesses had ended its sessions. May-time had arrived, the season of the year when Virginia is the most beautiful. The birds were singing their sweetest songs. The wild flowers were all a-bloom. In a brand new coach, drawn by six beautiful horses, George and Martha left Williamsburg for Mount Vernon. They stopped at Fredericksburg to visit Mr. Washington's mother and sister. Belle Aire was visited on the last part of the long journey, where they were received with open arms by the Ewells and Graysons.

So much has been written on the more spectacular phases of George Washington's life that it is sometimes difficult to appreciate the really human qualities of the man. One of the finest stories ever told of Washington is that of his courtship of Martha Custis and their subsequent marriage. In this story are revealed some of the best and most attractive qualities of America's greatest hero. The firm, strong-willed leader of men who unflinchingly would face death on the battlefield found that he needed the companionship and helpful counsel of a woman. Fortunately, he met the sort of woman he wanted to preside in his home, and they were married on January 6, 1759.

The story of George Washington's marriage to Martha Custis is told by the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, in a statement intended to call attention to the 172nd anniversary of this notable event.

George Washington first met the Widow Custis at the home of Major Chamberlayne in May, 1758. The lady had then been a widow for about a year. She had married Colonel Daniel Parke Custis when she was seventeen years old, and was left at his death eight years later with two small children and a considerable fortune. Although it is said that Washington was formally presented to Mrs. Custis for the first time by Chamberlayne, it is almost certain that the famous soldier and the charming widow had at least heard of each other before that time.

Fate must have taken a hand in the events of that day in May when Colonel Washington was detained at Williams' Ferry over the Pamunkey by his friend, Major Chamberlayne, who earnestly pressed upon the young man an invitation to stay his journey and enjoy the hospitality of the plantation. But Washnigton was hastening to Williamsburg where he intended to ask the Governor in person for men and supplies for the frontier, which previous urgent letters had failed to obtain. Chamberlayne was insistent, however, and when it appeared that all his importunities must fail to alter the plans of the Colonel, he informed the latter that he was then entertaining the charming Mrs. Custis. This argument, apparently, was potent enough to convince the young warrior where all others had been vain, and Washington consented to remain only long enough to partake of the meal which was then being prepared.

Bishop, the personal servant of Washington, who had served under Braddock, was instructed to hold the Colonel's horse in readiness for a speedy departure as soon as dinner was over. The old soldier knew very well his master's reputation for punctuality, and since the business at Williamsburg was important, he fully expected that this wait would be a brief one. But the dinner hour passed, the sun sank lower into the west, and Lady Had Suffered So Much Pain Was Almost Desperate. Says Cardui Helped Her.

Denison, Texas.—"Before I took Cardui, it seemed like I had tried everything, for my health was wretched," writes Mrs. Nannie Davis, of 418 W. Woodard Street, this city.

"I was in bed most of the time," explains Mrs. Davis, "suffering so much with pain in my side and back, and weakness. I was so discouraged, I was almost desperate.

"I knew there ought to be something to reach my case. I only weighed about 110 pounds. My eyes were hollow and I looked awfully bad.

"A good friend told me about Cardui. After taking my first bottle, I felt better, but I kept it up until I had taken four bottles, and now I am well, have no pain in my side or back, and feel like a new woman. I can work most of the time, and feel fine.

"For three years, I have been free from pain. That is why I recommend Cardui."

If you are run-down, nervous, or suffer every month, take Cardui, a medicine used by women for over fifty years. As your health improves, you will share the enthusiasm of thousands of others who have praised Cardui for the benefits they have felt after taking it. NC-240

CARRYING ON

In China

The greatest danger to the Church and to all foreigners in China is caused by the inroad of Russian Communism. Now that the civil war is about over, the destruction of banditry and Communism will be the chief concern of the government, as Chiang Kai Shek has declared.

We anticipate also that there will be a strong reaction in favor of Christianity, as opposed to the anti-religious movement of the present government as outlined by the Minister of Education, Tsiang Mong Sin.

Throughout the entire country the crops this year are especially fine, and that will help greatly to relieve the distress of the people.

In Siberia

The work of our Methodist Church had a promising beginning in Manchuli City. Throngs of people from the very start came to hear the preaching of the gospel. The big church hall was often filled to such an extent that many had to stand. In a very short time all the departments of the Church were organized and functioned with great success.

Our Church, even though it had to meet with much opposition and criticism at the start, soon won respect and admiration in the hearts of the people of Manchuli City. Within a short time the membership had reached thirty.

In Belgium

A most important part of our work in Belgium is done among young people, for it is in youth that religious impressions have the most effect.

At St. Gilles we have a very interesting group of Scouts (boys from 12 to 18) and also a group of Girl Guides (girls from 12 to 16). By means of the scoutism which is making a great extension in all spheres in Belgium, we are able to reach homes where the gospel has never penetrated.

Every year we organize camps with our boys. Camps not only fortify the health, but they are good means of bringing the boys in contact with God in his creation. They understand more easily their Father in contact with this marvelous book, always open for us.—Exchange.

TO THE WOMEN OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

My Dear Co-workers: I am writing to thank each member of the Mississippi Conference for their loyalty to our missionary program during 1930. Truly each auxiliary is to be commended for their untiring effort and splendid achievement.

While we did not pay the entire amount of our pledge I consider our report a most creditable one when we take into consideration the financial condition of our State. The gifts made by our women were in most instances sacrificial offerings. Including our pledges to our Wesley Houses, our Scholarships and M. S. C. W. fund, our Love-gift to Robbie Lee Leggett and the salary for our Worker at the Welfare Center at Pascagoula, our pledge was approximately $30,000.

May God accept this our Conference offering and make it adequate to meet the urgent need of this hour. May we in the beginning of this year pledge anew our allegiance to Christ and strive more worthily to represent Him. May we ever be mindful that the objective of our organization is that all men, women and children might have opportunity to know Christ. How grateful we should each be that He has chosen us to be co-workers with Him in the extension of His Kingdom.

The Missionary Society of First Church Gulfport, together with the other Coast auxiliaries are already busy making plans for our Annual Meeting. Watch the Advocate page for the official announcement, by our recording secretary, of our Conference. Every society will want to be represented there, and every officer will, I am sure, plan to attend that they may get the needed information to do their work more effectively.

Let us be much in prayer for this Conference that it may be truly the best session in our history.

May God's Holy Spirit lead in the building of the program, may His presence be manifested during the days we are assembled, and may each delegate who attends be filled anew with the Spirit of the Master that we may truly be one with Christ in sacrificial living and giving.

Yours for service,
MRS. L. W. ALFORD.

TO THE VOICE AGENTS AND SUPERINTENDENTS OF PUBLICITY

Dear Co-workers: We are realizing, since we shall soon be in the last month of our Missionary Voice Campaign, that we must treble our efforts. Much depends upon what we shall do in the short month of February. We must close this special campaign promptly this year, as the Missionary Committee will be obliged to calculate the Conference percentages of increase and telegraph the three publicity superintendents entitled to a visit to the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, to be held at Memphis, March 12-17.

Our Conference had a subscription list of 2,587 on November 1, 1930. And the quota is a 20 per cent increase of this number. To date our Conference has sent in 415 subscriptions. You can easily estimate how far we are from the goal of 20 per cent increase.

The winning Conference in each one of these three groups will be the one which has secured the highest percentage of increase, provided that increase is in advance of one hundred subscriptions.

May I depend on you to send in your new subscriptions and renewals at once.

Appreciatively yours,
MRS. T. B. COTTRELL.

DRINKING AND POOR SCHOLARSHIPS

There is vastly more danger to the younger generation from poor scholarship than from drinking, according to the records of the deans of the forty land-grant colleges and universities of the country.

These institutions hold more than a third of the college and university undergraduates of the country and include such widely known institutions as Purdue, University of Illinois, Ohio State, Rutgers, University of Wisconsin, and the University of Minnesota.

Out of 136,690 students in 1928 it was found necessary to discipline 14,597; of this number poor scholarship accounted for 13,413, about ten per cent of the entire student body. Only 233 were disciplined for drinking, which represents only sixteen hundredths of one per cent of all the students.

There were 93,223 men students of whom 207 were disciplined for drinking, a matter of only one-fifth of one per cent. Thirty of these institutions are co-educational with 43,592 young women students, of which only 26 were disciplined for drinking, a matter of only six one-hundredths of one per cent. Poor scholarship is responsible for one hundred times as many disciplinary cases as drinking among the young women.

FROM RINGGOLD, LA.

Dear Advocate: I am sending seven subscriptions and renewals to you for the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and enclosed you will find my personal check for same.

We are getting a fine start here at Ringgold and hope to make this one of the best years in the history of Ringgold Methodism.

We have held our first quarterly conference and fine reports came in from all over the work. We have received six members into the church since the last session of the Annual Conference, organized a Woman's Missionary Society at Heflin with twelve members and we have also organized a new Epworth League at Ringgold, which is doing splendid work.

We are beginning our Missionary Cultivation, which we hope will result in the full payment of our quota of the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering and will endeavor to put over every other part of the church program, as we work together with the fine people of this charge, for we find ourselves surrounded by a group of intelligent, loyal, and progressive people, and therefore we are happy in the work and feel assured that great things will come to pass in the future.

In spite of the panic I still weigh 230 pounds, so you may know we are being taken care of well.

Yours in the Master's service,
P. B. McCULLIN, P. C.

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish,—no danger.

ANY CHILD

WE can never be sure just what makes a child restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as your child has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea — a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

To End a Cough
In a Hurry, Mix
This at Home

To end a stubborn cough quickly, it is important to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the trouble.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 3 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly; and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. First, it loosens the germ-laden phlegm. Second, it soothes away the inflammation. Third, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in the severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Circuit Preachers' Conference, Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., for the circuit preachers of the two Mississippi Conferences, February 26-27, 1931. Our schedule begins at 9 a.m. in the auditorium of the science hall.

Dr. W. M. Alexander and Rev. A. W. Martain will lead in the work.

Board and lodging $1 per day. Several club together and come. It will pay you. Send in your problems. Send in your name that you may be cared for. We desire to make this the greatest meeting ever held.

The District Institute for the Meridian District was held at Hawkins Memorial. This was the largest institute ever conducted in the Meridian District. More churches were represented and more preachers were present. The figures for attendance will be printed after the series of institutes are over.

The Hattiesburg Institute was held at Magee, February 6. What was said of the Meridian District is true in regards to this district meeting. We felt that real progress had been made.

Wednesday, February 5, was spent at Co-Lin Junior College. We were given a most cordial reception. It was a real pleasure to be with these fine young people and represent our church. Plans were made for a later visit. We are hoping that this work will encourage our Methodist young people to live better and do more Christian work.

Fifth Sunday will be Educational Day. A program will be sent you from Millsaps College. It will be the Millsaps College Bulletin. Please have this program. We believe it will help the cause greatly.

Fourth Sunday is Missionary Day. Pray for the success of your Extension program in your Conference. Give the program this month and send in your offering.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The many friends of Rev. E. G. Mohler will regret to learn that he was operated on a few days ago for appendicitis and gaul bladder trouble. We are glad to report that he is doing fine and soon will be well on his way to recovery. He is in the Baptist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Rev. W. L. Robinson, the conference director of young people's work, has been at Vanderbilt University taking a short course. He will return home this week. Bro. Robinson plans to organize the young people of the Coffeeville church, where he is pastor, into an ideal young people's division of the local church under the new arrangement of the work. This will be a fine demonstration of what can be done in this much needed field of experience. I trust that others interested in this work will do this.

We recently met with the workers of the Grenada Sunday school, when we went over the unified program of the local church. Few schools or churches are doing as good, and possibly none better, work than the Grenada school under the consecrated and intelligent leadership of Miss Lizzie Horn, the superintendent. The young people are interested and planning to unify their work in the Grenada church.

Last Sunday, we had the pleasure of visiting the Sunday school and of preaching for the splendid people of Greenwood and Itta Bena. These two important churches are well organized and doing most excellent work under the leadership of Rev. A. T. McIlwain and Rev. W. B. Baker, respectively. A large group of workers met with us after preaching at both places.

Now is the time to make your plans for evangelism in the Sunday school. It might be suggested that you call together the Workers' Council when emphasis will be laid on this work. Make definite plans for carrying on this campaign. Make a survey to find out those who are not Christians. Make every class responsible for the ones who fall within the age group that makes up the class. Call together for close conference and prayer the workers of the different departments from the Juniors up. Do personal work among those who are not Christians. Have a definite day for decision and work and pray toward leading every person to Christ by that day. This field is indeed white unto harvest. The Lord is waiting for his reapers. Will we pray and then go? You can receive ample literature for this work by writing to our office or to the Board of Christian Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

"BEST MEDICINE
I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

SCARRITT COLLEGE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS

It is our honest conviction that Scarritt College is doing one of the most constructive pieces of work in the field of Christian Education of any institution that we have. It is quite an inspiration to come in contact with the faculty and student body of Scarritt. They have a well trained and efficient faculty and a group of students who hold to the highest Christian ideals.

Scarritt campus is one of the most beautiful places in Nashville. The buildings are among the most beautiful in the country. The plans of the College even in the buildings have a spiritual significance. The beautiful tower stands there as a silent sentinel directing people's thoughts heavenward. It preaches a sermon to the folks who are passing by. One negro woman in Nashville is known to have walked some distance several times just to look at that tower. It is an inspiration to her. It has been our privilege to worship in the chapel at Scarritt on two occasions and it is one of the easiest places to commune with God that we have yet found.

The spirit of Scarritt is wonderful. It is more like a Christian family than any institution that we have found. That is one reason we say that they are dong a constructive piece of work in Christian education. The students seem to be so happy. During the six or eight visits that we have made to Scarritt we have not found one that did not love Scarritt with a beautiful devotion. Godliness with contentment is great gain. That is what they have at Scarritt.

Scarritt College for Christian Workers holds a unique place among educational institutions. It undertakes to do for religious workers what a teacher's college does for teachers; it trains them for their profession. It differs from a liberal arts college, which is largely cultural, and from a school of theology, which is designed for the training of the ministry, for while Scarritt seeks to satisfy the highest demands for liberal culture and offers courses in the Bible and Christian doctrine, it addresses itself primarily to preparing lay workers, men and women, for various types of religious service at home and abroad.

A positive evangelical faith, a vital Christian experience, and a passion for Christ-like life and service are central in the emphasis of Scarritt College for Christian workers. As Scarritt College is interested in social righteousness, a Christian solution in the light of scientific study is sought of such great social problems as world peace, industrialism, and race relations. Alongside the social teachings of the Gospel is offered technical social training in actual situations in Nashville. This offers a splendid opportunity to those who come to Scarritt.

Scarritt is certainly a monument to the wisdom and faithfulness of the women of our great Church. We owe them a debt of gratitude. The whole Church is trying to co-operate with the women now in building a larger and better Scarritt. We will tell you more about Scarritt next week.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT KINGDOM EXTENSION MEETING

Two Kingdom Extension Institutes for the New Orleans District were held on Thursday, February 5. The first of these institutes was held in the morning at Morgan City, and was attended by all of the preachers and many laymen from that section of the district. The second institute was held in First Methodist Church, New Orleans, and was attended by the pastor and lay representatives from practically every church in the city and surrounding territory. Both of these institutes were very interesting and helpful. Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the district, was in charge as presiding officer. The main speaker was Dr. C. C. Jarrell, of the General Hospital Board. Dr. Jarrell gave a very fine address, which served as an inspiration to all those present and made them determine to do all in their power to raise the benevolence collections in full. Rev. H. N. Brown, Louisiana Conference Missionary Secretary, spoke on the cultivation period and urged that the literature be put into the hands of as many people as possible, for if the people are informed they will gladly help carry on such worthy causes. Orders were taken for the literature needed in each church in carrying out the cultivation program.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this simple measure is proving a blessing. Most nurses know it and it is advised by leading specialists.

Prepare a small quantity of finely cracked ice—about a wineglassful. Pour over it a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until the mixture is gone or you are entirely relieved. It is seldom necessary to repeat the dose to end sick stomach or any inclination to vomit.

Its anti-acid properties enable Phillips Milk of Magnesia to give immediate relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild, but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouthwash it helps prevent acid erosion and tooth decay during expectancy.

With every bottle of Phillips Milk of Magnesia, come full directions for its many uses. All drug stores have the 25c and 50c sizes. Demand the genuine, endorsed by doctors for over 50 years.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it. Mrs. S. A. Solomon, New Bern, N. WASHINGTON'S WEDDING still Washington lingered. At last in the warm dusk of the May evening, the faithful Bishop received orders to stable the horses for the night and the journey was postponed until the next day.

There is something amusing in this scene of budding romance, although it is no wonder that Washington tarried. Martha Custis was beautiful, attractive and accomplished. She has been described as being short, slightly plump and of engaging personality. Certainly the Colonel's interest in the lady was matched by her own interest in the renowned young soldier, and such mutual agreeableness was surely sufficient to crowd prosaic business into the background.

However, the Governor had to be visited, so the next day found Washington on his way to Williamsburg. But as soon as the business which took him there was taken care of, the now fully smitten Colonel proceeded to the White House, the Custis home on the Pamunkey, where it appears Mrs. Custis expected him. When he left there he must have been in high spirits, for he took with him the lady's promise to marry him as soon as he should finish his military service on the Ohio.

Washington did not see his betrothed again for several months, for it was December before he returned from this expedition. His duties fulfilled, the Colonel resigned from the army and hastened plans for the wedding. It was during Washington's absence on the frontier that he wrote the only letter to Martha which alone remains of his prenuptial correspondence with her. This dignified and gravely tender note is dated Fort Cumberland, July 20, 1758:

"We have begun our march to the Ohio. A courier is starting for Williamsburg, and I embrace the opportunity to send a few words to one whose life is now inseparable from mine. Since that happy hour when we made our pledges to each other, my thoughts have been continually going to you as to another self. That All-powerful Providence may keep us both in safety, is the prayer of your faithful and ever affectionate friend,

"G. WASHINGTON."

It still is uncertain whether the marriage occurred in St. Peter's Church or at the bride's home, the White House. At any rate, the Rev. Mr. Mossom, rector of St. Peter's, officiated at the ceremony. Jared Sparks, one of Washington's earliest biographers, is the authority for the date of the wedding, which he established as January 6. But no matter whether the wedding took place at the White House or in the church, it was a notable event and was attended by a great number of Virginia's prominent people. The Governor himself was there with civil and militaary authorities, and many of the socially elite. Only a traditional account of the festivities on that occasion exists to-day, but certainly the celebration left noth-

Martha's wedding gown has been thus described by one writer: " . . . a satin quilt, over which a heavy white silk, interwoven with threads of ing lacking. silver, was looped back with white satin ribbons, richly brocaded in a leaf pattern. Her bodice was of plain satin, and the brocade was fastened on the bust with a stiff butterfly bow of the ribbon. Delicate lace finished the low, square neck. There were close elbow sleeves revealing a puff and frill of lace. Strings of pearls were woven in and out of her powdered hair. Her high-heeled slippers were of white satin, with brilliant buckles."

The attractive appearance of the bride was equalled by that of the tall, well-built bridegroom. Always particular over his dress, Washington, on this occasion, was elegantly arrayed and, according to all accounts, was the most gallantly magnificent figure in all that assemblage.

At last Mount Vernon had a mistress, but months elapsed after the wedding before the young bride saw her future home. Washington had just been elected to the House of Burgesses, so the young couple remained in Williamsburg while that Chamber remained in session until May. When Washington did return with his wife to his beautiful estate on the Potomac, the place became home to both of them for the remainder of their lives.

Washington's marriage was a singularly happy one. In Martha he found all those womanly qualities which were needed to supplement those of his own character. Who can measure the value of the encouragement she must have given him during the weary days of the Revolution? Certainly she was always a faithful and devoted wife, and the Father of his Country owed a great deal to her for the measure of success he attained.

Funeral services of MRS. WILLIE CAMERON, who died at her home here on Tuesday, February 3, were held yesterday, February 5, at Andrew's Chapel, about 12 miles east of Shubuta, conducted by the pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. Chas. Wesley, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. W. J. Dawson, of Meridian, and Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Meridian District, all paying beautiful tributes to her life of faithful service. There was an immense attendance, the church being full to overflowing. Relatives and friends from Mobile, Meridian, Hattiesburg, Columbia, Terry, Derma and DeSoto, and the communities nearer by, came to pay their last tribute of respect to this good woman. Many beautiful floral offerings attested the devotion in which she was held. Her body was laid away in the cemetery at Andrew's Chapel, with the following gentlemen acting as pall-bearers: Ed. Brewer, Coyt Brewer, Prof. McGrew, J. E. Newton, Will Weems and Ike Martin. Mrs. Cameron was an active and devout member of the Methodist Church. She was a teacher for a good many years in the public schools of the County, teaching up to a few days before her death. She is survived by her husband, J. D. Cameron, Shubuta, her daughter, Miss Mary Cameron, a senior at M. S. C. W., Columbus; two sons, William, a licensed preacher now teaching at McCondy, Miss., and Harry, a senior in Shubuta High School, and one step son, Julian, of Meridian. Three brothers and five sisters also survive her. The brothers are: Sid Weems, Columbia; Harry Weems, Hattiesburg, and Albert Weems, Jackson, Miss. The sisters are: Mesdames Ed. Morgan, Mobile, Ala.; Horace Watts, Newton; Joe Philips, Hattiesburg; Anna Lamb, Derma and Carrie Leglar, Terry, Miss.

W. H. PATTON.

In company with his host of other admirers and friends, it is with deep regret and heavy sorrow that I sketch briefly the passing of my good friend and brother, JOHN T. BRISTER, "to that bourne whence no traveler ere returns." For twenty-seven months in all the trials and vicissitudes of life, it was my privilege to know Bro. John T. Brister personally, and always, under all circumstances, have found him in thought, word and deed, "God's noblest handiwork, an honest man." He was a devoted husband, father and grandfather, a kind neighbor, and always and at all times a firm and steadfast friend. Never was he weary in well doing. He was ready and willing to serve in any way for the best interest of his church and for the good of others. He was tolerant in his judgment of others, and that endeared him to those who knew him. John T. Brister was a man of strong convictions and had the superb but rare courage to maintain them even under the most adverse circumstances. He was a manly man and never "bent the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning." His going was a great loss for the church and community in which he had lived for 77 years. He was not free to express himself in public service, although he was an official in the church during his long and useful life, yet not even the breath of suspicion ever attached to any of his private or public acts. He was respected and loved by both old and young. He believed in the spirit of public generosity and looked upon it as a public trust and always acted up to that high standard. He loved the Lord and His will obeyed. He lived to make the turbulent world about him brighter and better by his having lived in it. He was a devout Methodist and loved his church and his people with a devotion that passeth understanding, and the way was never too long nor the night too dark to deter him from coming to their rescue when needed.

May God send his angels watch with tender care over those who were near and dear to him in his lifetime. May the sod lie lightly above him as with a tear in my eye and a throb at my heart, I place this simple loving tribute to his honest worth upon his honored grave.

"Droop, sacred head,
 Upon that breast divine,
The strife is o'er,
 The victory is thine."

His devoted pastor,
HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

JAMES E. WILLIAMS was born in Russell County, Ala., September 3, 1850, and died at his home near Grand Cane, La., January 13, 1931, being 80 years, 4 months, and 10 days old. He joined the Methodist Church in early manhood. On January 22, 1873, he was married to Miss Sophronia Brown, who preceded him to the heavenly home by about 20 years. To this union were born 12 children, all of whom lived to be grown. Of these, seven survive, four sons and three daughters. Brother Williams came to Louisiana to live about four years after his marriage. He made his home near Grand Cane, where he resided until his death.

Brother Williams had been in failing health for over two years. A man of sunny disposition, he never complained. It was an inspiration to visit with him. He knew that "all things work together for good to them that love God." His going was sudden, but he was ready to meet his Lord.

Funeral services were conducted at the Grand Cane Methodist Church on Thursday, January 15, at 10:30 o'clock, and interment was at the Grand Cane cemetery. The officiating ministers were, Rev. J. M. Boykin, pastor of the Grand Cane Charge; Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor of Mansfield Methodist Church; Rev. E. C. Horton, pastor of the Grand Cane Baptist Church, and Rev. L. R. Nease, Jr., a former pastor of Grand Cane Charge. The large concourse of people attending the services and the many floral offerings attested the esteem in which Brother Williams was held. To his loved ones and his many friends we extend our deep sympathy. We would point them to Christ who alone can bring real comfort.

L. R. NEASE, JR.

On January 18, 1931, the Lord called MRS. MINNIE ELLIOTT POPE to her Heavenly home. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Sartinville about fourteen years of age. It was her great heritage to be reared in a Godly home. Her life, dominated by Christian principles, bore the fruits of righteousness, joy, and peace. The church was a holy place to her, because she found pardon at the mercy-seat, and there gave Christ her heart. Attending upon the ordinances of the church was not only a duty to her, but a privilege and an avenue through which she enjoyed worshipping God, who delighted her soul. In her home, she exemplified the teachings of Christ, therefore making it a pleasant haven for her family. She has gone ashore to join two of her children, where they now await in the city of God for the coming of her devoted husband and four precious children, father and mother, one brother and five sisters, aunts and uncles and a host of friends. Funeral services were held by the pastor, assisted by Reverends Walton of Monticello and Hudson of Tylertown. The Eastern Star chapter of Tylertown mournfully committed the body of their sister to the grave in the Dinan graveyard, where her body now sleeps awaiting the glorious resurrection morning.

May Christ's words be real to you who mourn, "I will not leave you comfortless."

Idea Worked!

Wise mothers find the things that keep children contented, well, happy. Most of them have found they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The experience of Mrs. Wm. Charleston, 903 Gilmore Ave., Kansas City, Kans., is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Annie and Billy all their lives. Whenever they're constipated or bilious it has them comfortable, happy, in a jiffy. Their wonderful condition proves my idea works."

Physicians endorse the use of pure vegetable California Fig Syrup when bad breath, coated tongue, dullness, feverishness, listlessness, etc. show a child's bowels need help. Weak stomach and bowels are toned by it; a child's appetite and digestion are improved.

The United States is the Greatest Mission Field on Earth

Not half our people profess any semblance of religion of any kind. Perhaps not half of those who do so profess are really Christian.

Our business, social, and governmental relations with so-called non-Christian nations often belies and defeats our missionary efforts. We have scarcely begun to Christianize our social processes.

Millions upon millions in our land are underprivileged—Indians, Negroes, Mexicans, Orientals, industrial workers, dependent children, and all the others.

Our lawlessness, injustice, inequalities, vicious press, and a thousand other evil influences cry to heaven for correction.

America is the greatest field for evangelism in the world. More depends upon taking America for Christ than upon any other missionary task before us.

We have a mighty evangelistic Home Mission program. But it is wavering for lack of funds. Adequately financed, this program will reach millions which will never be reached with the ministry of our regular congregations.

Your people would like to help in this. They will do so if informed and given a chance. Give them both the facts and the opportunity through the Kingdom Extension Offering.

IS GOD THE FATHER OF ALL MEN?

I did not expect to be drawn into a lengthy controversy by my criticism of Brother Ramsey's statement, but it seems he is plumed for the affair. I wish to say that I am delighted with the manner he refers to me, but I shall give him some things to whet his intellectual sword against.

My first point is, once a child he or she is always a child, however different may be their mental or moral relation. In acts 17:25 Paul says that God created of one blood all the nations of the earth. I ask did not God create Adam? I ask again, did all die in Adam, and were they not all made alive in Christ? (I Corinthians 15:22). This being the case, did not Christ take on him the seed of Abraham? And was not Abraham a man? Malachi says, "Have we not all one Father? Hath God not created us?"

Now turn back to our creation and let us see what we can find there. When God created Adam, mark you my points, he placed him in the Garden alone, and gave him charge of all he had created, and not only so, but he gave him the law, and said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Eve had not been created. Now, he said it is not good for man to be alone, and He caused a deep sleep to fall upon him and took one of his ribs and created Eve. Now, the tempter came and knowing the law was given to Adam alone, he approached Eve with a lie and caused her to eat and she gave to Adam and he did eat. Now comes the test case, God says to Adam, "Hast thou eaten of the forbidden fruit?" And he said, "The woman thou didst give me gave me and I did eat." He never in the least tried to justify himself, but only referred to his wife as a decoy in the case, which the devil knew he possibly could do.

Now, mark you, a child never had been conceived nor born into the world. Eve said the devil deceived me, or rather the serpent beguiled me and the Lord said unto the serpent, "Because thou hast done this thou art cursed . . . . and I will put enmity between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head and thou sha't bruise his heel." Upon this promise the whole Christian world bases its hope of a world's redeemer. Paul says that Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. Was not Eve our mother? Upon this hypothesis I am ready to take the position with Brother Ramsey that there never was a child born into the world in an unsaved state. Now, if the child of a religious family is a brother in Christ by virtue of its family relation, tell me when the relations with the brotherhood or with God ceased? This is clearly demonstrated in Luke 16:20-24. Also Christ says he is the Son of Man (John 5:24). Was not Dives a lost and condemned brother? And did not both Abraham and Dives acknowledge their brotherly relation? There is a twofold sense in which men are brothers. One is a natural, by generation which makes us all brothers of the human Christ, and the other is in a spiritual, in which we become heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

Being now eighty-four years old and not being able to follow up this subject, I may not write on it again.

Yours in Christ,

S. W. MILLER.

METHODIST EPISCOPACY AND THE NATIONAL CHURCHES

The Brazilian Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.; the Mexican Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the two Methodisms in Korea have been duly and respectively organized into the Methodist Church of Brazil, Methodist Church of Mexico, and the Korean Methodist Church. A better day has come to the Church and to the world.

The Brazilian General Council elected Dr. J. W. Tarboux the first bishop of the Brazil Methodist Church. A Brazilian bishop is elected for four years, subject to re-election.

The Mexican General Conference elected Rev. Juan N. Pascoe bishop of the Mexican Church and he becomes the first Mexican Protestant bishop. A Mexican bishop is elected for four years, and "under no circumstances is he eligible for re-election."

The General Conference of the Korean Methodist Church elected Rev. J. S. Ryang General Superintendent. A Korean General Superintendent is elected for four years, with only one re-election possible.

Bishop Tarboux's election seems to have delighted the Church and there are reasons for gratitude that two of her sons in the gospel have been called to positions of high responsibility in Mexico and Korea. Bishops Tarboux, Pascoe, and Ryang bring to their new and important task hearts of evangelistic zeal and intelligent knowledge of the needs of their people. They are worthy of these first honors, and under their leadership the new National Churches have entered upon what is confidently expected to be an era of spiritual prosperity and enlarged usefulness. These Churches have determined their own beginnings and are to be congratulated upon the poise and harmony reported to have prevailed in each of the three General Sessions. Their autonomy is established, and sympathetic cooperation and sacrificial support of the home Churches will not be withheld.

For seven months there has been before the Church a proposal, signed by nineteen worthy preachers, calling for a study of the question of fixing a limited term for our own bishops, and it is not surprising that some have already made capital out of the action of the Brazilian, Mexican, and Korean Churches in limiting terms of their bishops.

THE CASE OF BISHOP CANNON

The committee of twelve traveling elders who investigated charges against Bishop James Cannon, Jr., reported "No trial necessary."

A lengthy article in a daily paper called for all the facts in the Cannon "trial." The investigation was held at Washington, February 3-7. It was not a trial, but was what is equivalent to an investigation by a civil grand jury. A grand jury makes inquiries that it does not make public. There is no legal or moral obligation resting upon the Church to "air" the charges against the Bishop. If he had been cited for trial it would have been different in due course.

The investigation was made by: Revs. R. H. Harper, A. T. McIlwain, W. L. Duren, E. M. Overby, A. M. Hughlett, R. E. Stackhouse, T. G. Herbert, H. B. Porter, W. E. Arnold, B. P. Taylor, W. P. Whaley and J. S. Barcus

As we close the forms for this week's issue the General Missionary Council is just beginning its work. Indications point to another great Missionary Conference at New Orleans. Methodists of the city are honored to have delegates and visitors and First Church is entertaining royally. A full report of the Council and Southern Methodist Press Association will be carried next week.

The disciplinary duty of these Christian ministers was to determine whether or not the charges were supported by facts sufficient to warrant a trial of the issues. After four days' patient investigation they reported "No Trial Necessary." Hence there is no reason to try the Bishop in the public press, when the only legally qualified persons to initiate a trial have said the evidence in support of the charges does not warrant a trial.

Both the Church and Bishop Cannon have lost. Not that justice has not had its course and that the hurt has not been held at the minimum, but the fact that twice a bishop has had to explain. If it be true that unholy and unscrupulous combinations have hounded his every step, more the pity that four of his fellow Christian ministers could find what to them justified another investigation. The outcome, however just it may be, has produced no heroic triumphs and further questionings and discussions would be extremely unprofitable and sorrowful silence seems the better part of wisdom.

OLD WORDS WITH UNENDING SIGNIFICANCE

In his address on the last day of the historic first General Missionary Conference, held in New Orleans thirty years ago, the widely beloved Rev. B. M. Palmer, D.D., who was then in the forty-seventh year of his pastorate at the First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, said:

"Brothers, does not the Church now require, in a degree far beyond what we have ever yet enjoyed, the outpouring of the Holy Ghost? I feel that if all branches of the Church of Christ could only enjoy just now such an outpouring as we had on the day of Pentecost, it would be ready almost for the millenium, and might speedily expect the coming of our blessed Lord, when he shall reign King of the nations as he is King of the saints, and shall wear before the assembled universe his many crowns upon his head. And the thought has been struggling in my mind ever since you have been here, seeking for proper expression, whether it would not be a meet and fit thing for this Conference on this the last day of its session to prepare a brief paper in which it should call upon the ecclesiastical courts of the Church of Jesus Christ which are to assemble during this spring, to bring all the influence which these courts possess to bear upon the hearts of their people, scattered all through this land, rallying them to this one great purpose and this one single thought: that they will pray and continue to pray for the Pentecost until it shall come; laying it upon the hearts of our Christian families, in their family devotions to embalm in their ordinary supplications, in the very heart of their prayers, a prayer for the coming of the Holy Ghost upon the Church. I close with just a sentence. We have been praying, all of us, long, and I trust fervently, for the conversion of the world. Let us during the remaining months of this year pray for the conversion of the Church, bringing her back to her former bearings, to stand as she used to stand, upon the great principles of Christian doctrine and of Christian practice. Let us have once more a genuine revival in the Church of God, by whatever instrumentality it shall be brought about; and I think we will have introduced then the greatest factor that can be found in the conversion of the world."

Many things have come and gone since the celebrated Presbyterian pastor spoke the above words, but never more appropriate than today that "The Church stand upon the great principles of Christian doctrine and Christian practice."

And "let us have once more a genuine revival in the Church of God."

The Revival We Need

BY BISHOP U. V. W. DARLINGTON, D.D., LL.D.

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington has charge of the work in Europe. He has given unstintedly of his strength and time to that important field; and while he is in the home-land he is busy holding revival meetings, speaking to Annual Conferences, and District Institutes upon the important theme of evangelism. He has a passion for souls and preaches a gospel that leads many to accept Christ as Saviour and Lord. We count it fortunate that we can give our readers the benefit of his strong article this pre-Easter season.—Editor.

Concerning the need of a real revival within the heart and life of our Church there can be no question. No man who has known anything of the history of the movements of the Church in this land and who has any spiritual insight whatsoever will stop for one moment to question the need of a real, heart-searching, soul-saving work of grace. But the word "revival" has been over-worked, misapplied and very greatly misunderstood. We have come to the time in the life of the Church when a brother in the ministry solemnly announces that he will begin a revival at such and such a time, at such and such church. What he means is that he has set a date and has selected a helper perhaps, or he may undertake to do the work himself, when he will work up an interest in the community that will result in some decisions being made and some persons induced to join the church. The sad part of it all is that this is about the standard which now lives in the thinking of the Church concerning this matter of a revival.

Now, please do not misunderstand me as underestimating the importance of just such a work as I have indicated above, but in seventy-five cases out of every hundred, no such thing as a real revival takes place, but resolves itself into a mere protracted meeting. To have a protracted meeting is one thing, but to have a revival is quite another. First of all, the revival must take hold upon the heart of the Church, for the word itself indicates what MUST take place. Turn to the dictionary, and let this old book tell you what the word means. You will see that it means bringing life back into that from which life has all but departed. And in the application of it, it means, first, that the Church must become deeply conscious of its backsliding, its indifference, its worldiness, its forgetfulness of God. And until the Church becomes conscious of its need of a more consecrated and devoted life, there will never be any revival. But the fact remains that never in the history of this Republic have we seen a day when the heart of the Church needs to be "strangely warmed" again as in this day. And this experience will never become the experience of the Church until it first of all involves the pulpit; which is but another way of saying that the ministry types the Church. When the ministry becomes ambitious, self-seeking and without the knowledge and practice of self-sacrifice, then you may expect to find the Church backslidden, worldly-minded, self-seeking and turned away from any suggestion that looks like sacrifice.

Let me repeat, with all the emphasis of my soul, that the greatest need of the Church, and I will be a little more specific, of our Church these days, is an intelligent, devoted, consecrated, self-sacrificing ministry—men who are conscious of the fact that they, in reality represent their ascended Lord in the midst of a selfish, thoughtless, giddy, Godless world; men who cannot be bought; men who cannot be frightened; men whose one thought is to uplift Jesus Christ and put Him where the world can see Him—not hide Him away beneath beautiful rhetorical sentences, but who will bring Him out into the open and preach Him, live Him, and let the world get a fair look at Him in these days of distress and discouragement. With such a ministry as this, we could have such a revival as some hearts are anxious for and many hearts, we trust, are praying for.

But when we begin to think and to write and to speak along the lines indicated above, you will find a good many people in the Church, far too many, who will immediately announce that they do not believe in revivals. Certainly they do not. Worldly-minded, selfish, insincere, Godless people never believe in revivals and their neighbors are not surprised to hear them announce that they do not believe in revivals. They have never believed in revivals and such people never will. But this should not deter us—on the other hand, it should make us the more anxious and the more thoughtful when we consider how many such people there are in the Church of God today.

When the time comes that the altars of the Church are deserted, when the prayer-meetings of the Church are all but deserted, except for a few faithful souls, and when the singing of the congregation is lifeless and listless; when the preacher stands in the pulpit, behind God's book, in God's house, on God's day, in the presence of Godless, thoughtless, selfish people, and under such circumstances attempts to give them a dissertation on "The Cosmogony of the Universe"; when this happens Sabbath after Sabbath, then the time has come when the real Church should come to her knees. And there is no other way to bring about this much needed work of grace. We can hear the voice of the Son of Man, as he still stands in the crowded ways, where the throngs cross and recross, saying, "The harvest, truly, is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He (and He alone) shall send forth laborers into his harvest." This really means that the Church must come to its knees, and that is another way of saying that the Church has been on its feet only, far too long. This is the day of our opportunity. The hearts of the people are hungry. God is able to satisfy their hunger, and He is calling to you. God grant that in the heart of our great Church there may be a great and mighty turning to God. Amen.—From Alabama Christian Advocate.

WHAT IS AN EVANGELISTIC MINISTRY?

By Bishop Joseph F. Berry

It is not necessarily a ministry which is expert in conducting evangelistic campaigns.

I do not discount revivals. I believe in them. But there are pastors who possess the best evangelistic ideals, and year by year contribute largely to evangelistic results, who would feel utterly out of place in a revival campaign of the usual type.

I have in mind a minister who has never felt it to be his duty to take part in union evangelistic campaigns led by professional evangelists, nor has he conducted a revival meeting in his own church for a good many years. Yet he is one of the most successful evangelists in his Conference. His ministry is one of almost continuous soul-winning during the whole year.

This minister is a preacher, not an essayist. He does not think his pulpit is the best place in which to review popular books of the day. He reads the freshest literature in the field of psychology and sociology. He is informed concerning the latest scientific revelations. I think he is especially well posted in all phases of internationalism. But he does not permit secular or semi-secular themes to usurp the place of a definite and authoritative gospel message.

His sermons center in the cross of Calvary. He deals plainly with the fact of sin, the certainty of retribution for those who persistently refuse God's offers of mercy, the atonement of a Divine Redeemer, the necessity of repentance, the new birth, the witness of the Spirit, and those higher attainments in the spiritual life which are possible to the Christian believer.

This does not mean that this preacher runs on a narrow gauge track. There is really a great variety in his messages. But every sermon possesses the evangelistic flavor, a definite and urgent spiritual appeal.

That appeal is usually enforced by what we Methodists are accustomed to call unction. By "unction" I do not mean physical energy, nor resounding tones, nor extravagant gesticulation. This particular preacher is of the quiet type. But he has the strength which comes from reserve power. His message is nearly always tender, winsome, persuasive. And sometimes it is simply overwhelming in its effect upon those who are awakened and brought face to face with God.

In his pastoral relation the man of whom I write is a "walking evangelist" of the type Dr. J. O. Peck used to talk about. He keeps the promise he made at his ordination, and "visits from house to house." He does not make mere social calls. He goes into the homes of his own people and seeks "outsiders" with a definite spiritual purpose. He is a cheery soul, and everybody likes to have him come. But his conversations are sure to lead people toward the Divine Master to whom he has surrendered his life. Of course, there are occasions when he does not think it wise to press for immediate spiritual decisions, but every visit is designed as a contribution toward that ultimate end.

You will not wonder, therfeore, that the recruiting of converts by this man has gone straight ahead, week by week, for nearly thirty years, and that the total figures which tell of those who have come into his churches must have caused many a jubilee in heaven.

Has the old-time revival meeting had its day? Many think so. I am not discussing that issue. But I am now insisting that the pastor who feels called of God to make the winning of souls the dominant task in the regular, unostentatious routine of daily service, is as truly a representative of the evangelistic ministry as his brother pastor who thinks of evangelism in terms of special campaigns and of extraordinary evangelistic agencies. —New York Christian Advocate.

OBSERVATIONS AND ELSE

By Rev. James H. Felts

Yesterday we had "before and after taking," and smiled. To-day we have before and after banking, and frown.

"It's an ill wind that blows no one good." If the present depression, seventy-five per cent imaginary and twenty-five per cent real, helps supposedly intelligent people become really and truly sane, it will be about the greatest blessing in disguise in many years.

After all, when a man can stand alone, stripped of all his earthly possessions, smile a real smile, and preach a gospel of good cheer, he is entitled to the respect of his fellows. Many of our brethren, clerical and lay, are doing that very thing day by day. Thank God for them.

When you look at "high fliers" with a feeling of envy, look also at their "roosting places," and all envy will pass into inocuous desuetude. "All is not gold that glitters."

Recently A said to B, "I have no faith in any man in the world."

B said to A, "When I reach that point I hope I may die."

Then C said to both of them, "I trust I may find my grave before I reach such a state."

When faith is gone there is nothing left worth living for.

My little pee-wee article of a few weeks since did not appear in the proper form. My idea was that a preacher should receive the degree of d.d. from certain institutions, to be followed, if found worthy, by the sublime degree of D.D. This would leave room for growth. Stagnation is an awful disease.

Recently I received a letter from one of my best friends, a well known character whose diction is usually all but perfect, in which appeared this sentence, in substance: "Our banks are in good condition, unless our people go crazy; then we ain't got no banks." That is what I call hitting the bull's eye.

"We be brethren" is about the highest expression of good will known. When a man calls me brother in good faith he honors me, takes me into the inner circle of his heart, gives me a place of kinship. The titles men yearn for, reach after, sometimes use doubtful means to obtain, are as chaff. They belong to the world, carry the odor of the world. Brother carries a quality beyond appraisement. I thank God for my brethren. I have only a homeopathic interest in the artificial names so many desire and seek.

Wise indeed was the man who said, "Give me neither poverty nor riches." Why? "Lest I be full and deny thee," "Lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain." The poorest of all men is the man with nothing but money. "Thou foolish one, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" Again I say with assurance that if we come from the present depression with a new sense of values all we may have suffered will be as dross compared to our gain.

There is a grain of truth in "Christian Science." But why wade through a bushel of chaff to get that grain of truth? It is too much like taking cure-all patent medicines. Old King Cureall is generally a fake.

I am not greatly interested in modernism, fundamentalism, or any of the many isms that men go to war about. I have long since decided that when I can't preach a gospel of salavation from sin unto righteousness, joy and peace, based on faith in Jesus Christ, and Him alone, I will surrender my credentials and try my hand at fishing for doodle-bugs at so much per doodle, or join the Freethinkers and listen to myself bray, or enter the Wells School of imagination and ride a tadpole across the Atlantic ocean, or read the Bob Lyle department of the Commercial Appeal, or ladle out soup for homeopathic scientists, or organize an H. H. Menchken Society for the prevention of cruelty to tumblebugs, start a hot dog stand, play a corn-stalk fiddle for the delectation of the Jazzites, or establish a school for university graduates. Most anything is better than the milk and cider diet offered by Lilliputian dealers in salvation by soap, or some other philosophism that carries with it a little bunch of hair under the nose and a vocabulary that makes Webster look like a child playing with building blocks.

CRAWFORD STREET, VICKSBURG, CHANGES PLAN OF SUNDAY SERVICES

The Vicksburg Herald published the following concerning the new plan of Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor, Crawford Street, Vicksburg, for the Sunday morning services:

"Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor of Crawford Street Methodist Church, announces a change in the order of services in the church for each Sunday morning during the month of February. This change is a very radical one for churches in this part of the country and will be watched with great interest by hundreds of other congregations. It is not an altogether new plan to the present pastor at Crawford Street Church, however, as he used it in his work in Central Europe for four years. Some plan to do the work of the whole Church in a better way has been under discussion by the Sunday school committee, now the local church board of Christian Education, for more than a year, and some months ago unanimously adopted the pastor's suggestion about the morning services. The matter was then put before the Floral Club, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Board of Stewards and three weeks ago voted on by the church conference. All of these organizations agreed to throw themselves into a sincere trial of the plan through the month of February and Sunday morning is the date set for the first service.

"At present there are two seperate and distinct services in the church each Sunday morning, the first opening at 9:30 a. m. The officers and teachers of the Sunday school who spend an hour and a half in their work come into the auditorium already worn, for another service at 11 a. m. Under the new plan there will not be two services, but only one, and it will not begin until 10 o'clock. There will, however, be two programs, one for the children, eight years of age and under and another for all members of the congregation nine years of age and over. At present the program for these little children is an hour and a half. Under the new plan it will be extended to two hours so that parents can come and place their children in the care of competent Christian instructors for the whole time that they are worshipping and studying in the other program for those nine years of age and older. This program for the little children will be in their respective departments and will meet the needs of this group better than any program that could be arranged for a mixed group.

"The pastor announces that Al Frank will go to the organ in the auditorium at five minutes to ten and that those who are in this section be on time and that he desires that families sit together throughout the service in the auditorium. The program there will be one of worship and a message from the pastor with adjournment to the various classes and departments at 10:55, without a benediction. The final adjournment will be not later than twelve o'clock.

"Indications are that there will be a full attendance of the whole church membership for the first of these services Sunday morning. Parents of small children are requested to come in time to place these children in their departments and be in their seats in the main auditorium by ten o'clock.

"The old Crawford Street Church may be able in this new plan to set the pace for hundreds of other congregations of every faith who are today worried over the lack of cohesion in their morning programs in the church. The plan is being eagerly watched by scores of other churches throughout the country."

BISHOP DOBBS VISITS PINEVILLE

At the invitation of the presiding elder, Rev. A. S. Lutz, D.D., of the Alexandria District, La. Conference, Bishop H. M. Dobbs, D.D., on January 25, visited the Pineville congregation and brought a most inspiring and heart-searching message.

Our church at Pineville was facing what seemed to be a disaster financially. The debt on the new church building of several thousands of dollars and a pressing past due obligation which must be paid facing the congregation at this time of what seems to be a hard season financially, the congregation, or several members including officials, had become discouraged and knew not to whom to go for help. Our General Board of Church Extension had turned us down on an "emergency" loan. Things looked gloomy.

Our good Bishop Dobbs answered the call and came to our rescue. Our good brother and neighbor, Dr. W. W. Holmes, across the river in Alexandria and his fine congregation, called in their service and came over and joined us. When I say joined us, I mean just what I say, for they joined us in the choir, in the pew and in the collection. You could not tell but that they were all members of the Pineville congregation from the way they helped. (This may be a suggested hint to all larger churches and pastors).

The pastor and two of his officials, J. I. Barron and P. H. O'Neal, drove up to Winnfield in the afternoon of the 25th and met the bishop, who had dedicated the Winnfield church at 11 o'clock that day, and brought him to Alexandria and lodged him in the Bentley Hotel, where he had a short rest before the hour for the evening service. Drs. Lutz and Holmes met him at his room and escorted him to the church and both participated in the service.

The bishop used for his text, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday and today and for ever."—Hebrews 13:8. Using this text, he related in brief the work of God down through the ages and showed that He had instituted the Church and through the Church was carrying on His work and to be loyal to Christ and to His cause means that one must support the Church. This sermon was a masterpiece and one that gripped the entire congregation.

At the close of the sermon, the bishop, in his own quiet way, took an offering for the church debt and raised a sufficient amount to relieve the immediate distress. This service inspired the congregation to such an extent that it is falling in line now in raising systematically by the month, money to be applied on this fund. All praise to our good Bishop Dobbs. He proved to be a great blessing to us. We are happier because of his coming. God bless him.

KINGDOM EXTENSION IN ARKANSAS AND LOUISIANA

By Rev. H. T. Carley, D.D.

Upon the call of Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, the presiding elders of the North Arkansas, the Little Rock, and the Louisiana Annual Conferences met in the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., at 10 o'clock, Tuesday, February 17. All the presiding elders were present—nine from North Arkansas, seven from Little Rock, and eight from Louisiana. In addition, Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, the Conference secretaries of Missions, the chairmen of the Conference Boards of Christian Education, and several others were in attendance. Dr. J. Loyd Decell, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was unavoidably absent. The General Commission on Benevolences was represented by Mr. J. F. Rawls, treasurer of the Board of Missions, and Dr. R. N. Allen, assistant secretary of the Board of Church Extension.

The spiritually uplifting devotional service was conducted by Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Church. After a concise statement of the purpose of the meeting by Bishop Dobbs, Mr. Rawls and Dr. Allen presented clearly and fully the serious condition confronted by the General Boards in view of the decreased receipts from the assessments and the Mission Special last year, and the urgent need of full collections of the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering if we are to escape a tragic situation in our connectional enterprises this year. After a full discussion of the situation, a findings committee was appointed to prepare a statement to the church in the States represented. That statement is as follows:

"1. We desire to express our profound appreciation f the magnificent spirit shown by pastors and people in these times of financial depression.

"2. We urge you to emphasize the place and importance of prayer in this period of instruction and special offering.

"3. That we recognize this as the time when we should exercise faith in God and confidence in our people.

"4. That we urge the pastors to conclude the Kingdom Extension program within the period set by the Annual Conference, sending the money promptly to J. F. Rawls, treasurer, Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tenn."

The conviction was expressed throughout the meeting that what is needed especially at this time is to get the facts of the situation clearly before all our people. There was no emphasis upon "high pressure" methods of collection; rather, the feeling was that a clear understanding of the needs would move our people to do their best through love of God and of the Church.

At the noon hour, the entire group were the guests of Bishop and Mrs. Dobbs at a luncheon, served in the dining room of the church.

A fine by-product of the meeting was the spirit of fellowship developed through the coming together of these representatives of the three Conferences composing the Twelfth Episcopal District, which is so happily and efficiently presided over by Bishop Dobbs.

UNWISE ECONOMY IN HARD TIMES

By Robert E. Speer

There is an economy that is never wise or right. It is economy in making the Bible available for men.

When the days are dark, men need its light.

When the times are hard, men need its comfort.

When the outlook is discouraging, men need its confidence.

When despair is abroad, men need its word of hope.

There are luxuries that may well be spared. There are even necessities that can be curtailed. But the Bible, indispensable at all times, is still more indispensable in times like these today.

The Bible is not a book of political maxims or of economic theories. It is not a book of maxims or theories at all. It is a book of living principles. Its spirit is the spirit of brotherliness and good will. It is a summons to helpfulness: "Bear ye one another's burdens." It is a summons also to self-respecting independence: "Let every man bear his own burden." It teaches charity, but also justice. It calls us to the giving and serving which the strong owe to the weak, and those who have to those who lack; but it also strikes straight and clear at the moral defects in individuals which are responsible for a large part of the suffering of the world; and also at the moral and economic defects in society, in business relations, and in the distribution of the common resources of the world, which are responsible for the remaining part.

Christ is the only hope of individuals and of society. And the Bible is the only book which tells His story. It alone preserves His words, which are spirit and life. It alone records His deeds by which He saved the world and would save it now if we would obey Him.

The best thing men can do is to spread the Bible and to get it read and obeyed. This would be the end of hard times, of poverty, of unemployment, of injustice, or wrong, or war.

The last place to economize is in our gifts to spread over America and the whole world the Gospel and the Book which contains it.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE

The Missionary Institute for the Baton Rouge District was held in Amite, La., beginning at 10 o'clock on the morning of February 6. The attendance was fine and interest in the discussion was very keen. Approximately one hundred representatives from all over the district were on hand for the meeting.

After devotions, which were conducted by Bro. C. C. Miller, of Kentwood, the speakers of the morning were introduced in the following order:

Dr. F. L. Wells, of Baton Rouge, Spoke representing the Commission on Benevolences.

Dr. C. C. Jarrel brought a most helpful and inspiring address covering the interests of the Kingdom Extension program.

Rev. H. N. Brown, of Lafayette, as Secretary of Missions for the Conference, gave an address in explanation of the details of Kingdom Extension Cultivation and at the same time distributed the necessary literature to those present.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, of Alexandria, was also present for an address.

A most appetizing luncheon was served by the ladies of the Amite congregation at the conclusion of the morning session. During the dinner hour a number of speakers were introduced, who gave brief addresses. Among these were Rev. E. M. Mouser, Chaplain of State Penal Institutions, and Brother P. C. Garris, the district lay leader.

We feel that our presiding elder is to be congratulated both for the fine attendance and the splendid interest taken in this institute. The spirit of the meeting was very fine and gives promise of fruitful labors to follow.

Today (February 13) at Chapel services, Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, presented Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, who presides over the Louisiana Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with headquarters at Shreveport. Bishop Dobbs delivered an exceptionally fine inspirational address in which he told the student body that we do not live to be happy; that much of our life has to do with bearing crosses, and that Jesus Christ has the right to indicate to us that we must take them up if we are to live. He said that we could not get away from crosses if we would. In deploring the superficial purposes for which some seek college education, the bishop said: "I would impress upon you this great truth, that we are living now in college, now getting ready to live in the future."

MILLSAPS COLLEGE

A period of cultivation of the spiritual life at the college extended from February 13 to March 20. On February 13-14, Dr. W. D. Weatherford, president of the Graduate College of Y. M. C. A., visited the college for addresses and conferences. Sunday, the 15th through Friday the 20th, a Spiritual Life Conference led by Rev. L. L. Evans of Austin Avenue Church, Waco, Texas, was held. Dr. Evans preached in the morning at the college chapel and in the evening at Galloway Memorial Church. The congregations were made up from the membership of the church and the student body of Millsaps College.

A Rural Pastors' Conference for the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences will be held at Millsaps College, February 26-27, with addresses by Dr. W. M. The visiting pastors will be guests of Millsaps College in the college dormitories and meals will be secured in the college dining room at $1 per day.

The February bulletin of Millsaps College carries a suggestive program on Christian Education for the fifth Sunday in March. This program includes a prayer for the colleges and for students in colleges, and brief sketches of Millsaps College, Whitworth College and Grenada College. Other special programs will be arranged for the other fifth Sundays of the year, which have been designated by the Conference as times for special services for Christian Education. The January edition of the Millsaps College bulletin is a beautiful pictorial setting forth the work of the college with announcements for the new session of 1931-32. Among the important changes to be announced is the reorganization of the college year on the semester basis, and also announcement of the new plan for tuition charges. According to the new plan the amount of tuition for all upper classmen will be dependent upon the record made in college the preceding year. Students whose average falls below 75 will pay $125 tuition; those who average 75 to 89 will pay $100 tuition, the present tuition charge; and all students whose average for the year is 90 and above will pay only $75 tuition. The differential thus introduced is based on the fact that the student doing superior work is less expensive to the college for tuition, tutorage, etc. It is expected to provide additional service to that class of students in the way of supervised study and tutorage.

S. M. U.

The new director of college promotion and editor of Christion Education Magazine for the department of Schools and Colleges, General Board of Christian Education, is Boyd McKeown, B. A., gradute of S. M. U. in 1917. He came to his present position from McMurry College, where he has been dean and head of the department of education since the opening of the institution in 1923. His wide experience in church work is a distinct asset in his new position, according to Dr. W. M. Alexander, in the January, 1931, issue of Christian Education Magazine.

Church, South, the gathering of the Commission on Revision of the Hymnal, which met in joint session with the commission from the M. E. Church, January 6-8, at Washington, D. C. Bishop John M. Mrs. F. Howard Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, addressed the Missionary Interest Group of S. M. U. Tuesday afternoon, February 10, and the School of Theology, Friday, February 13, at noon. In both instances she stressed the needs of China as a mission field ripe for evangelization, and emphasized the power of prayer and obedience to God through Jesus Christ in achieving the apparently impossible. Mrs. Taylor is the daughter-in-law of Dr. J. Hudson Taylor, who founded the China Inland Mission in 1865 on an interdenominational, evangelistic basis, with support derived wholly from free-will offerings. It is today the largest missionary sending body in the world.

FONDREN LECTURES

President C. C. Selecman announces that the Fondren Lectures for 1930-31 will be delivered at Southern Methodist University, beginning April 12, by Rev. F. B. Fisher, Ph.D., pastor, University Church, Ann Arbor, Mich., on the general theme, "The Living Christ in the Modern World." Individual lecture dates, with hour and place, will be announced later. The five titles included are (1) "Ram Mohun Roy, and the Rebirth of Brahman Society"; (2) "Rabindranath Tagore, and Indian Culture at Its Best"; (3) "Sun Yat Sen, and the Chinese Upheaval"; (4) "Toyohiko Kagawa, and the New Japan"; (5) "Mahatma Gandhi, and the Universal Christ."

The attention of the nation was centered on Dr. Fisher last year when he resigned, toward the end of May, as Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the height of his powers, to accept his present pastorate. His successful career had included service as pastor in America, missionary to India, and secretary, Foreign Missions, M. E. Church, and Laymen's Missionary Movement, prior to his election to the episcopacy in 1920 and his assignment to India.

The first Methodist bishop in history to take such a step, Dr. Fisher explained his action in the Christian Century, July 2, 1930, as being due to his desire to serve humanity with the Christian gospel once more through the pastorate, which he felt offered opportunity for more direct and vital contacts than were possible from the position of authority which he held as bishop.

JAMES ALEXANDER GULLY.

Brother James Alexander Gully, one of the pioneer members of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., and for nearly half a century an official member of the church, died at his home in Meridian on Monday, February 2. The funeral services were conducted from the Central Church on the following day by his pastor, Rev. Benjamin L. Sutherland, who was assisted by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder, and Rev. A. A. Little, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Brother Gully was a faithful and true follower of his Lord, and though he reached the age of eighty-three there were never many services held at his church at which he was not present. Deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved loved ones.—J. L. D.

You Are A Member of A Church on Which The Sun Never Sets

The sun never goes down on the evangelistic activities of your Church. It is not provincial, but world-wide. Not bounded by racial or geographic lines, but universal.

The foreign missionary service of Southern Methodism extends to a dozen great nations of the world. It has more than a thousand workers abroad—a thousand churches, 300 schools, 65,000 members.

To maintain all this costs $2,500,000 each year.

Much of this work—$900,000 of it—depends entirely upon the Kingdom Extension Offering. If it fails, your missions will fail. If it succeeds, your missions will continue gloriously to "preach the Gospel to every creature."

Will it succeed in your Church? It will, if our leaders are true and faithful. It will, if the people are given full information about this great enterprise. It will, if every member has a chance to make a free-will offering.

Surely, those of our brethren who have forsaken all and gone "into the uttermost" will be supported by your prayers and your efforts. Rally all the forces to the Kingdom Extension Offering.

THE UNIVERSAL FATHERHOOD OF GOD

By Rev. R. H. Bamburg

In the January 15 issue of the New Orleans Advocate, Rev. John W. Ramsey replies to an article written by Brother S. W. Miller, of Frisco, Texas, and writes a lengthy article denying the "universal Fatherhood of God." He closes by saying, "The conclusion of the whole matter is that the argument that God is not the Father of all men is irrefutable, and the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God is utterly false, and, further, its corollary, the universal brotherhood of man is equally untrue."

Certainly, Brother Ramsey does not mean what this statement seems to imply. He refutes his argument when he says, "This has no refereence, of course, to very small children who, by virtue of the atonement made for them on the cross, are born into the world already inside the Kingdom and are therefore children of the heavenly Father." This statement establishes the universal Fatherhood, also the universal brotherhood of man. Unless he claims this does not apply to every child born into the world. I do not believe for one moment that Brother Ramsey believes that even one single child is born unsaved. So, beyond a doubt he believes in the universal Fatherhood of the whole human family. Also the universal brotherhood of the whole human family. I believe in the universal Fatherhood of the whole human family, also the universal brotherhood of the whole human family in a material or natural sense. I have never believed in the universal Fatherhood of God in a spiritual sense. I have always believed just as brother Ramsey does in regard to children, that they are "children of the heavenly Father." All of them, and so remain till they reach the years of accountability and by sin sever their connections with the heavenly Father and become children of the devil, but this does not, it cannot destroy the fact that they were once God's children. They are God's lost children. I think this is clearly taught in the lost son. "For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost and is found." (Luke 15:24). Jesus tells of the lost sheep, the lost piece of silver, the lost son, showing they did not surrender their claim in each case, even if they were lost. Here Jesus taught the Fatherhood of the "dead," "lost" son. I do not think this parable should have been named the prodigal son, but the love of the father for the lost son. The searching, finding, and rejoicing was to show the love the man had for sheep, and the woman had for her silver or jewelry, leading up to the climax of the real parable, the rejoicing of the Father over the return of the once "dead", once "lost" son. Then when the elder brother tried to deny the brotherhood of this once "dead", once "lost" brother Jesus establishes the universal brotherhood. "It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad for this 'thy brother' was 'dead' and is alive again; and was 'lost' and is found." (Luke 15:32). This father was a representative of God the Father, is a fact I think no one will deny. Jesus also taught this great, irrefutable truth of universal Fatherhood and universal sonship, or universal brotherhood in the story of the rich man. "And he cried and said, "Father Abraham have mercy on me." But Abraham said, "Son, remember." (Luke 16:24-25). In each case the lost son, the rich man in hell still claimed fatherhood. "I will arise and go to my Father." "Father Abraham have mercy on me." If we destroy the universal Fatherhood of God, where does repentence come in? If God is not the Father of the sinner, why should he repent or ask forgiveness of his sins? He has not sinned against his heavenly Father. He would have none.

So Jesus did teach God is the Father of the sinner also Brother Ramsey was mistaken when he said, "The argument that God is not the Father of all men is irrefutable." I have no criticism to make of his scripture quotations, only where he tries to show Jesus was speaking to his disciples only in the Sermon on the Mount. The chapter begins, "And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain; and when he was set, his disciples came unto him and he opened his mouth and taught them saying—." (Matt. 5:1-2). Whom did he teach, disciples only or the multitudes? I think the multitudes, for seeing the multitudes was the cause of him hunting a convenient place to preach to them, and when all those whom he had chosen were gathered together about him and was set he taught the multitudes. This fact is made very clear in the sermon preached from the boat. "And great multitudes were gathered together unto him so that he went into a ship and sat and the whole multitde stood on the shore. And he spake many things unto them. (Matt. 13:2-3). And the disciples came and said unto him, "why speakest thou unto them in parables?" (Matt. 13:10). So the doctrine that Jesus spoke to his disciples only in the sermon on the mount is erroneous and instead of Brother Ramsey proving that Jesus did not teach universal Fatherhood he proves that he did beyond doubt, for he cites Matt 7:11, which reads, "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father, which is in heaven, give good things to them that ask him." That he was not speaking to his twelve disciples only is evident. There is no proof that any of his twelve disciples had any children. Peter was the only one that we have any proof that he was married. They were practically all young men, as Jesus wanted men who could leave home and travel with him, it is reasonable that he would choose men without children. I doubt very much that there was a father in the whole of the twelve. This thought is further substantiated by the fact they objected to the young children being brought to Jesus.

I believe just as Brother Ramsey does in a spiritual sense. But we must make a difference between Sons of God spiritually, and naturally. Paul must have had this same trouble with the Gentiles; doubtless they had been taught the Jews only were the Sons of God. Paul said, "There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written. The first man, Adam, was made a living soul, the lost Adam was made a quickening spirit. Howbeit that was not first, which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual." (I Cor. 15:44-46). "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." (Gen. 2:7). And thus God became the father of every soul. Man was begotten by the breath of God, no man can believe that we have souls to save and dispute the universal Fatherhood of God in a natural sense, nor the universal brotherhood of man. Adam believed in the universal Fatherhood of God and recognized this fact. "And Adam knew Eve his wife; and she conceived and bore Cain and said, "I have gotten a man from the Lord." (Gen. 4:1). I do not think anyone will claim Cain was a son of God spiritually. God recognized this fact. "And Adam knew his wife again; and she bore a son and called his name Seth: For God said she hath appointed me another seed of Able whom Cain slew." Gen. 4:25. Paul taught this truth also. "One Godand Father of all." Eph. 4:6.

The doctrine of the Fatherhood of God is not "at the root of the denial of the virgin birth," as claimed by Brother Ramsey. The first man, Adam, was created not the image of God, with an eternal living soul that could not be killed or die just as God cannot be killed nor die. God had to find some way that He himself could "taste death for every man." (Heb. 2:9). Not some men only. "For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. . . But God commanded his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." Rom. 5:6-8.

God had to beget that part of man which could be killed, could die, so that it could be prepared for heaven, could be resurrected. So as stated by Brother Ramsey, "God was his Father in a unique sense. He was begotten of the Holy Ghost. Matt. 1:18-20. "And the angel answered and said unto her: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee . . . . that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God," (Luke 1:35). So Jesus was begotten of God, not his soul, His body—the natural body. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God . . . . and took upon him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of man." (Phil. 2:5-7). When his blood was poured out, and his body transfigured He could enter heaven. "It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us." (Rom. 8:34). So Jesus was the only Son whose flesh or body was begotten of God. He was God's only begotten Son. Some may object to say the soul was begotten of God, but if they will read the following scripture they will see in what sense the word begotten is used in the scripture, and it does no violence to the truth. Job 38:28. I Cor. 4:15. I Pet. 1:3. If we destroy the great irrefutable truth of universal Fatherhood, universal brotherhood, universal sonship, we have destroyed the whole of our Gospel. God is the Father of all: (1) By creation, (2) Our souls were begotten of Him. (3) He cares for us, the unjust the same as the just. (4) All are born in a saved condition through Christ. (5) He died for all; tasted death for every man.

SEASHORE DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE

The Seashore District Missionary Institute met at Biloxi, Miss., January 13, with Rev. Otto Porter presiding. The attendance was as large as could be expected with all things considered. Several of the pastors were unable to attend because of bad roads and illness.

Rev. E. L. Ledbetter of Pascagoula led the devotions and the presiding elder introduced Mr. O. C. Hull, representing the Conference Board of Christian Education, who explained the correlating features of the Kigdom Extension program.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins presented the Missionary Voice and in a few and forceful remarks spoke of the value of this magazine to the church. Rev. A. W. Martin, of the General Board of Christian Education and assigned to the department of the local church, was the representative Board of Missions charged with the responsibility of giving the members of the institute inspiration and information concerning the coming campaign.

After luncheon, served by the ladies of the Biloxi church, the institute reconvened with Mr. W. D. Hawkins presenting the detailed features of the educational campaign. The pastors each purchased a personal copy of the mission study book, took home with them their boxes of books, and the appointments were announced.

The representatives of the various charges of the Seashore District assured their presiding elder, Rev. Otto Porter, that to the best of their ability not only would the Kingdom Extension Offering be secured, but that an earnest effort would be made to secure full payment on all benevolences.

Under the able leadership of the new presiding elder this district will keep up the record that it has sustained for the past four years of being almost at the top of the list of districts in mission special payments.

A welcome visitor to the institute was Rev. J. T. Leggett of Jackson, who gave a word of encouragement to the congregation.

"FIRST CONGRESS URGED TO FEED ON WILD PIGEONS"

A motion that the members of the first Continental Congress be fed on "wild pigeons," apparently the cheapest food on the market at that time, was made by a Virginia delegate in 1774 in a desire to put the country to the least possible expense in the maintenance of Congress. This information is contained in a statement issued by the George Washington Bicentenial Commission.

The motion was made by Richard Henry Lee, whose famous resolution in 1776 "that these united colonies are, and of a right ought to be free and independent states," paved the way for the Declaration of Independence, according to his son, Ludwell Lee.

When the first Continental Congress assembled in Philadelphia in September, 1774, there had been no provision made for the maintenance of the members while in the discharge of their public duties. A council being held to determine the ways and means of effecting such an arrangement, Richard Henry Lee rose and observed that as he was assured that every member present was desirous of putting the country to the least possible expense, he would move that, during the session, the honorable members be fed on "wild pigeons," that article appearing to be in very great abundance and certainly the very cheapest food that could be purchased.

It is said that Lee, in later life, often congratulated himself upon this motion, declaring it to have been, in purity of patriotism, not second even to his immortal resolve in 1776.

CHILDREN WHO EARN THEIR BREAD

By Miriam Keeler

What kinds of work the hundreds of thousands of child wage earners perform? Most of it is unskilled, repetitive, and monotonous in the extreme.

The report on child labor prepared for the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection last November described factory work done by young girls, as disclosed by a study made in Philadelphia a few years ago, including: "Turning-in, lidding-up, bending, cording, shaping, packing, gluing-off, and wrapping of paper boxes; trimming and finishing of false teeth; pasting, gluing, and packing of leather goods; hooking together of hooks and eyes; separating buttons; bunching artificial flowers; labeling cigar boxes and perfumes; packing candy, cigars," etc.

The Junior Placement Bureau of New York recently announced that of more than 14,000 jobs open for boys between fourteen and eighteen years of age in New York State during 1929-30, nearly half were "for errands pure and simple," and others for "errands plus." Concerning the factory jobs available (one-fifth of the total jobs) the bureau states: "Here the work to be done is of a routine nature, such as packing, assembling, painting, folding, and a multitude of other unskilled operations, for which no training or experience whatever is usually necessary." And in regard to mercantile openings, the bureau reports: "Mercantile jobs include bundle wrappers, stock boys, and shipping clerks, both in the wholesale establishments and in the retail stores."

Only five per cent of all the New York openings were actually apprenticeship opportunities, although some of the "errands plus" jobs include an opportunity to learn an inside trade.

For these "at least a grammar school education has long been a common requirement, and many employers are now insisting also upon high school graduation. Definite trade training also is becoming more and more essential, and there are, too, in many instances, very rigid union requirements which must be met."

Far from being a stepping stone to advancement, "blind-alley jobs" leave the young worker at a positive disadvantage as compared with the boy or girl who has remained in school for a vocational, technical, or commercial course, and is thus ready to enter industry with some degree of skill.

Health Hazards

Many of the jobs open to boys and girls are not only monotonous and unskilled, but involve definitely unhealthful conditions, such as badly ventilated work rooms, poor lighting, bad sanitation; a dust hazard from the particles of wood, lead, feathers, sugar, porcelain, or metal worked with; posture strain or overfatigue from long hours. Some states forbid girls to do work which requires them to stand all day, but this law is not always enforced, even where it exists.

Work about machinery is unsafe for young children or adolescents, and is prohibited by the law of minors under sixteen years in a number of progressive states. Even if the children are not supposed to operate or clean the machines themselves, they not infrequently get their fingers caught through carelessness or clumsiness. In Illinois, in the year 1928-29, the report of extra compensation paid to children under sixteen injured while illegally employed, included forty-two cases of injury to the hand. Twenty-eight children were hurt in operating or cleaning machinery in violation of the law. One, a boy of ten, illegally employed as sweeper in a clothing factory, caught his finger in trying to dislodge a rag from a machine, and was totally disabled for four months. Three fourteen-year-old boys were injured in meat-grinding machines in butcher shops, one of them losing his entire left hand. Elevators and elevator shafts were responsible for six accidents.

Employment hazards are not restricted to factory work and stores, however. Children in street trades, messengers, and helpers on trucks are especially liable to be struck by other trucks, street cars, and busses. Nineteen of the Illinois casualties were of this nature. In a recent case in Texas, an eleven-year-old boy working on a milk wagon at one o'clock in the morning was fatally injured. And Louisiana has recently been aroused by the death of a thirteen-year-old boy, a helper on a laundry truck, after being run down by another truck, to demand better enforcement of the law prohibiting all employment under fourteen years.

In New York, for the four years ending in 1929, out of fifty-seven fatal industrial accidents to minors under eighteen years, twenty-one were vehicle accidents (including six messenger boys, one only ten years of age; eight helpers on trucks, and three drivers). Ten were elevator accidents, although minors under eighteen are forbidden to operate elevators there.

Illustrative cases, however, fail to show the extent of the accident hazard to children in industry. Each year more than two thousand minors under eighteen receive injuries entitling them to workmen's compensation in the single state of New York—which has in many respects one of the best protective laws in the country. In Pennsylvania, in 1928, 4,760 accidents to employed minors were reported.

From Sunrise to Sunset

The White House Conference report stresses the large number of children employed in agriculture—sixty-one per cent of all employed children between ten and sixteen years of age at the time of Census of 1920. Light farm work on the home farm may be unobjectionable, provided it is not allowed to interfere with school attendance. But few people realize the extent to which commercialized agriculture now is employing children, some of them very young. When done in gangs under a foreman, and consisting of the same repetitive motion day after day from sunrise to sunset, such work has just about one advantage over similar repetitive work in a factory, and that is outdoor air. Even this may not always be appreciated, when the work is done under a burning hot sun; or with feet always wet and cold, or in clouds of dust stirred by shaking the beet roots, for example. On the best fields of the Middle West, in the fruit and hop orchards of the Pacific Coast, and in the cranberry bogs and on the truck farms of the Middle Atlantic states, family labor is imported from the cities on a large scale, and all members of the family who are old enough to make any attempt at it are expected to help in the work.

The White House Conference report especially lists some occupations.

One of these is tenement-home work, in which, the report states, work is carried on largely by mothers and children too young to be employed outside the home. Eighteen state departments of labor recently stated that home work was done within their states. Large cities, especially cities in which the men's clothing industry is of importance, are the principal centers of industrial home work, though factory work is known to be carried into rural communities also. The number of persons engaged in the work is not known, but indications are that it is increasing. The kinds of work done include finishing on men's clothing, embroidering, making artificial flowers, and stringing tags; also hair goods, lamp shades, and cheap jewelry. Children usually do carding buttons or snaps, striking tags, or pulling out basting threads, or packing different articles—all monotonous and tiring work. All too often, when one "wonders how" a store can sell this or that novelty at such a low price, the answer is: Through the ill-paid work of children, many of them under ten years old, in tenements. These children often spend all the time that should go for recreation in working, even keeping it up until late at night. * * *

Street Work

A very different form of work is that included under the term "street trades," which covers newspaper and magazine selling and distributing, bootblacks, peddlers, etc. One of the chief difficulties here is that because it can be carried on outside of school hours, it attracts extremely young boys—many newsboys are under twelve, and some under ten years. Such work, in addition to school attendance, means long hours and excessive strain. Street work is especially undesirable for young boys at night, both from the physical and the moral standpoint. The boys meet older "toughs," learn to gamble, hang around pool rooms, and may join gangs which engage in definite delinquent activities.

During 1931 the legislatures of forty-four states will be in session. In many of them child labor bills of one kind or another will be introduced. In several states it is expected that there will be an effort to raise the minimum age for employment from fourteen to fifteen years (half a dozen states already have a fifteen or sixteen-year minimum). In others there will be bills to regulate street trades, or to provide additional compensation for minors injured while illegally employed, or to shorten the legal working hours for children.

The success of such measures to a large extent depends upon public demand for the protection of children from industrial exploitation. There is certainly no need for the labor of children, from an economic standpoint, particularly in these years of depression and unemployment. Another year in school would mean not only a better training for the children themselves, but many an additional job for unemployed adults. When unemployment becomes serious and wages fall, when industry needs workers with a high rate of productivity, and workers want more education and better pay, when society demands that its future citizens shall have sound bodies and well-trained minds, it is time to put an end to employment of children.—Exchange.

Mexico fixed a final limit at four years, Korea at eight, and Brazil a possible continuous re-election which may reach even beyond the length of service ever rendered by one of our bishops. It is possible that experience will cause one or more of the Autonomous Churches to yet adopt the historic form of episcopacy—life tenure.

It is interesting, if not prophetic, to note that the General Conference of Indian Methodism of the Methodist Episcopal Church adopted life tenure instead of a limited term for their bishops. There are over three hundred thousand Methodists in India, and at Cawnpore last December Rev. J. R. Chitambar, Lucknow, was elected their first bishop.

Primarily it isn't what new National Churches have done. But, if the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is to continue a connectional Church, then our well regulated and life tenure form of episcopacy is superior to short term and delimited influence episcopacy. Before the first General Conference in 1792 there was dissatisfaction with the plan of Methodist Episcopacy, and there have been periodic recurrences of movements for a change ever since, but the Church has marched on under the leadership of as great and good men as have served in any Church. Since it is likely that ten or twelve bishops will be ample for the needs of the Church during the next quadrennium, and the terms of those already elected cannot be limited by post facto legislation, instead of capitalizing current events or proposing a Church-wide consideration of limited term episcopacy, it would be better to set ourselves undividedly to the strengthening of the three new Churches and other Missions, and lighting revival fires that will help in "spreading scriptural holiness over the land" and in the "reformation of the republic."

Rev. J. H. Morrow brought to the Advocate office the cash for twelve subscriptions to the Advocate from his charge at Gloster and Liberty, Mississippi Conference. Brother Morrow appears to be in the best of health and spoke of finding much joy in serving the people on his new charge.

Rev. A. K. McLelland, Extension Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, and Miss Elizabeth Langford, Young People's Worker, held a profitable service at Zwolle, La., on Sunday night, February 8. The service included stetreopticon views of Mission work in Louisiana, China and Korea.

Many will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Willie Cameron, who was a devoted and faithful member of the Methodist church on the Matherville charge. Rev. William Cameron, a local preacher and a faithful worker in the church, is a son. He and other loved ones have our deepest sympathy.

Mrs. M. S. Collier, Charleston, Miss., writes: "It is a pleasure to renew my subscription to the Advocate, which has been a welcome visitor in my home for fifty years. I would be sorry to have to do without it." We trust that the Advocate will continue to make its weekly visits for years to come.

Mrs. George B. Taylor, an active chairman of the Christian Literature Committee in the cultured little city of Cleveland, Miss., has our appreciation for eight cash subscriptions. Rev. Melville Johnson, the pastor, is preaching to splendid congregations and all the work seems to be going forward.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, who was for a number of years the capable and successful Conference Sunday School Superintendent of the North Mississippi Conference, returned to the pastorate at the last session of his Conference and is finding much joy in his pastorate on the Coahoma and Jonestown charge.

Mrs. A. W. Langley, wife of the lamented Rev. A. W. Langley, and mother of Rev. W. M. Langley, pastor at Crawford, Miss.,died on Sunday morning, January 11. Sister Langley abided in faith and was waiting for the summons. The last rites were performed by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb and Rev. J. M. Bradley.

Rev. J. B. Shearer continues his good work for the Advocate on the Gueydan, La., charge. We thank him for four additional subscriptions sent in last week. If the other charges within the three Conferences would do proportionately as well as Gueydan, Christian literature would have no trouble in our territory.

Rev. H. L. Daniels, in his third year as pastor at Long Beach, Miss., is heroically meeting the demands of the church n that interesting section. He wrties: "Our new presiding elder, Rev. Otto Porter, is winning his way into the hearts of the people n this distrct." We thank Brother Daniels for six subscrptons to the Advocate.

Mrs. D. S. Purvine, 416 S. Osage Street, Okmulgee, Oklahoma, in renewing her subscription to the Advocate wrote, "I have read and loved the Advocate for so many years, I feel like it would be losing a good friend to fail to receive it every week. It is like the visit of a dear friend." We rejoice that the Advocate can bring good cheer at eventide.

In sending in his second round, Rev. T. J. O'Neal, the forward looking presiding elder on the Meridian district, wrtes: "I am pleased with the outlook in most places. There has been liittle disposition to retrench. Payments on the pastors' salaries are almost up to this time last year." We appreciate Brother O'Neil's leadership in behalf of the Advocate.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, superannuated member of the Louisiana Conference, living at Franklinton, finds great joy in rendering service to extend the nfluence of Christian Literature in that goodly town. Brother Sweeney has our thanks for twenty-one subscriptions to the Advocate. We pray that he may abide in strength and live long to serve "this present age."

Rev. J. H. Moore, pastor, Scooba, Miss., is happy in his work and is looking after all the interests of the church. Brother Moore is a preacher of outstanding ability and the Junior College students at Scooba are fortunate to have him as one of the preachers for that growing college community. We thank him for ten cash subscriptions to the Advocate.

Dr. L. L. Evans, pastor, Austin Avenue, Waco, Texas, conducted revival services at Milisaps College, Jackson, Miss., February 15-22. He preached at the College in the mornings and at Galloway Memorial at the night services. Reports are that there were gracious results on the campus and in the city. Dr. Evans is one of the stronger men of the great Methodism of Texas.

We regret the error made in the initials of Dr. J. H. Rush, who passed away last month in Meridian. We had J. C. when it should have been J. H. Dr. J. Hack Rush was one of the leading surgeons in this sections of the South. He has left to the city of Meridian two worthy successors in his noble profession in his sons, Dr. H. Lowry Rush and Dr. Leslie V. Rush.

Mrs. Ida Doxey, Grand Chenier, La., has been doing most excellent work as chairman of the Christian Literature Committee. We thank her and the pastor, Rev. J. B. Shearer for five subscriptions which makes a total of fifteen from this circuit this conference year. We pray that the paper may contribute something to the success of the work through all the year.

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, who has begun an aggressive pastorate at Mansfield, La., seconded by the "Knight of the Pelican Pines," Dr. S. A. Steele, is meeting with success in all the departments of his work. We thank him for thirty-five subscriptions and a check paying for same. Proportionately this is one of the most satisfactory responses that the Advocate has had this year.

Rev. J. A. Smith, D.D., continues the year at Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss., with increasing success. Large congregations are waiting upon his ministry and every department of the church is going forward. We thank Dr. Smith for seventy-five subscriptions to the Advocate, which thus far is the largest subscription list sent to the Advocate from any church within the three Conferences.

Just before going to press we received a telegram from Rev. W. W. Jones stating that Mrs. J. H. Sherard, Sr., died at her home in Sherard, Miss., near Clarksdale, on Monday, February 23. Brother Sherard will have the deepest sympathy of a host of friends in this great sorrow that has come. There was no "moaning at the bar" for this devout lady who knew her Lord in life, heard His loving call in death.

Ensign and Mrs. Leonard Van Egmond have the sympathy of all who know them. Richard, their fine sixteen-year-old son, was called out in death on January 28. Brother Van Egmond is the leader of the Salvation Army work in Vicksburg and will be appreciatively remembered as leading the music at the afternoon services during the Annual Conference when Rev. M. L. Burton delivered a series of sermons on Pentecost.

In a recent issue, the Houston (Texas) Chronicle, in its Art Gravure section, carried a full page description of the St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, South, showing the exterior, and several views of the interior. This newest member of the Houston church family proves to be a magnificent temple of worship with impressive furnishings and well appointed departments. Dr. J. R. N. Score is the capable and aggressive pastor of this growing congregation that is housed in a $750,000 building.

Rev. W. A. Hays, presiding elder, Haattiesburg, Miss., District, announces quarterly conferences to begin his second round as follows: Taylorsville, at Taylorsville, Mar. 1, 11 a.m., 2:30 p.m.; Magee, at Pinola, Mar. 8, 11 a.m., 2:30 p.m.; Collins, at Seminary, Mar. 15, 11 a.m., 2:30 p.m.; Leakesville, at Winhorn Chapel, Mar. 22, 11 a.m., 2:30 p.m.; Lucedale, at Lucedale, Mar. 22, 7:30 p.m.; New Augusta, at Oak Grove, Mar. 29, 11 a.m., 2:00 p.m.

Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder of the Seashore District, has been indisposed with influenza but is now able to be about his duties again. All doubt about whether a presiding elder had enough to do has been removed and the new elder is now systematizing his work so that he can find time enough to meet all the responsibilities. We are confident that the Seashore District will not only maintain its creditable record but go forward under the leadership of its aggressive presiding elder.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, pastor, and Rev. J. L. Decell, presiding elder, had dinner in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Williams at Tylertown, Miss., on Sunday, February 8. Mr. Williams is the versatile editor of the Tylertown Times, the official weekly of Walthall County. Mrs. Williams is the daughter of Mr. L. S. Felder, Summit, Miss. It was a delight to be in the home and the editor of the Advocate enjoyed it as much as the presiding elder of the Brookhaven district.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Mrs. Malinda Alley Jones, died at her home in Benton, Ark., Sunday, February 8. She was a Mississippian by birth and moved to Arkansas with her parents in early childhood. She was married to Rev. John P. Alley, a Methodist preacher, in 1884. Rev. Mr. Alley died in 1889. Her second marriage was to J. H. Jones, of Benton, who died several years ago. Mrs. Jones was the mother of Mr. J. P. Alley, a Methodist steward in Memphis, Tenn., and creator of "Hambone." By his homely philosophy Mr. Alley has started many a person out on the day's work in a good humor, and now that deep sorrow has come to him he will have the sympathy of thousands who read his suggestive and quaint philosophy.

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at Winter Park, Florida, on February 11. Bishop Berry was a Canadian and came to America at the age of eighteen. He was elected Bishop in 1904 and retired at the Kansas City General Conference in 1928. He was highly esteemed as an evangelistic bishop, though not approving sensational evangelism. He knew and loved the Standard Doctrines of Methodism and more than once was their staunch defender. Though an ardent prohibitionist he disapproved the Church's entering politics, as such, and placed the weight of his official and personal influence upon the spiritual. The nation has suffered a distinct loss in the passing away of this good bishop.

Dr. James C. Ballard, M.D., Lieutenant-Colonel Reserve, Little Rock, Ark., has purchased the cottage on the Seashore Methodist Assembly Ground, formerly owned by Rev. W. W. Moore. It is fitting that Dr. Ballard should spend a part of his time in this historic Methodist environment. His father, Rev. William E. Ballard, joined the Mississippi Conference in 1862; and his maternal grandfather, Rev. Thomas Clinton, entered the same conference in 1823. His great uncle, Rev. W. B. Hines, was one of the faithful preachers of the Conference for more than forty years; while his mother's brother, Rev. George H. Clinton, filled some of the most important appointments in the Conference before his transfer to St. Louis. Dr. Ballard will be welcomed as a member of the Seashore Methodist Assembly family.

The Bulletin of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Santa Anna, California, recently carried the following: "Mrs. Frances Hunt Beeson, supervisor of music in the city public schools, will be with us tonight in the Story of Great Hymns. She is a preacher's daughter and has always been interested in church music. This will be a really enjoyable hour of great inspiration to all who attend." Mrs. Beeson is a daughter of Dr. Rolfe Hunt, of the Mississippi Conference, and the wife of Dr. Marvin Beeson, formerly of Meridian, Miss. We are not surprised at this daughter of the parsonage carrying on in the work of the Church and Kingdom in the far west.

Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, pastor, Nettleton, Miss., in sending in two subscriptions, wrote, "Our people are loyal and fine. They have given the pastor a leave of absence of six weeks to take the course at Vanderbilt University." Brother Hollingsworth avails himself of every opportunity to improve his usefulness and his successful pastorates in the past prohesy a good year on his new charge.

Thirty-eight years ago LUCIE DUNCAN DeGARIS first saw the light of day. By inheritance and by training she had a good chance in the world and used it to the very full. Her father, Perry E. Duncan, was a gentle mannered, modest Methodist preacher who died at his post of duty twenty-five years ago. Her mother, Mary Lee Smith, abides on this side of the river, rich in faith and in good deeds. Miss Lucie's childhood was not different from the experiences that come to most Methodist preachers' children. She finished the High School at West Point and was graduated with the B. A. degree from Grenada College in 1912. She taught Latin in the High School at Oxford for a number of years, and because of her fine character and faithful work she made a host of friends, both among the children and their parents. In 1918 she was happily married to Dr. Charles F. De Garis, who at that time was connected with the University of Mississippi, but now teaches in the department of anatomy in Johns Hopkins University.

No sweeter, gentler spirit ever graced a home or adorned a schoolroom than the rarely exalted spirit of this superior young woman. One who loved her dearly said of her: "She was beautiful in death; there was a peace that passeth all understanding." This same loved one said of her that she was the most saintly person he had ever been associated with. She did not know how to complain, though she was in poor health for many years. She bore her pain and suffering with a beautiful resignation.

At the time of her marriage her health was poor, but she and her young husband were bound together by chords of unusual tenderness and devotion. Her simple faith in God and her uncomplaining resignation in the long days and years of her suffering spoke eloquently of her love for her husband and his devotion to her. Out of her life came a sweet aroma that will delight and gladden the world for many days to come. Her tired body was brought back to West Point, Miss., the home of her people, for interment, and on that long, lonesome journey home Julian, her youngest brother, kept constant vigil. Her funeral was largely attended and was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, assisted by Dr. J. R. Countiss of Grenada College. Farewell for just a while. We will see you again. "None knew thee but to love thee. None named thee but to praise."

Her Reward

When children are weak and rundown, they are easy prey to colds or children's diseases. So it is never wise to neglect those weakening and depressing symptoms of bad breath, coated tongue, fretfulness, feverishness, biliousness, lack of energy and appetite, etc.

Nine times out of ten these things point to one trouble—constipation—and mothers by thousands know this is easily, safely relieved by California Fig Syrup.

Mrs. Chas J. Connell, 1434 Cleary Ave., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I gave Virginia California Fig Syrup for constipation and she was more than rewarded for taking it. It regulated her bowels, helped her digestion, increased her appetite, made her strong and energetic."

The genuine, endorsed by doctors for 50 years, always bears the word California. All drugstores have it.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call to his eternal reward, our brother and friend, A. K. WORTHY, of Sumrall, Miss., whom we had the privilege of knowing for a short time before his death, be it therefore resolved by the Men's Bible class of North Charleston, S. C., first,

That we thank God that we had the privilege of having him as a regular attendant to the class while he was visiting in our community; thereby we came in contact with a man who was a great benefit to us in our attempt to learn of our Saviour; second,

That we solemnly, and yet joyously, present ourselves anew to our Master and ask Him to use us in His service as He sees fit; third,

That we extend our deepest sympathy to his loved ones and pray God's blessings to attend them in their sorrow; fourth,

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, and that a copy be sent to the Conference organ of the Mississippi and S. C. Conferences.

Signed:
L. G. HOLROYD,
Sunday School Supt.;
O. V. BEST,
Pastor, for the Class.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has removed from our midst our loving friend and co-worker, MRS. MAUD LARTER;

Be it resolved, That we bow in humble submission to His will.

2. That our church has lost a faithful member, and our Missionary Society a charter member whose sympathy, prayers and service have been an inspiration to us.

3. That as friends we will sadly miss her fellowship and co-operation in our work for the Master.

4. That we express to her children and loved ones our sympathy in this great sorrow and commend them to Him who is "too wise to err and too good to be unkind."

5. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

MRS. O. L. SAVAGE,
For Committee.

Sumner, Miss.

A CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of thanking the friends and relatives who were so kind during our recent bereavement.

It may not be possible to reply to each message personally, but be assured of our sincere appreciation. Especially did we appreciate the presence of so many members of the Mississippi Conference.

A REPORT FROM PLEASANT HILL CHARGE

Dear Editor: I trust you will give me a little space to tell you and the readers of the Advocate something of the work here on the Pleasant Hill charge.

First of all, I will say my work is in three parishes, DeSoto, Sabine, and Natchitoches, thirty miles long, and has five churches, with over 500 members, scattered from Dan to Bersheba, from the lakes to the Gulf, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific (almost).

I find the spiritual stamp of many great and good men, as they went from house to house and left their holy lives imprinted upon the life of the fathers and mothers of bygone days.

I feel that I am tramping upon holy ground when I approach some of the old church grounds of the circuit, for it was at Beulah (one of the churches of the charge), that many of the Christians of the charge date their first Christian experience. I feel that if the proper steps are taken, and God can use the preacher without hindrance, that we will again hear the shouts of newborn souls around the old camp grounds.

I have met with a wonderful people here, they treat us so nice, and love us so much, until we sometimes feel we are visited with the spirits of just men made perfect. I have found many good people everywhere that it has been my good fortune to serve, but there is a peculiar and unequaled spirit here, above all we have ever met.

Every church has given us a great welcome, and pounded us too, everything that could be done to make us feel that we were among our friends and also among true Methodist people.

The women here just won't let us feed the elder; we had him last Sunday for our first quarterly conference, and just such a dinner as the good women sent to the parsonage you hardly ever chance to enjoy. God bless their hearts, I want the elder to come again.

Well, for fear that this will be too much for some of the former brethren to understand, I will close.

A CORRECTION

Dear Editor: I notice in the minutes of the Louisiana Conference, Campti charge, table 2 shows blank as to the general organ, and also the Conference organ.

I should have reported 15 for Conference, 2 for our General organ. This was a mistake of my own. However, I want to correct it, so I will thank you very much if you see that this is done through the Advocate.

Fraternally yours,
C. B. POWELL.

FROM HAYNESVILLE, LA.

Dear Advocate: The Haynesville charge is getting along fine. Observed Advocate Week with but little results. Dr. Brooks is teaching Kingdom Extension to the men's Bible class on Sunday morning and to the Woman's Missionary Society at their regular meeting. The congregations have about doubled and the prayer meeting is four times as large. Dr. Brooks knows how to lead and the people are following.

A MISSIONARY FEAST

With outstretched hands gather into a heart-shaped bow of love the fragments of broken hearts, lost hopes and discouraged souls, and after discarding all outer leaves of doubts, fears, cares and disappointments place them under the atoning blood, and when they have been washed whiter than snow sprinkle with the oil of sympathy and encouragement and spread over the whole a smile of cheer and goodwill and add a generous supply of the following spices: Kindness, helpfulness, self-forgetfulness, service to others by mutual understanding and congeniality and stir gently with the Sword of the Spirit to the consistency of honey in the rock. Then toss all together graciously in the oil of rejoicing and mix the cream of the Word with a sauce made of the wine from the press which He trod alone, and toss all together carefully and put into the Potter's hands to be molded into the right shape. When it is ready turn onto a platter of self-effacement and surround with unbroken promises and lift up the heart with hymns of praise to His matchless name and it shall be decorated with palms of victory, if, in the center you have placed the cross of Calvary upon which the Rose of Sharon gave His life a ransom for many. Keep constantly in a warm place in the heart, never allowing it to become chilled. Serve, by faith, as you walk in the light of the Bright and Morning Star and on bended knees as you approach the throne of grace, to all who hunger and thirst after righteousness.

All those who partake of it shall come at last to bask in the sunlight of God's eternal love as they rest in the cool shade under the tree of life and drink deep of the water of the river that flows by the throne of God.

INSPIRATION—EDUCATION—RECREATION

On October 6th, the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, Haynesville, South Louisiana, sets sail for a six week's cruise of the Caribbean; Miss Winnie Camp is to be the captain. These ladies invite their friends to join them on this wonderful voyage, during which they are to follow "The Trail of the Conquistadoes" (conquerors) from the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries down to Lindbergh of the twentieth century.

Miss Camp urges all who contemplate taking this cruise to meet at the Methodist church, Monday afternoon, September 29, that they may secure guide books and make all other necessary arrangements before embarking. Dr. Inman, author of the guide book, "Trailing the Conquistadores," has visited these islands and presents the information in a very interesting manner.

ECHO FROM WEEK OF PRAYER

On Tuesday, November 11, the Carrollton Avenue Auxiliary had their Week of Prayer service in an all-day meeting with a lunch at the church served by some of their women.

The meeting was started with the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," followed by a minute's silence at 11 a. m., as the Armistice Day Celebration was started in the city, followed by a beautiful prayer by the pastor.

The regular leaflet was carried out very effectively by different members and greatly enjoyed by all.

On Thursday and Friday the different circles also brought one of the leaflets into their meetings and received much spiritual help from the messages of the Old Saints.

We sincerely hope that our offerings, which were reverently given, may aid greatly in the two places it is so much needed to carry on the work of God's Kingdom among the Cuban people both in our land and in Cuba.

MRS. E. W. BROWN.

NEWTON ZONE MEETING (LIZZIE JOHNSON ZONE)

This meeting was held in Newton, Miss., January 14, 1931, beginning at 10:30, with Mrs. M. O. Idom, zone leader, in the chair, who presided with grace and dignity throughout the day.

The first session was opened with singing the two soul-stirring hymns, "A Charge to Keep I Have" and "Publish Glad Tidings," followed by an earnest prayer, led by Mrs. H. A. Wood.

Mrs. W. T. Johnson, formerly of the North Mississippi and Alabama Conferences, was elected zone secretary and assumed her duties.

Mrs. Will Rush read for our scripture lesson, Rom. 12th Chap., and commented upon the same; Mrs. L. J. Snellgrove, offered a prayer of consecration; after which we were warmly welcomed by Newton Auxiliary, with a response equally as warm brought by Mrs. Smith, from Rose Hill.

Despite the extreme cold, thirty-three delegates and several visitors were present. Among the appreciated and helpful visitors were our presiding elder, Rev. H. A. Gatlin; Revs. H. A. Wood, L. J. Snellgrove, W. L. Blackwell, and Mrs. Neill from Vicksburg.

Lake, Montrose, Newton and Rose Hill auxiliaries responded to roll call. Lake having the largest attendance of any visiting auxiliary, was awarded the banner.

The talks of the morning were brought to us by Mrs. Burton, Montrose, subject, "Stewardship of Time;" Mrs. H. A. Wood, "The Importance of the Missionary Voice;" Mrs. Pruett, Montrose, "The Intelligent Use of the Handbook." Inspirational talks were made by Revs. Blackwell and Snellgrove, and Mrs. Johnson.

A round table discussion on "How to Secure Attendance at the Missionary Society," centering around the fact of giving women something to do. Singing of "Give of Your Best to the Master" and a prayer led by Rev. H. A. Wood, closed the morning session, when we enjoyed a dainty, substantial lunch prepared by the Newton auxiliary. After a pleasant social hour we returned to the work of the afternoon and opened the meeting with singing, "He Leadeth Me;" Mrs. Will Rush again conducting the devotions.

Mrs. McMullin, president of Newton auxiliary, then entertained us with one of her happily inspired poems in rhyme, describing the officers and members of her society, which showed her society to us as being ideal.

We were further entertained and made to feel a keen sense of responsibility when Mesdames Gatlin and Watts sang the duet, "When Methodists Pay Up Their Tithe."

Rev. H. A. Gatlin's inspirational talk came next, exhorting us to make this our best year to study Methodism and kingdom extension, not to fail in our missionary apportionment, or in any of our financial obligations to the church, giving as a solution to our financial problems the practice of tithing and sacrificial giving, closing his talk with the story of Lizzie Johnson, the suffering saint.

From the inspiration gathered from this story and at the suggestion of our leader, we unanimously adopted Lizzie Johuson as the name for our zone, trusting the name may be an incentive to our reaching out for the highest and best.

Mrs. J. L. Neill, our charming visitor from Vicksburg, made a very helpful talk on "Pledges and Reporting," followed by a practical talk on how to be a good member of the Missionary Society, by Mrs. W. T. Johnson.

Next came resolutions from all the societies represented, embracing every phase of our work, and if carried out will make us one hundred per cent. The dedicatory service, led by our zone leader, and prayer of dedication, by Rev. Blackwell, made the resolutions seem all the more binding, and now comes the closing, with a rising vote of thanks to Newton auxiliary to meet in Rose Hill April 23. Benediction by Mrs. H. A. Gatlin.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Epworth League Anniversary Day is the Fourth Sunday in March. The full program for the observance of this day is in the March issue of the Epworth Era.

It is asked that each church observe this day, take an offering and send it in for the work of the Young People. Seventy-five per cent of the offering is spent on young people's work within the Conference. It is also hoped that this program will call the attention of the local church to the needs and opportunities of its own young people.

It is hoped that every congregation will secure a copy of the Epworth Era and have a great service emphasizing the work of the young people.

The third Sunday it was our pleasure to be with Brother W. B. Alsworth and the good people of Tylertown. We met with the workers in the afternoon, with the Leagues in the evening and conducted the evening worship.

They have made extensive repairs on the church and have improved the plan wonderfully. This is a fine people and we expect that they shall continue to press forward and grow. It was a most happy and profitable visit.

Your Missionary Programs are in full in the "Workers' Council." If you will send us the chairman of your Missionary committee we will be pleased to send him a copy of the program for Missionary Sunday.

Please pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemect in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It was our very great pleasure last Sunday to be among our old friends at Batesville. A fine congregation greeted us at the morning hour, and a good group of workers came for a short conference in the afternoon. Rev. R. P. Neblett has the situation fully in hand there and every phase of the work moves along with a fine spirit.

At a recent meeting of the board of managers for the Lexington standard school, plans were perfected for a good school there March 8-13. Three courses will be offered. Bible, the Teachings of Jesus, R. G. Lerd, teacher; Principles of Teaching, J. E. Stephens, teacher; The Program of the Christian Religion, Prof. A. P. Hamilton, of Millsaps College, teacher Workers are expected to attend this school from Durant, Pickens, Goodman, Ebenezer, Acona, Tchula, Blackhawk and Lexington.

Plans for the conference training school at Grenada are taking fine shape. We have been informed recently that Rev. B. L. Schubel, of the General Board, will be with us and teach a course, teaching in the Training Schools. This course is meant for all instructors in both Standard and Cokesbury training work, and for all who wish to be accredited as instructors. This should be a most helpful course as well as most needed one. Also, Dr. W. M. Alexander, who heads up the department of schools and colleges of the General Board will be with us to teach the course, "Rural Situations and Problems." All who heard Dr. Alexander during his visit to our conference for the Kingdom Extension institutes will want to be with him at the training school. Other plans are shaping up and will be announced later. Remember the date, June 8 to 13.

Miss Virginia Thomas, instructor in religious education at Grenada College, has very kindly consented to help put on Daily Vacation Church Schools this year. She has several young ladies in training at the college for this work as well as several who took this training previously and are now teaching and working in different parts of the Conference, who will assist her in this important work. Our conference led the entire church last year in this field of work. We must do so again this year. Many calls are already coming in for schools. It is the most far-reaching work that we can do considering the time given to it. Any church can have a school using largely the local leaders and regular literature with some additional help. More instruction can be given in a 12-day school of this sort than is given in six months in a regular Sunday school session. Make your plans to have such a school and write to Miss Thomas, Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., for help, or to our office.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE

Scarritt College for Christian Workers

The State of Mississippi is well represented at Scarritt. We are even represented on the faculty. Miss Juanita Brown is one of the instructors. Her home is Sallis, Miss. Sallis is in the Grenada District of the North Mississippi Conference. Grenada District, you will recall, is the banner district of the Conference, the claims of the Greenwood District to the contrary notwithstanding.

We are also well represented in the student body at Scarritt. The following young ladies from Mississippi are students at Scarritt: Misses Daisy Johnson, Chesley Thorne, Perdita Ward, Winnie Lee Davis, Carleen Selby, and Lucy Carlton. These young ladies are making splendid students.

During a recent visit to Scarritt we met some of the students who are being trained for work in the rural sections of our church. They were very enthusiastic about their work. We certainly need more trained workers in the rural districts and Scarritt will be rendering a great service by training workers for this great task. Possibly the bachelor preachers of our conference are hoping that some of these workers will be sent to this conference.

Some of the girls at Scarritt are being sent there by a woman's missionary conference. They are given a scholarship that pays their board and tuition. This is for the girls who are going to be missionaries. This is a splendid investment for a missionary conference to make. It seems that almost any conference could raise $33, the amount necessary to take care of this scholarship.

Our Epworth Leaguers contribute $4,000 a year to support a chair of hymnology. At Scarritt, Dr. C. C. Washburn is professor of Hymnology there. If you could hear his students sing you would realize that this is a wise investment. They have a splendid choir at Scarritt.

Part of the support of Scarritt comes from the Missionary societies. Each local society is supposed to give four dollars a year. There are about 6880 societies in our connection. So, if each society would give four dollars that would bring in more than $27,000. That gives you some idea of the value of co-operation. Team work is what we need. Team work has put the Woman's Missionary Society on the map.

We felt that our young people would be interested in reading these facts about Scarritt. We certainly have a wonderful institution at Scarritt. We should be proud of this institution and we should give to it our most loyal support. Our girls make a wise choice when they decide to go to Scarritt.

Yours sincerely,
WM. L. ROBINSON.

Mississippi Orphanage News

REV B. F. LEWIS, Editor

VALEDICTORY AND SALUTATORY

This note is both.

For more than twenty years the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., has published a little paper called "Our Homes." This was not a newspaper in a strict sense, as it was devoted exclusively to the interest of this Home, and all which concerned it. There were no advertisements taken, and nothing was accepted for its columns except Orphanage news. It was in reality the Home's message to the more than two hundred thousand friends throughout the States. We had over five thousand names on our mailing list. The January issue of Our Home will be our last.

Concentration being the slogan of Methodism these days, Dr. Deceli, editor, and Mr. Chalmers, business manager, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, made us a tender of a page in that splendid paper once a month, and we have accepted. Details have been worked out and with this issue of the Advocate we come from our new home to greet our many friends. You were kind to us in our old home and came to see us. Come to see us now, and above all things let us come to see you. This is not only a cordial invitation, but a pressing invitation.

We wonder if it were not possible to be permitted to come to see all of our old friends? We will have on a new suit—something out of the ordinary today—but we will be just as glad to see you as we were in our old clothes. May we? Write Mr. Chalmers, publisher of the Advocate, or Dr. Deceli telling them you want us.

Remember, when we came alone you only got Orphanage news. If we come in our new clothes, you will not only get Orphanage news, but far more. You will keep up with what is going on in the whole church. It will cost you only one dollar fifty cents for all the church news, and what we give you will be extra.

If you're fat—first remove the cause!

Take one half teaspoonful of KRUSCHEN SALTS in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—in 3 weeks get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished.

Notice also that you have gained in energy—your skin is clearer—your eyes sparkle with glorious health—you feel younger in body—keener in mind. KRUSCHEN will give any fat person a joyous surprise.

Get an 85c bottle of KRUSCHEN SALTS at your druggist's (lasts 4 weeks). If even this first bottle doesn't convince you this is the easiest, safest and surest way to lose fat—if you don't feel a superb improvement in health—so gloriously energetic—vigorously alive—your money gladly returned.

Mrs. Mame Carey of Buffalo, N. Y., writes—"Since I began taking Kruschen Salts I have lost 20 pounds and I feel as if I had lost 50 pounds—I feel so good and the best part of all is that I eat anything I like."

VOTE ON WELL PROPOSITION

We are sure the many friends of the Orphanage are desirous of hearing the result of the referendum vote on a gas well on our property. To date both Conferences have given a large majority in favor of the request of the Board of Directors and the Advisory Committee to grant a franchise, if they so desire.

There are 196 ministers in the Mississippi Conference, including superannuates, both those in the bounds of the Conference and without, also those in the army and navy service. Out of this 196, 205 vote favorably. This, of course, includes lay votes as well as clerical. The laymen have voted largely. Not a single "nay" vote. Votes are still coming in.

There are in the North Mississippi Conference 195 ministers, including superannuates and others. There are more members of the North Mississippi Conference living beyond the bounds of the Conference than in the Mississippi Conference, yet, to date, we have received 168 votes favorable, and not a vote against. The lay members of the North Mississippi Conference voted more generally than did the laymen of the Mississippi Conference, several expressing themselves as frankly favoring the move as well as voting. Votes are still coming in.

Before this paper reaches our people, a meeting of the Advisory Committee will have been held, and we trust steps will already have been taken to put forward this move. It will mean much to us, and in behalf of our two hundred children, and your Board of Directors, we thank you.

MRS. RILEY AND COUPON CAMPAIGN

We feel it might be well to say here that Mrs. Alma G. Riley, our field secretary, is in entire charge of the Octagon Coupon Campaign.

Mrs. Riley very successfully conducted a similar campaign last year, by which we were given a large General Electric Frigidaire, and no one is better qualified to direct this campaign than she.

Of course, all of us will help all we can, but we are working under her immediate direction. Even the superintendent takes orders, instead of giving.

We would be glad for all communications to be directed to her, and all packages of coupons sent directly to her at the Methodist Orphanage, box 36, Jackson, Miss.

We wish to repeat what we said in the beginning, that any and all remittances as a result of this effort will be held strictly for the notes at the bank, and nothing else. They will not pay even interest, only principal.

Our day school won a free trip to the "picture show," as a result of "perfect teeth." School opened in September with every pupil holding a dental certificate.

CONCERNING THOSE SOAP COUPONS

Mrs. Alma G. Riley

Pointed Suggestions

Organize! That is the first word! Thoroughly plan the campaign so that it will enlist every department of your church, the Sunday school, the Missionary Society, the Epworth League. Make your own church one hundred per cent in the use of all six products, viz., Octagon soap powder, Octagon cleanser, Octagon Flooring soap, Octagon chips, Octagon toilet soap. We must use all six of these if we are to reach that goal of 8,000,000 coupons. Remember that always!

After you have done this, go out to enlist EVERY other family in your town. Make it your job to help disseminate the OCTAGON GOOD NEWS to all surrounding churches, if you find it has not gone there. This movement must percolate to the farthermost corners of Mississippi Methodism, every rural church, if we are to reach that objective. This is something we can, every person, and WE MUST!

Get publicity in your local papers, not just once, but several times.

If you live in a small town or community, see that some dealer stocks up with all six Octagon products so that they may be available at all times. Ask him to run a special often of Octagon. If enough consumers request this to justify the dealer, he will gladly comply with all requests—for the time of this campaign at least.

Place a slitted box in the stores near the soap counter, in a prominent place, with a poster on it, asking the general public to buy Octagon and deposit the wrappers therein—for the Methodist Orphanage. Tell your dealer "what is it all about" and transfer your enthusiasm on to him.

Visit all restaurants, boarding houses, small hotels (large hotels use cleaners in barrel quantity usually), agricultural high schools, and ask them to co-operate, offering to call periodically for the coupons.

Ask to present the matter in your local school. Make an Orphanage speech to the children. You can do it and the children will joyously help.

Offer to exchange coupons with your neighbor in this way: ask her to use Octagon products and give you these coupons; in return you will use any other coupon-bearing products she may name and give her those.

Do not feel hesitancy in pushing this project, for you are offering your consumer something for which he gets full value for his expenditure. On the other hand, you are asking him to give to you what, to many, is only a waste product—the wrapper!

Last—if you will cut, count and tie these coupons in bundles of one hundred before mailing to us, you will be of great help. If you have not the time, mail them to us uncut, but it will a stupendous process that cutting, counting and tying of those 8,000,000 coupons WE MUST GET! WE ARE GOING TO GET!

Letters from Friends

We have been receiving quite a number of wonderfully enthusiastic letters from friends concerning our "Soap Proposition" and we are giving excerpts from a few of these that our readers may enjoy them, too. We only wish we had space to publish every one of them.

A pastor of one of our largest churches in North Mississippi writes this: "Yes, we are very much in favor of the "Soap Proposition". Already soap bubbles are floating all around this country. Our committee is organized, they are making their plans and coupons are already coming in. This is a happy idea, it appeals to people, it is psychological, it strikes a common spot. It is everybody's game, the adult, the child and all classes of people. With us it is now taking hold upon our merchants and they are stocking up with the Octagon products. Any information you wish to get over to our people please communicate with our chairman. She has charge of the campaign in this church. She is very much enthused and will co-operate with you in every way."

A lady of very ripe years writes: "I had only to read your appeal in the New Orleans Advocate for the canceling of our debt on the Orphanage to arouse my deepest interest. So this afternoon I read this article at our Missionary Circle of forty members who responded beautifully. I was made chairman, so we will begin to organize and by February 28 we hope to have a fine number of coupons to forward. I am just recovering from a serious illness and while convalescing in my comfortable room with hopeful expectancy I decided that God needed me for a bit of unfinished work and when I read your appeal I said, 'this is my work!'"

A letter from Central Church Meridian says: "This is to advise that we have entered into the soap proposition with all our hearts in our Missionary Society at Central. The president appointed me as general chairman and I wish to give you my plans and at the same time ask for some information."

A letter from a Louisiana town says: "I saw in a Methodist paper in Clinton, La., the proposition the Octagon soap people put up for paying off the debt on the Orphanage. I am a member of the Congregational Church, but until coming to Louisiana, I belonged to the Methodist Church. I would like to know more about this idea. Do you wish the coupons sent direct to you, etc.? I think all Christian people ought to take part in this."

HOW TO GET CREDIT IN THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens, of Jackson, Conference director of Christian Social Relations for the Mississippi Woman's Missionary Conference, reports to us that the coupon activity in each Missionary Society should go through the department of Christian Social Relations, that department thereby getting the credit. We are glad to call attention of the women to this and we hope they will keep account of the number of coupons gathered and report to their conference director.

NOTES

We have passed through the winter with remarkably little sickness. One case of pneumonia, and two little fellows broke their arms playing. Arms heal rapidly.

Our Sunday school is still prospering and improving. The International Senior department meets in the school building, the Junior department in the chapel of the Home, while the little tots gather in two sections in the study hall.

A GOOD DAY AT PRAIRIE METHODIST CHURCH

The Aberdeen District Methodist Ministers' Association met at Prairie Methodist Church, Prairie, Miss., January 23. Rev. W. C. Galceran and his good people gave themselves in making the day a joy to all who were present.

Rev. R. G. Lord preached at 11 a. m. A very wholesome and delicious luncheon was served at the church.

Rev. W. P. Buhrman conducted the devotional for the afternoon session. The following program was rendered:

I. Personal Evangelism, by Rev. S. L. Pope.

II. Knowing the Discipline, by Rev. H. N. McKibben.

III. General News of the Church, by Rev. C. A. Parks.

The program of the whole day was excellent. Everyone who took part, gave evidence that he had studied his lesson.

Rev. W. R. Hammontree, in a very appropriate way gave expression of thanks to Bro. Galceran and his people for their cordial entertainment.

We missed you who were absent and will expect you to be present at the February meeting.

At the close of the meeting the Association adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, in the name of charity and for the expressed purpose of giving material aid to the needy and less fortunate there are being sponsored by organizations and corporations forms of entertainment and amusement such as public dances, Sunday shows and other forms of wordliness that are detrimental to morals and in some cases violative of the laws of the State; and

Whereas, such practice is in violation of a high and righteous principle, and glaring with inconsistency and violation of a law of the land by running Sunday shows to help feed and clothe the needy of today and then by the same law prohibit the owner and proprietor of the show to supply his daily needs in the same way; and

Whereas, this is setting a precedent that is calculated to become an opening wedge for more flagrant violations of all Sunday laws and thus largely destroy the sanctity of the holy Sabbath day;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Aberdeen District Methodist Ministers' Association in session at Prairie, Miss., January 22, 1931, and by all the laymen and laywomen present that the practice referred to above be condemned as subversive to the high moral standing of the people at large and inconsistent with the dignity and integrity of the character of organizations which attempt to relieve in the name of charity and in the name of Him who said, "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me."

Be it resolved further,

That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the Memphis Commercial Appeal, the county papers and the Nashville Christian Advocate and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

STATEMENT OF THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY, BIBLE HOUSE

Following the recent statement by commercial publishers of Bibles that the sale of Scriptures throughout the United States was smaller in 1930 than in previous years the American Bible Society has just announced that the total of 5,565,779 copies of Scripture issued during 1930 from the Society's headquarters at Bible House, Astor Place, New York City, is an increase of more than a million and a half over the figures for 1929. With the exception of 1927 this total of volumes issued exceeds that of any year in the Society's history.

There are still thousands of homes and many thousands of people in the United States who have never owned or even seen a Bible according to statements sent the American Bible Society by its agencies which distribute from Philadelphia, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, San Francisco, New York City, and other large centers throughout the United States.

Statistics are not yet available from the Society's twelve foreign egencies responsible for distribution in territory outside of the United States but from reports already received the indications are that the foreign distribution during 1930 exceeded that of any earlier year.

When you take this compound of laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, you are helping the bowels to help themselves.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the sensible thing to take whenever you are headachy, bilious, half-sick from constipation. When you have no appetite, and a bad taste or bad breath shows you're full of poisonous matter or sour bile.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for 47 years. His prescription always works quickly, thoroughly; can never do you any harm. It just cleans you out and sweetens the whole digestive tract. It gives those overworked bowels the help they need.

Take some Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin today, and see how fine you feel tomorrow—and for days to come. Give it to the kiddies when they're sickly or feverish; they'll like the taste! Your druggist has big bottles of it, all ready for use.

MOTHERS ARE LEARNING USES OF MAGNESIA

From the beginning of expectancy until baby is weaned. That's the time Phillips Milk of Magnesia performs the greatest service for many women.

It relieves the expectant mother's nausea, heartburn, "morning sickness," inclination to vomit; helps her digestion. Its mild but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia is better than lime water for neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding. A teaspoonful of it does the work of a half pint of lime water. It is a mild laxative; harmless, almost tasteless.

All drug stores have Phillips Milk of Magnesia in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Always insist on the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

A Clock, Candle and Jar of Vicks, Kept at This Missionary's Bedside

Mrs. Grace B. Sears, Stationed at a Pingtu, North China Mission, Finds it Always Useful

"I am more thankful than I can express," writes Mrs. Sears, "for all the help your wonderful salve has been to me. I would not be without it immediately at hand, for to my mind its greatest usefulness is that it prevents trouble!

"By the side of my bed on a small table is my clock, a candle and Vicks—I would not go to sleep without having it just where it can be reached easily in the dark! When I travel Vicks goes right along with me in my good basket! It is a most wonderful invention."

Every year, more millions of people all over the world are discovering, as has Mrs. Sears, the advantage of having Vicks handy for prompt treatment of every cold. If treated at the start most colds yield quickly, thus avoiding severe colds and serious complications.

At the first feeling of "stuffiness" in the head, place some Vicks up each nostril and snuff well back. Also melt a teaspoonful of Vicks in boiling water and inhale the steaming vapors. The vapors of Vicks have a most remarkable effect in clearing the air-passages and making breathing easier. If the cold is accompanied by discomfort of the throat, place some Vicks on the tongue and allow it to trickle down the throat as it slowly melts.

At bedtime, in order to get the benefits of its double action, rub Vicks thoroughly over throat and chest, then spread on a thick coating and cover with warm flannel. Vicks acts two ways at once for relief: (1) Through the skin like a poultice or plaster; and (2) its medicated vapors, released by body-heat, are breathed in direct to irritated air-passages. No wonder colds yield so quickly to its attack.

Bishop W. A. Candler was greatly missed at the Missionary Council. He is said to be critically ill and apprehension is felt over his condition. Prayer will be made for the restoration of the health of this devoted servant of Christ and His Church.

We have never accepted that Mahatma Gandhi is a saint. If, as some writers aver, his "victory without violence" means the restoration of child marriage, widow burning, and kindred inhumanities in India, we may well hope that it will be deferred until Mr. Eddington's universe runs down—which event he places the comfortable distance of fifty million or more years in the future.

According to press dispatches released from Geneva, January 22, there are 20,000,000 unemployed in the world. Eleven million of whom are in Europe. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Millsaps College, says that it is the unemployed in the churches that is spreading depression throughout the Kingdom. That is good preaching and sounds like a preacher, but it is from a scientist who loves and serves the Church.

Credentials are among the most valuable possessions of a preacher. A parchment in due form and signed by a bishop is affectionately kept. Bishop Kern says, however, that "a preacher's credentials is his character." Certainly his claim to confidence must be based upon something more than another's signature. Time for devotional study of the Bible and private prayer isn't easily found in this day of crowded schedules and numerous distractions, but it must be found if credentials are kept alive.

"A little child shall lead them." In June sixty boys and girls selected from various parts of the country will assemble in Washington for a "Peace Crusade" to England and France. They have the good wishes of President Hoover and will be received by the King of England and President of France. The Women's National Council of the United States Flag Association is sponsoring the trip. Again and again we build our hopes on our children. A redeemed childhood is the high way to a better tomorrow.

THE GENERAL MISSIONARY COUNCIL

A missionary gathering is of world significance. The Fifth General Missionary Council which was held in New Orleans February 24-26, was said by many to have been the best yet held. Hundreds of people from over the Church attended, and First Church and New Orleans extended delegates and visitors every courtesy.

On the opening night and the next afternoon Dr. F. S. Brockman, a man of our Church who has been a leader in movements toward a Christian world for the last thirty years, delivered great messages. His long service in China has won him renown for his faith. He said: "I once thought only in the material world could men see great changing developments in a short while, but now I know that thousands of people can be changed in their minds and hearts over night." "A nation shall be born in a day."

The platform hour on Wednesday evening was occupied by Bishop Mouzon, who spoke on "The Methodist Church of Brazil." This is destined to prove a memorable utterance. When the illustrious Galloway delivered his address on "Lessons from Master Missionaries" thirty years ago at the first Missionary Conference, the Church needed vision and inspiration—and that address met the need. The success in the intervening years, as contacts have been made with the ethnic religions, has called for concentration upon the supremacy and sufficiency of the gospel of Jesus Christ—and Bishop Mouzon answered that call. He declared that he did not believe Gandhi a Christian and protested against an amalgamated religion. He was sure that only a pure Christianity could meet the world's need and pleaded for placing Christ and His Cross at the center of all our preaching at home and abroad.

Dr. W. G. Cram, General Missionary Secretary, delivered an inspiring address on "The Methodist Church in the Orient." Having had much to do with establishing Korea in the faith, and wide observation of the work in China and Japan, he was able to effectively present the needs and possibilities of that far-off, yet so near, part of the world. Dr. Cram is a Christian evangelist at heart and the Church may feel assured that under his direction all the multiplied activities of missions, educational, institutional and otherwise, are purposed to bring Christ to the peoples of the earth.

Dr. Forney Hutchinson delivered the "Spiritual Life Addresses." He has uncanny powers. He startles and stuns, convulses and convinces, levels and lifts his audience. Through it all, however, no one can mistake that he listened to a man who lifts up Him who said, "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." His emphasis upon a genuine spiritual experience was impressive and convincing.

Principal W. B. Hubbell pressed our obligation to the Indians, and Dr. W. Y. Bell spoke helpfully on "Co-operation Between

WOMEN WHO LABOR IN THE GOSPEL

The twenty-first annual session of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in the First Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., March 10-17. Mrs. F. F. Stephens, president, and Mrs. F. S. Parker, secretary, and their co-workers have arranged splendid programs for the public sessions.

On Thursday evening, the first public session, Mr. Raymond Robbins will deliver an address on "Christian Citizenship and Law Observance." On Sunday morning, March 15, Bishop A. Frank Smith, will deliver the sermon. Bishop Smith was elected at Dallas in May, 1930, and has already won his way into the heart of the Church. Our own Bishop Dobbs will consecrate the candidates for Home and Foreign work, on Tuesday evening, March 17. Mrs. J. L. Cunninggim will have charge of the morning devotions, and Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin the noon worship periods.

Paul requested "help those women who labored with me in the gospel." The ability and efficiency with which woman has labored in the gospel has been one of the romances of the Kingdom. The Council is accessible to the Advocate's territory and many of our people should attend. They will lend an encouraging presence, but will derive more benefit than they will be able to give.

The heart of the Church is saddened by the death of Mrs. Stephens, the Council president, who passed to her reward on Tuesday, February 17, at her home in Columbia, Missouri. This will bring sorrow to the sessions of the Council, for which she so well planned. Mrs. J. W. Perry, vice-president, an elect lady of grace and ability, will guide the deliberations of the Council.

Starting the World Parish

BY DR. PAUL N. GARBER

"I look upon all the world as my parish," were the immortal words of John Wesley, but the missionary sentiment that caused them to be spoken became the possession of all Methodists. No geographical limits have ever been accepted by the followers of Wesley in their attempt to spread scriptural holiness. Especially was this true of the pioneer American Methodists. In the face of discouragements and hardships they laid the foundation of the world parish of Methodism.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was almost forty-eight years old before its first missionary sailed for a foreign land, but there were many reasons to account for the delay. The dire religious conditions of America immediately after the Revolutionary War was a challenge to the Methodists. The circuit riders as they carried the gospel to the frontier were missionaries in the truest sense of the word. There were Indians who were strangers to the Christian message. The Methodists also for many years were without financial resources for a foreign missionary program. It is really marvelous that so much was done by the first American Methodists for the spiritual welfare of the frontiersmen, the slaves and the aborigines.

An impetus was given to Methodist missionary work in 1819 by the organization of the first missionary society of American Methodism. A layman, Gabriel P. Disoway, a young merchant of New York City, was largely instrumental in founding the society. Disoway had heard of the religious work of John Stewart with the Wyandotte Indians. The labors of that ignorant but redeemed Negro appealed to the heroic element in Disoway. He therefore urged Dr. Nathan Bangs, a prominent clergyman of New York City, to form a Methodist society that would sponsor missionary work. As a result of the agitation of Disoway, Bangs, and others, there was organized in New York, on April 5, 1819, the Missionary and Bible Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The first Methodist missionary society had to face many hardships and much opposition. Some promoting missionary work; others claim that Methodists objected to any organized plan of the Church was too poor to support such a society; and many were too busy with other projects to give concern to the missionary cause. Only $823.64 was collected by the society during the first year. Yet, in the face of discouragements, there were some leaders who never lost faith. During the darkest moments in the history of this missionary society, Joshua Soule bravely declared: "The time will come when every man who assisted in the organization of this society, and persevered in the undertaking, will consider it one of the most honorable periods of his life."

It was fortunate for the missionary cause of Methodism that the General Conference of 1820 officially approved the New York Missionary Society. Not only did the General Conference sanction the movement, but the committee on missions made a historic report, which recognized the obligation of Methodism to spread the gospel both in America and in foreign countries. "Can we then," stated the report, "be listless to the cause of missions? We cannot. Methodism itself is a missionary system. Yield the missionary spirit, and you yield the very lifeblood of the cause."

The action of the General Conference had a great influence upon the missionary movement. The pioneer missionary society now had the support of the Church. It became popular after 1850 for local and conference missionary societies to be organized as auxillary bodies to the parent missionary society. The cause of missions was presented annually at the conferences. Soon a disciplinary question, "What has been contributed for missions?" came into use. Missionary agents began to visit the circuits in order to acquaint the members of the spiritual destitution at home and abroad.

Finally, in 1832, the Methodists were able to begin their foreign missionary work. Liberia, in Africa, was chosen as the field of the first foreign missionary endeavors of American Methodism. On November 6, 1832, Melville B. Cox sailed for Liberia. That date marks an epoch in the romance of American Methodism. Luccock says: "The sailing of the first missionary to a foreign land ever sent out by the Methodist Episcopal Church is so significant that it deserves a pause to grasp its large meaning."

Melville B. Cox, who will always have the enviable honor of being the first foreign ambassador of American Methodism, was born in Maine, but was a member of the Virginia Conference when he volunteered for the foreign field. Cox possessed the true missionary spirit. Cox was in poor health, yet he was so vitally interested in the evangelization of Africa that he felt that even his death might help promote Christianity in Africa. "I know I cannot live long in Africa," Cox said to a friend, "but I hope to live long enough to get there; and if God pleases that my bones shall lie in an African grave, I shall have established such a bond between Africa and the Church at home as shall not be broken till Africa be redeemed." Prior to his departure for Africa, Cox visited Wesleyan University. While there he said to one of the students, "If I die in Africa you must come over and write my epitaph."

"I will," replied the young man, "but what shall I write?"

"Write," said Cox, "Let a thousand die before Africa be given up."

Cox reached Liberia on March 7, 1833. He had however hardly begun his work when he died on July 21, 1833. As Cox had predicted, his death proved to be an impetus to the missionary cause. Others took his place in Africa and that great continent became a part of the world parish of Methodism.

South America was the second mission field to be entered by the American Methodists. In 1836 Justin Spaulding sailed as a Methodist missionary to Brazil. In the same year John Dempster went to Argentina. Spaulding started a Methodist mission in Rio de Janeiro while Dempster began work at Buenos Aires. Reinforcements were later sent to both of these men.

The early agents of Methodism in South America suffered persecutions from the Roman Catholic priests. Unusual moves were made to block their labor. They received many threats of personal violence. In Rio de Janeiro a periodical, "O Catholico," was started with the purpose of destroying the influence of the missionaries. In Argentina the Methodists were not allowed to preach without a special license from the government, while in Brazil it was declared illegal for the Methodists to erect a church edifice.

Because of the opposition of state officials and persecution by the priests the first missionaries to South America were unable to accomplish great results. Indirectly, however, they made some progress. The visits of Spaulding, Dempster, Kidder and other missionaries to interior parts of Brazil and Argentina furnished information for later missionaries. A great contribution was made by the distribution of portions of the Scripture and religious tracts. It was found that in Rio de Janeiro that not one in five hundred of the people had ever seen a Bible. Dempster was able to start a school in Buenos Aires. "My school," he wrote in January, 1840, consists of about eighty, of both sexes and of all ages—Creoles, English, Germans, French, Irish and Scotch." The missionaries were able to give spiritual help to the English speaking residents of Brazil and Argentina and to the sailors that came to the harbors.

Methodism made only meager numerical gains in South America during the first half of the nineteenth century. In 1841 missionary work was temporarily suspended there. The Missionary Society in that year declared, "that our labors in South America have been less productive of visible good than we had hoped." The Methodists, however, did not completely abandon South America. Today it is a part of the world parish of which Wesley spoke.

Methodist missionaries also entered China. On September 6, 1847, Judson D. Collins and M. C. White, representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, reached Foochow. Two years later, Charles Taylor and Benjamin Jenkins, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, arrived at Shanghai. These missionaries suffered many hardships, but after years of toil they were able to see some results of their labors. In 1851 Liew-sien-sang, a teacher, became the first Chinese convert of Southern Methodism, while in 1857, Ting Ang, a tradesman, was baptized as the first Chinese convert of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Forty-two years after Bishop Coke had died in his attempt to carry the Methodist message to India, Willliam Butler, representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, reached that country. In the face of political strife and unsettled conditions Butler showed a great missionary spirit and laid the foundation for the future Methodist work in India.

American Methodist missionaries also went to European countries. On November 7, 1849, L. S. Jacoby arrived in Germany and began to organize Methodism there. In the same year O. P. Peterson went as a Methodist missionary to Norway. John P. Larson was in 1854 recognized by the Methodist Missionary Society as the Methodist misisionary to Sweden. In 1857 Methodist work began in Denmark. Wesley Prettyman and Albert L. Long went to Bulgaria in 1857 as representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In order to promote such a missionary program the Methodists needed a large amount of money. It is interesting to note how this was raised. An annual assessment of two dollars was made upon all members of the Missionary Society, but the sum realized from this source was very small. Another method was to take collections at the conference missionary anniversaries. The circuit riders on these occasions would give liberally of their small means. Anthony writes that "the poor preachers sometimes gave all the money they had under the inspiration of this excess of zeal." In order to encourage larger missionary gifts, some conferences printed in the missionary reports the names of all who contributed. Herrick states that in the North Indiana Conference "any person paying ten cents, even though he lived in a backwoods circuit, got his name printed in the minutes." The reports of the missionary rallies of early Methodism are interesting. At the Texas Conference of 1840 one brother arose and exclaimed, "Silver and gold have I none, yet the Lord has greatly blessed me, and I want to do something for his cause. Such as I have I give unto you. I will give a quarter of league of land, on Brazos river, to the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

The Methodist banner was raised prior to the Civil War in Africa, South America, China, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Bulgaria and India, but it was accomplished at a large cost and with great sacrifices. Melville B. Cox was not the only missionary who gave up his life for the cause of foreign missions. Many missionaries buried their children on foreign soil. Professor Cannon has stated that during seventeen years of Methodist missionary work in Liberia "twenty-five white missionaries died in the field or returned broken in health."

Even though the victorious period of Methodist foreign missionary work did not come until after the Civil War, yet the first Methodist missionaries must not be forgotten, for they pioneered the way for those who later reaped the harvest. Those early American Methodists although handicapped by lack of resources longed to do great deeds on the foreign fields. When Bishop Andrew preached the ordination sermon on February 27, 1848, for Taylor and Jenkins, the first Southern Methodist missionaries to China, he made a statement that typified missionary work. Andrew expressed the regret that "instead of a forlorn hope of two missionaries to be sent from the Southern Methodist Church, it was not in his power to send a band of fifty faithful men to the benighted millions of the Flowery Kingdom."

LEADERSHIP BY PREPAREDNESS

By Bishop John M. Moore, D.D.

The Metropolitan Opera House has no greater singer then Gigli, the Italian tenor. He was a fellow passenger with me on the trip from South America. During the twelve days he gave no public exhibition of his fine voice, but every day, and two or three times a day, his voice would ring out from his cabin with marvelous force and beauty as he was taking his vocal exercises. He never let a day, or even a half day, pass without practice. Recently he was to sing in the concert room of a Washington hotel. Before appearing he went into the hotel garden to try out his voice. He had to pass through the hotel kitchen from the garden into the concert room. He sang as he walked. The chef who had forbidden his cooks to sing while at work heard the master, but without looking up, and not knowing to whom he was speaking, shouted, "Shut up that noise." But Gigli only laughed and went on singing. The law of his life as of every other great musician is daily practice. Not only was he trained, but always training.

In the World War military, financial and industrial leadership went inevitably to those ready to execute it. It always happens just so in every field of activity. Prepared men offer the best hope of the highest success.

Mediocres are not wanting half so much in endowment as in development. The Japanese convert trees into shrubs by growing them in confining pots. Gold fish will grow to good proportions if taken from the glass bowl to the freedom of the flowing streams. Ears to hear and eyes to see should be brought to hear and see. Human beings come to themselves only by the laws and processes of growth and development which are spread out everywhere. Getting people ready to do something is the primary and essential task. Too many persons are too willing to rest upon their endowments and too unwilling to go through the grilling process of whetting up their capabilities for keen cut efficiency. In nothing is this true more than in religious work. Conversion and the call to preach have been often relied on as the full sufficiency for ministerial service. Without them, of course, nothing would be ministerially possible, but to stop with them is to discredit both. This is just as true in any other religious work. Too long has it been thought that any good man or good woman, because of their traditional religious heritage and personal piety are entirely qualified to teach the young in revelation and religion. The Church has had its breakdown right here. Christianity in our day suffers sadly from past inefficiency in the teaching church. The Biblical and theological illiteracy of the vast majority of our people is nothing less than appalling. As a result they are at the mercy of every wild wind of doctrine and every blast of infidelity. Goodness is a splendid heritage, but it becomes dissipated unless supported by deep conviction intelligently founded. The laxity of morals and the outbreak of crime can be traced to the lack of definite convincing instruction in the fundamentals of religious life and thought. Before this distressing state shall pass another generation must be produced into whose fiber the iron elements have been wrought. Before regeneration can have a chance there must be a period of generation. The Church is called upon to look well to the production of a people in whom righteousness and truth can be made dominant. The processes by which this production can be accomplished should have first and continued consideration. Growing a race of Christian men and women is an objective worthy of the largest human and Chrstian effort. To fail to make it an essential objective of the Church in this day is to postpone spiritual recovery if not to invite religious disaster.

The feature of the program of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which is outstanding at this time is the training of religious leaders for the pulpit, for the professor's chair, and for teaching in the local church. A prepared ministry has become a necessity. The young minister must not only attend the theological school, but he must get real genuine preparation while he is there. His diploma will become a scrap of paper if he comes away wanting in knowledge, resourcefulness, preaching ability and administrative qualifications. The degrees cannot recommend very greatly the men; the men must be the recommendation of the degrees. Every theological graduate puts on trial the school that endorses him. The training of the school must exhibit itself in trained persons in the field. "Shoddy" gets no commendation in either place.

What about the unprepared man in the Sunday school? He should not be the superintendent. That is evident to everyone, even if he has been in a long time or a short time. He has no business teaching a class of boys, a class of girls or the Bible class. The fact is, teaching in the Sunday school has become as important as teaching in any school, and the same requirements of knowledge of the subject taught and of the pedagogical principles in teaching are just as essential. Poor teaching in the Sunday school is just as much a calamity as it is in the grammar and high school, and should be endured just as little. No less, and in reality more, is at stake in a Sunday school class. Why should not parents be just as much concerned about the teaching of their sons and daughters in the Bible and religion as in science and the classics? Why should not pastors and presiding elders be as much concerned about the efficiency and the effectiveness of the teachers in their Sunday schools as are public school principals and superintendents about the qualifications of their teachers? The teaching function and the responsibility of the Church are too great for any of us—bishops, presiding elders, pastors and parents—to be indifferent to the teacher training system of the Church. Equipping a Sunday school superintendent and teacher is scarcely less vital than equipping a minister. The teacher today is our primary and leading evangelist, our outstanding home missionary, and our most responsible shepherd of the flock.

Then what? Let us give attention, close attention, intelligent attention to the teacher training program. Even more. Let us give co-operation and sympathetic participation in all phases of the training work. Let us help correct any mistakes or deficiencies by counsel without criticism. By processes of training the religious leadership for the new era of spiritual life may be produced. By preparedness only can real leadership come about.

THE QUARTERLY EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM

By Boyd M. McKeown, Director Promotion Department of Colleges, General Board of Christian Education

In paragraph 461, item (3), the new Discipline states that: "It shall be the duty of the local Church Board of Christian Education to see that information concerning the work of our schools and colleges and universities is given regularly to the local church through quarterly programs, thereby emphasizing the importance of these institutions in the educational program of our Church. It is recommended that the fifth Sunday be set apart for this program."

Thus in a well-defined manner the General Conference has indicated a potent agency to be utilized in bringing the membership of the local church into a better understanding of, and into a closer relationship with, this vital phase of Methodism's program. As we, therefore, approach the first fifth Sunday in 1931, it behooves us as pastors and lay officials, early in the month of March, to begin plans which shall guarantee the full carrying out of the purposes of the above legislation in our respective local churches.

In the opinion of those who have studied the question most the desired emphasis upon Christian colleges can best be placed through a well planned and a skilfully directed worship program in the Sunday school, especially in the young people's and adult departments. Such a suggested program, therefore, is printed below and supplementary materials for prepartion of the talks may be obtained both from the church colleges themselves, and from the General Board of Christian Education, Department of Schools and Colleges.

Will you not study this program carefully with a view to using it, or some modification of it, in your church on March 29?

MISSIONARY COUNCIL NOTES

By Rev. James T. Harris

The fifth annual session of the General Missionary Council opened on Tuesday night, February 24, in First Methodist Church, New Orleans, La. Dr. Fletcher S. Brockman's address on "China's Call to the Christian World," was a fitting and inspirational beginning of a great occasion. Not many men are better qualified than Dr. Brockman to tell of China's history, past, present and future. Many were the difficulties that were faced when he reached China as a Y. M. C. A. secretary. He prayed that God might let him see twelve of the educated class brought to Christ. With the passing of years not only twelve, but many hundreds were Christian. When Sherwood Eddy and Dr. John R. Mott came to China to speak on Christian topics, thousands of these educated Chinese crowded the halls to hear them.

Many other evidences of progress were to be seen, but most striking is the fact that today China has a Christian president, and five out of eight cabinet members are Christians.

On Wednesday morning the Council was formally called into session by Dr. Cram. Dr. F. S. Love, secretary of the Council since its inception, called the roll and was re-elected as secretary, with Dr. R. S. Satterfield as assistant secretary. Announcements of committees and local announcements were made. The entire membership of the Council was divided into three general committees on "General Work," "Home Work," and "Education and Promotion." Dr. E. H. Rawlins introduced Dr. W. G. Cram as the speaker of the morning. He spoke on "The Methodist Church in the Orient." Some of the things said in this fine address are as follows: "Missionary spirit is high in the Orient. The missionaries are happy and busy and great progress is being achieved. There are several difficulties to be met. One is the financial need. Present depression is worldwide. The word for depression is the only word learned on a recent visit to Japan. Another difficulty is the wide spread of communistic propaganda and activity. In the beginning the fight was against non-Christian religions, but science and experience have proved these religions inadequate. Another difficulty is the lack of revival fire. Methodists should make more fuss about their religion. Missionary passion will come as a result of a great revival.

"On this recent trip," Dr. Cram said, "I felt a distinct sense of achievement in our missionary work. From an obscure beginning twenty-five years ago one could see a growth to a great church with many adherents, and trained leaders. Especial mention could be made of work in all three sections, Korea, China and Japan. The improved condition of women in these countries is especially gratifying. Today they have equal opportunity with the men in the church.

"A sense of opportunity was also to be felt. In Japan, the door is wide open. The people have seen need for such a God as Christ Jesus. The people have been forced to this sense of need by the great earthquake, fire and other disasters.

"In missionary work in the Orient the M. E. Church, South, does not take second place to any. Leaders in all activities are from our Church. It is a matter of much pride that the great Chinese president is a member of our Church and a sincere Christian."

Bishop Cannon was given quite an ovation as he came to the chair to preside during the forum hour. The first question asked was, "Were the countries in which autonomous churches set-up ready for this step?" Bishop Ainsworth answered for Korea, saying that Korea was ready. Dr. F. S. Love, a member of the commission which set-up the church in Brazil, answered for that country, saying the step was the best thing to do under the circumstances. Dr. Parker, a member of the commission for Mexico, said the laws in Mexico governing churches made the step necessary. Bishop Pascoe, of the Mexican Church, said he believed Mexico would prove the wisdom of the step. In answer to the second question that was raised, Dr. O. E. Goddard said that the setting up of these churches had rather increased our responsibilities, financial and otherwise. The third question raised was, "Has the autonomous church in Japan been a success?" Miss Case, who has been many years a missionary in Japan, said the church has been a great success. To the fourth question, Bishop John M. Moore answered that the time was not at all near when we would not need foreign missions.

In answer to the question, "Why should we maintain missions in Europe?" Miss Trumbull who has just returned from the European field, gave three reasons, the chief of which was that many of the people of Europe wanted a living Christ instead of the dead Christ of their old religion. Each of the bishops and several other leaders spoke in answer to the sixth question, "Is the decline in missionary giving due more to economic depression than to missionary apathy?" The composite opinion was that both apathy and the depression were to blame and that the greatest demand of the situation is that the people be better informed as to the needs. Bishop Cannon spoke briefly on our missionary work in the Congo, with a special mention to the great work of the leper colony.

"The Spiritual Life" address of Dr. Forney Hutchinson, were high points of the whole Council. On Wednesday morning his subject was the "Perils of the Pinnacle." He used the third temptation of Jesus as a basis and brought out the perils of publicity, of prosperity and of prominence.

On Wednesday afternoon, Dr. Fletcher S. Brockman gave another address on China, using the subject, "A New Approach With the Old Power." He told of the adjustment that was necessary in his thinking before he could really accomplish anything constructive. He came to realize that God had got to China before he had, and learned to use the good already there as a means of presenting the gospel of Christ.

In the forum hour the topic was, "The Status of the Missionary Spirit in the Congregation." Dr. J. D. Hammons was in charge of the discussion. The missionary institute was discussed, and it was decided that the missionary institutes are of great value, but that more men from the churches should be attracted to them. In discussing the missionary project the opinion was expressed that a definite missionary special is of spiritual benefit to a congregation. The Missionary Voice was highly praised in the discussion as was the other missionary literature published by our Board.

Dr. Hutchinson's "Spiritual Life" address on Wednesday afternoon was on the "Power of the Holy Spirit." He said that the power of the Holy Spirit was: 1. Power of a clean life and pure heart. 2. Power of an unselfish love. 3. Power of patient endurance, even endurance when under affliction.

On Wednesday night, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon gave a great address on "The Methodist Church in Brazil." He told of the undeveloped resources of the country, and of the needs for the Christian gospel. The Catholicism that is there is that of the Spanish Inquisition type, but there is to be seen a beginning of reforms within that Church. Ignorance and illiteracy are rampant. In Brazil superstition, agnosticism, and positivism are everywhere.

Our Church has done good work in this great country in spite of difficulties. The distance from the United States made an autonomous church almost a necessity. The people did not want independence, only local autonomy. They are very conservative, as shown by the little change made in discipline and doctrine of the Church. Probably the most important changes are that the bishops are elected for a term of four years, subject to re-election, and that the presiding elders are nominated by the bishop, subject to confirmation.

As the first item of business on Thursday morning, a motion was made by Dr. O. E. Goddard that a committee be appointed to draw up a memoir for Mrs. F. F. Stevens, who was president of the General Woman's Missionary Council. Dr. J. W. Perry introduced W. B. Hubbell, principal of our training school for Indians, who spoke on, "Training a Leadership for the Indian Church." There are very few Indians who have more than a grammar school education. The work seems slow, but definite progress is being made. The Indian's suspicion of the white man is one of the great obstacles. If Indians are to be reached it must be through trained Indian leaders. Dr. Perry next introduced Dr. W. Y. Bell, professor of New Testament Interpretation in Colored Theological School in Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Bell spoke on cooperation between the races. Real progress has been made in the last sixteen years. Today, all agree that the negro must be helped if the South is to reach the highest possible place of development. From an economic standpoint the negro worker should be trained and his living conditions improved. What the negro needs is a larger opportunity to help himself. If the negro develops self respect and ability to make a contribution to the nation's life, in that same proportion a race pride and desire for racial integrity will develop among the negro. The white church should not be patronizing toward the Negro, but brotherly. The Negro needs real interested advice from his white brother.

Bishop Jones of the M. E. Church was introduced to the Conference. The forum hour, in charge of Bishop McMurry, had for its topic, "Our Home Mission Policy and Work With Reference to Race Relations." As a result of free discussion the following conclusions were expressed. The Church must maintain schools for other races especially the negro, until the States shall begin dealing justly with them regarding education and even then we will need to maintain Christian schools for them. In the second place, it was decided that union services occasionally between the different races will help toward mutual understanding. Lynching and the mob evil was freely discussed and it was urged that the pastors help mold public opinion against this great evil. It was also decided that it was far better that a majority of the negro leaders be trained in the South, beause Southerners best understand conditions and difficulties here.

Dr. Hutchinson used Revelations 1:8 as a text for his "Spiritual Life" address Thursday morning. As the alphabet is primary to knowledge of literature, so is Jesus Christ primary to Christian knowledge and experience. It makes no difference where or how you find Jesus Christ, but it is necessary that you become personally acquainted with him in a heart knowledge.

The alphabet is a comprehensive key that unlocks all the literature of the world, so is Jesus Christ comprehensive in that it reveals God in all the fullness of His power and glory. Jesus also explains human life with a satisfying explanation.

On Thursday afternoon, Bishop Juan Pascoe, of the Mexican Methodist Church, spoke on the "Methodist Church of Mexico." It would have been fifty years before Mexico was really ready for an autonomous church, but the prevailing conditions and the existing laws made the step absolutely necessary. Mexico has very few preachers who are trained for their task, but in spirit and devotion they are ready for the task of carrying on the Church.

Under the laws of Mexico only a Mexican citizen can function as a minister in any church. The Mexican Methodist Church preserved the doctrine and discipline of our Church almost entirely, the largest change being that their bishops are elected for a term of four years and are not subject to re-election. The Mexican Church is still greatly in need of assistance and co-operation. They have a great future before them and great opportunity for building a strong Methodist Church.

Reports by the committees on "Foreign Work," "Home Work" and "Education and Promotion" were read and adopted.

Dr. Hutchinson's final address on "Spiritual Life" was one of great inspirational value. He spoke on "What goes to make up a real Christian Church." He said our need was not so much material progress as it was increase of spiritual fervor and power. We need a Church that will accomplish real results and will function even when things are difficult. Too many church members are looking for evil in life instead of seeking the beautiful.

The session was closed with prayer led by Dr. Patterson of the South Georgia Conference.

A MESSAGE OF SORROW

"The Woman's Missionary Council is in great sorrow. With this burden upon our hearts, we bring you the message that our honored and beloved president, Mrs. F. F. Stephens, entered into the larger life at 1 o'clock, February 17. Her going is a great shock.

The last few weeks, until Sunday, the 8th, she has been active in the field, attending conference and committee meetings. Sunday, she left Nashville ill; Miss Davies accompanied her. From then she grew gradually worse until Sunday night, when she suffered an apoplectic stroke. The funeral services were conducted on February 18, at 3 o'clock.

Together we suffer in this great sorrow; together we enter into tender sympathy with her beloved husband.

Mrs. Lipscomb, from the secretarial staff; Mrs. Parker, from the executive committee, and Mrs. Piggott, from the council body, will go at once to Columbia to pay our tribute to this dear one, whom we have admired and loved, and now is with those others "loved long since and lost awhile."

You will not forget to pray for the council meeting. The responsibility will fall heavier than ever on each of us."

MRS. J. W. PERRY,
MRS. F. S. PARKER.

(This great sorrow casts a gloom over all Southern Methodism. Truly a great one has fallen. Her able leadership will be missed at the early session of Council. May her mantle fall on others and may the work that she loved so dearly and gave so freely of herself to be upheld by the prayers and co operative efforts of every woman in Southern Methodism.)

MRS. T. B. C.

IN THE INTEREST OF PROHIBITION IN LOUISIANA

Dear Doctor Decell: The position of the Methodist Church with reference to the liquor traffic is too well known to need restatement. Always and everywhere the Church is opposed to the traffic, and is active in its efforts to destroy it.

The people of Louisiana are generally agreed that Dr. A. W. Turner is one of the most efficient leaders of the prohibition cause in the State, especially in its legislative phase. His labors have been of incalculable value in having adopted and maintained our State enforcement law.

At the recent session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, Dr. Turner was appointed, as for several years past, director of the Louisiana Legislative Prohibition League. He has rendered magnificent service in this position; and the need for his skilled labor in this field is as great as ever. It is plain, however, that his success in the work to which he has been appointed by the Conference is dependent upon the opportunity he has to present the cause and the degree of co-operation he receives from preachers and people alike.

At a meeting of the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference held in Shreveport on February 17, this matter was considered; and there was unanimous agreement that it should be brought to the attention of all our people. In this connection, two definite suggestions were made:

1. That all our pastors extend to Dr. Turner a definite invitation to speak in their pulpits, writing him at Shreveport and naming the time when they would like to have him. In view, however, of the impossibility of his being able to reach all our pastoral charges, the additional suggestion is made:

2. That where it is not practicable for Dr. Turner to present the cause personally, the pastor himself present it and take an offering for its support, the amount thus secured to be forwarded promptly to Dr. Turner at Shreveport.

We should not lose sight of the facts that Dr. Turner has been officially appointed to the position he holds, that his maintenance in the work is dependent upon the financial support he receives through the contributions made by our churches and interested friends, and that he has our pledge through Annual Conference action that wo will co-operate with him heartily in the great work in which he is engaged.

In the midst of many other things that engage our attention, let us not forget the great cause of prohibition and the needs of Dr. Turner, our representative in the work.

H. T. CARLEY,
For the Presiding Elders of the La. Conf.

TWO MEETINGS—THE USUAL AND UNIQUE

By Rev. J. L. Carter

The regular and to-be-expected metting which I refer to, was a reception given the public school faculty by the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian Sunday school teachers and officers of our community. This was given in the social hall of the new Baptist church, early in October. The meeting was planned by a central steering committee with assistance from sub-committees. The attendance was very fine. The program was very entertaining, and a fine group of folk went away feeling that it was a very worthwhile affair.

The unusual or unique meeting was held January 9 at the school building. It grew out of an agreement between the pastors of the town and the school superintendent. During last August we decided that at least two meetings where our common task as religious education leaders and secular education leaders could be discussed together would be of great value to both groups of workers. At this meeting the topics: "Direct Versus Indirect Moral Instruction," "The Primacy of the Child," and "All Education Included in Religious Education," were discussed. A good musical program was worked in and also a short social period at the close. The public school faculty took the lead in this meeting in a very happy way.

There is a very noticeable improvement in the general co-operative spirit between teachers and workers of public schools and church schools. I think it is being fostered by such meetings. It is our plan to come together at least once again before the public school is out in May. At this meeting it is possible that workers who have certain age groups in public school and church school will have group meetings for the first part of the session. Then we may come together for a brief closing address and possibly reports or findings. The effort seems very worthwhile to us. It is letting the different churches see that they have a common task. It is also helping school workers of both public school and church school to see that the pupil has one need that extends through seven days in each week instead of a five-day public school need as over against a one-day church school need. Other benefits seem to be coming through, but I shall not discuss them here and now. If they are successful and you would think well I might speak of them later. At the present time we are pleased with this, to us, a new effort toward co-operation and understanding between two of the three greatest institutions in our land.

Union, Miss.

A STATEMENT FROM BROTHERS BURTON AND CAIN

We are grateful to a number of the brethren who have sent, in response to the letter sent out some weeks ago, information concerning the dates of deeds to their church property and the names of trustees. We trust that all the brethren who live in county seat towns, will send us this information as they have opportunity to secure it. Any chancery clerk will help to find it.

We are very anxious for quarterly conference records, church conference records and church registers, old letters, newspaper clippings, and any information concerning Methodism in Mississippi during the period from 1845 until 1870, which naturally forms the first division of the work. We are anxious, however, to have any of these up to the present time. Send them to the Mississippi Conference Historical Society, Millsaps Library, Jackson, Miss. If in doubt as to your authority in the matter please ask the church or quarterly conference for permission. Those that are desired to be returned to the owners will be returned after we have had time to examine them and secure any information within them.

Sincerely yours,
M. L. BURTON,
J. B. CAIN.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE RURAL PASTORS

There will be held, in one of the Sunday school rooms of the Educational Building, First Church, Memphis, Monday afternoon, March 16, at 2:30 o'clock, as a part of the program of the Woman's Missionary Council, a group meeting on "Rural Development."

All pastors serving Mission Charges in the rural sections are invited to be present for this meeting and to have part in the discussions.

It is a matter of regret that lack of funds make it necessary for each person to be responsible for the expenses of this trip. As the special meeting is for just one afternoon it should not require much outlay. There will be no charge, of course, for admission into the group meeting.

Perhaps several of the preachers could arrange to come together in their cars and share the expense of gas and oil.

POSSESSIONS AND PERSONALITY

By C. E. Mathers

In a recent article in one of the most widely read magazines, a writer makes the statement that 2 per cent of the population receive 20 per cent of the national income, and that another group of 15 per cent receive 27 per cent of the national income. The writer claims that the figures are taken from the records of the Department of Commerce.

And still we wonder what is the matter with the country and why there is almost no business. When 17 per cent of the population receive 47 per cent of the income it leaves only 53 per cent to be divided among 83 per cent of the population. The two groups that compose the 17 per cent receive about 5 times as much per capita as the group that composes the 83 per cent population. Summed up it means that approximately 21,000,000 people receive about one-half of the national income while 101,000,000 get the other half.

If the the blood does not flow through the body in the normal way to supply the needs of each part of the system, the body develops disease and if too much continues to flow to one part at the expense of other parts we have paralysis. Money is to commerce just what the blood is to the body. At this time we have every symptom of paralysis; too much being taken by a small group, many of whom render no adequate service for what they take. Two thousand years ago the methods by which wealth passed from the producer to the non-producer were much more crude than those of today. Might was the only arbiter; men took what others had because they were stronger, either physically or politically.

The parable of the rich man and Lazarus is a graphic picture of a condition in which extreme wealth and poverty met face to face every day, neither seeming to realize that the one owed a social debt and the other that he had a moral interest in the things that he produced. The fact that the statement is made that Lazarus was laid at the rich man's gate is an implication in oriental imagery, that the rich man was responsible for the conditions. Also his appeal for crumbs on which to subsist is a charge that the rich man failed to recognize that he was in any way to blame for the beggar's plight. "Moreover the dogs licked his sores" implies that no concern was felt over his suffering by the rich man. Most of these parables use individuals to represent groups or classes and they are couched in parables because they were an indictment against the social order that permitted such injustice and would have been bitterly resented by the ruling class had they been more explicit and direct.

For two thousand years there has been an evaluation in the methods of transfer from the weaker to the stronger element, but the results have been and are about the same. The methods of today are more refined but comparatively produce the same results. We have been boasting of our army of millionaires, little realizing that for every millionaire we create we produce five paupers by comparison.

We treat life as though it were a big joke. We go blindly along accepting the civilization that we find as though it had been plucked from the air without cost to anyone. We seem to give no conscious thought to our indebtedness to the past, our duty to the present or our obligation to the future. Our sense of moral responsibility seems to be exhausted in self.

If we could only realize what our plight would be today but for the sufferings and sacrifices of those who have given us what we have, and then realize that nothing stands still, that unless we improve on the conditions handed to us that they will degenerate and eventually return to their original status we would think less of self and more of the general welfare.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." To analyze this is just to say, pursue a right course in harmony with the things of which the name of God is a symbol and the material things of life will take care of themselves as a secondary though necessary consideration.

We seem to imagine that we have the last there is to be said as a social order; no room for improvement—yet all around us we see an ever-changing order that adjusts itself to changed conditions. Conditions of conduct between men that prevailed a hundred years ago are not always justified in the present era.

Seventy-five years ago most of the Christian churches sponsored human slavery, basing their acts on the fact that the Bible spoke of those in high authority who owned slaves without censure. But we learned that many things contained in the Bible are not commended by it. There are statements made as to the discrepancies of Jacob, David and Solomon that contain no apparent censure, yet reasoning from cause to effect, it does not take a prophet to discover that the Divine law enacted penalties and compound interest for every discrepancy.

Under existing conditions we have no right to censure the rich, for as the rule stands there are few who would not get rich if they could, by one method or another.

Our difficulty comes from the fact that we measure in material values. We judge men and things by what they represent in material terms.

"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exhange for his soul." The man who loses his human contacts and cares only for himself has in reality lost his soul; there can be no divine spark in such a man. Those who become excessively rich to a large extent lose such contacts, have little thought for others. This is, no doubt, due to the fact that material values have been the only values that they have known, and augmented by the fact that their own importance is due to what they have rather than to what they are.

If we magnify service as the true goal to be attained and ostracize those who take more than their share from the common fund without a sense of moral responsibility, we shall have gone far in establishing things on a sound economic basis; for no system can last that does not rest on a moral foundation.

In 1849 we are told that labor received about one-fourth of the revenue from manufactured products, while in 1929 they received less than one-sixth.

Department of Commerce figures seem to show that the average labor cost in the manufacture of a pair of shoes is 34 cents and that the labor cost to make a steel plow is $1.80; and that $50.00 worth of soap is produced at a labor cost of less than $1.00. Add to these the vast sums taken out of the common fund by life insurance and the small percentage returned and we get a fair idea of where the emoluments of labor go. What is the remedy, you ask? First: Labor should share more equitably in the profits. Second: Profits should be less to the consumer. Third: Any excess above a fair compensation to those who operate industry to be re-invested so that more industry will result. Fourth: We should begin to teach men that they owe a debt to the past, that they have a sacred mission in the present, and that a sacred obligation rests on each of us to pass to posterity a better and broader conception of life than that which we received. "And a little child shall lead them."

"SOMETHING NEW"

By Rev. John C. Chambers

The first Sunday in February it was my good fortune to be with the Crawford Street church to observe and aid in a new venture. After a year's study and prayer they decided to try for one month having the preaching service from 9:55 to 10:55 and Sunday school following and the benediction pronounced after Sunday school. At 9:30 the people began to gather; when the organ began at 9:55 about as large a congregation as you would expect was present. I noticed that many of those who came bowed in prayer as soon as they entered and there was a very definite spirit of expectancey felt.

It was also noticeable how the children sat with their parents or with their Sunday school teachers. I noticed several boys about thirteen wandering around and around and I wondered if these boys were going to keep on and spoil the service. But when their teacher came and took his seat they found him, they stood silently near until he had finished praying and then they sat with him as quiet and nice as any one could be. The small children, that is Nursery, Beginners and Primaries, spent the entire two hours in their department rooms. This of course will prevent their teachers from being in the morning service. The Board of Education is already working on a plan that will in a measure relieve this.

People continued to come, children and parents. They sat together. They sang together and took part in the service.

It was communion day. I have never seen such a wonderful service. God was so definitely manifest. Whole families coming to the alter together and partaking of the communion. Over three hundred and fifty communed. It was certainly worth all the effort to have so many families in the service.

This part of the service closed at 10:55. By 11 all the departments were at work. I visited three of the departments. The Young People, the Intermediates and the Juniors, the officers and teachers told me they felt more like working than they had in all their lives. There was an earnestness that simply gripped you and brought tears to your eyes.

The largest communion service that any one present could remember and the largest crowd at a regular church service that they could remember. Sixty-seven more at Sunday school and the offering about $3 more than the Sunday before.

Did everything run perfectly? It did not. But it demonstrated the great possibilities of such a venture, and I do not believe that those who took part in it will ever want to change. An adult class desired to have its worship at the close, but another one close to them desired it at the beginning and that caused much confusion. This will be worked out and that point cleared. The greatest possibility is also the greatest danger, that is the two hours with the Nursery, Beginners and Primaries. If these departments do just busy work it won't be well for the children, but if they will carry out all the planned work as it is planned, using both the Sunday and the week day session materials they will be doing for these children what ought to be done for them. It is going to take hard work on the part of these workers, much study and much prayer. The rewards will far outstrip all our struggles and sacrifices. Proper equipment must be secured for these departments if this program is to go over.

The time schedule must be rather rigidly held to because you are not holding two services in two hours, but one service two hours long.

Do not attempt a program of this sort without going into the entire matter and seeing just how much must be done in order to carry out the program.

A wonderful, happy day was the result of this effort. Many told us of the joy the service brought and how much more they felt the church would mean to them than it ever had.

MY DADDY

"You're worth a million dollars"
  My Daddy said to me,
Because I hugged him around the neck
  And climbed upon his knee.

My Daddy is the bestest man
  In all the world, I know;
And Mother thinks the same as me,
  'Cause Mother told me so.

My Daddy has to work all day;
  But when the sun goes down,
I wait for him beside the gate,
  When he comes home from town.

He grabs me up in both his arms,
  And squeezes me so tight,
I nearly cry; but mother says
  He's loving me just right.

We have our supper, then we sit
  Before the fire a while,
And laugh and talk and hug and kiss
  And sing and play and smile.

Then Daddy tucks me in my bed,
  And Mother hears my prayer;
I know I have the dearest Dad
  And Mother anywhere.

HOW BETTY CAME TO KNOW GEORGE WASHINGTON

By Mrs. W. W. Adams

It was queer how it all happened. Ten-year-old Betty was the only child of a family that lived in the suburbs of a Southern town in George Washington's day. One day there came news that George Washington, at a certain not far distant time, would make this town a visit. At once everybody and everything was astir to get ready for this great occasion. Streets and homes were generally cleaned up. Plans were made for a parade with a brass band, flying flags, music and all that accompanies a parade. Even children of Betty's age were to march in the parade, doing honor to the great visitor.

Betty looked forward to the day with much pleasure. She had a beautiful new white dress and a red sash to wear on that occasion, and in her glee could hardly wait for the time to wear them. At last the day dawned bright and beautiful. Imagine the dismay and heart-breaking disappointment to Betty when early that morning her mother said, "Betty, we have a message that my sister is very ill, nigh unto death, and your father and I must go at once to her. I am so sorry you cannot be in the parade and see George Washington to-day, but we can not leave invalid gradmother all alone with no one to look after her. So with grandmother you must stay at home."

Like most little girls of that day, Betty had been taught obedience, bravery and self-control, so she smothered the sobs that tried to burst through, bravely wiped away a few tears that just would come to the surface, and cheerfully helped her mother get ready for her trip, and even went with father and mother to the gate where she bade them good-bye with a smile.

The morning dragged by slowly, with Betty now and then slipping up the stairs and taking a peep at the white dress and red sash spread out on the bed ready for her to wear.

Late in the morning she said, "Grandmother, I'll make you some corn muffins for your dinner." "Thank you," said Grandmother, "I shall enjoy them." Now that was an accomplishment of which Betty was very proud, for Grandmother said Betty could make corn muffins as good as anybody, and of course Grandmother knew. Just as the muffins were about ready to take from the oven Betty heard a knock at the front door. On answering the knock Betty saw a fine looking, well-dressed gentleman who said, "Good morning, little girl; would you be kind enough to give me a cool drink of water? I am very thirsty." "Indeed I will," answered Betty, "and if you will have a seat I will bring you a glass of milk fresh from the springhouse." "Thank you," he replied, "I think I would relish a glass of cold milk." When Betty returned with the milk he thanked her and, sniffing, said, "It seems to me I catch an odor of something else which smells very appetizing to a hungry man." "Oh, that's my corn muffins—would you like some?" said Betty, as she offered him some muffins on a plate. He ate two as he drank the milk and enjoyed them very much. When he had finished the lunch he said, "Now, tell me why a little girl like you is not in town to-day to see George Washington and the parade?" Now Betty had not intended to say one word about it, but when he so kindly asked the whole tale of her bitter disappointment just tumbled out. He listened closely and when she had finished he said: "To obey is better than sacrifice. Any little girl who can make such delicious muffins and serve them so graciously to a hungry stranger, who can so bravely bear disappointment and who can so honor Father and Mother with cheerful obedience deserves reward; and you have it to-day by being the first little girl in all this community to see and talk with George Washington—for I am he."

WHO TOOK TEDDY?

A True Story

By Grace B. Allen

Mary was so excited over what she found in the largest hen's nest that she could hardly wait to tell Marvin, who was studying his arithmetic in the kitchen. As soon as she saw him she cried: "Marvin, there's $10 in the barn for you."

Marvin was saving money for a wheel. Of course he jumped. "Where? What?" He dropped his book. "You're not fooling?"

"Come, see," begged Mary. She led him to the barn and the biggest nest where Fanny, Marvin's collie, lay with five funny, fuzzy puppies.

"They are beautiful; worth $10 all right," laughed Marvin, and patted Fanny's head, when she barked so proudly. "I can sell every one for $2 per." The little yellow and white things with their wobbly legs were so dear. Marvin took the finest puppy and placed it on an auto cushion. "That is for Mr. Jones. This for the teacher;" he thus disposed of four. But when he saw the fifth he dropped it back into the nest. Oh, he was cross!

"It's a runt; good for nothing. I see $2 gone."

Mary took the trembling puppy to her face, where she held it lovingly. "Did Marvin hurt its feelings?" she begged. She angrily asked her brother: "Do you 'spose mother treated you so when you were weak and sickly? No; she worked until she made you well. I'm 'shamed of you, Marvin Parsons."

Marvin was too badly disappointed to laugh. On Friday he took away the four puppies and returned with a stack of silver dollars. Mary saw him just as he dropped the runt in the duck pond. She ran as fast as she could. With one leap she caught the puppy. She came out with her new dress soaked and a shivering puppy in her arms.

"Mother taught you to be kind to animals!"

"It is kind to drown a pup that no one wants," sullenly answered Marvin.

"I want him," declared Mary very emphatically as she walked away. She loved the puppy already, loved to watch him totter about, loved to teach him. But when he grew older he was troublesome. He tore her overshoe which she had forgotten to put away, hid her cap and chased the chickens. One night, when he was a year old, Mary took him when she and Marvin went for the cows. The runt, whom they now called Teddy, barked at Buttercup, bit her tail, and drove her so far away that Marvin was furious.

"I wish I'd drowned him," muttered Marvin. "If he's good for anything, what is it?"

Mary wrinkled her white forehead, and when she could not think of anything else, she faltered, "He's good to love." When Marvin had flung himself away, she whispered to Teddy, "You're all right, dear; I knew it, but we've got to show them. Let's get a whole nestful of eggs."

They went to the barn. They hunted the orchard. Not an egg. They went to the cowshed. Mary opened the door.

"Teddy, here's a little calf. Oh, the darling!" She stooped to smooth the little wobbly thing, when she heard Buttercup's bellow. It sounded as awful as the roaring of the circus lion. Something big and black, with fiery eyes, struck Mary with its horn and knocked her down. Everything went red. When Mary opened her eyes and tried to rise, her leg doubled up. She could not walk. Was her leg broken? Another roar made her look. The cow was coming with her head down. Mary saw her awful hoofs, her horns with shining brass tips. Oh—Oh—

"Teddy!" she screamed. And just then Teddy caught Buttercup's tail and bit it just as he had done in the pasture. Buttercup whirled to fight the dog. Out of the door Teddy ran with Buttercup after. Mary could hear him barking and Buttercup bellowing, until the noise grew fainter and fainter.

She pulled herself up by holding to the manger. Her leg was broken, but she dragged herself to the door and stood with her leg hanging limply until Marvin, who had heard, came running.

"What in the world, Sis?" cried Marvin.

Mary smiled faintly as she fell over against Marvin.

"Teddy was just showing you;" she smiled again as she closed her eyes.

Everyone wanted to buy the runt when they heard Mary's story. Marvin shook his head. "I'll keep her myself if I never get a wheel," he stoutly declared. "Maybe dad will furnish the rest rather than to have him go out of the family."

Of course, daddy did.—Western Christian Advocate.

RING MY BELL!

Young men! come, come and I will tell you! All of you who have not up to this night quite sold the whole of your birthright. O! never, never do it.

Die, and we shall bury you with honor, and with assurance; but, O! my son, my brother, never, never, till the day of your death, sell to man or woman or devil your divine birthright. Your birthright of truth, and honesty, and honor, and especially of chastity. Sell everything but that!

There must be some men here to-night just at the crisis, and just in the temper, in which Esau came home so hungry from the hunt. There are men in this house who are saying this to themselves: "I am alone. I have nobody to care for me. If I had, it would be different, and I would be a better man. But in all broad Scotland, there is no one for whose sake I need to keep my head above water. Though I go out of this house, and sell myself to hell to-night, no one will lament me. What profit shall it do to me to make any more stand against the gambling table, or the dramshop, or anything else?"

My own son! ring my bell to-night, and I will talk with you and will tell you the rest. I have not lived to gray hairs in a city, and been a minister of city families, and city young men, without learning things about birthrights and their sale and their redemption, too—things that cannot be told on the house-top. No minister in Edinburgh knows more or can speak better about these things than I can do. If you have no minister who can and will tell you about Esau, and about himself, and about yourself, and about Jesus Christ, ring my bell! It will be late that I do not open the door! I will be busy that we do not have another hour over Esau—you and I.

the White and Colored Methodist Churches."

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., presided at the Forum of Foreign Missions; Dr. J. D. Hammons, Education and Promotion; and Bishop W. F. McMurry, Home Missions; with Drs. O. E. Goddard, E. H. Rawlings and J. W. Perry acting as counsellors, respectively.

Bishop Juan Pascoe, of the Mexican Methodist Church, spoke concerning the work in Mexico. No mistake was made in placing him at the head of that young and important Church. Dr. J. W. Perry gave no uncertain utterance against lynchings. The cause, as well as lynching itself, is barbarous, and both should be done away with according to law.

Withal it was a great occasion, full of meaning, and power. The findings, summed up, mean "Forward together."

Rev. M. K. Miller, pastor, Summit, Miss., and his good people entertained the Southern Group Meeting of the Brookhaven District on Thursday, February 19. A delicious luncheon was served by the ladies of the Missionary Society and a helpful program was held throughout the day. Brother Miller has our thanks for six cash subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. C. M. Crossley, pastor, Waynesboro, Miss., in looking after all the interests committed to his care, has not overlooked the Advocate. We thank him for eighteen cash subscriptions to the Advocate and his co-operation with Brother L. L. Matheny on the Waynesboro circuit in getting the interest of the Advocate before the people of that charge.

Rev. J. B. King, recently appointed to the Porterville charge, Mississippi Conference, writes: "The people received us kindly and are constantly remembering us by sending in many good things for the pantry." Brother King has suffered with an attack of influenza since arriving at his new charge, but was able to meet his appointments on the last Sunday in February.

Mrs. W. A. Mecom, Wisner, La., in renewing her subsciption, said, "I have taken the Advocate for fifteen years and look forward to its visit as the coming of a friend. It means much to me." It speaks no little for the necessity of a Christian paper when those who have read it through the years continue to eagerly look forward to its coming.

Mrs. P. W. Shell, of Houston, Miss., writes: "The Advocate grows better every day. I have been reading it and hearing it read all my life. I am now eighty-one years of age." We thank Sister Shell for sending us three subscriptions and surely one of her age working for the Advocate should encourage all the rest of us to help carry on.

Hollifield teaches it to the Woman's Missionary Society. All of the work goes forward in this splendid charge under the leadership of Brother Hollifield.

Rev. C. T. Noble, Ellisville, Miss., a superannuate, in renewing his subscription said, "We enjoy the Advocate thoroughly. It is a great inspiration and helps us to live closer to the Lord." To help in the Christian life is one of the chief missions of the church press, and we pray for Brother Noble good health and much happiness through the new conference year.

Miss Alpha Puckett, secretary of the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., in sending a renewal subscription for Miss E. L. Jolly, writes: "This lady has been a subscriber to the Advocate for almost sixty years and is anxious to not miss a single issue." It is no mean testimony for the merit of a Christian journal to find that those who have read it longest love it best.

Rev. J. B. Cain, the capable pastor at Forest, Miss., and the Newton District Advocate representative, has our thanks for several subscriptions and also helpful suggestions with reference to enlarging the income of the Advocate. Brother Cain has been interested for several years in supplying the tuberculosis Sanatorium at Magee, Miss., with numbers of the Advocate.

Mrs. R. W. Tucker, wife of the late Rev. R. W. Tucker, is now living at 609 S. Monroe Street, Ruston, La. Her brother died two weeks after Brother Tucker's death, and she is now with the children at Ruston. Due to moving and circumstances, Mrs. Tucker has been unable to write each one personally, but deeply appreciates every expression of sympathy during her recent sorrow.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, the resourceful pastor at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., writes: "The work is taking shape and we are trying to get the church better organized. The people have received us very cordially, and are responsive to the leadership of the pastor. I have never served a people more appreciative of the pastor's efforts than the people of Broad Street." We thank Brother Clegg for twelve subscriptions.

Mr. Forest B. Jackson, a prominent young attorney of Jackson, Miss., has recently become a member of the law firm of Green & Green and will continue to make his home in the Capitol city. Those of us who have known him from childhood are not surprised at his increasing success. He is a faithful member of the Methodist Church and has been a worshiper at its altars all of his life, and the Advocate extends to him congratulations and every good wish.

Mr. W. E. Morgan, a useful member of the Methodist church at Greensburg, died in a hospital in Baton Rouge on Wednesday, January 28. Brother Morgan was sixty-one years of age and as the St. Helena Echo states, "had led an upright and useful life. He always stood for the right thing and his sad passing will be greatly mourned throughout this parish." He is survived by his wife and seven children. The Advocate extends sympathy.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

Mississippi Methodism lost one of its illustrious sons when Dr. Dabney Lipscomb passed to his reward on February 10. Dr. Lipscomb was a brother of the late Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, and Mrs. M. L. Hargrove, present instructor in Bible at the Texas Woman's College. He had not only taught for nearly half a century in the schools of Mississippi, but was an author of note and in the midst of all his duties he found time for the services of his church and devotion to his Lord.

Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, an elect lady of Mississippi Methodism, wife of the lamented J. M. Wyatt, has for several years been connected with Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. Mrs. Wyatt is a sister of Senator-Elect Gore of Oklahoma and was connected with Whitworth College prior to her going to Asbury. Her many friends will welcome her back to Mississippi after the close of the present season.

Dr. Rolf Hunt and the other loved ones have the sympathy of their friends in the death of Mrs. Frances C. Hunt, his mother, who died at the home of her son, F. M. Hunt, in Hattiesburg, on February 17. The funeral was held hy Rev. W. H. Lewis, who was assisted by Revs. B. F. Lewis, L. L. Roberts and R. H. Clegg. Sister hunt had reached the ripe age of eighty-eight years and was full of faith and awaiting the summons when the Master called.

Rev. T. M. Browlee, pastor of Noel Memorial, Shreveport, received news just before going into his pulpit on Sunday morning, February 15, that his first grandchild was born in Clarksdale, Miss. The fond parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dan F. Crumpton, and their little son was named Dan, Jr. Notwithstanding this evidence of passing years Dr. Brownlee preached with youthful vigor on the subject, "The Symhpathetic Christ." We congratulate the parents and the grandparents and pray for the little child a life of great usefulness.

Rev. T. A. Ferguson, the studious and hard-working pastor at Meadville and Bude, Miss., has efficiently planned his work for the new year, and with the co-operation of his splendid people is expecting a successful year. We thank him for fourteen subscriptions to the Advocate. What he has done at Meadville and Bude could be duplicated in every charge of the three Conferences and would place the Advocate on a self-sustaining basis as well as enable it to render far better service.

Rev. J. O. Purcell, local preacher, a son of Rev. George D. Purcell, of the Louisiana Conference, has entered the (Nashville) Christian Advocate contest. He hopes to secure by this a five hundred dollar ($500) scholarship in order to complete his education. Anyone subscribing for the Christian Advocate may have it credited to young Brother Purcell and in so doing will receive one of the best Christian journals and help a worthy young man.

Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor, West Point, Miss., in writing of the sudden death of Mr. B. L. Smith, Jr., said: "On Monday, February 9, we lost one of our strongest laymen, who was true to his church and faithful to his Lord. At the time of his death he was chairman of the Board of Stewards, District Steward, and teacher of the Bible class. His entire talent and much of his time was given to the church. He was taken at the early age of forty-eight and will be sorely missed not only by our own church but all of the people of this section."

At the Episcopal Council of the Diocese of Mississippi, held at Biloxi, the following were elected to represent the diocese at the General Convention to be held in Denver, Colorado, next September: Clerical, Dr. Walter Capers, Revs. E. A. DeMiller, Charles Woodson, and Val. Sessions; Lay, Duncan Gray, E. R. Jonts, H. W. Wells, and Joseph Keuhnle. At a former General Session, Dr. Capers, rector, St. Andrews, Jackson, Miss., received a number of votes for bishop. He has an episcopal background, being a descendant of Bishop William Capers, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, "Founder of the Mission to the Slaves." Dr. Capers would worthily wear the honors of a bishop in his great Church.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT IN MEMORY OF THE LATE B. L. SMITH, JR.

In the still hours of night, on February 9, 1931, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call our dear brother and loved one to his eternal resting place.

Whereas, he was the teacher of the Clisby Class and was chairman of the Board of Stewards, and a staunch friend of the Methodist Church, and

Whereas, to those who knew the kindness and gentleness of his simple life and of his complete surrender to labor untiringly for his Master, and

Whereas, we wish to cherish his memory and express a deep sense of our loss in the wise counsel and true fellowship so much appreciated by us, and

Whereas, the Board of Stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, West Point, Miss., has sustained an irreparable loss in his passing; therefore, be it resolved,

1. That the members of this Board endeavor to follow the example set by him in faithfulness and service.

2. That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to the mercy and consolation of our Heavenly Father.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Board of Stewards and copies sent to the family, the West Point Times-Leader and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and also to the Quarterly Conference.

Respectfully submitted,

BAYER ASPIRIN

WILLIAM HARRISON DONALDSON, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Donaldson (deceased), born February 1, 1886, died January 23, 1931. Between these dates there lived in Pontotoc County, Miss., a most useful and honorable citizen, who was most highly respected and beloved by the people of his church and community, a most devoted and loyal husband and father, for 27 years a faithful member of the Ebenezer Methodist Church, on the Algoma Charge, one of the sturdy, dependable kind that constitute the most valuable type of American citizenship. Honest, clean, high-minded, kind, loyal and true, few men are devoted to family and friends like Willie Donaldson. Married to Miss Beulah Whittington, of Pontotoc, Miss., in 1911, she with one son, Richard, a sister, Mrs. F. C. Spencer, and one brother, Walter Donaldson, mourns his going. He had been in ill-health for about two years, was patient and submissible, enjoying visits from his friends as few men do. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Rev. James T. McKibben; interment in the Pontotoc Cemetery. To the devoted widow, son, sister and brother, we extend heartfelt sympathy and point them to Christ, who can comfort them in their sorrow.

W. M. HESTER,
A Former Pastor.

On January 13, 1931, MR. GEORGE H. WASSON went to his eternal reward. Truly, as Dr. Peters, his pastor, said at this funeral, his outstanding characteristics were unselfishness, loyalty and faith. The greater part of his life was devoted to the care of his mother and sisters and he put aside all thought of self and of his own welfare until they were gone. Just two and a half years ago he married Miss Olive Moody, and so congenial and happy were they we can but wonder why he was called away, but it is not ours to question why, rather to believe that "all things work together for good to those who love the Lord."

Mr. Wasson was so loyal to his church—always in his accustomed place, greeting with his cordial smile all who entered the door and co-operating with every pastor that was sent to his church. Neither business or pleasure ever had precedence over his church.

His faith was great and yet as simple as that of a child, and all who knew him feel assured that his greeting at the Heavenly gate was, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." To his sorrowing wife and to other members of his famly we extend sympathy and we take comfort in the thought that if we lived as he lived, there will be a blessed reunion some glad day.

MRS. GEORGE S. BROWN.

Whereas, the Heavenly Father, in his loving Providence, has called to his eternal reward our brother, GEORGE H. WASSON, therefore be it jointly resolved by the Board of Stewards and Trustees of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, La., that:

First, the First Methodist Church has lost one of her most devoted and loyal sons—"an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile"—a man of broad vision, beautiful faith and loving heart.

Second, the Stewards and Trustees have lost a wise counselor, an indefatigable worker, a faithful officer who had rightly won a large place of leadership in the important affairs of the church. His life will be an inspiration to those of us who are left behind. He has "fought a good fight, he has finished his course, he has kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give him at that day."

Third, these resolutions are to be copied in the minutes of the stewards, published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy sent to his beloved widow, whom we commend "to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified."

BOARD OF STEWARDS AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES, FIRST M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

MRS. KATHERIN BARKER, age 84 years, widow of the late D. H. Barker, passed away at 4:30 p. m., January 18, 1931, at her home on Poplar Springs Drive, Meridian, Miss. The deceased is survived by three children, Mr. Albert Barker, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Ella Gould, of Meridian, and Mrs. J. S. Suttle, of San Antonio, Tex. Also by Mr. Ryan Faulk, a grandson. She was laid to rest by the side of her husband, who had preceded her many years, in the Rose Hill Cemetery, Meridian. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. J. Moore, assisted by Rev. C. C. Jones, pastor of the Poplar Springs Baptist church. Many beautiful floral offerings expressed the love and respect of a multitude of friends. A long and useful life has been brought to a close here to enter into a fuller and more beautiful life beyond.

Her friend,
MRS. H. J. MOORE.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has taken MRS. SALLIE A. MASSEY and MRS. MARTHA BOWIE LANGLEY from among us.

Whereas, the saintly fortitude of Mrs. Massey and Mrs. Langley, in hours of pain and sorrow, their unswerving loyalty to the cause of Christ, and their singleness of purpose in behalf of missions, have been an inspiration to all of us;

Whereas, we know that their blessed influence will be felt as the years go by;

Therefore, be it resolved, that we give this expression of our love for these saintly Christian workers and our appreciation of their beautiful Christian lives.

2. That because of their examples before us we increase our devotions to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the secretary's book, and copies be sent to their families, and copies be sent to the church papers, and also to the county papers.

"The missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not all in foreign lands. America is also a mission field, and the work of the Church at home, exclusive of the vast activity of the thousands of self-supporting congregations, is almost as extensive as that in fields abroad. The various Annual Conferences alone spend nearly half a million dollars each year in supporting nearly 2,000 preachers in distinctly missionary territory within their own borders.

ZONE MEETING AT LULA, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of Lula, Jonestown, Coahoma and Dundee, met in the Methodist church at Lula, in group meeting, January 21. The house was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. Geo. Morgan, of Rich, Miss., who presided over the meeting. Mrs. Gladney conducted the devotional, selecting 13th Chapter of Acts for the thought and meditation. In her comments she stressed the prayer life in our auxiliaries, reminding us of the early missionaries, whose every work in the building of His kingdom was born or had its beginning in prayer. Minutes of last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. T. G. Wilsford, of Lula. Roll call was as follows: Dundee, 9 present; Coahoma, 8; Jonestown, 15; Lula, 25. We were honored by the presence of two conference officers, Mrs. Ernest Moore, of Clarksdale, president of Missionary work, and Mrs. H. L. Talbert, also of Clarksdale, who is our district secretary. We were inspired and enlightened by Mr.s H. D. Corley, president of the Clarksdale auxillary, in her message to the group. Officers' training day was the main thought to be discussed, and Mrs. Watt, president of Jonestown auxiliary, arranged a get together of all officers to discuss plans for the year. We were dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Moore. After being served refreshments, we adjourned, feeling that it was a day well spent.

MRS. T. G. WILSFORD,
Sec. Zone Meeting.

A letter from Miss Ruth Heflin, who is now in Scarritt College, as she says, "studying to be better prepared for my work," states she was granted a furlough and took this advantage of entering Scarritt.

She says that Scarritt is wonderful, and it is so good to be with teachers, friends and classmates again. Scarritt is filled to overflowing—120 now eating in the dining room. She with 15 others is domiciled in Peabody College, because of lack of room.

Miss Heflin wishes to express heartfelt thanks and deep appreciation for the splendid co-operation of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences in the Wesley House work, and hopes for a continuation of this beautiful spirit, which will be a source of encouragement to the new workers there.

The program of work as outlined for Miss Heflin is, "Methodism, Principles of Missions, the Rural Church, Religious Education in the Home, research work on Catholicism, and a systematic observance in Sunday school work." We rejoice with Miss Heflin that she has this wonderful opportunity and wish for her health and happiness.

MRS. T. B. COTTRELL.

METHODISM AND KINGDOM EXTENSION

Sixth Chapter

My Prayer

Give me of Thy bounty, Lord,
That I may scatter for thee abroad,
So many upon beds, so sick they lie.
Give me, Lord, their needs to supply.
Give me food and flowers, and love so dear,
A smile, a handclasp, a sympathising tear.
Give me of thy bounty for Jesus' sake,
That the joy of life to these I may take.

The poor, the naked, the hungry feed.
That blessed command may I ever heed.
Oh, Father, so much of pain and sorrow I see,
Give me of thy bounty that I may succor these.

Make me humble, that my walk with Thee
May be a blessing unto the least of these.
Make me faithful, worthy and pure.
An evangel of love to the sick and the poor.

MOLLIE McQUEEN WILLIAMS.

Brightest

From three to twelve. That's the most important period in a child's growth. And that's the time many are retarded physically and mentally by energy-sapping constipation.

Watch your child, mother! At the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, headache, biliousness, lack of energy or appetite, give California Fig Syrup.

This pure vegetable product will cleanse the little bowels without discomfort. It tones and strengthens weak stomach and bowels. In colds or children's diseases, employ its gentle aid to keep the system free from germs and waste.

Mothers everywhere are eager to tell how it helps children. Mrs. H. Mayer, 1737 Marburg St., Dallas, Texas, says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Danny all his life in colds, biliousness, constipation, upsets, or children's ailments. It keeps him the brightest, happiest six-year-old I know."

The originator of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was the late Ray V. Pierce, M.D. At first he practised medicine in Western Pennsylvaania and his unusual ability and success were soon recognized there. Then he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and established the World's Dispensary, where his famous remedies have ever since been made.

Each succeeding year the sale of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been greatly increased. Evidently people appreciate the fact that it increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, helps to enrich the blood, clears the skin of eruptions and blemishes, and makes both men and women feel as they did when they were young. Mothers, Mix This at Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of the trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish,—no danger.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

District Federations of Adult Classes were held last week at Winona and Sardis. These federations were well attended. Rev. C. A. Parks of Amory was present and made a very fine address at both federations. Others took part on the program. These were the first such meetings ever to be held in the Conference. A conference federation was held some years ago, but these were the first district federations, so far as we are able to recall, ever to be held in this Conference. Prof. J. R. Brinson of Kilmichael is president of the Grenada District Federation, and Mr. Bernie Friend of Sardis is president of the Sardis District Federation. Definite plans were made for a bigger and finer meeting of these federations in the spring.

We are holding a standard training school at Amory this week. This is a specialization school. "Junior Worship" is being taught by Miss Martha DuBerry of Nashville, now, but we claim her as our own; "Intermediate-Senior Materials and Methods" is being taught by Rev. Dawson Bryan of Owensboro, Ky.; and "Religious Education of Adults" is being taught by Rev. R. G. Lord. About 70 are enrolled in the three classes and there is a very fine spirit in the school. It is a real school. Specialization classes with over twenty enrolled in them are rather unusual. Rev. C. A. Parks and Rev. W. R. Hammontree, as well as many of the local people, have been very diligent in their preparation for the school.

We are glad to report that the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise or Dual Special Offering was more than $100 more for January than for December, but it is far from what it should be. A very interesting fact connected with this offering is that almost without an exception, where banks have failed or closed the schools have continued this offering. We appreciate this splendid loyalty. If many other schools had the same loyalty and desire to help, we would see this offering mount to the highest figure that it has ever reached.

Are you doing your best to put missionary training in your Sunday school? What can you do?

1. Secure the missionary literature of our church. It may be had in abundance. It is suited to the different departments and classes in the school.

2. Put someone in charge of missionary education in the Sunday school or the whole church.

3. Put on regular programs bearing on missions. These programs are found in "The Workers' Council" and in the little leaflet, "Here and There." "The Missionary Voice" is considered the best missionary journal on the North American continent. Much fine material is to be found in it for making up real good programs.

4. Enlist your school in the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. This is the Fourth Sunday offering or the project supported by the fourth Sunday offering. This fund does missionary work in our own conference and in the Church as a whole. Our work in China is largely dependent upon the Sunday schools of our church for its support. Many weak schools, both in our conference and throughout the whole Church, are dependent upon this offering for life. Every school should be glad to support this worthy project.

The Christian Education Institutes just closed were the most successful institutes it has ever been my privilege to attend. Many who attended came to thank us for the good they received. There were more Sunday school superintendents, more adult Bible class teachers, more workers with young people, and more children's workers than we have ever had before.

These were not institutes of speeches, but of conferences. Many expressed it; "We got a chance to say something."

Mrs. W. H. Watkins of Jackson, Miss., rendered valuable service not only in leading the adult section of the institutes but in furnishing the transportation for four of the team. The conference is greatly indebted to Mrs. Watkins for this fine contribution. Mrs. Watkins also attended the General Workers' Council at Nashville on her own expenses to equip herself for this service.

Mrs. C. F. Nesbitt, Jackson, Miss., led the young people's group. Many fine movements have already developed from her work with these groups. Mrs. Nesbitt paid her own way to Nashville that she might be present when the young people's work was discussed and become acquainted with the work first hand.

Rev. J. B. Cain, Forest, Miss., assistant to the executive secretary, rendered valuable aid both in the young people's sections and in the general discussion. His loyalty and help were greatly appreciated.

Mr. O. C. Hull, Lawrence, Miss., rendered most valuable service to the administration group. He also had the responsibility of presenting the Extension Program to the entire group.

Miss Doris Alford and the district secretaries of children's work had exceptionally profitable group meetings with children's workers. Miss Alford performed a real service to the entire group in teaching good children's hymns.

It is necessary here to give thanks to the loyalty and real service of the presiding elders, without whom these institutes could not have been possible. With such co-operation anything is possible.

Three districts were suffering a scourge of flu which curtailed the attendance at these meetings. Several of the preachers were held at home because of sickness. Below is given the attendance in comparison with last year that you may see the improvement. Number of preachers present last year, 94; this year 119; churches represented in 1930, 111; this year, 153; visitors last year, 2; this year, 24; people present last year, 566; this year, 713. Both years we had 100 per cent attendance of the presiding elders. An attempt was made to present every phase of the entire program. We feel grateful for the fine spirit of co-operation which made this series of meetings possible.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

NOTICE TO PASTORS AND S. S. SUPTS. OF COLUMBUS DISTRICT

The chairman and the Executive Secretary of the Board of Education had requested Rev. J. A. George and me to look after the observance of Sunday School Day in the Columbus District. This year it is more urgent than ever before that we observe this day. The time set is either the first or third Sunday in April or as near thereto as possible. Programs for small schools or large schools can be secured free from the office at Grenada. If you do not have a program, please take on offering anyway and send it in.

W. R. LOTT.

West Point, Miss.

EPWORTH LEAGUE—NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Dear Leaguers: There will not be many more moons before we have our Assembly at Grenada. You will want to mark off the days on your calendar from June 15-19 It will be too bad for you to have some other engagement for that time. All roads should lead our young people to Grenada College that week. If you get on the wrong road you will miss a lot of wholesome fun that week. Pack up your troubles and leave them at home and come on to the Assembly.

We are expecting to have a great Assembly. Dean W. C. Newman has been very successful in his efforts to get a splendid faculty lined up for us. Some of the outstanding men of our Conference will be on the faculty this time. The courses which have been planned will be of great value to you. We have added a course in church music which we believe you will enjoy and appreciate. You will have the privilege of studying the Bible, missions, recreation and various other subjects in which you are vitally interested.

Those of you who have attended the Assembly know what a wonderful time we have there. Many happy memories come rushing into our minds when we think about our experiences at the Assembly in the days that are gone. We want to continue these rich experiences of fine fellowship and wholesome recreation at the Assembly this year. You can't afford to miss this fine fellowship.

We are very sorry to report that Mrs. S. E. Ashmore, secretary of the Greenwood District, has had to give up her work on account of illness. Mrs. Ashmore has made us a very faithful and efficient district secretary. Her district went away with the banner last year. We hope she will be able to be with us at the Assembly this year. She makes a very valuable contribution to the Assembly. Miss Rosa Lee Price is now acting as secretary of the Greenwood District. Miss Price has been assistant secretary of that district for some time. Her home is at Itta Bena, Miss.

The Rt. Rev. Shed Hill Caffey, one of our very efficient young pastors of the Conference, is doing well the work which has been committed to him. Brother Caffey is pastor at Belzoni and he has recently organized a Senior Leaguo and a Hi-League at his church. They have about fifty young people to participate in their programs each Sunday evening. Brother Caffey knows how to get hold of the young people.

Another one of our young pastors is on the job. Rev. W. W. Bruner of Valden has recently organized a Senior League at his church with about twenty-five members. This is Brother Bruner's first year at Vaiden, and we are glad to know that he is getting started off so well.

The Rev. Carl Oakes of Maude, Mississippi, is looking after the interests of his young people. He has a very active League at his church and of course these young people have a very active pastor. At our last Annual Conference Brother Oakes was demoted from the Grenada District to the Greenville District.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

EPWORTH LEAGUE—LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: What are your plans for Anniversary Day? You have received the March Epworth Eras and now have access to the program for the observance of this day. The program is listed for March the 22nd. but we are asking Louisiana Leaguers to observe an earlier date if possible. Many letters have come in from presiding elders and district secretaries stating that they were promoting plans in their particular districts.

Mr. McLellan and I have had some interesting contacts with our workers in Lake Charles and Baton Rouge Districts in the past two weeks. We held group meetings in Many, DeRidder, Lake Charles, Crowley and Lafayette in Lake Charles District. In Baton Rouge District our meetings were in Baton Rouge, Hammond and Bogalusa. We thank the churches in the surrounding towns that made a special effort to attend these meetings. It is our intention to present our new program of organization to the local churches as quickly as possible and these group meetings are expressly for that purpose.

It was my pleasure to be in the homes of friends whose delightful hospitality I always appreciate. To be with Katherine Stevens and Mrs. Richard Frasier in Many, Mrs. Pfost, Mrs Raggio and Mrs. Akers in DeRidder,

This Woman in 4 Weeks Lost 17 Pounds of Fat

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

"Gentlemen: I started taking Kruschen every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

"I had tried going an a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give 'Kruschen Salts' a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has just beeen four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better.

"May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince anyone."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at your druggist's or any drug store in America. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. To help reduce swiftly cut out pastry and fatty meats and go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

The Kruschen way is the safe way to reduce—Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.

SOUTHERN GROUP MEETING OF NEWTON DISTRICT

"We feel things are not so bad after all," remarked a fine Christian lady of Bay Springs (where the meeting was held, January 22) after the rendering of the program. "We feel like we have been to an old-fashioned revival," said another, after the meeting closed.

Brethren, the Lord was sure there with us! The two devotional meetings, by Bros. Higginbotham and Broadus, were spiritual and to the point, and Bro. Henry Wood fired and almost electrified us with a sermon just before noon. "Happy is that people . . . . whose God is the Lord," was his text, and you can guess his subject, "The Happiness of the People of God." No more opportune time, surely, could have been for this subject—when the morale of the people is so low, and depression on every side—what a spiritual tonic to hear such a victorious note! My brethren, I heard, saw and felt enough at this meeting to fully convince me, with Roger Babson, that a nation-wide revival will save us, and it is all that will save us, too! So help me God, I want to do my part!

An informal discussion of "The Importance of the Cultivation Period" of the Kingdom Extension campaign, preceded the sermon. It was interesting.

The ladies of Bay Springs refreshed us so generously with an appetizing spread at the noon hour—just like them!

In the afternoon the subjects, "The Pastor's Duty in the Cultivation Period," and "The Layman's Duty in the Cultivation Period," were discussed.

Rev. J. W. Thompson was elected chairman for the ensuing year, and J. A. Wells, secretary.

Sorry our presiding elder, Rev. Henry A. Gatlin, was unable to be present, being indisposed, and Brother Preston Blackwell's wife's condition kept him from attending, though we are glad she is better at this writing. Brother W. L. Blackwell, too, was not well, which kept him away. Didn't know why Brother Ware wasn't present. The following were present: Brothers H. A. Wood, G. A. Broadus, G. H. Jones, L. J. Snellgrove, C. Y. Higginbotham, J. W. Thompson, W. W. Nelson and J. A. Wells. Yes, and Brother W. J. Ferguson was not well, which kept him away. Sorry any one had to miss this splendid meeting. The attendance was small. Local attendance was good. On with the revival.

J. A. WELLS, Sec.

HONOLULU LETTERS

Honolulu, the melting pot of the world, hula dancers, palm-lined avenues, eternal springtime, flowers, surf riders, beaches, volcano craters, mountains, beautiful homes, fine schools, and business houses that any large city would be proud of—that is Honolulu. One reads of this beautiful land and then does not know what to expect; because no one could ever picture the place as pretty as it really is. The name it goes by, "The Paradise of the Pacific," describes the island as near as one could. It really is a paradise.

When one comes to Honolulu, there is one thing that he is interested in, the world-famous beach, Waikiki. On this beach we find hundreds of tourists and natives lying around basking in the sun. Some are there for the sun, some for a swim, some for sight-seeing, and others for the one great sport, surf-riding. You may have an idea that surf-riding is easy; but, after trying it for hours, I say that it is difficult. The natives ride with the greatest ease and dignity. The surf at Waikiki is very powerful, and when one is lucky enough to catch a wave the fun begins. It all depends upon the rider as to whether he will be able to keep the wave or not. The natives stand erect on their boards, while the beginner lays down and clings tight to his board, and then it sometimes gets away and lands on his head. It is all in the game, however, and one may expect a little punishment while he learns how to ride.

On New Year's night Honolulu is wide open. One of the largest hotels, the Moana, opened this New Year with a big dinner and dance. The tourist season begins with New Year, and it is the night for the Japanese to celebrate. All Japanese are a year older that night, for they all use it as their birthday. If they are born in November or any other time beside the first of January, when New Year comes they are one year old and thereafter use the New Year as their birthday. It is a part of their religion to drink sa-ke, a Japanese intoxicant, at this time, whether they drink at any other time or not.

On New Year's night the boys here at school, there were about seven, got two chickens and stuff to go with them. They cooked what is known as chicken hecker. It is a Japanese food. The chickens were cut up into small pieces. The bones were cut up with the meat, and this was cooked with chopped up onions, potatoes, long rice, and several other things that I had never heard of before. At about 11:30 p. m., they invited me down to eat with them. They had a big pot of rice to eat with this mess. I tried it but I couldn't get away with much of it. We ate with chop sticks. Believe me that is a job. I certainly am glad I am not an Oriental.

In Honolulu is found every nationality in the world. The largest per cent are Orientals. These are very interesting people. They are so bound by traditions that it is very hard to change their ways. It is very interesting to go down to River Street, where they have their stores. They can all talk some English, but it is very hard to understand. They have their own Japanese and Chinese signs, which could easily make one think that he was in the Orient.

I went to a Hawaiian Luau the other night with Bill. Now, a Luau is a big feast. It was given by some of Bill's friends and he took me. It is of course given for profit. The tourists are invited and they have to pay $5 for a ticket.

The first thing we noticed was a mound of dirt out in the side yard, and upon inquiry I was told that it was where they were cooking their pig and potatoes. In about fifteen minutes after we arrived we were told to go out and watch them take the pig out of the ground. They started to take the dirt away and we saw the steam start rising. We were told that the Hawaiians cook their meat this way all the time. The pig is cleaned well and then a fire is built down in a hole which is about 18 inches deep. This fire burns till they heat rocks are red hot. These rocks are put around in the hole and then the pig is put in on them and then some of the rocks are filled in on top of the meat.

In with the pig are put fish, potatoes and other things they want to cook with it. They then cover the pig with leaves so that no dirt can get to the meat. After everything is covered with the leaves, the dirt is put on and the heat is thus kept down in the hole with the pig. These tel leaves are long and wide. It takes about three hours for the pig to cook under the ground, and when it comes out it is certainly well cooked as it comes to pieces when they take it out of the pit.

In about fifteen minutes we were invited to go to the table and start to eating. It all looked good, and most of it was; but there was stuff there that it is hard to believe was made to be eaten. We were told what each bowl of stuff was called and what it was made of. We were told also that we were to eat with our fingers. The Hawaiians had no knives or forks. We had a fork and spoon at our places if we wanted to use them, but I preferred to go native and eat with my fingers. I was quite greasy when I finished, but it was lots of fun.

The best known Hawaiian food is poi. This food is made from the root of a plant called tara, which looks a great deal like the elephant-ear plant. They take this root and pound it into a flour which is very sticky. This is then cooked and looks very much like glue. It is also sticky like glue. The way this is eaten is to stick one, two or three fingers in the bowl and then take it to your mouth, then pull your fingers out with a smack, so that it will sound like it tastes good. I couldn't eat much of the poi, but Bill seemed to enjoy his, the way he went for it. We had pineapple and other things for dessert. These other things were made largely from cocoanut milk and were quite good.

One could write for weeks and still have plenty to tell about this place that has not been yet told by any one. There seems to be something new every day—especially for a newcomer.

DONALD LEWIS.

BACKACHE SPELLS

This Lady's Husband Urged Her To Take Cardui.—Soon Benefited.

Troy, Ala.—"Cardui has done me good, and it has done my 16-year-old daughter so much good," says Mrs. J. W. Jinright, of this place, "that I felt I wanted other women to know the facts about it, so I wrote to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., telling them about my experience with this medicine, Cardui.

"I have used it at intervals for sixteen years, when I suffered from weakness, and it always helped me.

"Mostly I was afflicted with bad spells of backache. At times I felt as if my back would break. I would drag one foot after the other, in a helpless sort of way, and once I got down in bed. My husband urged me to take Cardui, and I soon found what a fine medicine it really was.

"When my second child was little, I was in very bad health. I did not pick up as I should have. I was weak and sickly. I do not believe that I would have come through, but for Cardui."

Thousands of other women have written to tell how Cardui had helped them to health.

Cardui is a purely vegetable remedy and contains nothing harmful or injurious. It may be safely taken by a delicate young girl as well as by a feeble old lady. NC-242

There May be Poison in YOUR Bowels!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system form souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

Elsie Whitman in Lake Charles, Mrs. C. K. Smith in Crowley and Mrs. Harold Demanade in Lafayette was indeed a treat. Then, while in Baton Rouge District, Lillie Mae McQuaid and Grace Cook of Baton Rouge, and the Gramblings at Hammond made me feel most at home.

Letters continue to come to me about the organization of new chapters. This is interesting news always. I am glad that our young people are being so important to our church program.

Shreveport and New Orleans Leaguers, remember the institute dates. We will be having a great time in both institutes and want all young people from the Sunday schools to feel free to attend. There will be a class suitable to your needs. In Shreveport we have the fine help of Mrs. R. E. Smith, Revs. G. A. Morgan and Guy M. Hicks, Misses Louise Mitchell, Gladys Brownfield and Grace Gatewood for class work, with your field secretary. Other pastors will assist us in our worship programs. In New Orleans, we have been able to secure the help of Miss Ina C. Brown of Nashville, with Revs. H. L. Johns, D. B. Raulins, James B. Grambling, J. T. Harris, and Miss Helen Shriner and other pastors of the city assisting in the worship services. Fun and fellowship will be conducted at each institute. Miss Merle Chitwood and Mr. M. M. Abernathy of Shreveport are planning big times for the young people there. In New Orleans, Reverend J. B. Grambling is to furnish the fun with the assistance of every young person joining in.

Miss Hazel Lea Nowell, our Mansfield Leaguer, in school at Cuthbert, Ga., writes that she is having a wonderful time. She attended the Georgia student volunteer conference, where Garfield Evans, B. Frank Pim and other leaders were present.

Miss Yuki Hinata, our Leaguer now at Whitworth, is making a record that we are proud of.

Miss Merle Whitman, on our scholarship at Scarritt, is making splendid reports also.

Are you keeping in touch with the new programs as they come to you through your church periodicals? The March Epworth Era has valuable material. So do the Advocates and Sunday school magazines. Read all you can. It is the best information you can get.

Calvin Coolidge said, "Faith is the great motive power, and no man realizes his full possibilities unless he has the deep conviction that life is eternally important and that his work well done is a part of an unending plan."

Man achieves more by what he is than what he does. How easily and imperceptibly he acquiesces in a mediocre experience and thinks it is the whole of his inheritance. It is mediocrity in spiritual experience that retards the progress of society far more than mediocre intelligence. Masterful ability in the doing of many things brings little benefit, when divorced from "walking in the Spirit."

When the beauty of God has been shut out of the soul, external beauty cannot revive hope. Recently a man leaped to his death in the falls of Niagara. Those enchanting wonders of beauty which have inspired throngs of people were to him a means of death. The Apostle warns: "But sin . . . working death in me by that which is good." Safety is in the passion of the Psalmist which was: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple."

Philogists are concerned about a world language and chronologers an international calendar. The Esperanto code seems to be losing prestige, and a living language is desired. The radio is reducing the world to the necessity of one tongue, and commerce is demanding uniformity in dates. English might stand a good chance of becoming this hurry-up world's speech, since the gentleman who introduced Mr. Mussolini over the radio said the Italian leader had mastered the English language in three months. The language mostly needed is that of love, and the register that will bring rest to a feverish world is, "If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that."

At an annual newspapermen's meeting in Portland, Oregon, a Mr. Moro conducted his "scientific experiment" by being frozen in a block of ice for thirty minutes and then being chopped out alive. That was said to be a startling demonstration! Preachers aren't scientists, but some have been known to live at least a year frozen in an "icy overcoat" which a critical and indifferent congregation threw over them. Then, too, the saints sometimes shiver in below zero atmosphere while our sermons are "going on." Paul says, be "fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." Warmth of soul in both pulpit and pew and not overlooking the true evidence of fervency—"serving the Lord," will make "December as pleasant as May."

THE SOUTHERN METHODIST PRESS ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association was held in New Orleans, Wednesday evening, February 25. Those in attendance were: Alfred F. Smith, Christian Advocate; W. P. King, Book Editor; E. H. Rawlings, Missionary Voice; G. L. Morelock, Methodist Layman; C. A. Bowen, Editorial Secretary, General Board of Christian Education, and C. D. Bulla, Associate Editor; M. E. Lazenby, Alabama Christian Advocate; A. C. Millar, Arkansas Methodist; I. C. Jenkins, Florida Christian Advocate; A. W. Plyler, North Carolina Christian Advocate; W. M. Crutchfield, Oklahoma Methodist; J. M. Rowland, Richmond Christian Advocate; J. C. Montgomery, St. Louis Advocate; E. V. Cole, Texas Advocate; Elam F. Dempsey, Wesleyan Christian Advocate; J. L. Decell, New Orleans Advocate, and C. Milton Chalmers, manager, New Orleans Advocate.

Nolan B. Harmon, Baltimore Southern Methodist; B. C. Horton, Methodist Herald; W. H. Nelson, Pacific Methodist; E. O. Watson, Southern Christian Advocate, and J. A. Crose, Tri-State Advocate, were unable to attend.

In the afternoon the members of the Association were complimented with an automobile drive over historic New Orleans. The city ministers had provided automobiles and it was felt that the editors "owed it to their constituencies" to ride in high class vehicles and no car in the line was less than a Lincoln, with pilot, chauffeurs, etc., to match.

The pleasures were continued around the banquet board at the Y. W. C. A. The Association was graciously entertained at dinner by the Missionary Society of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church. Dr. O. W. Bradley, pastor, and the elect ladies of that cultured congregation and members of the staff of the Y. W. C. A. left nothing undone to make it a most enjoyable occasion. Ye editors were entranced by visions of a bountiful New Orleans cuisine and increased in avoirdupois readily.

Dr. C. A. Bowen, Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, and the editor of the New Orleans Advocate, were honored by being initiated into the Association in due and ancient form.

Rev. J. M. Rowland, D.D., was elected president; Rev. M. E. Lazenby, D.D., vice-president, and Rev. Elam F. Dempsey, D.D., secretary-treasurer. The president reported progress on working out arrangements that will benefit all the conference organs.

It was a privilege to meet with the members of the Church's Press. They are an able body of men, who have given unselfishly of their talent and time to the cause of Christian literature.

The next meeting of the Association will be held at Junaluska, August 11-16, during the Spiritual Life Conference.

IS YOUR CHURCH DEAD?

The church at Sardis, the capital of the Lydian Empire, was a dead church. Sardis had no immoralities as Pergamos, nor heresies like Ephesus and Thyatira, but she was dead. She seemed to live upon a reputation, a name she had previously won.

A prayerless, payless, worldly and indifferent church is dead. Forms without power are no evidences of life. The Church is more than a congenial brotherhood, a sympathetic group or club, or a philanthropic association, it is a household of faith, a supernatural society of followers of Jesus Christ.

The Living Church exists to make possible, to make known, to make active in human society the work which Christ by His life and death achieved. And that work is salvation from sin and growth in holiness. Thus the life of a church is the living presence of Jesus Christ filling the minds and controlling the conduct of the members. In such a church, Christ is in every conference and on every committee, and it is not so much to get something done as it is to get some one saved.

The soul of all improvement is still the improvement of the soul. This doesn't discount wide social betterment, but makes it possible. The social significance of the conversion of one person cannot be estimated. Personal salvation is the reliable law of social advancement. Remove one social evil and leave hearts unchanged and other foul means are employed. Regeneration of individuals, educating and elevating the public conscience, and closing up the roads to ruin can only be accomplished by mediating the life of Christ.

A dead church cannot mediate life, it but spreads death. Mohamedanism sprang from the dying missionary fires of the Church. Again Christianity faces a critical hour, the destiny of millions is imperiled, and momentous issues from around the world are calling like fire bells in the night. Death is abroad in all lands and Christ needs a live Church through which to give life. Methodism has been a synonym for a missionary passion that pulsated with Christly life, and her churches out of their plenty or poverty have the glorious privilege of communicating, through evangelism and Kingdom Extension, His life to dying multitudes. May she not fail Him.

An Open Letter to a Theolog

"This Idea That Some Men Should Specially Prepare Themselves for a Rural Ministry is a Mild Kind of a Lunacy"

BY R. EDIS FAIRBAIRN

My Dear Friend: Your interesting letter of inquiry calls for an answer at length from some one better qualified to deal with it. I do think you must be a brave man to tackle subjects like, "The Minister and Rural Problems," and, "The Minister and the Revitalizing of the Rural Church." And I do hope you possess a sense of humor in going order. I wonder who suggested these subjecs to you, and whether anything has happened to his bump of humor to turn it into a dent? You will need a robust sense of humor in the years to come anyway. If I have kept my end up on rural charges for the last few years it is largely owing to a fair capacity to appreciate the queer side of things, religious and secular.

I'm obliged to the friend who suggested that you should write me. It is true that I am a townsman born and bred, and an Englishman at that; that I have experience of urban and city churches, and that I am having a really jolly time on a rural charge. As I explained emphatically and at length to the recent Whitby Conference on Rural Churches, I hold that this idea that men going on to rural fields should prepare themselves by taking a course in agriculture, short or long, is the "bunk." They didn't believe me, and you needn't, but at least think it over. What is it that you want to do? To act as agricultural adviser to a community? Forget it! That is what agricultural representatives exist for. What then? To enable you to take a sympathetic interest in what your people are doing during the week? Noble spirit! And no doubt while you are taking the O. A. C. course at Guelph you will seize the opportunity to take the domestic science course at Macdonald Hall. If not, why not? Shouldn't you be able to take a sympathetic interest in what the farmers' wives are doing also? You will have at least as much to do with them in your church work as with the farmers. Frankly, I take an interest in my people by capitalizing my ignorance, and asking questions. You see, when a man is giving you information, he is consciously doing you a favor; and a man who is doing you one favor is preparing himself to do you another—like coming to hear you preach. Further, let me whisper in your ear. A good many farming people have an unfortunate but deep-rooted suspicion of agricultural experts and theoretical knowledge, and if they found out that you had taken special training, that might quite conceivably act as a positive hindrance to you in winning their confidence. Yes, sir. On the whole you might do better to assume an attitude of consistent ignorance and innocence, even if you do know the difference between oats and barley.

You see, unless you can demonstrate that you are better posted, if not more experienced than the people you talk to, your suggestions will be superfluous, your comment might seem impertinent, and any criticisms might easily bring you into contempt. Of course, if you were born and bred on the farm, thank God for that, but don't presume upon it. Anyhow, no extra training that a theolog could possibly secure would enable him to talk on the level to his farmers as farmers, and if he were so foolish as to talk down to them—well he ought not to be in the ministry. I would be willing, of course, to make an exception in the case of a man working among recent immigrants with no agricultural experience at all—though even there, he ought to walk on egg-shells. Really, people will not attend your services, like you as a man, or respect you as a minister, one whit the better because you have taken notes on the rotation of crops, the management of poultry, or the handling of sows. You will win your place in their affection and esteem, in the long run, only if you are able to demonstrate that you have a trained ability to function as a religious leader.

Excuse me if I blow off steam over the titles of your essay and thesis. This much overworked word "problem" always does lift my blood pressure. "Problems," and "solutions"! Bah! Words like these indicate a dilettante mind. Anyhow, there is no rural problem. I told them so at Whitby, but they didn't believe me, and you needn't, but at least think it over. There is no specifically rural problem, even from the economic point of view. There is a general mess in world industry, which has its repercussion in agriculture, which can be considered itself a major industry. There is a shift in population which depletes rural churches and leads to the discovery that there were far too many of them anyhow. There is a fall in prices causing a scarcity of cash everywhere and a disaster on the prairies. But there is only one real "problem" bothering the world of today, and that is not a rural problem at all; it turns on the discovery that the industrial system, which was considered to be an example of final perfection, is rotten, stupid, and disgraceful.

Neither is there any rural "problem" from the Church angle. There is the world-wide and age-old task (not problem) of commending and cultivating religion; but that, if we permit the word problem, for once is a human problem and not a rural one. To do anything with it you will need exactly the same grit, grace, and gumption that will get you anywhere in a town or city charge. And if you have any subconscious notion that you will be obliged to make adjustment in a downward direction to meet the intellectual capabilities of your congregation—why, you can forget that also. You will probably find that a number of your farmers' wives have had Normal School training and teaching experience; and some of your men will be high school graduates. You will have opportunity to give of the best that is in you on a rural charge—never fear. There will be a proportion of slow minds, of course; but there is at least as large a proportion of stupidity and mental lethargy behind the sleek respectability of the city, and less excuse for it. I do testify and declare that I have never had the keen interest and appreciation and response to such preaching as I am able to do, from any town or city charge, that I get from some of these rural congregations of farmers and their wives:

This phrase about "revitalizing the rural church" makes me want to swear. Why pick on the rural church? It is obvious to any man with experience that qualifies him to make a comparison that there is far more urgent need for a revitalizing of the urban and city churches. Why, it is the contribution of personnel made by the rural churches that keeps town charges going. That is an exaggeration of course, but it is an exaggeration of a truth. If there is any revitalizing to be done, let it start where it is most needed, and that is not on the rural charges.

This idea that some men should specially prepare themselves for a rural ministry is a mild kind of lunacy, too. One needs no special preparation. I would send any man who felt he wanted to do that to a competent psychiatrist; he is probably suffering from an inferiority complex, a real one, not what is commonly misconceived as such. The call, training, and attitude of a minister who finds himself on rural fields should be exactly the same as that of any other man who finds himself providentially directed (or has friends, influence, or a gift for selling himself) to more swagger appointments.

His "call" should be a feeling for the splendor of the life devoted to the help of man and the service of God; his training should be in the understanding of religion and the best methods of practising and propagating it (to a questionnaire that asked, "Do our theological colleges effectually prepare men for the rural ministry?" I answered, "They do, if they effectually prepare them theologically"); and his attitude should be a compound of modesty, courage, and invincible humor.

No, I don't believe the equalization of salaries would check the cityward drift of ministers. I think the proposal is excessively foolish. The city minister needs more money to meet the higher cost of living and compensate him for the disabilities and disagreeables of city life. What would be a far more practical proposal, and one urgently needing attention, is some arrangement whereby the Church at large would see to it that ministers on rural charges actually did get the salary promised to them, and get it monthly. Some kind of standardization in parsonages would help, too, if it prevented the need for refined women having to live without a bathroom, sink, or place for the disposal of garbage and sewage apart from the garden. She would probably not mind this kind of thing so much if she had chosen to go with her husband on to the frontier, but to have to live in these frontier conditions among neighbors enjoying every last domestic convenience of the twentieth century is more galling than need be.

"Effective religious education programmes with a rural slant"? Gadzooks, this rural specialization again! Tell you what, brother; get all the religious education theory, principles and programmes you can, and then, as soon as you get on a charge, junk them all. You will be obliged to sooner or later, anyway. The special characteristic of every religious education programme I have ever seen is its complete inapplicabilty to any concrete situation I have ever seen. That is not to say they are useless. The Euclidean problems are the most absolutely unusable stuff with which to sandpaper raw minds, but they justify their existence. The real value of a course in religious education consists in what is left at the back of your mind after you have forgotten all about it.

In a truly rural (Don't try to say that. It used to be a test for intoxication, but it was never a fair test) charge you will most likely find that whatever religious education of a scientific sort is done you will have to do it yourself without equipment. If you are baffled, then, even though you took honors in the Religious Education Course, you failed in it. If not, you will discover that religious education is not a matter of programme or equipment, but of your ability to get on friendly terms with children, teen-age youth, or young people on a basis of a religious interest. You should get some guidance from your studies, of course. But in front of any actual human situation you will feel yourself totally incompetent; you will grapple blunderingly with it, knowing that your best wisdom is foolishness; and any success that may result (and given courage and persistence you will be surprised how much success you will have) is due to unsuspected virtues and unexpected responses in human nature and a marvelous divine co-operation. And if you keep at it for a few years, by and by your brother ministers will write you congratulating you upon your wonderful results, and will you kindly supply one copy of your religious education programme by return mail, envelope enclosed. Yes; a sense of humor need never atrophy in the ministry, urban or rural.

I hope you won't mind my enjoying the funny side of all this. I am most desperately serious, however, when I declare my conviction that a minister, whether in town or country, can best and most fully serve the interests of his people by concentrating upon his own special task of religious leadership. You will need a hobby, of course, for your mind's health. It might as well be gardening. But you will be well advised to refer to your "farm" always facetiously, be surprised if you get good results, and be thankful if you get any.

Well, here's luck with the essay and the thesis! And might I be there to share the fun when you dig the old papers out and reread them twenty-five years after!—The New Outlook.

PENTECOST

By Rev. W. H. Saunders

That a general revival of real pentecostal power is needed there is not the least question. From top to bottom and from center to circumference, our whole social existence is suffering morally and spiritually. It is moral fiber and spiritual life that is needed to stabilize the whole system. The heart of our people is sick, and they are hungry for the real bread and water of life, and they need leading to the springs where the water flows.

I think one of the saddest days in the life of our Lord was that day during the great feast, the last day, as He witnessed the throngs as they moved in and through the holy city. He was moved with great compassion and stood and cried, "If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink." They had come from far and near to the headquarters of the church, seeking the thing they most needed, satisfaction of the soul, and it is quite certain that they were greatly disappointed. The church was unprepared to supply the need, and they were sick, hungry, tired, scattered and without a shepherd.

Are we ready to meet the present situation as a Church and give the people the real bread and real water? That it is needed there is not the least doubt. That it is wanted by many there is no question. That God is ready to give, yea, willing and even anxious to give His Spirit to His children no one who believes can doubt. The failure is evidently not on His side and this throws the Church on the defensive and she must plead guilty. That so small a percentage of our members in any congregation is actually at work for the Church, that such a large percentage of our folks, who, in childhood enter the Sunday school, drift away, and that many young people in many families never enter the church is prophetic. We have a higher and a better trained ministry, trained workers, nearer a perfect organization, greater financial resources and many magnificent buildings and yet we move forward very little.

A trained, uniformed, equipped soldier, with munitions and even on the field, counts for very little if he lacks the fire that sends the missiles against the enemy. The Church seems to be in the condition the disciples were in the day the Master came down the mountain side and found them defeated and confused and confounded. "Why could we not cast them out?" Listen, "These goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." It was not the hardness of the case, but the secret of the failure was in their hearts.

I could make this discussion wide enough to include the whole Church, but it will suffice to discuss my own branch and let others take the hint.

I know it is hard to discuss the inmates of ones' own household and be considered honest and just, and unmoved by selfish motives. I am going to make the venture and widen the usual scope of the text and apply it to God's own household. Some times a man's enemies are those of his own household. Jesus Christ came unto His own and His own received him not. They saw the heir coming and planned to kill him and then the inheritance would be theirs. When the inheritance becomes the chief consideration the Church loses her power.

The events that I now refer to are used only to reveal and not to discuss their merits, or take sides. Three times in my life the Church has been rent through and through over issues, at best only secondary. I refer to the collection of the old war claim, the Vanderbilt case, and Unification. Doubtless leaders on both sides were honest and moved by high motives, but the issues were not primary. The spirit manifested and means used in many cases may have won out, but at the cost of the loss of the Spirit. Facts are facts and when you come up against a fact it stands. Lines were drawn, friends sundered apart, and the household suffered. Men may have been honest and, in their minds, orthodox, but it is quite sure the orthodoxy of the Golden Rule suffered. Time may smooth things over and lines seem obliterated, but God's Spirit lives in the present tense. Each time lines were drawn, friendly and brotherly relations broken and feelings engendered that it will take a long time to obliterate, unless resort is made to the only way that is possible to settle such things—the Spirit of Pentecost. If Christianity fails at one single point to settle any human problem, individual, domestic or social, it would fail all along the line and the race would be lost without hope. The gospel must have a chance, though, before it can settle problems. If I did not believe that it would and could settle all problems I would never preach another sermon. And a man ought not to preach, or attempt to preach, a gospel of the Christ who died on the Cross, if he refuses to try to shape his life by the rule that governed His life. He should practice what he preaches. "He did not agree with me," you may say, but remember that the Christ Spirit qualifies one to love others, differences or no differences. That is its chief romance. Verbal assertions may mean little, assertions of friendship, but acts speak louder than words, and the oft-repeated saying, "your actions speak so loud that I cannot hear what you say," especially when one feels the results of actions. These lines are revealed by the facts in many cases. This may seem a sharp indictment, but if it does not apply to any case, I beg pardon and ask for forgiveness.

I am fully convinced in my own mind that our Church government and polity is the best of any branch of the Church today, military in conception and policy, and if run by the Golden Rule, the most fair, the most effective, and brings the greatest results. I have to confess, though, that some times it can be abused, misused, and, not only men suffer but the cause and the system suffer and the Church suffers vastly more. I once heard a great Christian layman say, "If that thing stands without rebuke, I shall lose my respect for a certain party." He did. If a party profits by abuses it is a horse of another color. Church or no Church.

Things come to pass at many conferences that it would be hard to square with the reign of the Holy Ghost. Rooms are assigned to each group with the name of the group over the door. Can you imagine Jesus Christ standing just over the door?

A church, a building, for that is the fact of the case, a congregation, rich, cultured, clothed in fine garments, at ease, lukewarm, someone singing a solo, "I have anchored my soul," an up-to-date preacher discoursing on the latest social fad, or the monotony of long sermons; or some great preacher defending the faith, because he thinks the Church is going to vanish if he fails to sound the alarm, a little squib of a say, called a prayer, informing God of what came to pass a thousand years ago, since the dark ages prevailed and the crucified One standing at the door knocking, let the pulpit committee of this church request that a certain preacher be moved, or a certain one be sent and the thing is done. This committee may be worldly-minded but it is done.

In every department of human affairs power has increased manyfold. Mechanical, financial, intellectual, and the social pull of this old world was never so appealing. Has the Church made use of this vast resource as a means of grace?

Humanity is also striving to climb upward as never before in its history. Climbing, it is true, after things, mere things. It is possible for the Church to climb as it should, climb into the Mount, the sermon on the Mount, climb up on Calvary, at the foot of the Cross, climb up the mount of Ascension, climb up into the mount of Transfiguration and into the upper room. Stay till the power comes, and it would come if we had the mind of the Master to pray, fast and obey. The winds would blow, the fire would come, tongues would flame, hearts break and souls be converted by thousands.

Is the revival coming? It is with us. God is dependent on us. Can He count on you? Go back to Jewish church, and one peculiar thing is true, every time it seemed that God ignored his organized church and had to find a man to call his people back to the law, back to Christ. Why should He have to ignore these regular agents? Brethren, I am one of you. What I lack is what you may lack. The thing you are guilty of, I may be as guilty as you. "It is me, O Lord, standing in need of prayer." When things get right the revival will come and not until then. Resolutions, tracts, literature, sermons of power, as good as they are, will not bring the fire. You will have to have a prepared ministry, a prepared message and a prepared Church. The spirit of this preparation must be from above, the process of it must be led by the Spirit, and the workers must be Spirit-filled. Let the Holy Spirit have the lead and Pentecost will be here and remain.

WORLD CONFERENCE ON STEWARDSHIP AND CHURCH FINANCE

By J. E. Crawford

The approaching world conference on Stewardship and Church Finance, in Edinburgh, Scotland, June 22-26, will be the most important gathering of its kind in the history of the Christian church. Representative Protestant leaders from all over the world will attend. Each denomination in the United States and Canada is entitled to a minimum of five delegates and one additional delegate for each 100,000 members. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is entitled to thirty-one delegates. In addition to the officially appointed delegates any representative of any denomination who may desire to attend will be welcome. The conference sessions will be open to all visitors.

The purpose of this conference is to study problems of financing the work of spreading the gospel everywhere and provide better financed benevolent and missionary programs.

Dr. J. E. Crawford of Nashville, secretary of the Stewardship Department of the Board of Lay Activities, is director of the Southern group.

W. M. Cassety, Jr., head of the transportation and travel service bureau of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is co-operating with Protestants of the South in arranging travel routes and planning post-convention tours in Great Britain and Europe.

REPORT OF THE FINDINGS COMMITTEE OF THE CIRCUIT PREACHERS' CONFERENCE HELD AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE, FEB. 26-27, 1931

We feel that the benefits of this conference have been twofold.

1. We, as circuit preachers of this conference, have come to feel that our leaders instead of applying the remedy first and finding out the symptoms afterwards or never, have started the right method of diagnosing the situation before applying the remedy.

2. The second benefit that has come to us is by way of ideas and inspiration. We have been so under the shadow of our problems and they have loomed so far above us that we have been overawed by them. Somehow, we could not get a clear perspective of our several situations, but since coming here we have gotten, we trust, a more comprehensive view of each situation as a whole and a clearer outline of detail.

Among the helpful suggestions that have come to us under the wise direction of Dr. Alexander, Dr. Martin and Brother Chambers and from our fellow-pastors are the following:

(a). Since it has been estimated by Dr. Alexander "that the preachers' influence in the pulpit is 25 per cent of the total amount of good that he is permitted to accomplish in his particular charge," (the group did not agree with Dr. Alexander in this estimate) and since there are many agencies about us, such as: The Red Cross, the American Life Association, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Public School, the Home Demonstration Agent, the County Agent, the 4-H Clubs and other clubs for farm boys and girls, the Community Welfare Association, Salvation Army, Hi-Y, Girl Reserve, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Federated Clubs, P. T. A., Luncheon Clubs, Fraternal Clubs, Public Libraries, and local clubs, that are serving the people effectively, therefore, we should study these agencies with the view of determining how we may co-operate with them and how much time we can legitimately contribute to these agencies.

(b). In dealing with undeveloped communities we are not to attempt to force a ready made plan of work upon the people, but begin with them where they are and teach them by degrees the materials that are helpful in their worship, patiently, but persistently, lead them until they are permitted to enjoy the fellowship of God.

(c). The need for some adequate plan for financing the work of building the Kingdom in a large per cent of our circuits is so evident that we recommend to our presiding elders and pastors that they jointly give our boards of stewards definite instructions in stewardship. We have given courses in "Principles of Teaching," "Worship," and the like, to our Sunday school teachers until we have made vast improvement. It is the sense of your committee that we are not to emphasize instruction and worship to the neglect of financing the Church, but that instruction should lead to intelligent worship, and worship should lead to service in giving, that our offerings should register our love for God as definitely as our prayers. Your committee sincerely believes that if we give our people a larger measure of Christian education we shall in one generation develop strong Christian character that will make our Church a most potent factor in extending the Kingdom of God to the ends of the earth.

(d). We recommend that an annual meeting of the circuit preachers in a similar conference and we further recommend that a similar conference be held in each presiding elder's district.

(e). We desire to express our thanks to the trustees of Millsaps College for the use of the buildings, and for our entertainment, to Rev. John C. Chambers and any others associated with him for launching and guiding this conference; to Dr. W. M. Alexander and Dr. A. W. Martin for their practical and sympathetic guidance in the study of our problems.

(Signed):
REV. MURRY COX,
REV. R. H. B. GLADNEY.

The following motion was passed by the Circuit Preachers' Conference held at Millsaps College, February 26 and 27, 1931:

Resolved, that the General and Conference Boards of Christian Education and Millsaps College be asked to co-operate in giving to Mississippi a ten days' short term course for the benefit of circuit preachers and others who may care to attend, and that the short term be held as near the first of February as practicable.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS, Secretary.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION CONFERENCE TO MEET AT ALEXANDRIA, APRIL 7-8

First Session, Tuesday, 10 A. M., April 7

The State-wide Conference of Christian Education will be held in Alexandria, La., on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 7 and 8. This conference takes the place of the State-Wide Sunday School Conference which has been held at Alexandria for the past several years.

I am asking that all presiding elders and pastors, as far as possible, arrange their services so as not to conflict with this conference. I hope there will be a representative attendance from every church in the State.

Those Who Should Attend

Presiding elders, pastors, college presidents, teachers, Sunday school superintendents, officers and teachers, Epworth League presidents and young people's workers are delegates. The public is invited.

Opening Session

The conference will open Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, and will close Wednesday at noon. The hotel rates will be reasonable and there will be sufficient accommodation for all. An earnest effort will be made in this meeting to interpret the new plan of work under the Board of Christian Education. More detailed announcement concerning the program will be made at an early date.

W. W. HOLMES, Executive Secretary.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE JOURNAL

It is a matter of pride and cause for thankfulness that there have been but two complaints to reach me concerning the figures in the Journal of 1930. In each case the figures given in the Journal are as they were given in the reports of the pastors, and by these the statistical secretaries and the auditors, as well as the editors, are bound. In one case the assessments were not given in two items, and a guess had to be made as to what they were, and guesses are hazardous; that is why this report is not correct.

It is a cause of sincere regret that Moss Point is not credited as having paid all assessments, but some checks were received after their report had gone in, and were too late to get into the hands of the auditors for emendation. I would give two admonitions: let the people see that the pastor has all the funds in hand before he makes his report, and let the pastor be certain that the report is correctly made out; each of these is sometimes very difficult. Nine hundred and fifteen corrections were made after the tables came into the hands of the editors. We are doing our best to have things correct.

W. B. JONES, Secretary.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF ADVOCATE

The executive committee of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, composed of Rev. Jno. B. Peters, Revs. Jas. H. Felts and J. Early Gray, met in the office of the Advocate, Tuesday evening, at 4:15, February 24. There were present also Revs. J. T. Leggett and V. C. Curtis, members of the Publishing Committee; Rev. J. L. Decell, editor, and Mr. C. Milton Chalmers, manager.

We were honored with the presence of Bishops Denny and Dobbs.

The statement presented by Mr. Chalmers again brought to our attention the necessity of a larger circulation of the paper and with it the relief from financial pressure.

The goal agreed upon is twenty-one hundred new subscriptions by May 15. To that end our good bishops have asked that each presiding elder's district in the three patronizing Conferences furnish one hundred, and they kindly agreed to make a personal appeal to the several elders to that end. We believe that if each presiding elder, each pastor and the lay leaders throughout the patronizing Conferences will make an honest effort this minimum number will be exceeded by several hundred. It is not an extravagant statement that the more our people read this grand old paper the more liberal they will be in the financial support of the program of the Church and the more will their lives be enriched in spiritual matters. Surely our brethren will step forward and loyally meet this obligation and save our Conference organ from further embarrassment. Will you do your part now?

J. EARLY GRAY, Sec.

MRS. W. J. DAWSON PASSES

Dear Editor: Mrs. Celia Rachel Avera Dawson, wife of Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor of Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss., died at her parsonage home at 9:20 p. m., March 3, after a lingering illness.

Funeral services were held in the church of which her beloved husband was pastor, March 4, conducted by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder, who was assisted by all the Methodist pastors in Meridian. The body was interred in the family burying ground at Avera, Miss., March 5, a large number of loved ones and friends attending the obsequies.

In the going away of this good woman, the Church has sustained a heavy loss, and one of our most loyal and valuable preachers is left all alone to carry on his work, as he and his dear wife had but one child, Hendrix Dawson, who resides in Gulfport, Miss.

T. J. O'NEIL.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Aberdeen District Conference will meet at Calhoun City, Wednesday and Thursday, April 8 and 9. The first session will open promptly at 9 o'clock a.m., April 8. Bishop Denny is expected to be with us on the 9th for one day only. It is important that all members of the Conference shall be present at the opening.

DEDICATION OF MANY, LA., CHURCH

The erection and dedication of a Methodist church building is an important achievement. Bishop Morrison used to say, "The pastor who leads his people in erecting a church building should be praised, the one who leads them in paying for it ought to be crowned." According to that standard, then, the Rev. James E. Selfe, pastor at many, La., should be praised and crowned. He and his people are happy because they have sacrificed to reach their high goal of having a building free of debt and dedicated to God on Sunday, January 18, 1931. The following is the program of that interesting event, and a historical statement of the church:

NEW METHODIST CHURCH, MANY, LA.

Building Committee—W. M. Knott, chairman; O. E. Williams, treasurer; Gasway German, Rev. Jas. E. Selfe, J. H. McNeely.

President, Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. S. L. Carroll.

President, Epworth League, Laverne Daily.

Superintendent, Sunday School, E. M. Fraser.

Methodism in Many, Sabine Parish, La., had its modest beginning some time in 1891, when Dr. J. M. Middleton organized a Sunday school and started prayer meetings, with this there came the evident need of a church building. Rev. J. M. Franklin, who was serving either at Bayou Scle or Zwolle, came and began to preach and in 1892 a small church building was erected. The first pastor to receive appointment to Many was Dr. A. S. Lutz.

Not having access to the annual of the Louisiana Conference, the writer is not certain of the order in which the following pastors served the charge: Dr. A. S. Lutz, Rev. S. Holladay, H. B. Thomason, Robert Randall, Wilson Moore, H. W. Rickey (a short time), Alonzo Monk, Dr. J. A. Parker, P. O. Lowrey, Benjamine Sheppard, J. Sanders, Samuel Howard, W. F. Henderson, J. L. Williams, J. B. Williams, J. A. McCormack, J. W. Perry, R. F. Harrell, and the present pastor, James E. Selfe.

Under the pastorate of R. F. Harrell the people were led to the belief that they needed more room for Sunday school, and a meeting was called with a large attendance of members. Everything pointed to a plan to remodel and add to the old building, when the man who has been very active in the present accomplishment, Mr. W. M. Knott, spoke on the advisability of erecting a new building instead of remodeling. A few others agreed with him and the meeting adjourned after a committee was appointed with Mr. Knott chairman. Under this committee plans were drawn, when depression in the local section on account of crop failure stopped all activity.

The matter rested until the Louisiana Conference sent the present pastor to Many and the building of a new church revived. Time after time it seemed that an active campaign for funds would begin, finally the pastor decided that it must be done or fail entirely and approached Mr. O. E. Williams with a blank form of note subscription, he signed it for $2000, and in one hour's time this amount had been increased to more than $7000. It was in July when the first subscription was made and in December the old church building was demolished and the present beautiful brick veneer church building was erected on the old site, with 40'x60' additional ground, the gift of Mrs. McNeely and chilldren.

To say that the small membership of 175 have given liberally and in many instances sacrificially and that the untiring efforts of the building committee and the kind assistance of friends and citizens of the entire community backed up by untiring and persistent efforts of an active pastor is but approaching the truth.

The "Red Letter Day in Methodism" and "High Tide" was reached on Sunday, January 18, when our beloved Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs came to Many from Shreveport and preached a masterly and timely sermon and dedicated to the "worship of Almighty God" the new church building.

The building is beautifully designed, J. M. Smith and Sons, of Monroe, being architects. It is brick veneer, asbestos roof, amber colored glass in windows, raised double floors, dark oak finish, oak pews, pulpit furniture, chancel rail, opera chairs in rooms opening into auditorium. There are eight Sunday school rooms, the church is heated with natural gas and electrically lighted

To say that people and pastor are happy and that the citizens of Many are proud of the new Methodist church building, is putting it lightly.

A beautiful India paper pulpit, King James version Holy Bible, the gift of Rev. and Mrs. Selfe, was presented by Rev. J. W. Lee to the church. At the close of the service, a silk United States flag was presented to the church, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Selfe, of Detroit, Mich., son and daughter-in-law of the pastor. J. L. D.

REPORT OF FINDINGS COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN WORK OF THE MISSIONARY COUNCIL

Your Foreign Work Findings Committee has heard with unfeigned joy and almost with astonishment the story of achievement both of the people and Christianity of the foreign fields. When the rich array of facts is faced, and the progress of the less advantaged people of other lands is understood, we are filled with wonder and admiration, and our appreciation of these foreign peoples is positively raised, and our own self-complacency is distinctly shocked.

When the achievements of our own Church are fully known, our hearts leap with joy and we become modestly proud of our representatives who have, on all the fields of our activity demonstrated their ability to meet responsibiliy and have often been exceedingly influential factors in promoting the progress of the Kingdom in difficult and delicate situations.

Not the least among these achievements is the part we have had in the creation of autonomous churches in Brazil, Korea, and Mexico. During the first quadrennium our wise and far-seeing administrators were sensing the situation and preparing the Church, both at home and abroad, for this movement, which found form at out last General Conference and realization through the judicious co-operation of the nationals and of the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Korea and Mexico. It is doubtful whether in the history of any denomination a movement of this kind has been consummated more successfully and felicitously.

In this connection we would accentuate the fact that we still have a vital connection with these native churches, and that, so far from decreasing our responsibility, it is our profound conviction even larger funds and more missionaries to aid these affiliated churches. They deeply appreciate our confidence in their ability to manage their own affairs, and we must not lose their confidence in our sincere purpose to render ample aid.

We profoundly regret to discover among many of our own people apathy toward missions and discouragement growing out of present financial depression. The factors in our situation are so varied and so complex that it is difficult to determine whether it is apathy or financial depression that is holding back the Church at home.

Whatever the cause, it is a startling and painful fact that the income of our Board of Missions for general work was less by $267,000 in 1930 than it was in 1929, and up to this date it is less this year for the corresponding period last year.

Starting this year with a debt of $150,000, and faced with a possible decrease, unless creditors change, your Board of Missions are confronted with a situation fraught with tragedy. When we recognize these conditions and the fact that the Board of Missions gets only 75 per cent of the Kingdom Extension offering this year, we are concerned, beyond the power of mere words to convey, for our missionary enterprises.

But there is a redeeming element in this menacing situation. From all sources comes the heartening news of peoples ready for our Lord's Gospel and eagerly awaiting our message and messengers. We are told by those who intimately know our foreign fields, that marvelous opportunity calls and that, regardless of the magnificent achievements of the past, we seem to be just entering an era of missions that will be unprecedented. The fields are fully white to the harvest, and only unfaithfulness on the part of the Church at home can halt the mighty movement to victory for our Christ. We have abundant evidence that God is ready for the advance and assurance of Divine guidance and help, if we are ready to follow Providential leadings.

We are further heartened by reports from our leaders at home that there are growing evidences of a spiritual awakening and of a deeper sense of obligation to meet opportunity and a willingness to sacrifice for the cause of the Kingdom. It must be frankly confessed, however, that our people are barely beginning to realize these things. But it is not presumptive to believe that if we can faithfully and lovingly present to our people the real situation and the impending tragedy that would follow retrenchment and diminution of effort, under divine influence, they will loyally and royally respond to the challenge of marvelous and providential opportunity, and, in spite of our temporary distress and seeming poverty, rise to new heights of self-denial and meet the challenge with the most liberal giving in our history. God has opened the doors. The heart-hungry nations are waiting. Jesus Christ is leading. The Holy Spirit is inspiring. We have what the world most needs. To hesitate now would be cowardice; to retreat would be folly; to fail our Lord and our less advantaged brethren in this time of crisis would be treason.

Then, let us pray as never before. Let us follow our Lord in unselfish sacrifice. Let us heed the call and obey the commands to go forward, and we know that God will give the victory.

We, therefore, call upon our leaders to give our people the fortifying facts and faithful and consecrated leadership, and upon our people to hear, heed and give both means and efforts to the utmost. If we present a crucified and living Christ, He will draw all men unto Him. With the assurance of all Christ's power to help if we go, let us all who love Him "go where He wants us to go, and do what He wants us to do." If the love of Christ constrains, let us, with Pauline faith, believe that we can do all things which his followers are expected to do.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

The country boy told his pal that his mother had set the turkey hen on six dozen eggs, "Jist to see how fur she could spread." This seems the dominant idea with many lecturers, singers, musicians and some preachers—how far to spread. And these United States is the spreading ground, not only for our native geniuses of these orders but also for foreign importations. These aliens, Triby nosed churchmen, actors, designers and lecturers, who wail over the radio in strange accents and stammering tongues, who manage to get on the front page of the newspapers, and thus gain general notoriety. All for the purpose of telling us American people how to manage our own affairs, and what miserable failure is the eighteenth amendment to our constitution and all its attendant laws for the enforcement of prohibition, and only incidently of course, to pocket a few of our surplus dollars. If I read history aright our fathers left behind these European countries with their laws and inhibitions and came to this country to enjoy and hold as a precious right civil and religious freedom. And furthermore, under the privileges of these rights and liberties have developed a form of government best suited to our citizenship. And I for one resent any interference on the part of these alien meddlers telling us how to regulate and conduct our own affairs. If they must spread, let them spread at home, in their own territory. The fact is our country is so extensive and has so many different laws and customs in its varied communities that the wisest and best informed among us, after the manner born, scarcely know what to say or how to say it under present social conditions. Internationalism, I presume, is all right, but I feel sure it does not mean for us to lay aside our loyalty to American institutions.

E pluribus unum is rapidly taking a new meaning. Banks, trust companies, railroads, syndicates and corporations of various kinds are merging into giant companies backed by billions of capital and manned by the princes and masters of finance. But there is a marked difference between these immense concerns and the souless corporations of half a century ago. Insurance for the employees, sick benefits, periods for rest and recreations, and opportunities for the workers to become shareholders and beneficiaries of the company's profits, are the characteristics of most of these. The human and humane factors enter very largely into the workings of these institutions. Men have found out that the golden rule is the rule for profitable investment and business.

Our Church is now engaged in studying and putting into practical usage the legislation enacted by the General Conference of last May relative to the merging of several Boards into a Board of Christian Education. I understand that all the educative departments of the Church, hitherto operative are included into this merger. But it will require some patience and study as well as practice of this new movement before it is well understood. The pastors and Sunday school superintendents can obtain informative literature from the General Board of Christian Education, which will clearly and lucidly explain the matter to our people. We are only following the trend of human activities in all kinds of business. And may God give us wisdom and patience to follow our leaders, since they have planned this new movement or rather united into one these several lines of Christian education.

A PARABLE

By Rev. J. L. Seils

A stranger in Port Gibson passing by the Methodist Church heard an unusual noise in the church and, seeing the door ajar, went in. To his great surprise he found that the church pews were having a conference and were getting very earnest in their arguments.

As he listened to their varied statements he found that some of the pews felt that they were mistreated. It seemed that no pew had the power of hearing the singing or the sermon unless there were one or two persons seated in that pew. Hence, if the attendance was small, some pews were of necessity vacant and thus deprived of hearing any of the service.

That was the reason for the conference of the pews. After much discussion one pew thought he had found a happy solution and offered the following resolution:

Whereas, In order that every pew in this Methodist Church be treated fairly, so that they can hear the singing and the sermon; therefore,

Be it resolved, That a petition, signed by every pew in this church, be sent to every one of the two hundred members of the Methodist Church in Port Gibson to attend at least one service every Sunday and thus see to it that every pew has at least one occupant.

The resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote and the conference was over. As the stranger passed on he wondered how men and women, sons and daughters of God, could resist that appeal.

Moral: Make Membership Mean More. Every Methodist at Church next Sunday and every Sunday.

NEW METHODIST CHURCH ORGANIZED IN NEW ORLEANS

On the first Sunday in February a new Methodist church was organized in New Orleans, which will be known as the Gentilly Methodist Church. This is a growing section of the city and already there are thirty-nine members, and the pastor, Rev. Ira W. Flowers, expects to report a membership of at least one hundred by the close of the Conference year. "The achieving life" was the subject of the pastor's sermon on the organization day and a large audience was present to enjoy the sermon and partake of the Lord's Supper.

The Home Circle

WHICH ARE YOU?

The bones in the body
Are two hundred or three:
But for sorting our people
We need only three.

Wish-bone People:
They hope for, they long for,
They wish for and sigh;
They want things to come, but
Aren't willing to try.

Funny-bone People:
They laugh, grin and giggle,
Smile, twinkle the eye;
If work is a joke, sure
They'll give it a try.

Back-bone People:
They strike from the shoulder,
They never say die:
They're winners in life, for
They know how to try.

A PROGRAM OF WORK FOR THE CHRISTIAN HOME

By Ernest L. Lloyd

During the past ten years our General Sunday School Board has been engaged in the very commendable task of utilizing the experience of several hundred of our best trained workers in developing Programs of Work for Sunday schools of various types and sizes. The Programs of Work that were released by the General Sunday School Board in 1929 and 1930 constitute one of the most significant forward steps in the modern movement of religious education. These programs are designed to express correct principles of religious education, to present a summary view of the whole work of the Sunday school, and to offer many valuable suggestions for the guidance of Sunday school workers.

If the Christian home, rather than the Sunday school, is to be recognized as the basic teaching agency of the church, the church should have a generally accepted Program of Work for the Christian home.

The following outline is offered as a start toward the creation of such a Program of Work:

I. Christian relations within the home.
   1. Love. Active good will making jealousy and selfishness impossible.
   2. Sympathy. The effort on the part of each member of the home to understand the nature, the point of view, the interests, and the desires of every other member.
   3. Fellowship. The effort of every member of the home to share in the legitimate and proper interests of every other member.
   4. Service. Every member of the home seeking to bear his or her share of the work of the home, and seeking to do all in his or her power to advance the welfare and the happiness of every other member.
   5. Authority. The parents in the proper way asserting their position as the joint executive head of the home.
   6. Obedience. The sons and daughters recognizing the authority of the parents and endeavoring in good spirit to govern their actions accordingly.

II. Ideals and attitudes expressed in the conversation and in the policies of the home.
   1. Character, intelligence, and service recognized as more to be desired and sought than money or social leadership.
   2. Living modestly within the family income, recognized as more desirable than incurring debt for the purpose of making a display in house, clothing, automobile, or conventional pleasures.
   3. No jealousy, envy, or malice held toward anyone.
   4. No fault-finding disposition or uncharitable gossip in the discussion of other people.

III. Specific training of the young through fruitful experience.
   1. Experience in constructive manual labor.
   2. Experience in conservation.
      (a) Conservation of material goods. Care of clothing, food, furniture, etc.
      (b) Conservation of money. Earning money, saving money, wisely spending money, wisely giving money.
      (c) Conservation of time. Wise distribution of time among work, study, and play, according to the age of the individual.
   3. Experience in responsibility for definite tasks and for administration.

IV. Recreation in the home. So far as possible, the parents should endeavor to make home the centre of social life and pleasure for their sons and daughters of all ages.

V. Devotional life of the home.
   1. Thanks offered reverently to God at all meals.
   2. Daily family worship, consisting at least of scripture reading and prayer.
   3. Children trained in the habit of daily private Bible reading and prayer.

VI. Religious instruction and relation to the church.
   1. Parents ready at proper times to give suitable instruction to children concerning moral and religious life and concerning Christian faith and the church.
   2. The Christian ministry, the church, and the Sunday school always mentioned in terms of the highest respect.
   3. Parents guiding and assisting their sons and daughters in making thorough preparation of the weekly Sunday school lessons.
   4. Parents and sons and daughters attending Sunday school regularly.
   5. Parents and sons and daughters attending the preaching service regularly and sitting together.
   6. At the proper time, the parents leading the sons and daughters into definite avowal of Christian discipleship and voluntary assumption of the vows of church membership. Wherever the parent is spiritually prepared for the task, the parent, rather than the pastor or the Sunday school teacher, should lead the boy or the girl to this decision.

VII. Equipment of home for Christian education.
   1. Bible. At least one usable copy of the Bible. Better, a separate Bible for each person in the home.
   2. Bible helps. A one-volume Bible dictionary, a one-volume Bible commentary, a one-volume Bible concordance.
   3. The following periodicals: the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Missionary Voice, the Nashville Christian Advocate, The Home Quarterly, and other periodicals appropriate to the ages of the young.
   4. Good books of positively religious value, suitable for various ages, added to the home library from time to time.
   5. Pictures and mottoes that have inspirational power.

ANNIE ANT CLEANS UP

Mrs. Cricket and Mrs. Fly had watched Annie Ant and her fellow-workers drag home a huge, dead caterpillar. The little ant had told them where it was by touching their feelers with her own. Mrs. Fly was surprised to see how the ant could make her ant-folk understand, although of course she had no voice, and now beneath a big dandelion they waited to see what would happen next.

"Dear me," sighed Mrs. Fly, "these poor little creatures spend all their days in the dirt always digging subways and tunnels. It is not very clean work, but I suppose dirt does not bother them in the least—they are so used to it."

Mrs. Cricket, who spent her days on the ground also and had often watched the tiny ants, knew something about them. "Ah, me!" said she, "how little we really know about our neighbors. These little ants that always live and work in the dirt are very clean. Look you, now! Annie Ant is this minute washing her face."

Mrs. Fly looked surprised as she saw the tiny ant lift her front leg and rub it across her mouth—then over her face, much as Mrs. Pussy cleans up after a meal. Then carefully she cleaned her antennae or feelers.

"Why, look!" said Mrs. Fly, "there are tiny bristles on their legs and Annie Ant is even now brushing her hair with this queer brush. It is very wonderful."

"They even help each other clean up," said Mrs. Cricket, "brushing and combing each other with great care. I have seen them with my own eyes, or I would not say so."

"Well," said Mrs. Fly, "I have enough eyes—several thousand, you know; after this I shall keep them wide open and discover some of these things for myself. Annie Ant has surprised me to-day; she can talk—and I thought her quite dumb—and now I have seen how clean she is, even if her house is in the dirt."

"You haven't discovered half the wonderful things she can do," replied Mrs. Cricket. "There are worker ants, and Queen Ants, and some fellows with large heads who are the soldiers and do nothing but fight, and they are all busy about something every minute."

"I shall come back here to-morrow to watch them again," said Mrs. Fly as she flew away.

"Dear me," sighed Mrs. Cricket to herself, "because one's home is in the dirt is no reason for thinking one unclean," and she jumped away to her own underground home.—Girls Weekly.

BETTY AND "MIDNIGHT"

A little black dog in Duluth, Minnesota, has become a hero since he saved the life of his owner, three-year-old Betty Winters. "Midnight," the dog, is Betty's constant companion, and accompanied her as usual one day when she went to the grocery store near her home with a penny clutched tightly in her chubby fist to buy a piece of candy.

That was ten o'clock in the morning. At noon Betty and Midnight had not returned, and Mrs. Winters was nearly frantic. Nobody in the neighborhood had seen the two playmates. With snow on the ground and near-zero temperature the situation looked serious. Radio broadcasting was resorted to, and hundreds joined in the search for Betty. Night was coming, and the heart-broken parents feared the worst. Then, just at the zero hour, when hope was nearly gone, came the glad tidings that Betty was safe!

George Anderson declared that children always go west when lost, and made his search toward the Boulevard Drive, high above the western part of the city, overlooking Lake Superior. And there he found Betty asleep in the snow near a cedar hedge, guarded by the little black dog!

As Mr. Anderson approached the vicinity he noticed tracks which puzzled him. He began to whistle, and was answered by a dog's bark from a distance. Running in the direction of the barking, Anderson continued to whistle and the dog continued to answer, until they met. "Lead me to Betty," said Anderson, whereat Midnight turned back and ran to the cedar hedge, where he wakened the sleeping child by licking her face.

Benumbed by ten hours' exposure Betty was in a stupor, but kept repeating, "I sleep with my doggie—I sleep with my doggie," as Mr. Anderson wrapped his coat around her and carried her to the nearest house. Midnight was overjoyed, and barked his approval as he saw the little chum safe at home once more. That night a special bed was made for him next to the little mistress he had guarded so faithfully. Betty's parents think nothing is too good for Midnight.—Our Dumb Animals.

Editorial

OUR BISHOPS ARE BUSY

Bishop Denny and Bishop Dobbs are giving freely to "traveling through the presiding elders' districts, in order to preach and to oversee the spiritual and temporal affairs of the Church."

On the last Sunday in February Bishop Denny preached twice at Hattiesburg, Miss. He was with Rev. W. H. Lewis and his people at Main Street in the morning and with Rev. L. L. Roberts and his congregation at Court Street in the evening. On the first Sunday in March he preached at Clarksdale, Miss., for Dr. V. C. Curtis and his people. Reports are that the Bishop preached with great acceptability and the people were blessed by his messages.

Bishop Dobbs preached in New Orleans twice on February 22. At the morning hour he was at Carrollton Avenue and at Parker Memorial in the evening. One of the largest audiences ever assembled at Carrollton heard the Bishop, and again in the evening he was greeted with a large congregation. He was heard with delight and profit.

On Tuesday, February 24, Bishops Denny and Dobbs met with the Executive Committee of the Advocate and gave wise and helpful counsel. They are interested in the maintenance of the Advocate and are rendering every help to increase its circulation. Louisiana and Mississippi are fortunate in their episcopal leadership and, of course, are expecting the return of their chief pastors for the full quadrennium.

MRS. W. J. DAWSON PASSES TO HER ETERNAL REWARD

Mrs. W. J. Dawson, wife of Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor at Hawkin's Memorial, Meridian, Miss., died on Tuesday, March 3.

Mrs. Daawson was a woman of culture and refinement. She served with her devoted husband in the pastorates to which they were assigned, always with acceptability. Through several years she knew her Saviour in the "fellowship of his sufferings.", Her illness was borne with patience and fortitude as marked as her service had been constant and joyous. More than once she stated to the writer that she rejoiced in the privileges of life but she was ready any time for the Master's will to be done in life or death. The association and language of the heavenlies will not be new to her; that blessed abode will be but an enlargement of an environment that she had lived in while here. When the Saviour said "it is enough, come up higher," it was a Shepherd's voice that was familiar to her and she is safe within the fold.

Mrs. Dawson is survived by her husband and one son, Mr. Hendrix Dawson, Gulfport, Miss. The father and son will have the sympathy of all who know them. An unselfish companion and devoted mother waits at the gate beautiful.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. E. L. Cargill was royally received by his people at Cedar Grove, Shreveport, and the outlook is hopeful for a good year.

Rev. J. L. Carter, Union, Miss., has our thanks for nine subscriptions with check to cover. Brother Carter has his work well organized and every department is making progress.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor, Minden, La., was prevented from attending the Missionary Council on account of illness. We trust that Dr. Wynn has fully recovered.

The Advocate congratulates Rev. and Mrs. B. C. Taylor, Mer Rouge, La., upon the birth of a little daughter, whom they have named Ann Lee. We wish for the little lady a happy future.

Rev. J. T. Weems is happy in his work on the Gallman, Miss., charge. The people are responding and the work is growing. We thank Brother Weems for six subscriptions to the Advocate and for the promise of more to follow.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs preached an inspiring sermon at Arcadia, La., on Sunday morning, February 15. Mrs. Dobbs accompanied her distinguished husband to Arcadia, which was her home before her marriage to the Bishop.

Dr. G. F. Winfield, pastor Whitworth College, delivered the address before the Exchange Club, McComb, Miss., on February 25. Dr. Winfield is not only a good college president but a loyal citizen and community builder.

Rev. W. L. Duren, a North Georgia Conference presiding elder, was a pleasant caller at the office during the Missionary Council. Dr. Duren came from Mississippi and served Rayne Memorial, this city, before his transfer to Georgia.

Rev. E. L. Jernigan, pastor, Oakland, Miss., writes: "Within sixteen days we have buried three of the best members of Tillatoba church. The loss is keenly felt by us and great sorrow prevails in the community."

Rev. F. N. Ladner has withdrawn from the membership and ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Rev. W. T. Griffin has been appointed pastor at Bonhomie, Miss., to succeed Brother Ladner.

Rev. L. L. Roberts continues the year with increasing success at Court Street, Hattiesburg. We thank him for eleven additional subscriptions and with the encouraging promise of more to follow.

The editor was happy to meet Dr. J. W. Mills, presiding elder of the Beaumont District, Texas Conference, during the Missionary Council. Dr. Mills has long been one of the leading ministers of his Conference. He honored the Advocate by enrolling as a subscriber.

Rev. B. M. Hunt will conduct revival services in his church, Centenary, McComb, beginning March 15 and going through the 25th. Rev. M. K. Miller, of Summit, will direct the music. We pray that a gracious revival may come to the church and the city.

The Crowley Daily Signal, in a news item from Eunice, La., said: "Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, preached to a large congregation in the Methodist church Sunday night." This was Brother Lutz's quarterly visit and conference.

Beginning March 22 and continuing through Easter Sunday the Presbyterian and Methodist churches, West Point, Miss., will hold a union revival. Rev. T. R. Husk, Presbyterian pastor, will direct the singing and Rev. W. R. Lott will do the preaching.

Rev. Otis Spinks continues to suffer with impaired vision and has been released from his pastorate at Newellton, La. Notwithstanding the trouble with his eyes he will be available for evangelistic singing after March 1, and may be addressed at Cedar Grove Station, Shreveport, La.

Dr. F. M. Freeman, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference and now pastor at Trinity Methodist Church, El Paso, Texas, has our thanks for his renewal and good wishes. His achievements in former pastorates indicates large success in his ministry in that West Texas metropolis.

Rev. L. E. Alford, the energetic presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, brought to New Orleans last week eleven subscriptions from the Oak Ridge charge. Mrs. A. S. Byrd, wife of the faithful pastor of the circuit, had formerly sent in a list and we thank her for co-operating with Brother Alford in securing the additional ones.

Mr. Charles O. Chalmers received a thoughtful post card from Rev. Payton A. Sowell with the following printed: "At March 2, 1931, my journey is well nigh run; I pause at milestone eighty-two to say, I am thinking of you." Brother Sowell will be affectionately remembered by his many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Mrs. G. W. Moncrief, Longstreet, La., in renewing her subscription, wrote: "I love the dear old Advocate and enjoy its weekly visits. Although I am eighty years of age I look forward to its coming. I have not missed a single issue in forty years." We pray that blessings may abide with Sister Moncrief and that the Advocate can continue to give her good cheer.

Rev. Lester T. Nelson, recently appointed pastor at Georgetown, Miss., is beginning his work under the most favorable circumstances. The people are delighted and Brother and Sister Nelson are happy. The three subscriptions sent in by the pastor are the first fruits of a large harvest that is to come.

We acknowledge with appreciation an announcement from Bishop and Mrs. William Benjamin Beauchamp of the marriage of their daughter, Anne Dorothy, to Mr. Virginius Billisoly Murden, Jr., on Saturday, February 21, 1931, at Richmond, Va. We congratulate the young couple and wish for them a long and happy life.

Rev. W. P. Bailey is in his third year on the Horn Lake, Miss., charge and is enjoying a most happy pastorate with those fine people. He and Mrs. Bailey are to be congratulated upon the birth of a fine little son whom they have named William, Jr. We trust the little man will carry on the work of his father in the years to come.

Rev. J. T. Abney, who is in his fourth year on the Lauderdale and Electric Mills, Mississippi, charge, is leading his people in the study of "Methodism and Kingdom Extension." Rev. J. L. Neill is now assisting him in a revival meeting at Electric Mills. We trust that great good will come as a result of this meeting.

Rev. J. O. Ware, who is in his second year at Anguilla, Miss., is having remarkable success in the work on that charge. On a recent Sunday, at Delta City, there were 343 in the Sunday school, and extra chairs had to be used at the regular preaching service. Brother Ware is faithful to every responsibility in his pastorate.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, has accepted the invitation of Prof. W. E. Thompson, Superintendent of the Itawamba County Agricultural High School, Fulton, Miss., and Rev. W. R. Goudelock, pastor of the Methodist Church here, to preach the Commencement Sermon for the Class of Nineteen Hundred Thirty-One, consisting of sixty or more Seniors.

The Annual Tourists' Sunday was observed at Main Street, Biloxi, on February 22. The sermon was preached by Dr. Conant of Chicago and the tourists' offering of $50 was sent to the Orphans' Home to buy "cookies" for the children. All tourists are not Sabbath desecrators nor law violators. Many of the finest people of the North visit our beautiful Mississippi coast each winter.

Rev. Linus Parker Anders is making splendid progress on the Adams circuit, Mississippi Conference. Brother Anders was selected by the presiding elders and Board of Missions as one of the representatives from his Conference at the Emory University Summer Pastors' School. We thank Brother Anders for a list of eight subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell arranged a unique and interesting pageant from the book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension." The program was given at Fayette and a large audience enjoyed the novel method of emphasizing the world's appeal to the United States for spiritual help. Brother and Sister Cottrell are workers who need not be ashamed, rightly promoting the interest of His Kingdom.

Mrs. E. L. Jernigan, wife of Rev. E. L. Jernigan, pastor of the Oakland charge, North Mississippi Conference, was operated on at the Baptist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., March 5. In a note to the editor, Brother Jernigan says: "She is resting only fairly well." We regret to learn this sad news and pray that the Heavenly Father may see fit to rapidly restore this good Christian woman to her normal health.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, the hard-working presiding elder on the Newton District, Mississippi Conference, in sending his second round, wrote: "Things are moving well on the Newton District. Many phases of the work are encouraging. We are keeping the Advocate before the people and are going forth with faith in God doing our best." We thank Brother Gatlin for his interest in the Advocate.

A Young Men's Bible Class was organized at the Arcadia Methodist Church on Sunday, February 15, with the following officers: R. S. Fly, President; R. L. Taylor, Vice-President; W. D. Truluck, Treasurer; and B. P. Theus, Secretary. Dr. H. D. Shehee is to teach this promising class. It was appropriate that Mr. Truluck should be the treasurer and we hope that he will have good luck in extracting the necessary funds from the members of the class.

Rev. John S. Henley, pastor, of Jonesboro, the seat of the district conference for the Ruston District, which meets April 2-3, is asking all the pastors of the district to give information at an early date as to how many delegates to expect from each pastoral charge, and how many will stay over-night. This information is important for the committee of entertainment, and he asks that no delay be had in giving this information. All former pastors and presiding elders are invited to be with them.

Rev. Jasper L. Smith is finding his work pleasant at Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg. Congregations are increasing and interest in all departments of the church is good. Brother Smith recently sent ten subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we thank him and his people. Those who know the economic circumstances at Gibson Memorial will readily consent that if a good list of subscriptions can be secured there it is possible most anywhere else. Brother Smith does not overlook his work at any point.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, the well known evangelist and editor of the Pentecostal Herald, has been spending the winter on the Pacific coast. On Sunday, January 25, he preached in the new Glide Memorial Church, at San Francisco, on "The Empowering of the Holy Spirit." It goes without question that it was a great sermon and we pray that Dr. Morrison may abide in strentgh to preach the gospel as he has so effectively done through the years.

At the annual session of the Grand Chapter, Order of the Easter Star, recently held in Lake Charles, La., Rev. H. B. Hines, pastor of the Methodist church at Elizabeth, La., was elected, on the first ballot, to the office of Associate Grand Patron. By virtue of this election, Brother Hines, a year hence, will be elevated to the office of Grand Patron, which is the highest honor that can be conferred upon a man in this organization. The Advocate congratulates, Bro. Hines.

The choir of the Logansport Methodist Church was organized on Tuesday night, February 10, with the election of the following officers: Mrs. G. M. Attaway, president; Mrs. W. D. Perry, vice-president; Mrs. Price Calhoun, secretary; Mr. D. D. Simmons, director; Mrs. A. E. Carroll, pianist, and Mr. Francis Canole, assistant pianist. If the facetious suggestion that the choir is the war department of the Church be true, Brother Fomby has his department well organized. The Interstate Progress reports that the Methodist church choir is one of fine spirit and good ability.

Mr. J. O. Emmerick, editor of the McComb (Miss.) Enterprise, which paper won the National Cup for Community service, states in a recent editorial, "We endorse the ministers' campaign of church loyalty. We must certainly recognize church loyalty as a duty to God, community, family and self." The weekly papers although smaller in circulation, create more high opinion and moral influence than the larger metropolitan dailies. Mr. Emmerick's paper is in the first rank of this distinguished service.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

The Whitworth College delegation to the Phi Theta Kappa Convention at Weatherford College, Weatherford, Texas, March 1-3, was composed of Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Winfield, Miss Ruth Winfield, Miss Gertrude Davis, Dean; Misses Margaret James, Coralle Swayze and Alice Weems. Miss Margaret James is National President of the Convention, she having won this honor and brought this distinction to Whitworth College from the 1930 Convention held at William Woods College, Fulton, Missouri, last year.

Rev. N. S. Jackson, Superintendent of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, announces that there will be a meeting on Law Enforcement on March 16, at noon, in the Markham Hotel, Gulfport, Miss. Dr. F. Scott McBride, of Washington, D. C., General Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, will be the principal speaker. A luncheon will be served by the Hotel at a nominal cost. It is hoped that this will prove to be the greatest meeting on law enforcement ever held in South Mississippi. Brother Jackson writes: "Will you urge all your readers in South Mississippi to attend this meeting?" We trust that our readers will make a special effort to comply with this request.

Col. William L. Nugent was born in East Baton Rouge (La.) Parish on December 12, 1832, and graduated with distinguished honors in June, 1852, from Centenary College at Jackson, La.; and soon thereafter moved to Mississippi and entered upon the practice of law. Col. Nugent won reknown as an attorney of ability and unimpeachable integrity. He was a member of the General Conference when Charles B. Galloway was elected to the Episcopacy and was always a supporter and ardent admirer of the beloved Bishop. A portrait of Col. Nugent was placed in the new million dollar Hinds County Courthouse at Jackson, Miss., on February 16. Hon. W. H. Watkins, teacher of the Men's Bible Class at Galloway Memorial Church, made the presentation address and Hon. J. Morgan Stevens, a steward in the same church, received it on behalf of the bar and citizens of the County. Mrs. Dr. H. R. Shands, Jackson, and Mrs. Nellie Nugent Somerville, Greenville, Miss., are surviving daughters of Col. and Mrs. Nugent.

The Church has begun to expect from its General Hospital Board a telling and tasteful output from its publicity department. The Golden Cross Guide and Yearbook of the General Hospital Board continues and enhances this reputation. The covers are yellow, printed in blue, carrying the well-known Colophon of the General Hospital Board with the Golden Cross in the center. The thirty-two pages are beautifully printed in the best style of our Southern Methodist Publishing House. Part one gives a brief analysis of the meaning of the healing ministry; part two is an exhibit of the work of the General Hospital Board with a brief reference to each of the twelve hospitals belonging to the Church; part three is a guide-book for the Golden Cross worker. The directory carries the names of the General Board; the names of the Conference Golden Cross directors, the names of the Chairmen of the Conference Hospital Boards, and the names of the District Directors of the Golden Cross. A good index makes this information available.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT NOTES

The Rev. W. A. Hays, presiding elder, keeps busy looking after the affairs of the district. He, with Mr. W. D. They reported good meetings every place visited. All interests of the church are being looked after.

Even though many days and even months have passed since the beautiful life of our friend and co-worker, ADDIE V. GOODWILL entered into that "City not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," we are still constantly thinking of her splendid and unselfish life. Truly her invisable presence is ever about us, challenging us to more worthily represent the Christ whom she loved and knew as Lord and Saviour. The outstanding characteristics of this Christian woman was her love for and her devotion to the cause of Missions. She was Superintendent of Social Service in the Mississippi Conference for four years. She gave herself lovingly, enthusiastically and unstintedly to the interests of the Kingdom. Perhaps no woman has given more valiant or distinguished service. She felt that no other field of activity offered a wider scope of usefulness than that of Social service. Through this department she gave expression to her interest and sympathy for child welfare, especially the child in ignorance, poverty and evil surroundings. She was greatly interested in the Negro: She insisted that they be given justice and the opportunity of Christian education. She urged us, as Christian citizens, to measure up to our responsibility in regard to suffrage. She believed the rights of citizenship carried with it the duty and responsibility preserving the principles of righteous government. She urged her legislative committees to use their power of citizenship in every way possible for law enforcement, particularly the liquor traffic. Her courageous stand on all these issues gave testimony of her strength of Christian character. Her consecrated life will ever challenge us to give of our best to the Master and her devotion to the cause of Christ will cheer us in our tasks to carry on. Hers is a blessed memory. Her family, her church, her age is the richer for her life. It is a beacon light that burned unsparingly with intensity and brilliance and is to-day throwing itself into the future in a constructive, Christ-like love for men, women and children.

A beautiful and useful life of service came to an end February 16, 1931, at 1:15 p.m., when MRS. HENRY LEACHMAN died at her home in the Douglas community. Mrs. Leachman (nee Miss Lucinda Eveline Hammett) was born in Claiborne County, Alabama, Nov. 19, 1879, moving to Louisiana at the age of four. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Douglas at the age of eighteen and married Mr. Henry Leachman at the age of twenty-one. To this union were born twelve children—three girls and nine boys. Her husband, two girls and eight boys survive her.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AT THE FOURTH QUARTERLY CONFERENCE OF THE CENTRAL METHODIST CHURCH, NOV. 7, 1930

CASWELL WESLEY COCHRAN, one of the twelve children of John H. Cochran and Helen Hightower Cochran, was born on May 19, 1852, in Lauderdale County on the "Old Cochran Place," near the present Daleville. His father was a pioneer citizen of Lauderdale County, being its first sheriff. The members of the family on both sides were staunch Methodists.

C. W. Cochran attended school at Cooper Institute, Daleville, where he formed friendships with many ministers of this Conference lasting through the years, also a commercial college at Louisville, Ky., returning to Daleville to engage in a mercantile business and farming.

He married Elizabeth Sandford, a teacher in Cooper Institute, and they moved to McAlister, Oklahoma, in 1904 to enter the wholesale grocery business with his brother, George. After a few months he returned to Lauderdale County, locating in Meridian, where he engaged in farming and the lumber business.

C. W. Cochran joined the Methodist Church at twenty years of age while a student at Cooper Institute. Being too timid to take part in many activities of the church, he dedicated his financial talents to God. At various times he supported a station, helped organize and build churches, paid indebtedness to wind up affairs of the church year after year, maintained missionary in foreign fields for years, sent many girls and boys to college, and performed other Christian acts that the public knew nothing of.

In 1904 he became a member of Old Central Methodist Church in Meridian. As chairman of the building committee, he had a very large part in making possible the dedication of the new Central Church. He contributed the chimes in memory of his first wife and was chairman of the organ committee when the present pipe organ was installed. He was a trustee of the church for two years, a member of the board of stewards for twenty years, was a delegate each year to district and annual Conferences, and was twice sent a delegate to the General Conference.

Through his wife he made possible the Elizabeth Cochran Reading Room, which has developed into the present Wesley Community House. He aided in establishing the Travelers' Aid. Jointly with W. E. Hopkins, he gave the building for the Methodist Church in the Fewell Survey community in this city. He was a member of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. at the time of the erection of the present building.

On February 4, 1925, he was married to Mrs. Ethel B. McGraw, of Meridian, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. L. Decell, a close personal friend. Active in business, church and community within a week of his death Caswell Wesley Cochran passed away after a brief illness on September 25, 1930, at Meridian, Miss.

In view of the foregoing facts, be it resolved, That in the death of Brother C. W. Cochran, the Church has lost a faithful supporter and devoted worker, the community an outstanding citizen, and each of us a personal friend whose influence for good will live on and inspire to unselfish and consecrated life in home, church and community.

H. M. IVY.

The span of life is usually evaluated by great deeds, wide popularity and the number of years lived in the world; but we must conclude that the only way to properly estimate the worth of a life is how well the life was lived, whether it was the "three score years and ten" or just a few brief years. On Feb. 7, 1891, there was born into the home of Rev. C. M. and Mrs. Zipora Crossley a little girl, not destined to have a strong, robust body able to go on missions of love and mercy to the needy in far-away lands, but to have a frail body, an invalid from young girlhood. It was the sacred privilege of the writer to know EURA CROSSLEY almost from infancy, having lived in the home for months and often having blessed fellowship in visits to the home, so I knew her as only few outside of the family did. From a little girl she was affectionate, and her love for God and her Savior soon developed. She joined the church early and was true to her vows to the end. The spirit of the Master so filled her life that though she suffered through the years she early began to think of others, and all through her life, though a shut-in, she was ever thinking how she might make others happy with her voice and hands. Because of her loving ministries to others she made friends everywhere her father had a pastorate. To know Eura was to love her, and her life was a blessing to many along the way. When eleven years of age her own mother was taken by death, which was a great shock to her as well as to the family, but the good Lord provided a devoted stepmother who tenderly and faithfully ministered to her through all the years of her affliction. As the years passed by she gradually grew weaker, but not until her strength utterly failed did she cease to be an angel of love and mercy to all whom she could help. Verily, she bequeathed to the church a life of absolute unselfish service which still lives though she be dead. On the Holy Sabbath, early in the morning, Nov. 23, 1930, in the triumphs of a living faith, the tired body "fell on sleep" safe in the arms of Jesus. On the next day, at Philadelphia, Miss., in the Methodist Church before a large concourse of people the funeral services were held, being conducted by the presiding elder. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, assisted by Brothers J. F. Campbell, H. J. Moore, O. C. Scott, W. B. Jones and the writer. Her body was placed in the local cemetery by the side of her two sisters, who preceded her to the better land several years ago.

"Farewell, Eura, but not forever,
There shall be a glorious dawn.
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn'."

TO THE WOMEN OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Southwestern and Southeastern Passenger Association has granted convention rates for the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, to convene in Baton Rouge, La., March 24-27, 1931, if the minimum requirement of the sale of 100 tickets can be met.

Think what this will mean to us in dollars and cents if we can put it over. The only way it can be accomplished is through the co-operation of every delegate and visitor to the conference. We must, as individuals, be greatly concerned about this matter of reaching the minimum of 100 tickets.

Remember that if we use other means of transportation it will work to the disadvantage of our fellow-delegates and visitors. Let us bear this in mind and not be the one, or among the ones, to cause those 75 or 85 persons who have traveled by rail, paying full fare on the going trip with the expectation of securing one-half fare returning, to fail to secure this reduction.

Below are the regulations we are to follow in purchasing our tickets and getting them validated for the return trip.

A reduction to one and one-half fare for the round trip on the "Certificate Plan" will apply for members (also dependent members of their families) attending the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South, to be held at Baton Rouge, La., on March 24-27, 1931.

The arrangement will apply from the following territory on authorized selling dates shown:

Territory: Reduction will apply from all points in Louisiana under jurisdiction of Southwestern Passenger Association.

Date of sale: March 20-26, 1931, inclusive.

Final honoring date: March 31, 1931.

1. Tickets at the normal one-way tariff fare for the going journey must be purchased on any of the above dates (but not on any other date).

How you feel in the morning tells the real story

THAT'S the time you should feel like whistling and singing. Your muscles should itch to tackle the day's work. Your mind should quickly solve the problem that baffled you the afternoon before. Don't let your health slip away so that a night's rest fails in its natural recuperative powers. When you awaken with a "dragged out" physical or mental feeling, heed those bad symptoms. That's the time you need a dependable tonic to help restore your old time energy. Try a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is sold by druggists.

2. Be sure when purchasing your going ticket to ask the agent for a certificate receipt. Each delegate should have a separate certificate receipt covering ticket he purchases. One receipt for more than one ticket will not be honored or validated. If, however, it is impossible to get a certificate receipt from the local agent, a regular receipt will be satisfactory and should be secured when ticket is purchased. See that the ticket reads to the point where the convention is to be held and no other. See that your certificate receipt is stamped with the same date as your ticket. Sign your name to the certificate or receipt in ink. Show this to the ticket agent.

4. Certificates are not kept at all stations. Ask your home station whether you can procure certificates and through tickets to place of meeting. if not, buy a local ticket to the nearest point where a certificate and through ticket to the place of meeting can be purchased.

5. Immediately upon your arrival at the meeting, present your certificate to Mrs. L. A. Sims for endorsement, as the reduced fare for the return journey will not apply unless you are properly identified as provided for by the certificate.

6. Special agent of the carriers will validate certificates on March 24-27, 1931, inclusive.

No refund of fare will be made on account of failure to either obtain a proper certificate or on account of failure to have the certificate validated.

7. It must be understood that the reduction for the return journey is not guaranteed but is contingent on an attendance of not less than 100 members of the organization and dependent members of their families at the meeting holding regularly issued certificates from ticket agents at starting points showing payment of normal one-way tariff fare of not less than 67 cents on the going trip.

8. If the necessary minimum of 100 regularly issued certificates are presented to the ticket agent, Illinois Central System, Baton Rouge, La., and your certificate is validated, you will be entitled to a return ticket via the same route as the going journey at one-half the normal one-way tariff fare from place of meeting to point at which your certificate was issued, up to and including March 31, 1931.

9. Return tickets issued at the reduced fare will not be good on any limited train, on which such reduced fare transportation is not honored.

ZONE MEETING

Zone No. 4 of the Minden District met in Ringgold on the 12th of December, with Mrs. Woodard, zone leader, presiding. "Savior, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us," was used as an opening number. Mrs. Cook from Ringgold led in prayer. Mrs. Wynn of Minden conducted a very interesting and helpful devotional lesson. She used part of Bishop Moore's quiet hour lessons given at the Annual Conference. She stressed the need of prayer and of leading souls to Christ through kindness and patience. Mrs. Hodges of Minden very beautifully played "Autumn" and first gave the history of her selection. An article from the Voice, "Behold, It Was the Lord," was splendidly given by Mrs. Rodgers of Ringgold. Miss Nicolls of Shreveport, representing "Jubilee Inn," was an invited guest and told us many interesting things about her work. Why "Jubilee Inn" was established and what a help it was to working girls Miss Nicolls added to our program throughout the day. Visitors to the meeting were then welcomed and introduced by Mrs. Blade, recording secretary. These visitors were, Mrs. Marston, zone leader, of Coushatta, also Rev. and Mrs. Briscoe Carter, Mesdames Kagel and Perry, all of Coushatta; Rev. W. Harvell, P. E. Minden District, and Mr. Wimberly of Ruggard. A short business session followed with the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting. A letter was read from Miss Ella Hooper of Houma telling us more about the little girl, Nolia Leron, whose scholarship in school this zone sponsors. Pledges for this scholarship were then taken. During the noon hour a delightful lunch was served anad a get-together meeting held. The afternoon session was opened by singing "Holy Night." Miss Mary Searles led in prayer, Mrs. Harvell of Minden gave some high lights from Conference. Her talk was very helpful again stressing the need of prayer. Four visitors from Heflin were then introduced and invited to join our zone meeting. Mrs. Thomas very impressively sang "Jerusalem," with Mrs. Davenport at the piano. This zone stresses spirituality and with a leader who lives so close to our Heavenly Father every day, we all look forward to the afternoon's devotional period, which always brings us to the foot of the Throne. Mrs. Gillon of Ringgold conducted this worship hour and at the close of this marvelous lesson from the Bible an old-time Methodist experience meeting was held. Although this meeting was called at a busy time of the year, we had the largest attendance of the year.

YEARLY ACTIVITIES OF FAYETTE AUXILIARY

The Fayette Auxiliary meets every week with programs outlined as follows: Business, Bible study, Mission study or Voice program. These meetings are held at the church with a good attendance. The fourth meeting is a social and given in the homes. The program from the Year Book is given and a report on local work. The membership is divided into circles to carry on local work—each chairman being responsible for the stipulated offering of her circle, which is turned over to the treasurer. Aside from this, each member is asked to give 10 cents each week and at the end of the year a Harvest Day is observed when this amount is turned in—thereby eliminating bazaars and suppers.

A study of Conference and Council minutes is made, assigning questions in advance.

Social service activities, such as visiting the sick and strangers and carrying fruit and flowers, are entered into by the committee. Also help to the needy.

A helping hand has been given to "sister" auxiliaries by putting on programs for them and inviting them to meet with us, indulging in social hour afterwards.

A very instructive and pleasing lecture on Mexico was given by Miss Clara Belle Drake, who had recently visited Mexico.

The last program of the year was given to Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, who gave an inclusive talk on the program that should be carried out in every auxiliary and conducted the installation of officers.

The Missionary Society sponsored the reception given Brother and Mrs. Cottrell on their arrival here. Prayer objectives are outlined and given to each member as follows:

1. Our pastor and all ministers of the gospel.
2. Our Missionary Society and church.
3. Our Youth and homes.
4. World Missions and peace.
5. Our Nation (prohibition, safety, sanity, financial depression).
6. An outpouring of God's spirit.

Helpful Suggestions

(1) To have a definite time (one-half hour daily) for prayer, Bible study and meditation.

(2) To give a definite portion of our time, talents, personality and means in God's service.

(3) To win others to Christ.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Circuit Preachers' Conference held at Millsaps College was a most successful meeting. Forty-one circuit preachers were present. There were 72 in attendance. Dr. Alexander and Dr. Martin rendered most valuable service. The discussions were open and frank. Many of the men present made most valuable contributions to the findings of the group. I believe it was the most successful meeting that I have been in. It has given me strength and hope for the future and I trust we can find a way to give to all the fine results of the meeting.

The fourth Sunday in this month is League Anniversary Day. You will find the program in the March number of the Epworth Era. We are trusting that every church in the Conference will observe this day. The Church needs to have brought to its attention the work of its young people and this gives a wonderful opportunity.

Your Board is facing a very difficult time ahead. The next two months we will reach the limit of our resources. It is hoped that Sunday School Day observance and the Missionary offerings will tide us through. We will have to borrow money, but we are trusting that we can get along by borrowing a minimum amount and that our obligations at Conference will not be large.

Pray for the workers and the work.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The standard training school at Amory was a most satisfactory school in every way. Sixty-two enrolled for credit and fifty-five credits were issued; every credit counting on the gold seal. Several visitors attended the school regularly.

Mrs. J. L. Bryan, superintendent of the intermediate department of the Amory school, will receive her gold seal after the Amory school. She is one of the most efficient and effective workers that we have in our Conference, and is to be congratulated in this distinct achievement.

Owing to the failure of three banks in that territory the school at Lexington has been postponed.

Last Sunday, I spent the day with the good people of Kosciusko. Rev. Jas. T. McCafferty, the pastor there, is beginning a very happy and effective pastorate. His leadership is being felt in this fine congregation. At a workers' conference in the afternoon several items of vital importance were discussed and plans were made to enlarge the work of this fine old church. Mr. B. G. Webb, the superintendent of the Sunday school, is one of the best to be found anywhere.

Be on the lookout for the March issue of the Millsaps College bulletin. It contains a program for College Day which is to be observed the fifth Sunday in March. It is the desire that every Sunday school, Epworth League, as well as congregation, put on this short but effective program. No offering is to be taken. Simply have the twenty-minute program put on and give the people this information concerning our schools.

Begin now to make plans to observe Sunday School Day in your school. Next week we will give full directions for the observance of this day.

Epworth League Anniversary Day is to be observed by all Leagues the fourth Sunday of March. Take your offering and send it to Rev. S. E. Ashmore, Webb, Miss. Three-fourths of this offering is used in our own Conference to advance this important work, and the other fourth is used by the General Board to promote the Epworth League work generally.

If you desire to be better trained for your work as a teacher, pastor, officer or leader and for more intelligent membership of the church there are many means whereby you may improve your training. You do not have to wait to attend a training school or leadership school. Write to me and I will be glad to give you help in this matter.

R. G. LORD.

EPWORTH LEAGUE—NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Our revival meeting at Coffeeville will begin the first Sunday in April. Rev. J. E. Stephens will do the preaching for us. We will have a young people's choir. We will appreciate it very much if the young people of our Conference will remember us in their prayers during these evangelistic efforts.

Sunday School Day is supposed to be observed in our Conference the third Sunday in April. This is a part of the program of Christian education. It is a very important part so far as the Sunday school is concerned. It would be great if we could make it unanimous in observing Sunday School Day this time. Why can't we make it unanimous? Is there anything that can prevent us from doing such a thing?

There are at least two great reasons why we should observe Sunday School Day at this time. One reason is the value that it will be to the school that puts on a good program. It will give the folks information and training that they need. It will give to them a greater appreciation of the Sunday school.

Then, we need the money that we will receive from the offering that day. We can either help or hinder this work in the offering that we make that day. We must have this money if the program is to be carried out as it should be. We certainly do not want to hinder the work or impede the progress of the program of Christian education in our Conference. Let us tell our people about this important work and ask them to make a liberal offering on Sunday School Day

We hope to make Grenada District a one hundred per cent district. We are expecting every school in the Grenada District to put on the program and take an offering. Most of the preachers have already promised to do this. We believe they will carry out their promises. We feel sure that our young people over the Conference will co-operate with the pastors in putting on the Sunday School Day program.

Remember the day, the third Sunday in April. Send your offering to Rev. R. G. Lord's office at Grenada. We are counting on you to do your best. This is a good time for us to show our willingness to co-operate

Yours sincerely

District Conference, at Jonesboro, Apr. 30 to May 1.

Above you will find the date for your second quarterly conference. May I count on your co-operation in my purpose to make that round of conferences the best we have ever held?

All questions left over from the first round must be answered, especially Question 3, concerning salary, and Questions 5 and 6, concerning adjustment of Superannuate Endowment Quota.

I beg you to give careful consideration to that part of Question 4 which has to do with the assignment to each congregation of its Benevolent and Kingdom Extension quota. We have dilly-dallied with these sacred claims in times of prosperity, until now we face threatened collapse of our missionary enterprise and our other connectional institutions. Nothing less than hearty repentance and heroic sacrifice can save us now.

It is of the utmost importance that the people be aroused concerning the situation, and all pledges and free-will offerings be secured in every congregation before the convening of the District Conference. To give ample time to finish this enterprise we have changed the date of the conference to April 30-May 1.

Let me express my admiration and gratitude to the pastors and people for the patient and heroic spirit in which they are facing these times which test men's souls.

PRESCRIPTION
in use over 47 Years
Really Helps Bowels

Don't you want this way of making the bowels behave? A doctor's way to make the bowels move so well that you feel better all over! Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin doesn't turn everything to water, but cleans out all that hard waste clogging your system. It cleans you out without any shock, for it's only fresh laxative herbs a famous doctor found so good for the bowels, combined with pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

A doctor should know what is best for the bowels. Let Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin show you how soon you can train the bowels to move freely, every day, the way they should. It's wonderful the way this prescription works, but it's perfectly harmless; so you can use it whenever a coated tongue or sick headache tells you that you're bilious. Fine for children, too (it tastes so nice), and they ought to have a spoonful the minute they seem fretful, feverish, or sluggish, or have a sallow look.

You can get the original prescription Dr. Caldwell wrote so many years ago; your druggist keeps it all ready in big bottles. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and use it always for constipation.

Vicks His "Main Standby in Medicine," Writes Missionary Frank H. Connely

"Without Question," He Says, "It is the Finest Thing I Know of for a Cold."

A Daily Vacation Bible School operated by Mr. Connely's church and taught by the boys and girls of the Mission Boarding School

"We appreciate Vicks more than words can tell," runs a letter from Mr. Connely, written from his Mission Post at Taingchow, Shantung, China. "Here we are a long way from a doctor, so with three children in our family, it is mighty handy to have your salve on hand, for without question it is the finest thing I know of for a cold. It is our main standby in the way of medicine."

As with Connely's in far-away China, Vicks occupies, in millions of homes all over the world, the position of family standby for coughs, colds, sore throat and spasmodic croup.

Vicks was especially appreciated from the first by mothers because it avoids "dosing." In treating the frequent colds of children, constant "dosing" with internal medicines so often upsets delicate digestions, lowers vitality and invites fresh colds or other ills.

Vicks, the modern external treatment for colds, can be used freely and as often as needed, even on the youngest child. It solves one of mother's most vexing problems.

Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime and covered with warm flannel, Vicks attacks colds two ways at once: (1) Through the skin, like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness; and (2) Its medicated vapors, released by body-heat, are inhaled direct to irritated air-passages.

While long recognized as the ideal treatment for children's colds, actual use in millions of homes has proved Vicks to be equally good for the cold troubles of adults, too.

"Gerald suffered with his stomach and bowels until he was listless and weak," says Mrs. B. E. Geren, 822 West Main St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

"Now he's the strongest boy I know. I gave him California Fig Syrup because Mother used it. It increased his appetite, regulated his bowels, helped his digestion."

● Nothing could be more convincing than the way thousands of mothers are praising California Fig Syrup to show how it acts to build-up and strengthen headachy, bilious, half-sick, constipated children.

Your doctor will approve the use of this pure vegetable product as often as impure breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness warn of constipation — or to keep bowels open in colds or children's diseases.

GOOD FOR DIZZINESS

Constipation Troubles Relieved By Black-Draught, Says Kentucky Man.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Hundreds of people in Hopkinsville know Mr. Dale Harris, of 102 South Kentucky Avenue. Mr. Harris knows Thedford's Black-Draught, from having taken it a number of years. He says:

"I often come in from work with a bad feeling in my stomach and head. I have a dizzy feeling in my head and am constipated, so I fix me a dose of Black-Draught immediately to guard off a spell of illness.

"I have always found Black-Draught to be perfectly satisfactory in every way, and would recommend it to any one as a safe and wonderful medicine when a purgative is needed.

"It is a good idea to keep a box of Black-Draught in the medicine cabinet so at a moment's notice you may take some when dizzy spells and constipation occur."

Thousands of others have reported that many disagreeable symptoms, due to constipation, have gone away after they had taken Thedford's Black-Draught.

This well-known medicine has been in use nearly 100 years, and its popularity is constantly increasing, as growing sales clearly prove. Sold in 25¢ packages. NC-243

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria have him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

RUSTON DISTRICT KINGDOM EXTENSION INSTITUTE

The Kingdom Extension Institute for the Ruston District was held at Gibsland Jan. 29 and was one of the most successful meetings our district has had.

The program was opened with a devotional service led by the Rev. E. J. Buck, of Dubach, using as a scripture the fifteenth chapter and first to fourteenth verses of St. John's Gospel.

Rev. R. M. Brown, P. E., presided and after his introductory remarks the regular speakers of the day gave their addresses in the following order:

Rev. W. R. Harvell, P. E., Minden District, represented the Conference Board of Benevolences; Dr. J. E. Crawford represented the General Board, giving a very inspirational address; Rev. H. N. Brown, of Lafayette, who is Missionary Secretary for the State, gave his address and distributed books and literature in line with his work. There were about four hundred copies of "Methodism and Kingdom Extension" sold.

The people of Gibsland lived up to their former reputation for royal entertainment. During luncheon hour there was a general discussion after which a few important points were stressed, as follows: Rev. W. E. Akin on prohibition; Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, District Secretary of Women's work, and Rev. A. K. McLellan on the S. S. work; Judge E. L. Walker represented the laymen.

Among those churches which had high numbers of representatives, the Athens charge, under the leadership of Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., and the Jonesboro charge, under Rev. J. S. Henley, were the champions, each having thirteen present.

A general spirit of fellowship and good will prevailed throughout the day.

Perhaps the most surprising feature was "that it did not rain."

R. H. STAPLES, Secretary.

At Sola, Cuba, a town of 1500 people, a new Sunday school was begun in September, 1930. By the beginning of 1931 this Sunday school enrolled more than fifty pupils and every Sunday every seat was taken. In this little town there is no other religious work of any kind, save an occasional visit from the priest to baptize some children.

Lose Fat
Safely and Quickly

Kruschen Salts—(a perfect combination of the six mineral salts your body should have to function properly) purify your blood of harmful acids, and aid the kidneys nad bowels to throw off waste material—the continual formation of which is probably the cause of your fat.

In this modern age of living, it's impossible to get these salts from the fancy foods you eat—but don't worry just as long as you have Kruschen Salts.

Take a half teaspoon every morning before breakfast in a glass of hot water—little by little that ugly fat disappears, you'll feel better than ever before—years younger, more energy. You'll soon possess that enviable beauty, clear skin, sparkling eyes, superb figure which only perfect health can impart.

An 85c bottle (lasts 4 weeks) at your druggist's or any progressive druggist in America. Money back if Kruschen doesn't convince you that it is the safest, quickest, easiest way to lose fat.

A Hartford woman writes, "I'll tell the world Kruschen Salts is wonderful stuff to reduce." An Ohio woman lost 10 pounds with one bottle.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

The "cruve of intelligence distribution" runs the mental range from the fifty-down (imbecile) on through the one-hundred-forty up (genius). It is encouraging to be told that the vast majority of people are above the "borderline." To have the psychologist look the average American in the eye and give him his "IQ" will not be near so disconcerting as when he is faced with his "I.O.U."

Man should not be satisfied with anything less than his intellectual best, though his greatest need is to know the Eternal Word and Timeless Truth. Philologists may differ about language, philosophers disagree over life's meaning, and scientists divide concerning time and space, but the Christian may rejoice in "The Witness of the Spirit." It is interesting to learn that the magnitude of Betelgeuse is so immense as it could contain ten hundred million worlds like ours, but that is not so elevating as to know "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth." Our day needs the cultural knowledge about the star of Betelgeuse welded to an experience of the Star of Bethleham.

President Eiselen, of Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, is quoted as saying that admission to the Institute will be limited, which will be "not merely to improve the quality of candidates, but also reduce the quantity." There seems to be a general movement to seek only the most promising students for enrollment in colleges. One of the difficulties in this is just how to determine who are the most promising. In speaking of this tendency the other day, a veteran college president said: "You can't grade humanity by 'A's.' We have students now who will make 'A' in everything but will never measure up in general ability and usefulness to some others who have to struggle in order to make much lower grades." Mr. Gifford, president of the American Telephone Co., a man of eminent success, says: "Success in life is relative. In my judgment, success means making the most of such ability, personality, and physique as you have. Don't measure your success against others but against your own potentialities. . . . If you achieve the sincere feeling that you are doing the best you are capable of, you have attained as much success as any man can attain." Christian colleges exist for the students and not the students for the colleges; and the success of a college is success in helping every student to be and do his best.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR BISHOPS

To All Methodist People in Louisiana and Mississippi

For more than a year the country has experienced stringent economic conditions. Few communities have been exempt. Our people have suffered hardship. Many Christians have failed to realize how seriously the benevolent work of the Church has been affected. Every larger interest of Methodism is crippled, and to prevent, if possible, permanent injury to our great causes, we feel constrained to call the situation to your attention and appeal for your sacrificial loyalty.

For several years our benevolent work has increasingly suffered. Our General and Annual Conferences have made the most reasonable apportionments possible to make for our great and important causes; but in spite of our abounding and increasing prosperity we have paid only about two-thirds of what has been asked. This alone was serious enough, but in 1930 so many of our people reduced their gifts to God and His Church that only a little more than half of the amount apportioned to the various charges was realized.

Our general benevolent interests fell short nearly half a million dollars last year in the decreased payment on the apportionments alone, and much more was lost from other sources of income. Perhaps twice as much was lost by the Annual Conferences in the same way. The result has been disastrous, and to-day many of our causes are desperately suffering in their work.

Our Board of Church Extension had urgent requests for nearly one hundred thousand dollars to assist needy congregations in the home land to erect houses of worship, but the Board had less than five hundred dollars to appropriate. Further, that Board has already announced to the Church that no congregations need apply for help this year, because the Board has nothing to give.

The work of the General Board of Christian Education cannot be carried on during the quadrennium without the funds which the General Conference intended it should receive through "the Kingdom Extension." Had the General Conference not asked $175,000 for this board in "the Kingdom Extension," the work of that Board could not have been provided for, and should that sum not be forthcoming, that work will fail. The whole program of this new board is most vitally related to the Kingdom Extension.

Our world-wide missionary work has suffered even more. In 1930, our missionary income was two hundred and sixty-seven thousand dollars less than in 1929. How can this work be stopped even when funds are not realized? We have a thousand of our brothers and sisters in the far-away mission fields and on our frontiers, and these must receive their meager stipends further, we have many churches, hospitals, and schools in these fields which cannot be closed. while foreign governments demand their taxes without regard to our financial condition. Every possible economy has been effected and many appropriations of urgent importance were left unpaid, but last year, in spite of every curtailment, our Board of Missions had a deficit of more than a quarter of a million

CRUCIFIXION THAT IS DEATH

Shortly the calendar will turn in at Calvary. While we contemplate the epochal event of all history—the death of Christ, it is well that notice, also, be taken of the "cross of the other way"—the cross of the unrepentant thief. Crucifixion is inevitable, it is to be crucified with Christ or to be crucified with the world; it is to be made dead to sin by Christ or to be made dead to Christ by sin.

It is a mean fallacy to assume that only Christians are to bear a cross. The world's cross, the way of sinful living, is more exacting than the Cross of Christ, it demands the death of good, and its diabolical principles are: unbelief, love of money, selfish religious belief, unscrupulous political ambition, social sensuality, blindly following false leaders, and half-hearted loyalty. The malefactor, Judas, Caiaphas, Pilate, Herod, the unthinking multitude, and fearing disciples were incarnations of those crucifying principles which when given their way not only crucified the good that was in human hearts but the Infinitely Good that was in the world. Such will do the same thing "afresh" to-day. The world's cross is darkness and death. No heart has ever sung:

When I behold the horrible cross
On which the unrepentant thief died,
My sinful life me nothing cost
And I look with praise on all my pride

The world's cross does not tune the heart to sing but inflicts physical suffering, social degradation, mental perplexity and spiritual death. It leaves the soul without song, life without love and eternity without hope.

Christ's way is "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me" and "I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it abundantly."

Bishop Charles B. Galloway

An Appreciation

BY REV. THEODORE S. COPELAND

In one of her suggestive books, Miss McKenny writes that the story of human life is ever the same, though told in new versions and in different climes. Things go on smoothly with us for years, and we never can believe that the trouble we are born to will some day overtake us. But the hour strikes and the bounds are removed; the flood-gates are opened, and in upon us pours the full devastating tide of sorrow. Not a new experience in this world of sin and suffering, yet strangely true and terrible to us; and we stand for the time in darkness "upon the shadow side of God," and see no light or comfort or hope of restoration.

When the tidings of Bishop Galloway's decease flashed over the wires the mantle of mourning fell upon a great church numbering nearly two million souls. For his church and his country he had given his life, having won the proud appellation, "Henry of Navarre—the white-plumed Knight of Southern Methodism."

"His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, this was a man." It was meet and right that the great commonwealth of which he had been a leading citizen should pay him peculiar homage that during the funeral all places of business in his native city were closed, and hundreds of eyes were wet with tears.

It is extremely doubtful whether Mississippi has ever produced another man of equal gifts and attainments or who was a mightier factor in the affairs of church and state. With patriotic pride he had watched her destiny as she emerged from the smouldering ruins of the Civil War, and Phoenix-like arose from her ashes to pursue afresh the path of progress. For thirty years he had led his people toward the establishment of justice and the promotion of civic righteousness. No purer patriot ever breathed the air of this Western world. During one of his episcopal visits to the Far East he wrote to a local paper this message: "Home grows dearer with the lengthening days of life. However ready to obey the call of duty or to enlarge the sphere of knowledge, there is a heaviness in the heart when the hour of parting comes. Never in life did the dear home seem so beautiful, or the sacred temple across the street so graceful and stately, or the little park so restful, as when I walked out the gate that night, while loving hands were waving a sweet good-bye. The very shadows of the oaks seemed filled with sacred spirits eager to pronounce a blessing and insure me a safe return."

Bishop Galloway was a noble specimen of physical manhood, commanding in personal appearance, graceful in manners, courtly in bearing, his eagle eye flashed with celestial fire, and his persuasive voice thrilled the multitudes like a prophet of the olden times. His mental endowments were marvelous. In the pulpit and on the platform he had but few equals on the American continent. His popularity as a public speaker was so great, and the calls for his service were so numerous that he often overtaxed his physical strength and hastened the end of life. He was deeply impressed with the urgent need of larger thinking in our everyday life; he saw that men needed lifting from the industrial, commercial, sordid influences of a materialistic age; so "he lifted his eyes on high and beheld the eternal lights; took the wings of the morning, brooded over the flower, chased the subtle splendor of minute life through its secret hiding places, reveled in landscapes checkered with glowing colors, listened to the solemn music of the sea." His imperial soul mounted to serene and unfrequented altitudes of intellectual research and spiritual vision, like the majestic eagle which, scorning the loftiest habitations of earth, soars to meet the sun.

While editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate he displayed marked ability as a writer, and extended his influence as a leader of public opinion and a defender of the Methodist faith.

No man of modern times has ever discharged the duties of the episcopal office with more credit to himself or greater honor to his church. He was abundant in labors and untiring in his efforts to extend the Master's Kingdom. An essential way to lift and redeem life from insignificance is to identify one's self with a great cause. Bishop Galloway espoused the cause of temperance in his native State and to him more than any other man Mississippi owes her present attitude toward the liquor traffic. With all his powers of persuasion he attacked the gigantic monster which had wrecked so many fortunes and ruined so many homes; and his fiery logic roused his people to drive from their borders the licensed saloon.

DR. COPELAND, GENERAL EVANGELIST

At the time of the General Missionary Conference in New Orleans, Bishop Galloway was at the zenith of his power. His address on lessons from Master Missionaries was a noble utterance and produced a profound impression on the vast body of representative men and women gathered from many parts of the world. At the close of his address a "spontaneous and unsolicited collection" was thrust upon him to establish the Soochow University. The amount contributed was $50,150.

John Ruskin has truly said that the first test of a man's greatness is his humility. With the consciousness of personal greatness must go the knowledge that our greatness is deserved and dependent. If any man of this generation has been sorely tempted to egotism and foolish pride, surely that man was Bishop Galloway. The idol of his own State, he received plaudits and flattering compliments wherever he went; yet, in the midst of it all his humility was real and profound.

But our little life is rounded with a sleep.

Cottages and kings await and answer alike the inexorable summons, and are brought to the house appointed for all living.

Surrounded by loving friends and tender ministries this great man embarked for the better country.

There was no moaning of the bar when he put out to sea, for his Pilot was at the helm.

"Safe to the land! safe to the land!
The end is this:
And then with Him go hand in hand
Far into bliss."

WOULD OUST METHODIST BOARDS

Anti-Protestant and Anti-Dry Attack

By Harry Earl Woolever

Just before Congress closed, Representative George Holden Tinkham, from the eleventh congressional district of Massachusetts, introduced in the Federal Legislature a bill by which he would drive from Capitol Hill all Protestant organizations such as the temperance boards of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. That the proposed bill was aimed directly at these two Methodist denominations was made plain in a statement which the Boston representative gave to the press on the day he proposed his bill. In that statement he specifically mentioned the above-named churches, and only these. Why is this wet Republican representative from a Democratic district anxious to have Protestant bodies declared "public nuisances," as he indicates in his bill? Is it because this attack is but part of a drive against American principles of government and religious freedom?

It is informing to look into the background of this effort to use the United States Congress to carry out the purposes of this agent of the anti-prohibition and anti-Protestant forces. This may readily be done by learning who Mr. Tinkham is, whence came he, and for what purpose this individual presents his bill attacking the Protestant Churches, and his statement attacking government departments having to do with prohibition Also, a review of the bill and its relation to certain forces at work in the National capital will help to answer an often asked question as to why the Methodist Board located in Washington does not construct the proposed enlargement of its building. Mr. Tinkham's resort to the use of Congress to carry on his attack against the Protestant agencies in Washington and his giving to the press with a copy of his bill a statement which is misleading and false in its implications, demand a setting forth of some facts in order that the public may have the truth.

Tinkham Comes to Washington

George Holden Tinkham ran for Congress in 1914 in the eleventh congressional district, which is located in the center of Boston. The facts that Mr. Tinkham was the first Republican representative to be elected in more than a generation from any of the congressional districts contained in the city of Boston and that he was elected in the city which Cardinal O'Connell has boasted the Roman Catholics control politically as well as in other respects, have a peculiar pertinence to the bill just introduced to condemn the Protestant organizations as public nuisances. Recently Protestant groups have been similarly denounced in Rome, but to have a bold effort made to drive them from the vicinity of the National capitol will awaken some citizens as to the forces at work in America.

Mr. Tinkham ran for Congress in 1914, but his opponent contested the election upon "several grounds (quoting from the congressional hearings), including bribery, the use of liquor, deception of voters . . . . a conspiracy between the Democratic leader in the district and the contestee (Mr. Tinkham) . . . . and also an allegation that the contestee's returns as filed with the Secretary of State of Massachusetts, were not in accordance with the Massachusetts corrupt-practices act." It was late in 1916 before the committee on elections, having failed to make any report upon the various charges, by resolution officially recognized Mr. Tinkham as the representative from the eleventh Massachusetts district.

Space will not permit a recital of the material brought out in the ninety-five page record of the hearings before the committee. It shows a rather liberal use of liquor in that Boston election and indicates a close working agreement between Mr. Tinkham and State Senator Timilty, a Democratic political boss in the congressional district in question. The fact that this Republican Protestant representative comes out of the heart of Boston took on added significance in the attack he made against the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in behalf of international understanding and world in America. The president of that body, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, in replying to that attack, said, "Mr. Tinkham's chief criticism of the Federal Council seems to center around its peace program, which the congressman regards as in some way going counter to the principle of the separation of Church and State, as he understands it! Such a view, however, is an egregious distortion of this historic principle and is also contrary to the highest interests of both the Church and the nation."

Mr. Tinkham's repeated attacks against Protestant organizations and the manner in which he has made his charges against them before investigating committees of Congress, are indicative of his personal bias, unless it be he acts for the political bosses of Boston. His attitude in Washington appears to be in line with the statements of the Boston press regarding alliance with forces other than his own party. His bill, stripped of the accompanying statement in which he attacks the Methodists, is as follows:

"To prohibit the maintenance of quarters near the Capitol by certain organizations engaged in lobbying.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no corporation, association, organization, society, club, or board which is connected, directly or indirectly, with any church or ecclesiastical denomination shall erect, own, rent, or occupy any building, or any part of a building (other than a building used solely as a house of worship), within one-half mile (measured by the shortest course of travel) of the nearest entrance to the Capitol grounds if such corporation, association, organization, society, club, or board, or any officer or employee thereof, engages, after the enactment of this act, in promoting or opposing the enactment of legislation by Congress.

Sec. 2. Any building owned or erected or premises rented or occupied in violation of this act is hereby declared to be a public nuisance . . . Any person violating the terms of any injunction granted in such proceedings shall be punished as for contempt by a fine of not less than $1000 nor more than $5000."

Despite the fact that Representative Tinkham's charges have been proved void of merit by investigating committees of Congress, he continues to make them in his efforts to discredit the dry Protestant forces. The very nature of this bill and his clever wording of it, reveal to those who know Capitol Hill and its activities, the bigotry of Mr. Tinkham. This Boston representative always makes his charges of ecclesiastical lobbying in such a manner as to avoid any inference against or disturbance of the agencies of the Roman Catholic Church, which has one of the largest and most effective lobbying centers in Washington. The term "within one-half mile" reveals the motive of Mr. Tinkham, for had he slightly extended his limit, his bill would have affected the two big buildings housing the activities of the Knights of Columbus and the various political agencies of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. This last named body is the direct creature and agent of the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the United States and has its headquarters nearer the White House and goverenment departments.

The following quotations, the like of which Mr. Tinkham is challenged to find in the records or acts of any Protestant body in America, are taken from the official records of the body which the Boston member of Congress is careful not to disturb. The National Catholic Welfare Council reported to the Roman hierarchy of the United States in these words: "The Executive Department supervises the co-ordinated activities of the other departments. It keeps in direct personal touch with the officials of the Government from the President and cabinet members to members of Congress. It is a medium of communication, of information, and of action between these officials and departments of government on all matters that affect Catholic interests and Catholic rights. It is a medium also, on other questions of public concern where executives or legislators wish to inform themselves on public opinion." "The Executive Department has to treat directly with the United States Government and its numerous departments on matters that affect Catholic interests, and this has been almost a daily task. Our experience has taught us this: for the safeguarding of our interests, a body of trained workers must be at our service in the National Capital." "We have found, as we stated in our report of last year, an even more constant, more vital need of keeping in close touch with the Federal Government, not alone on technical legislative matters, but also on those manifold questions that precede legislation, and the right handling of which means a personal acquaintance and touch with the officials of government." If Mr. Tinkham is so much concerned about the separation of Church and State, or lobbying, what is his reason for not aiming his action in that direction?

There has never come under our observations in Washington a single instance of any of the prominent Protestant denominations asking Congress to pass or a department head to administer a law in favor of or for the special benefit of any Protestant denomination. Moreover, following the charges made by Mr. Tinkham, the Methodist bodies which he singles out have gladly had their work and activities investigated by a congressional committee. As far as the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is concerned, it turned over the full report of its activities to the Department of Justice with a request that a thorough investigation be made. Not an action which violates either American law or principles has been found against these boards. They are in Washington to serve a great moral cause and not to seek special favors.

Prevents Methodist Construction

The plan of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals to build upon its property adjoining its present building, has been blocked for months by inimical influences. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, the General Secretary of the Board, states that a wet and Roman Catholic combination blocks the granting of a permit for such building. He recites a number of incidents in the negotiations which indicate such adverse action.

There has been much said in the public press about the Government's plan to take over the property of the Methodist Church on Capitol Hill. That is pure propaganda. There has been no action taken by Congress or by any sub-committee thereof looking to the purchase of the Methodist building and the adjacent property. The officials of the Methodist Board have declared their willingness to turn over this property to the Government should it be needed, but the chief advocates of its purchase from the Methodists are the wets and other opponents of the militant American churches.

The question of the location of the Methodist building has nothing whatever to do with the character of its work. The responsibility of those officials who use it is not to lobby but to learn the facts concerning government and legislation and to make known the facts to the people. The Church has not located here to get anything for itself, but rather to give service to the country by revealing the truth upon great moral issues affecting the welfare of the peoples of the world. As it is as necessary for the Church as for the hundreds of other organizations to be near the centers of action if the facts are to be learned, the location near the center of legislative and governmental activities simply makes more efficient and effective the work that is being done in behalf of moral and religious uplift.

Congressman Tinkham's Bigotry

The editor of The Congregationalist, published in Boston, refers to the Congressman from that city by asking, "Where in all these United States is there a more biased and intolerant bigot than George Holden Tinkham? . . . . What Mr. Tinkham is actually advocating would mean, not the separation of Church and State, which we have at present in accordance with the Constitution, but a nullification of the principles of civil and religious liberty under which the State would become an agency to prevent Methodists and other church members from exercising their legal and just rights of action and association in civil affairs."

Everyone acquainted with moral and civic affairs in America knows that the Methodist agencies which Mr. Tinkham assails are in Washington for no purpose other than to serve the best interests of the country without restriction as to race, color, or creed. They make no attempt to deny any just right or privilege to any, but stand to defend against attack and to promote the highest ideals of citizenship and of political and religious freedom.

The Methodist Churches, both North and South, stand ready to co-operate with the United States Government, no matter which party is in power, in the promotion of the noblest ends to which this great Republic was ordained, but they are not a people to run to silence their voices in behalf of civic and social righteousness under the attack of those who oppose prohibition or Protestant ideals of life and liberty.

OUR SABBATH IN PERIL

By Noah W. Cooper

American commerce has followed the devil of Mammon into working every day and Sunday, too, and now we are paying the penalty in our crime wave, drought, financial panic and distress. It has ever been so. Ancient Israel violated God's Sabbath, and went to the Babylon of ruin. France and Russia have done likewise. America is fast heading the same way. Pharaoh repelled God's prophets, and God sent ten plagues on Egypt. America's plagues are coming from her Sabbath breaking, and kindred vices.

If our homes, churches, press and Congress don't co-operate to induce our great Interstate Commerce to establish a weekly Sabbath day's rest for every toiler of brain and brawn, America will soon be a bedlam of crime and chaos, war and woe, like unto ancient Israel, France and Russia.

Our reforms against polygamy, lotteries, opium, white slavery, negro slavery and, the liquor traffic will all be lost if we don't preserve our partnership with God by keeping His holy Sabbath day and thus building up Godliness in all our affairs. Negro slavery brought calamity to America, and Sunday slavery is bringing ten times greater calamity.

Sabbath breaking is war against God, breeding spiritual blindness that plunges us to ruin. We can't war against God long, without warring with ourselves.

The 30,000,000 youth of America are being deluged with the devil dope of Sabbath breaking, through Sunday papers, trains, bus and aviation lines, and other Sabbath breaking business. We had just as well be teaching these youth stealing, murder and perjury. Sabbath breaking breeds all other evils. We can never stop the crime wave till we stop our national Sabbath breaking.

We think Solomon had a great fall, when he went with his concubines to burn their children in the fiery arms of Moloch. But America is doing the same wicked thing in offering her children to the Sabbath-breaking Moloch of Mammon. For Uncle Sam to cry out against bootlegging, smuggling, counterfeiting and bank breaking, and at the same time to teach his 30,000,000 children the awful vice of Sabbath breaking is to confess himself a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde; to try to worship God and Mammon.

Abolishing the lame duck Congress, lowering the tariff, deporting gangsters, and opening our purses to the drought victims, are all good things, but we will never cure our national ills without driving the devil of Sabbath breaking out of our commerce, homes and churches. The five-day work-week, so earnestly advocated by our labor leaders and some politicians will only be like rubbing liniment on a cancer. We must adopt God's plan of a six-day work-week, and a Sabbath day for all; or capital and labor will plunge still deeper into distress and woe. God's plan is best for labor and capital.

Israel would never have gone to captivity in Babylon; Jerusalem would not now be a wailing place; France would never have had her revolution, nor Russia her ruin had they kept God's Sabbath.

THE PRESENCE OF GOD

By Mrs. E. W. Sory

"My presence shall go with and I will give thee rest."

What a blessed promise to have the dear Lord ever near our side, to walk and talk with us. Yet, many times, our minds are far from Him, thinking and planning for our bodily comfort, and neglecting the food for our souls.

As we hurry along, we should speak lovingly to Him and raise our voices in songs of praise, for He craves our love and association.

His Word tells us He is a jealous God. We love Him and do not mean to treat Him unkindly, but should our friends fail to notice us we would feel hurt. Our Father does, when we fail to recognize His presence.

Picture Him as He turns away in sadness, if we enter the movies and prefer other pleasures rather than to be with Him, for He does not go with us when we turn aside from the narrow way and forget His presence.

"The Lord is with you while you be with Him; and if you seek Him, He will be found of you." 2 Chron. 15:2. Psa. 140:13. We find that the upright shall dwell in His presence. Doesn't it pay to live an upright life, to have His presence with us always, to be a guest at our table, to be with us when the storm clouds rise, and hear the "still voice" telling us to fear not, for I am with thee?

How sweet it is to forget the turmoil, strife, and all the unpleasant things of life and be alone with Him.

ALONE WITH GOD

"Still, still with Thee when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh and the shadows flee;
Fairer than morning, lovelier than daylight,
Dawns the sweet conciousness, I am with Thee.

Alone with Thee amid the mystic shadows,
The solemn hush of nature newly born;
Alone with Thee in breathless adoration
In the calm dew and freshness of the morn.

As in the dawning of the waveless ocean,
The image of the morning star doth rest;
So in this stillness Thou beholdest only
Thine image in the mirror of my breast.

Still, still to Thee! as to each new-born morning,
A fresh and solemn splendor still is given,
So does this blessed consciousness awaking
Breathe each day nearness unto Thee and heaven."

The pastor in a published message to his people writes: "Lent calls us to walk step by step with the Christ, through his last tortured days with mankind on earth. We can share His humiliation, rejection and sorrow. We can pray with the few in Gethsemane and bring comfort to those leaderless disciples left behind and grieve with them as He dies on the Cross. And when the brilliant rays of Easter's dawn drive away the shadows of sin's darkness, we can rejoice that 'He is Risen.' He died for our sins, and if we die in Him we shall also rise and live in Him.

"As this season, with its stirring messages, searches your soul and brings you closer to the Cross and the Christ, will you not answer the call of Lent by saying, 'Lord, be merciful unto me, a sinner?' If you are not a member of the church, why not unite with this church during this blessed season?

"Come to church and bring your loved ones. Come and invite others to come with you."

During this sacred season, when Jesus atoned for our sins on the Cross, it is fitting that churches have special fellowship in the things of the Spirit and come to know more clearly the "Mind of Christ."

CARROLLTON AVENUE METHODIST CHURCH

DEDICATION OF THE WINNFIELD, LA., CHURCH

Methodism began in Winnfield some time prior to the Civil War. Rev. Mr. Shelton was the first pastor and some of the earlier pastors were: Revs. Winn, Christian Keener, B. F. Alexandria, J. H. Stone, E. J. Hart, D. A. Boddie, S. Schroeder, C. H. Godfrey, J. W. Hearn. Later pastors have been: Dan C. Barr, A. T. Galloway, E. R. Galloway, J. W. Lee, Wilson Moore, W. G. Roberts, W. E. Aikin, W. B. Van Valkenburg, A. W. Turner, J. P. Haney, N. J. Roberts, J. G. Slogan, W. H. Jordan, H. J. Boltz, R. A. Holloway, A. S. J. Neil, H. W. Bowman, J. D. Harper, L. A. Humphreys, S. S. Bogan, R. S. Walton, P. M. Caraway, and C. C. Wier.

The church building enterprise was begun under the successful pastorate of Rev. P. M. Caraway. The present pastor, Rev. C. C. Wier, who is in his fourth year, has finished up the work and the building was dedicated on January 25, 1931.

In writing of the dedicatory service, Brother Wier says: "Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs and Presiding Elder W. R. Harvell arrived on Saturday, January 24, were received as was in accordance with their mission. In the afternoon we accompanied them to see the big rock quarry and the big salt shaft which had just been completed. This is one of the great salt domes of the nation. The ladies of the church tendered them a reception from 3 to 5 in the afternoon.

"The dedication services were inspiring and uplifting. A well ordered program was made. Bishop Dobbs preached a great sermon to a large congregation. He was assisted in the service by the presiding elder, Rev. D. C. Barr, Rev. Mr. Reid, of the Methodist Protestant Church, and the pastor. Brother P. K. Abel, president of the board of trustees, presented the church to Bishop Dobbs, who reverently pronounced the dedicatory ritual. It was a glorious day and happy achievement."

Bishop Dobbs, as he does everywhere, won the hearts of the Winnfield people and they are looking forward to the time when he can visit their church again. Rev. D. C. Barr, was licensed to preach at Winnfield more than fifty years ago, and Brother P. K. Abel has been a faithful member since 1878.

Brother Wier has rendered successful service in all his charges and it is fitting that his fourth year at Winnfield should be crowned with the dedication of their beautiful building to the worship of Almighty God. We congratulate pastor and people and pray that their church may continue to point the lost to the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." J. L. D.

BISHOP DuBOSE'S BOOK

Everybody realizes that we have fallen upon stressful times for the truth of revealed religion. Tremendous forces are operating to weaken faith in the Bible and its testimony to the person and office of Our Lord Jesus Christ. The test of this opposition comes most acutely to our young preachers. Their education, studies and reading expose them directly to the necessity of deciding great questions of criticism, theology and personal belief. They need ready and dependable help. A book with the title of "The Bible and the Ages," from the pen of our friend and brother, Bishop H. M. Du Bose, just published, is having wide commendation and is held by conservative scholars and teachers to be particularly adapted to the theological and critical needs of young preachers, in that it covers the whole field of Bible proof in a succinct and illuminating way. We are writing to ask you to join us in putting this book in the hands of our young brethren of the ministry. District Conferences and other group gatherings will afford particularly happy opportunities for accomplishing this end. Bishop Du Bose already has given many scores of this volume to his brethren. Help us to promote its further circulation.

Fraternally, yours,

SUPERANNUATE DISTRESS

The home of Rev. E. C. Sullivan and all its contents, practically, burned this morning about 9:30 o'clock. Brother Sullivan and his wife are very much loved in the Booneville Methodist Church. He is one of our superannuates, is a good man, and never misses any of the church services. Any who might chance to read this, and has a few spare dimes in his pocket, could not do a more worthy deed than help him a little. He lost his library and all his clothes.

Sincerely,

J. V. BENNETT, P. C.

REQUEST FROM REV. R. H. CLEGG

Let the pastors of the Hattiesburg district please send to me the names of delegates to the District Conference that is to be held in our church, April 21-22.

We want all who can to attend the Child-Study Conference that is to be held at Court Street, Hattiesburg, April 15. The study begins at 10 o'clock a. m., and it will be a privilege to hear Miss Skinner, who comes to us from the General Board of Christian Education.

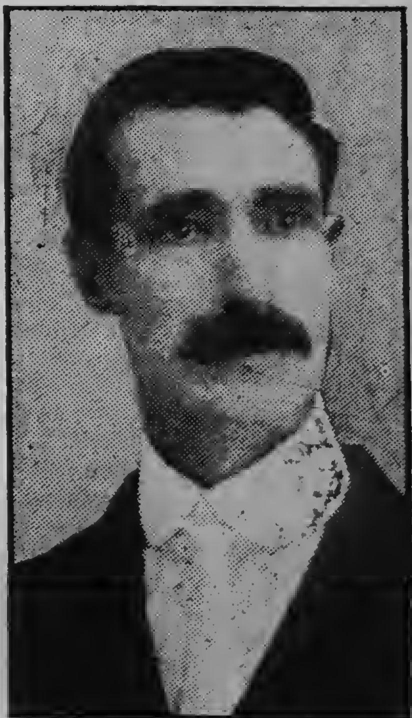
BISHOP GALLOWAY'S DAUGHTER DIES

Mrs. Willie Ventress Jackson, oldest daughter of Bishop and Mrs. C. B. Galloway, died in Greenwood, South Carolina, March 16. Mrs. Jackson was educated at Whitworth and Millsaps Colleges and later received a degree from the University of Paris, France.

Her first marriage was at the age of twenty-four to Judge W. P. S. Ventress, Woodville, Miss. To them were born her two children, C. G. Ventress, Jackson, and Mrs. R. H. Heald, Washington, D. C. Judge Ventress died in 1911. In 1919 she was married to G. W. Jackson, Lenoir City, Tenn., who died in 1924.

At the time of her death Mrs. Jackson was Professor of Modern Languages at Lander College. The funeral services were held from the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., on Tuesday, with Dr. L. L. Cowen conducting the service.



MR. P. K. ABEL

Dear Brethren: While the entire Conference year is a cultivation period, we have just passed through the two months set apart by our Church for special cultivation with reference to all the benevolent claims and also a free-will offering for Kingdom Extension. Another month will bring us almost into the period for holding the district conferences. Much inspiration was gotten in the Missionary Institutes, which have been of great value beyond their real influence on the collections, but what this influence will be is an important matter.

The institutes have been of special value in giving emphasis to the literature and committing the charges to a study of the book prepared for the occasion. Dr. Cram has given us a book in "Methodism and Kingdom Extension" that should be in every Methodist home library, and which contains a vast amount of historical and inspirational matter so presented as to be as well adapted to use of Epworth Leagues as for Adult Bible Classes. The supply of this material for twenty-five cents is in itself a challenge to the laity. The presentation of the study this year through large Sunday school classes has, at least in some places, seemed to be a good plan. In all the enterprises of the Church the great trouble has been to get the vital message to the minds and hearts of the great mass of the membership, who remain uninformed. This is true with reference to our splendid weekly and monthly religious periodicals, which, if read, would not only produce a better informed membership, but arouse and quicken an interest in the various movements and great inspirational gatherings of the Church.

The Missionary Council recently held in New Orleans, while attracting good audiences, was not attended by a comparatively large representation from the various conferences, but its important messages, which were marked throughout the session with a note of gratitude, optimism, and hope, will be given to the membership through our Church press. The increased use of our literature is, therefore, one of the important features of our cultivation program. I would urge our lay leaders to interest themselves in the goal of a subscription to the Conference organ for each home, and each steward a subscriber to the Methodist layman.

Some of the charges in the Conference have already made their every-member canvass and secured their part of the Kingdom Extension fund. Perhaps all others will. But what are the expectations and what will be done before the last month of the year towards securing the apportionments for the general benevolences, which are to help in extending the Kingdom at home and abroad in providing for missions, Christian education, care of superannuates, and a number of other claims?

The total receipts to March 1 by the Conference treasurer are:

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

> "A man bath joy by the answer of his mouth; and a word spoken in due season, how good it is!" Prov. 15;23.

ONLY A WORD

Only a word of anger
But it wounded a sensitive heart;
Only a word of sharp reproof,
But it made the tear drops start;
Only a hasty, thoughtless word,
Sarcastic and unkind,
But it darkened the day before so bright,
And it left a sting behind.

Only a word of kindness,
But it lightened one heart of its grief;
Only a word of sympathy,
But it brought one soul relief;
Only a word of gentle cheer,
But it flooded with radiant light
The pathway that seemed so dark before.
And it made the day more bright.

Only a word of evil,
Unheeded perhaps by some,
But hereafter that word brought forth its fruit,
For it caught the ears of one.
Only a word of purity,
Noble and good and true,
But it sank to the depths of many a soul,
And for good, zeal sprang anew.

Only a word for Jesus,
A word of His wondrous love,
A word for His pardon and mercy,
That pointed the soul above;
Only a word, but God's angels
Greatly rejoiced that day;
For by only a word the Shepherd found
The sheep that had gone astray.

—New Zealand Outlook.

How eagerly we watch for baby's first look of recognition—for the first smile, the first step, but most of all for the first word! The human voice is one of the most wonderful things in the world, and there is no organ of the body that possesses more power than the tongue. The Good Book says, "Therewith bless we God and therewith curse we men." After passing babyhood we are free agents and we can say just what we like. One little word can mean more than we ever dream. The tongue can cut sharper than a two edged sword. We all remember how we hated a word of reproof from our parents or teachers and how the tears would, unbidden start. No doubt those reproofs were necessary, but, oh how often we say things that make the whole day dark to some one! One cutting word to a friend or companion can sting far worse than a hornet. One evil word can blight a pure life. This fact makes us shudder and sometimes we feel that it would be better to be born dumb, but then we remember the wonderful fact that just a little word is also capable of assuaging grief and bringing cheer and gladness to some despondent soul and inspiring zeal and courage.

How careful should we be, then, with our words to see if they are words of truth and kindness and sympathy and purity. Now, just a word for Jesus has showed some lost soul where to find peace and pardon and has brought happiness to some weary, tempted one. So, we need not be afraid of words, but we must be careful that our words are the right kind, for "a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

IS IT "ALL OVER IN A SECOND"?

By H. H. Smith

A writer, discussing the subject of capital punishment, argued in favor of life-imprisonment as a substitute, saying: "When a man is executed, it is all over in a second, but if he is sentenced to hard labor in prison for life, he will suffer more and this form of punishment will act as a greater deterrent to crime than the death sentence."

Just now we are not concerned with the subject of capital punishment, but there is an assertion in the statement quoted above that demands attention. Is it "all over in a second" when one dies? That may be the creed of some who live solely to gratify bodily appetites and can think of death only as it pertains to animal life. But even with the hardened criminal there is often "a fearful looking for of judgment." Death is a solemn thing to face. Even the holiest face it with awe. When we consider their life-long attitude toward religion, the number of condemned men who call for the preacher or the priest in the death cell is surprisingly large. A few die as they have lived, but most men instinctively believe in a hereafter, and though the wicked may hope that there is nothing beyond the grave to alarm, their fears are not wholly allayed. The story is told of an ungodly man who heard a sermon in which the preacher denied that there is such a thing as future punishment for the wicked. It so pleased him that he thanked the preacher for such agreeable views of the future, but added, "Can you guarantee it? If you will guarantee it I'll bring you a load of hay?

Dr. Torrey, the evangelist, said that, during a revival, a woman came to him and asked to see him for a private interview. He told her to come to the preacher's study the next morning and he would see her. There in the preacher's study she made this confession: "I came to this country from England eight years ago. I am a miserable woman; I am a murderess. Eight years ago I killed a man, and though I have succeeded in evading the law, life is a torment. I have several times contemplated suicide, but as I have stood by the lake ready to plunge in and end it all, I have had awful fears that death might not end it all, that I might have to pay the penalty in another world." No doubt that thousands have been kept from suicide by the same haunting belief that death does not end all. No, it is not "all over in a second." We cannot run away from ourselves; conscience is a part of us, and the poet voices sober truth when he makes the guilty man say, "Myself am hell." "I want to be hanged. The people I've killed come dancing into my cell at night. I can't get away from 'em." were the cries of a condemned felon who had confessed to the murder of fourteen men.

God tells us in His word that it is not "all over in a second" when we die: "It is appointed unto man once to die, but after this, the judgment." Reason tells us it is not "all over in a second," for the man dying for his crime, who, refusing to earn his bread by honest labor, robs and kills those who have faithfully toiled for their possessions. Conscience tells us that it is not "all over in a second," when the heart ceases to beat and the body grows cold. The Bible, Reason, Conscience—a three-fold witness worthy of our acceptance.

ALL I WANT

I want to walk in the narrow way,
The way that is straight and plain;
The way that leads to the pearly gate,
The way that makes heaven my gain.

I want to be as a shining light,
A light that brightens the way;
A light that will lead somebody to Christ,
A light that can show them the way

I want to be a servant of God;
I care not how rugged the way,
Only let me be a worker for Christ,
A worker to make plain the way.

And when my work on this earth is done,
And an angel descends for me,
Lord, all I want is a starry crown
And an eternal home with Thee.

THE LITTLE GRAY KITTY

Once there was a little gray kitty. That is, he was all gray except his blue eyes and white teeth and pink tongue and one white foot and a white star on his chest and a big black smudge across his nose.

He had a mother and three brothers and sisters, and he lived with some people named Black. But it looked as if he wasn't going to live there much longer, for Mrs. Black had said that she simply could not keep five cats.

So Marion chose the dark tiger kitty, and Mildred wanted the lighter tiger one, and Marjorie took the one with the four white feet. That left just the little gray kitty and the mother cat. Grandma said she'd take the mother cat out to the farm, because the mice were trying to eat up all the chickens' corn.

"No one wants old smudge nose," said Mildred, and she pushed the little gray kitty with her foot. It was just a gentle push, but it hurt him, for he did so want some one to love him.

"Never mind," said the mother kitty. "Some day you'll find some one who won't care because you're not pretty. You're the best singer of all, and you're the only one who takes an interest in chasing mice."

Just then Grandma Black picked up the mother cat and started for the farm, the girls took their kittens and went into the house, and the little gray kitten was left all alone.

So he started out in search of some one who would love him. He walked until his little gray legs ached. Then he sat down on a lawn and thought. What could he do? He was tired and oh, so sad! You know, it's very saddening indeed not to have any one want you. He began to cry softly, "Me-ow, me-ow." And when he heard how very sad he sounded he cried just a little harder, "Me-ow, me-ow," until finally he was crying just as hard as a little handful of gray fur can cry.

Just then a voice, "Poor kitty! What's the matter?" It was a little girl, and she was on the porch.

"Me-ow," answered the little gray kitty. "I'm lonesome and tired, and nobody wants me." And he brushed along the little girl's fingers.

"How soft you are!" she said, and rubbed her cheek against his soft fur. "I love you, you little ball of velvet!"

And because the little gray kitty was so glad to know that some one loved him, he sang his very prettiest song, and you remember his mother had said he had a lovely voice.

When the little girl's mother came he was ready to run away. But she smoothed his fur and said, "He is a very nice kitty, Dottie darling. I'll give him some milk. Maybe he's hungry."

She brought a little blue bowl full of delicious cool milk. How good it did taste to the little gray kitty!

Just then something funny and gray slid across the corner of the porch. Was it a mouse? The little gray kitty wasn't sure, but he didn't wait to find out. Leaving his nice bowl of milk he ran across the porch and pounced on the moving gray object. It crumpled into a thousand pieces. You see, it was only a dead leaf!

But Dottie's mother didn't laugh. "He's going to be a mouser," she said. "We'll keep him."

Just as soon as all the milk was gone he went back to the little girl.

"He's so soft and velvety, mother," she cried, "and he's so happy he sings like a little steam engine. What does he look like?"

For the little girl was blind—she couldn't see at all. She could only feel the kitten's soft fur and hear his happy singing.

The mother said, "He's gray, darling, with a white star on his chest, and one white foot, a little pink tongue, white teeth, and beautiful blue eyes."

Did you notice that she didn't say one word about his smudge nose? So the little gray kitty curled up in a velvety ball, closed his eyes, and went to sleep. And he never was sad again.

Dottie loved him because he was so happy, and Dottie's mother loved him becaause he chased mice. And that was much nicer than being loved because he was pretty, oh, ever so much nicer. —Elizabeth Flynn, in The Mayflower.

IN DEPRESSION LET CHILDREN NOT SUFFER MOST

Larger Classes, Decreased Support, Abbreviated Terms, Closed Doors, Threaten American Schools

Many of the gains made by the schools during the past decade will be lost unless the American people adopt the policy of letting children be the last to suffer from the present depression.

In one State it is seriously proposed to close the doors of every school for a year. Another State has just voted away its fundamental tax provision for schools without substituting any other means of support.

It is proposed in other places to reduce the length of the school term. Classes are being increased in size until they cannot be handled effectively; appropriations for teaching and equipment are being reduced—the services of the schools weakened.

At no time in the history of our nation has the unifying and stabilizing influence of the schools been so greatly needed. Upon the schools the nation depends largely for developing loyalty to the institutions and principles of American government.

The schools promote loyalty to American ideals. They teach respect for law and the Constitution, admiration for our great national heroes, and a knowledge of the nation's struggles for freedom and independence. They make our diverse peoples one.

They develop the vocaational skills which are necessary to fit our citizens to the new conditions and demands of industry. They foster the ideals and habits of character which are needed to meet the peculiar temptations and conditions of to-day's life.

Educational leaders feel that it would be a great mistake at this critical period to weaken the services of the institution upon which we must rely in large measure to correct the adverse conditions which now exist among our people.—N. E. A. Journal.

SIR GALAHAD FOR CHILDREN

Every year about two thousand Philadelphia children are herded across the line into New Jersey, to pick berries, fruits and vegetables. They work in gangs, ten to fourteen hours a day, driven by padrones. They live in labor camps with no proper sanitary accommodations, no protection against mosquitoes, and no one cares about keeping them clean or healthy so long as they are able to work.

The real heretics and atheists of to-day, thinks the Federal Council Bulletin, are those who doubt that Jesus' teachings of love can be made to apply to such conditions as this one given above. Such men are the real heretics. No matter what they say about Christ as Lord and Saviour, they are skeptical as to whether He can be Lord and Saviour in a steel factory or out in a berry patch.

"How to be Christian in a sub-Christian world," says the Bulletin, "that is what creates the acutest ethical problems for all sensitive Christians to-day. And they are problems for which none of us can escape his share of responsibility. . . . Every time I make a purchase, even every time I eat a meal, I am dealing not simply in physical things, but in the life and health of those who produced them. I am party to whatever our industrial system has done to anyone."

Below you will find the boys' pledge, or "declaration," and the girls' "Aim and Ideal."

These are but examples. Every form of Methodist benevolent work has suffered proportionately. If in 1931 we reduce our giving to the Church as we did in 1930, the result will be ruinous, and may involve our missionary work, especially, in an unprecedented catastrophe.

It is our duty to state frankly these facts to our people, and to urge them in the name of our Lord to a greater loyalty and a more sacrificial spirit during this year. That conditions are not favorable is undoubtedly true, but instead of prompting us to stint the Kingdom of God this is a call to us to sacrifice more. We must not let our lines sag at the very time when the Gospel and its ministry are most needed.

We are being tested. Can we remain true to God in an adverse time? Or shall we so reduce our gifts to the Church that God's cause will suffer all over the world? We can maintain our work, though it will mean sacrifice; but sacrifice is what God demands and expects of us.

During this period our Kingdom Extension offering is before the Church. We urge you to insure its success. We Methodists must not overlook the fact that the Voluntary Kingdom Extension Offering is a vital part of the financial plan adopted by the General Conference last May for this quadrennium. Unless every charge is given an opportunity to pay its share in this Voluntary Offering, the fiscal plan for our benevolences, as worked out by the General Conference, will fail.

Especially do we appeal to those of our brethren—and they are numerous—to whom God has committed relatively large means to come to the help of the Lord in this time of stress with gifts sufficient to save His cause from threatened disaster. If we will be steadfast and true to God in spite of every temptation to shirk, if we will really sacrifice for the extension of the Kingdom, we may be sure that God's blessings will rest upon us.

COLLINS DENNY,
HOYT M. DOBBS,

Rev. J. D. Wroten, pastor of First Church, Water Valley, Miss., is promoting the Kingdom Extension Special and the interest of the Advocate. We hear good reports of his work and thank him for nine subscriptions recently sent in.

Rev. F. J. McCoy has had a fine beginning at Leesville, La. The ladies have refurnished the parsonage, the church building is undergoing a complete renovation and the congregations are good.

Rev. W. M. Jones, pastor on the Sardis, Miss., circuit, has not overlooked the interest of the Advocate. We thank him for subscriptions sent in and trust that he will have a happy and successful year.

Rev. Wm. W. Bruner, pastor, Vaiden, Miss., has our thanks for seven cash subscriptions. He writes: "I am happy in my work with the Vaiden and West people." Fortunate are the people who have a happy preacher.

Rev. Ira W. Flowers was a visitor at the Advocate office on last Thursday, and reports his work at Second Church, New Orleans, is making good progress. He is planning for a series of special services during Passion Week.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, Montrose, La., was in New Orleans the first week in March to be with his son, Martin, who was operated on at Hotel Dieu. The young man stood his operation well and we trust will soon be fully restored to health.

Rev. S. A. Brown, Durant, Miss., has learned the art of filling the Advocate office with sunshine. What office would not be cheered by receiving a check for $27? We thank Brother Brown for eighteen subscriptions.

Rev. J. B. Shearer has gotten into the good habit of very frequently sending new subscriptions to the Advocate. We thank him for a recent list and trust that the paper will help promote the success of his work.

Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Vicksburg, Miss., district, assisted Rev. J. M. Lewis in a revival at Louise during the second week in March. Much interet was manifested and good came to the church and community.

Miss Hazel Lindsay, of St. Joseph, La., has our thanks for three subscriptions. We appreciate the co-operation members of the charges are giving their pastors in increasing the usefulness of the Advocate.

Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor at Hazelhurst, Miss., is to have Rev. W. M. McIntosh in a pre-Easter revival. Brother Longgrear has his work well in hand and we pray a gracious revival will come to the church and town. We appreciate the six subscriptions with check to cover.

Rev. W. W. Perry, erstwhile leader in securing Advocate subscriptions, and one of the best supporters of the Advocate in either of the Conferences, has started at his old habit again by sending eight subscriptions from his charge, Rochelle, La. We thank him for these first fruits and are waiting for the harvest.

Rev. S. C. Moody continues in high favor with his people on the Taylorsville, Miss., circuit. Reports from his charge are encouraging and helpful revivals are expected at all the churches during the year. We thank him for his interest in the Advocate.

Rev. C. H. Strait, pastor at Mendenhall and D'Lo, Miss., is going forward with all the interest of the church in his charge. He is "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," and finds time to secure subscriptions to the Advocate. We thank him for ten cash subscriptions.

Rev. James M. Lewis is having a most successful year at Louise and Holly Bluff, Miss. Large congregations are attending the regular services and it is said that they have the largest attendance at prayer meetings they have ever had.

Rev. M. W. Porter succeeded in getting all of the Kingdom Extension Offering pledged on the Hermanville, Miss., charge, and one-third has been sent to the treasurer. The cultivation period was a blessing and everything is moving nicely on the work.

Hon. W. E. Driver, mayor at Monticello, Miss., in renewing his subscription, writes: "I enjoy reading the Advocate very much and look forward to its weekly visits with interest." A Christian paper ought to help any town or city officer.

We were glad to greet Rev. M. L. McCormick, pastor, and Mr. L. C. Pigford, Lumberton, Miss., during the Missionary Council and to learn of the splendid work in that charge. We thank Miss Annette Haynes for sending five subscriptions from Lumberton.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, and Rev. B. F. Lewis, of the Mississippi Orphanage, are requesting that the orphanage children be remembered on Easter Sunday. When we celebrate the resurrection of Him who "Took little children up in His arms and blessed them," it is appropriate that we not forget those in our orphanages.

Francis Scott McBride, general superintendent, Anti-Saloon League of America, who is making a tour of Southern States, spoke in New Orleans on Monday night, March 16. Mr. McBride is making a vigorous appeal in behalf of the Eighteenth Amendment and should have the co-operation of the people.

Dr. J. L. Johnson, for a number of years president of the Mississippi Baptist Woman's College, Hattiesburg, has been elected president of Howard College, Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Johnson has not yet signified his acceptance and we hope that he will remain in the work of Christian education in Mississippi.

The Sidon church building was burned to the ground on Sunday morning, March 8. Rev. G. A. Baker, pastor, had just concluded his sermon when the congregation was notified that the roof was in flames, and they barely escaped before the building collapsed. There was a small amount of insurance carried.

Dr. O. W. Bradley, pastor, Rayne Memorial, was the guest speaker at the Wesley Brotherhood banquet of First Church, New Orleans, on the evening of March 12. Mr. David L. Thornton is president of the brotherhood, which is accomplishing a good work in the city.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Grenada, Miss., district, has already vigorously started his work toward securing his quota of new subscriptions to the Advocate and with the co-operation of the pastors, he is well on the way towards success. We appreciate his efforts in behalf of the Advocate.

The work at Canton, Miss., under the pastorate of Rev. O. S. Lewis is going forward, congregations are fine and every department of the church is in good condition. Their church building was eight years old on Wednesday, March 4. The board of stewards gave a building birthday party, which proved to be a delightful occasion for all who attended.

The Savannah Hospital, located on Forsyth Park, Savannah, Ga., became the property of the Southern Methodist Church, on March 3. The building has a seventy-bed capacity and the rarely beautiful lot is on an entire city block. The name of the hospital was changed to the Warren A. Candler Hospital of Savannah. Dr. Chas. C. Jarrell, the general secretary, will assemble the newly elected Board of Trustees in Savannah, March 11, at 10 a. m. at the hospital.

Charles A. Battle, formerly pastor, First Church, Baton Rouge, and presiding elder, Lake Charles, La., district, who withdrew from the ministry several years ago, was found dead in his home at Baton Rouge, on Monday night, March 9. Brother Battle, at the time of his death, was a member and faithful worker in the First Church in his home city. Our prayers and sympathy go out to his wife and daughter.

Rev. I. H. Selis attended the Missionary Council at New Orleans and we were glad to learn of progress of his work at Carthage, Miss. There are peculiar problems connected with the work because of a recent bank failure and other conditions, but Brother Selis has inured himself to difficult situations and we doubt not that success will crown his year's work. We thank him for three subscriptions to the Advocate.

One of the strongest and most comprehensive letters sent out to pastors was that written to the pastors of the Greenville, Miss., district by Dr. E. N. Broyles, presiding elder, concerning the efforts now being made to secure one hundred new subscriptions to the Advocate in each of the twenty-two districts. We appreciate the interest that Dr. Broyles and the other presiding elders are manifesting in this worthy undertaking.

Mr. M. D. Tomkies, Hinton, West Virginia, Baltimore Conference, through a friend, was privileged to read the January 1 issue of the Advocate, and recently we received his subscription with the request for all the issues from January 1. Brother Tomkies is in his eighty-second year and lives with his sons, F. H. and D. C. Tomkies, who are attorneys in Hinton. We appreciate his subscription and hope that the Advocate will be a blessing to him.

Mrs. R. M. Scott, of Hermanville, Miss., in renewing her subscription, wrote: "It is always a pleasure for me to renew my Advocate. It has been coming into my home since the first copy in 1850, the year in which I was born. I am still active in my reading. May God's blessings ever rest upon all of its readers." This is a notable record for the reading of a Christian paper and we pray that Mrs. Scott may receive the Advocate many years more.

When Bishop Francis J. McConnell returns from India, where he has been delivering the Barrows Lectures, his first public address will be at a dinner given in his honor by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, of which he is president. The dinner will be held on Monday evening, April 13, at the Commodore Hotel, New York. Bishop McConnell is expected to interpret the present situation in India and its bearing upon the Christian movement.

Dr. G. C. Ballard, a retired Medical Officer of the Army, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last week, and knowing the proverbial attitude of Methodist preachers toward chicken, gave the editor a piece of china art wrought in the form of a hen and, deciding that he could not afford to give a stone when bread was needed, he repented and afterwards brought a chocolate rooster, which is more palatable at least. Dr. Ballard is a loyal Methodist and radiates good cheer wherever he goes.

Mrs. Addie Neeson, Cedar Grove, La., in renewing her subscription writes: "I can't get along without the Advocate, I have been taking it for many years and believe it gets better all the time. It is the only way I have of knowing what is going on in the church. I am confined to my home and enjoy reading the paper so much." The privilege of carrying good cheer and inspiration to those who are sick is one of the blessings that come to those who are connected with the Advocate.

Dr. John Huston Finley, editor of the New York Times and nationally known as author and educator, will deliver Emory University's baccalaureate address Tuesday, June 9, it is announced by President Harvey W. Cox. Dr. Finley has a notable history in the field of education, having received the honorary degree of LL.D. from 15 colleges and universities; served as president of Knox College, the City of New York College, and the University of the State of New York, and serving as Phi-Beta Kappa orator at Harvard in 1925. He is a present trustee of the New York Public Library.

Rev. H. S. Westbrook, Vaughn, Miss., writes: "The Rev. James T. Leggett, our alert presiding elder, came to us on the afternoon of the 21st inst., and held the business session of the first quarterly conference for us, and he remained over with us and preached for us at Ellison church on Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock, to a splendid congregation, who seemed to be eager to catch every word of his message. Being the exegete that he is, he dispensed the word of truth with force and power. It reached the hearts of many, and they appeared to be much quickened and inspired, as they dispersed after the helpful service had been brought to a close. Let me say that just before closing the service Brother Leggett took up a subscription list for our Kingdom Extension work and secured more than half of our allotment. This leaves us greatly encouraged and pressing on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

We were pleased to learn from Rev. J. L. Neill that on Sunday night, February 22, there was a union service held at the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, in memory of Richard Van Egmond. Richard was the sixteen-year-old son of Captain Leonard Van Egmond, of the Vicksburg Salvation Army, who died on January 28. At the service there was a movement started for a new Salvation Army Quarters to be a memorial to Richard. Subscriptions were taken and the building is in process of construction. At a revival last summer which his father and the editor held, Richard gave himself to life service for his Saviour. Though he was taken so soon, in this memorial and through his devoted life he will live on and on. Those who would like to share in his memorial may send their subscriptions to Captain Van Egmond, or Brother Neill, at Vicksburg.

NOTES FROM THE RUSTON DISTRICT

Rev. Harvey B. Hysell, Reporter

The Ruston district is in the midst of her Kingdom Extension program. Our presiding elder, Rev. R. M. Brown, is behind this work with his whole heart. We had a very inspiring Extension Institute, which gave us a good start off. I have heard some very favorable comment on the Kingdom Extension book we are studying. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs preached a sermon some time since at Arcadia on the Kingdom. Rev. K. W. Dodson did likewise and one of the laywomen announced that if the people wanted to read these sermons to purhase this book.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, of the Athens charge, is making good progress. He is reaching a great number by teaching this book in the Sunday school to three of his adult classes; also to the Missionary Society. Brother Henderson is putting on what he calls, "Naborhood Nite" at the two rural churches on his charge. This program is going over the top and drawing the people together. At the Wesley Church two school trucks are bringing the children to Sunday school. This method of transportation has increased Sunday school attendance a great deal at the Wesley Church.

Rev. R. H. Staples is putting on a week of special services beginning March 9. Rev. A. W. Townsend, one of the new men of our district, will assist Brother Staples in these meetings. St. James said, "Fray one for another." Let's pray for the success of this meeting.

In closing I want to request the preachers and laymen of Ruston district to send me notes and items they wish printed in the "Notes from Ruston District."

NEWTON DISTRICT NEWS

The Christian Education Institute met at Lake on February 12 with a record crowd, just exactly twice as many as attended the Sunday School Institute for the district last year. Union had the largest representation, the Mount Zion church, an afternoon appointment with Union, having practically its entire working force present.

The discussions for each group were conducted by the staff of the Conference Board of Christian Education, Rev. John C. Chambers, Mr. O. C. Hull, Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Mrs. C. F. Neshit, and Miss Doris Alford. Full and free discussion was had on the various problems involved in our task of Christian Education and many helpful conclusions were reached by those present.

The good people of Lake were hospitable and at the noon hour gave to all the visitors a delightful luncheon. Rev. L. J. Snellgrove, pastor, Mr. O. C. Hull, who is a member of the Lawrence church on the Lake charge, and Rev. H. A. Gatlin, presiding elder, contributed no little to the success of the day's work.

Mish Ruth Heflin, of Forest, who has done such effective work in our Wesley House at Biloxi for a number of years, has gone to Scarritt College for the winter and spring terms, after which she will spend a while with her mother at Forest before returning to Biloxi.

Rev. Walter Cross, whose home was at Chunkey before entering the Conference, has secured a scholarship in Westminister Theological Seminary and may be addressed by correspondence at Westminster, Maryland, instead of Emory University, Ga.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. KATHRINE ODELL SANDERS

MRS. SANDERS, who was an active and loyal member of our church at Walls, passed to her reward from the Baptist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., on November 17, 1930, after about six weeks of severe suffering.

Mrs. Sanders was a daughter of the the late D. Odell, of Chulahoma, Miss., one of Marshall County's prominent and pioneer families. Mrs. Sanders' mother passed away when she was 18 months old, and she was mothered by her aunt, Miss Emma Odell, a dear and good woman, who survives her. This dear, faithful mother said to the writer soon after her child went away, "To give up my baby was the hardest thing I have ever been called on to do."

Mrs. Sanders was married to Thos. E. Sanders, of Walls, Miss., in 1907, who preceded her three years. To this union were born three children, one daughter, Mrs. J. S. Weissinger, Mr. Thomas E. Sanders and Odell A. Sanders, all of Walls, Miss. Mrs. Sanders leaves a host of relatives and friends to mourn her going.

This dear, good woman's going has meant a loss not only to her children, but her church, of which she was a most faithful, loyal member, and feels very keenly the loss. Mrs. Sanders was a teacher in the Sunday school for a number of years, a member of the building committee for the new church which was erected at Walls in 1930. Her friends have not ceased to miss her and speak of her in the highest terms in the few months that have passed since her going. The pastor has not yet become accustomed to the empty seat that she always filled at both morning and evening services in her church. Mrs. Sanders was a great mother, always kind and willing to make any sacrifice for her children. The greatest joy of her life was serving others; she truly lived not for self but for others. Mrs. Sanders often spoke of how much more life meant to her as she grew older and these words that she wrote after she was ill express just that:

"This year has taught me, oh, so many things;
My self-bound thoughts have gethered to them wings.
Among the crowd, I reach out and touch hand,
Because I know, I feel, I understand.
I see so much I never saw before,
The many worlds beyond my little door.
I can lift up my smile to God and say,
You did not send me barren on my way,
I thank you, Lord, for riches more than gold,
That loveliness you gave to have and to hold,
Not for a year, not for a fleeting day,
But mine to keep and love and share for aye."

Nothing is more beautiful in life than to see a Christian that really and truly grows in grace, one whose life becomes richer, fuller and more worthwhile with the passing of time. Mrs. Sanders was that kind of a Christian.

May the beautiful memory of her life ever be a treasure to her children and one by which they will profit, and a benediction to her friends and associates in the church work.

Suffering Women

Monroe, La.—"I was wonderfully benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I suffered from functional disturbances and never found anything to give me permanent relief until I took the 'Favorite Prescription.' I found it necessary to take only a few bottles. It was a wonderful benefit to me and I believe it will do all that is claimed, if not more."—Mrs. W. M. Kelly, Kelly's Garage, 107 No. 8th St. All druggists.

Every bottle of this medicine contains a symptom blank. Fill it out and mail it to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., if you want free medical advice. On receipt of ten cents Dr. Pierce will send you a trial package.

N. J. McMAHON was born in May, 1867, died in Jan., 1931. If he had lived until May of this year he would have been sixty-four years of age. He attended the services of the church from early youth, and united with the church at the age of twenty-six, and was active in church work the remainder of his life. Where ever Brother McMahon lived he was active in school work. He was a member of the County School Board in Alabama, where he resided before his coming to Mississippi, serving in this capacity eight years. Brother McMahon was interested in the welfare of his children, desiring that they should all unite with the church and live active lives in the same. His next ambition for his children, that they should receive a college education. He was not a man of means, but a hard-working, honest country man. He lived to see all but two of his children graduate from college—one of these in college and the other in high school preparing to enter college. He is survived by his widow and nine children—four sons and five daughters. May the power of God sustain them in this hour of sorrow through which they pass.

His pastor,
R. H. CLEGG.

WILLIAM HENRY COULTER, son of William Henry and Eliza Richards Coulter, was born in Canton, Miss., December 5, 1853.

When a young man he went to Colorado. He spent fifteen years in that western State and then returned to Madison County, where he remained the balance of his life that extended seven years beyond the three-score and ten. On October 28, 1903, he was married to Mrs. Annie Prichard Kent. He united with the Methodist church in Canton soon after his marriage. He proved a consistent member and was immediately made a steward. He remained an official member of the Methodist church until his death. Because he was faithful in these things, God bestows upon him higher honors. For the past eighteen years he lived at Sharon. As merchant, postmaster, useful citizen, his life was good. But the writer thinks of him primarily in connection with his home and his church. That hospitable home warmed the hearts of Methodist preachers. The family altar was maintained. Conversation was wholesome and charitable. He served the Sharon Methodist church as Sunday school superintendent, steward, and trustee. Worthily he carried every responsibility. The cause of Christ was dear to his heart and he gave himself unsparingly to the work of the Kingdom. On Friday, January 23, 1931, he suddenly collapsed on the streets of Canton. He had been enjoying the balmy sunshine and the greeting of numerous friends. This man of God needed no long season of preparation, but was ready to enter immediately into the Home of God. On that bright, sunny afternoon he went to the land of cloudless day. Funeral rites were held the following afternoon from Sharon Methodist church and interment was made in Canton cemetery. The obsequies were conducted by Rev. W. J. Walters, pastor, assisted by Rev. O. S. Lewis and Rev. L. A. Comfort. His noble wife survives him. A host of friends feel an added bond to heaven. He was held in universal esteem because he exemplified the highest Christian virtues. When we think of his going we are reminded of the prayer of the aged Simeon: "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people."

B. M. HUNT.

I. Z. McKAY was born in Hillsboro, Scott County, Miss., July 7, 1854; later he moved to Claiborne County, where he spent the larger part of his life. He was married to Miss Delilah E. Marble Dec. 28, 1876. To this union were born ten children—six boys and four girls. Eight of the children survive him. He was a devoted husband and a loving father.

He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life. He loved the church, but best of all he loved the Lord; his life bore testimony to this fact. For many years he was an official in Sarepta church, serving as Sunday school superintendent and steward, and at the time of his death he was a member of the board of stewards. Being a sick man most of last year, he did not attend church any, but so often when visiting him he would say to the writer: "I could not be with you Sunday in person but was with you in spirit; was praying for you while you preached." Do we miss him? Yes, more than words can tell. He departed this life Sept. 24, 1930, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. R. Starnes, Bogalusa, La. A good man has gone but we know where to find him.

His pastor,
M. W. PORTER.

"The days of our years are three-score years and ten, or even, by reason of strength, four-score years." JAMES A. GULLEY saw within a few months four years beyond the accorded limit. A "drummer boy" in the Confederate Army at thirteen years of age, and after that an enlisted soldier until the close of the Civil War. An honored and honorable citizen of Meridian from 1865. He was active in business, frugal, accumulative and lived not only to see his children, but their children pass their majority.

In early manhood days, he united with Central Methodist Church, South; became an office-bearer, and held that relationship through all the years, even to the hour of his death.

Therefore, be it resolved, We are grateful to God for his long-spared life.

2. That we will mis his companionship, his labors in the church, and the wise, safe, precautionary counsels which were ever characteristic of him.

3. That we extend our prayers and sympathy to the loved ones he left behind, and at best cite them to Him who makes the sequel of every right life right.

4. That these remarks of respect and consolation be placed upon the church records, and a copy be given his family.

Happy Again

"Nothing seemed to please Betty Jean," says Mrs. James W. Nolen, 113 Center St., Dallas, Texas. "She was feverish and fretful. Her appetite was poor; she seemed bilious.

"A child specialist recommended California Fig Syrup and it certainly made my little girl happy, well again in a hurry. We have used it over three years for all her upsets."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it for feverish, headachy, bilious, constipated babies and children; to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases.

Appetite is increased by its use; the breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are assisted; weak stomach and bowels are strengthened.

ZONE NO. 2, ALEXANDRIA DIST., MET AT BOYCE, LA.

No more appropriate hymn could have been selected to open the first meeting of the year of zone No. 2 than, "Blest be the Tie That Binds." The meeting convened in the Methodist Church, at Boyce, La., Thursday, February 19, at 10 a. m., with Mrs. Mae Harper of Pineville, zone leader; Mrs. Marvin B. Queen of Boyce, secretary, and a good representation of members from each Missionary Society in the zone.

Roll call showing: Boyce, 18 members, 12 visitors; Colfax, 7 members, 2 visitors; Montgomery, 5 members; Alexandria Gleaners, 11 members; Alexandria Adults, 14 members, 1 visitor; Pineville, 10 members; total, 80.

The offering, amounting to seven dollars, was forwarded to the treasurer, Mrs. Carver, to be applied on the Rural Workers' fund. At the noon hour lunch was served to the assemblage at the home of Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Wilson. The Boyce Auxiliary was hostess.

The program was indeed helpful and inspiring, and no doubt each one returned to her auxiliary with a new vision of love and service and a greater determination to live a more Christ-like life. The second quarter's meeting will be held in Montgomery.

SARDIS DISTRICT MEETING

Representatives from eight of the 22 charges of the Sardis District, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, North Mississippi Conference, met in a Zone Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, at the Methodist Church in Sardis, Thursday, Febrary 12, for an all-day program of conference, training and study.

The program opened at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning, and was known as "Officers' Training Day." Mrs. C. T. Floyd, of Sardis, called the meeting to order and after the singing of a hymn introduced Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of Batesville, zone leader, who conducted a brief devotional service and entered at once into the plans of the day in training the officers in the duties of the respective stations they hold in their local auxiliary.

Followng a roll call it was found that from the eight local stations represented seventy-five women were present. They were divided up into various groups, with a leader for each, and went into separate rooms to discuss the problems and duties of their several offices: Presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and the superintendents of various departments.

After forty-five minutes they were called back into the main auditorium and several inspirational speeches were made by those discussing different phases of the work. Lunch was served at the noon hour by the ladies of the Sardis Missionary Society and the afternoon was given over to the formation of new zones for the entire district, leaders being appointed for each.

Rev. J. M. Bradley, presiding elder of the Sardis District, who was present, was introduced, as also Rev. R. C. Mayo, pastor from Shuford; Rev. C. T. Floyd, pastor-host of Sardis; Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Batesville, and Rev. Geo. Tucker, general evangelist, of Memphis.

Mrs. E. B. Farrell, president of the Batesville society, was chosen secretary of the gathering and kept the minutes. It was found that of the seventy-five present the following local societies were represented: Davis Chapel, Tirzah, Shuford, Sardis, Senatobia, Coldwater, Como, and Batesville, and from among these a committee was appointed to formulate plans for the functioning of the zones in the future.

LECOMPTE ZONE MEETING

The first zone meeting of Zone No. 3, Alexandria District, for the year 1931 was held at Lecompte, La., February 12, at 2:30 p. m. The kind ladies of Lecompte gave us a warm welcome, and the nice new church seemed to praise God for the lovely Christians who made its life possible. Mrs. E. G. Sewell, zone leader, presided, leading the devotional. Theme: "Discipleship Characteristics," 1st Cor. 4:7-14.

We were delighted to have several visitors: Mrs. O. E. Grout, district secretary, Boyce, La.; Mrs. Dr. Holmes, State supt. of Intermediate Sunday school work, and Mrs. H. J. Powers, superintendent of young women's work, which takes the place of young people's work. We also had two past zone superintendents, Mrs. Bozone of Alexandria and Mrs. Griffin of Boyce, La. We greatly appreciated the presence and assistance of Dr. J. F. Foster, pastor of Bunkie, La., and Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Lecompte.

The program was helpful and inspiring, the attendance good, and social features thoroughly enjoyed by all. A short business meeting was held and it was decided to have the next zone meeting on the second Friday in May. Bunkie extended a cordial invitation for that time.

MRS. P. C. GORDNER,
Zone Secretary.

We welcome them into our sisterhood, realizing what joy will come to them through this service, and pray God's richest blessings on their efforts in His name.

When BABIES are Upset

BABY ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready?

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

In this month's issue of the Sunday School Magazine please read "Why Did Chiang Kai-shek Become a Christian?" This article is copied from "China Weekly Review" and certainly gives another view of that most interesting event. It would be interesting to give a review of this article in the Missionary program the fourth Sunday.

The High Road for March 8 has an interesting article, "Our Church and the Hand of Charity;" this will be helpful in getting the home aspect of our work before our people. A short article, "Danger Spots in Europe," will also be helpful.

The "Place of the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise as Related to Children's Work in the Local Church," an article in the March "Workers' Council," should be read by every Sunday school worker.

The General Board is sending "Here and There" to every Sunday school superintendent. The full Missionary program is in it, also suggestions to articles in other magazines. Unless we train in missions we will fail to obtain money to carry on our program, but we will fail to grow a soul saving church and a vital spiritual church. Our spiritual lives must give out the missionary passion or we will grow cold and calloused. Your opportunity with young life should be used to the fullest advantage.

Attend the Standard Training School nearest you and take part. One of the largest contributions the conference and general boards make to the workers is through training work. It would be fine if standard schools could be placed in every church, but every church does not have enough money or people to support a standard school, because of this we are anxious for those living a few miles away to hook up the Ford and get two or three others and come to the schools.

Encouraging reports of the effect of the series of district institutes still reach the office. This has made all the workers very happy because it has led them to feel that they have had an opportunity to serve. It is hoped that those of you who have asked questions in the meetings will continue to send in your problems to the Conference board office. We are anxious to hold many group meetings to study together problems concerning the entire work of the church. Those who are interested in a group meeting of this kind please let us know and we will do our best to respond.

The church has its greatest opportunity now. If the church can stand firm and amidst the clash and unsettled business conditions project an expanded program on faith and walk out on faith to carry it through it will win and will gain more headway in the world than anything that could happen. May God give to us the faith that will cause this action. Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It was our pleasure last Sunday to be with Rev. R. G. Moore and the good people of Indianola for the morning service, and with Rev. G. C. Gregory, at Sunflower, for the night service. In the afternoon, a group meeting of those interested in the standard training school to be held at Inverness, April 12-17, was held at Inverness. There was a splendid spirit present that means that we will have a great school. We also arranged for a standard class at Sunflower.

Everywhere we go we find a widespread interest in the Kingdom Extension program. There seems to be a larger number of people taking part in the study than usual. This is a distinct piece of work that our church is doing. It is commanding the attention of the entire country. If we continue this policy for a generation, we will create a fully missionary-minded and a giving church.

Concerning Epworth Leaguers

You want to make your plans to observe Anniversary Day in your League March 22. You will find material for the program in the March issue of the Epworth Era. Put this program on before the congregation if possible that the whole church may see something of what your league is trying to do. Take an offering and send it to Rev. S. E. Ashmore, Webb, Miss.

Sunday School Day

It has been decided that our Conference will observe Sunday School Day this year on the third Sunday of April, or as near thereto as conditions will permit in your church.

The plan that is being used to assist you in the observance of this day is as follows:

1. Rev. J. E. Stephens has been delegated by the Executive Committee of the Board to direct this work.

2. He has selected, after conference with those to take part and leading in this matter, two men in each district to assist in providing means close at hand for the observance of this day in every school and church. Those men selected and serving are: Aberdeen District, W. C. Newman, A. Y. Brown; Columbus District, W. R. Lott, J. A. George; Corinth District, J. H. Holder, J. V. Bennett; Greenville District, Mellville Johnson, T. M. Bradley; Greenwood District, A. T. Clanton, S. H. Caffey; Grenada District, J. E. Stephens, W. L. Robinson; Saardis District, C. T. Floyd, W. C. Beasley.

3. Programs will be supplied without cost. Send your order to one of the men in charge in your district, or to the office at Grenada, Miss. It was thought at first that we would have two programs provided, the one sent out by the General Board and one made up by the Conference Board, but, after seeing the program provided by the General Board, it is thought that any school can use this program with suggestions of adaptation.

4. About two weeks before time to observe the day there will be sent out to every pastor an envelope whereby with the offering may be taken. Also an addressed envelope for the return of the offering will be sent. We are urging that every school in the Conference participate in this offering. The work of Christian education in our Conference depends largely on this offering. If every school will make some offering, we will have money enough to carry on this work. Send your offering to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE

The February meeting of the Meridian Epworth League Union was held at the Wesley Methodist Church, with Mr. Floyd Price, president of the Union, presiding.

The efficiency banners for the month were awarded to the 'Hi-League and Senior League of Wesley Church.

The Wesley Hi-Leaguers were in charge of the program for the afternoon. This was in the form of a playlet under the direction of Miss Reagan, counsellor. The leaguers presented the play in a very efficient manner, bringing a very helpful message to the Union.

Mr. J. H. Weems, of Hattiesburg, secretary of the Mississippi League Assembly, was a guest of the Union and made a very interesting talk, giving the Leaguers information regarding the summer assemblies, also plans for the coming year in regard to the leagues.

Robinson. We are making the final appeal to you in behalf of the observance of Anniversary Day. We earnestly request all the Leagues of the North Mississippi Conference to observe Anniversary Day and take an offering. Send your offering to Rev. S. E. Ashmore, Webb, Miss. We only received about $100 from this source last year. We ought to recevie more than that this year. We are counting on you and we believe you are going to do better this year than you did last year.

We had a cabinet meeting at Grenada last Saturday. It was the best cabinet meeting it has ever been our privilege to attend. Most of the district secretaries were there. Brother Lord met with us and Brother Cunningham, the presiding elder of the Grenada district, was there. Brother L. M. Lipscomb, pastor at Grenada, was also present. We just sat down and in a very informal way talked over the work that we are trying to do. No one seemed to be in a hurry to get away and everyone seemed to be deeply interested in the work. Everyone seemed anxious to learn about the new program of work We had a wonderful spirit of co-operation and harmony.

In our cabinet meeting we made definite plans for our summer assembly. We expect to have a great assembly this time. It will not only be an Epworth League assembly, but it will be a young people's assembly. We will expect to have representatives from other departments of the church present at this assembly. We will have young people there from the Sunday school and from the young people's missionary society. We really want to make it a young people's assembly.

Our executive secretary, Brother R G. Lord, explained the new program of work to us. The district secretaries are very much in sympathy with this new program, and they will go back to their districts and explain the work to their young people. They will have a fine opportunity to explain this work at the district institutes. We believe this program will appeal to our young people when they understand it.

The presiding elder of the Grenada district is planning to give our district secretary a place on the program at district conference. She deserves a place there. We feel sure that the other presiding elders will do likewise. This will help to get the young people's work before our people and inform them about it. Our young people should be recognized in our programs and we are glad that they are being recognized. There is no gap in our work now if we carry out the program of the church. We have a program which will include people from the cradle to the grave. It even includes those who are ready for the grave, but are still breathing a little.

Please remember that we are counting on you to observe Anniversary Day next Sunday and send offering to Brother Ashmore. Let us make it one hundred per cent in the observance of this day.

Yours sincerely,
WM. L. ROBINSON.

SWEETEN ACID STOMACH THIS PLEASANT WAY

When people experience distress two hours after eating—suffer from heartburn, gas, indigestion—nine times out of ten it's excess acid that's causing their trouble.

The best way—the quickest way to correct this is with an alkali. And Phillips Milk of Magnesia is an alkali, in the harmless, most pleasant and palatable form. It's the form physicians prescribe; which hospitals use; which millions have come to depend upon in over 50 years of steadily increasing use.

A spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water neutralizes many times its volume in excess acid; and does it at once. In five minutes, the symptoms of excess acid disappear. To know this perfect way is to be through with crude methods forever.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. A less perfect product may not act the same. All drug stores have the generous 25c and 50c bottles. Full directions for its manay uses are always in the package.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION, GRENADA DISTRICT

The Grenada District Ministerial Association met in the Methodist church at Duck Hill, February 3. A fine attendance of preachers and their wives was in evidence, about twenty pastors and other ministers being present.

A most excellent program had been arranged by the committee. Because of illness, Rev. A. L. Brewster, the appointed preacher of the day, was not able to be present. But the meeting was not robbed of a good message, for the Rev. G. C. Schwartz, of Water Valley, was pressed into service and inspired the gathering with a most helpful and devotional message dealing with our missionary obligations.

Mrs. Gillespie, of Duck Hill, brought a message in song that was most highly appreciated by all.

The topic for general discussion was, "The Spiritual Life." Rev. J. D. Wroten made a very impressive address on "Spiritual Cultivation." This was followed by a very profound address on "Spiritual Growth," by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb. Dr. J. R. Countiss closed the discussion with a very fine message on "Spiritual Harvest." All of these speeches were up to the highest standards and were very helpful to all.

The meeting was honored by the presence of Dr. W. M. McIntosh and Mother McIntosh, who are making their home in Duck Hill. Their presence is always a benediction.

Rev. O. A. Clark and the good people of Duck Hill spared no effort to take care of every comfort of their guests. A most ample and delectable lunch, or better, dinner, was served to all. Their generous hospitality is fully appreciated by the association and we shall look forward to the time when we may return to Duck Hill for another meeting.

NATCHEZ PASTORS' PORTRAITS

As a result of the item given in the Advocate a few weeks ago concerning the collection that is being made in the Men's Bible Class Room of Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., of the pictures of former pastors, several additions to the collection have been received, among them being pictures of William Winans and of B. M. Drake, both of which were donated by Mrs. M. Bonney of Monroe, La. William Winans served the Natchez circuit in 1813, 1814, and in 1821; B. M. Drake served the Natchez circuit one year —1824; and after Natchez became a station in 1826, he was preacher-in-charge two times—1828 and again in 1839 and 1840. Mrs. Bonney is a granddaughter of B. M. Drake, and she wrote that, whilst she hated to part with the pictures of her grandfather and his friend, William Winans, she considered that same would do more good in the Natchez Portrait Gallery, and might be better taken care of than among her own effects.

REVIVAL AT GREENSBURG

Dear Dr. Decell: During the holidays, after consulting my official board, I invited Dr. Theodore Copeland of Dallas to bold a Union Meeting for me at my Greensburg church. He gladly consented and we began on the second Sunday in February. We made thorough preparations, and from the beginning everything was a success, large crowds which grew each night. No friction and the greatest manifestation of God's spirit witnessed here in the last fifty years. Dr. Copeland's preaching was of the highest quality. He brought a great message of love and tolerance, which won the hearts of all who heard him. All our churches edified and old prejudices done away with. Some of the most prominent people of this community were converted and enlisted into active service for God. Our good presiding elder, L. W. Cain, was with us for two services, which added very much to our success. Rev. A. A. McKnight did the singing and in a very lovely and successful way. People attended services from all the neighboring towns, and standing room became a premium.

Our closing day was historic. We received forty-six members, and others are coming by letter. Our church is in fine spiritual condition and the way is open for a great year. Brother L. W. Cain received the class into the church, assisted by Dr. Copeland, who baptized nineteen of this class. And after service was held, three hundred dollars ($300) was raised to remodel the parsonage. God has richly blessed our people and all is well in Greensburg.

Sincerely yours,
W. D.. MILTON, P. C.

N. Y. Woman Lost 14 Pounds of Fat

One 85 Cent Bottle of Kruschen Salts Did It

"I am starting on my second bottle of Kruschen Salts and am real pleased with results. I take it for reducing and so far have lost 14 pounds and I think it is doing wonders for me. I do not feel so tired evenings when I get home from work."

A generous bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at your druggist's or any drugstore in America—take one-half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning for breakfast—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—that will help Kruschen take off your fat.

Before the bottle is empty surplus fat is leaving you—indolence changes to activity—you'll feel younger—eyes will be brighter—steps grow spry. Millions know this—you ought to know it. Kruschen Salts is the ideal treatment for constipation, indigestion, headaches, nervousness and acidity.

Take Kruschen every morning—it's the little daily dose that does it—if not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

After 40
Bowel trouble is Most Dangerous

Constipation may easily become chronic after forty. Continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles—and a host of other disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. When they need help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

Next time just take a spoonful of this family doctor's laxative. See how good it tastes; how gently and thoroughly it acts. Then you will know why it has become the world's most popular laxative. Big bottles—all drugstores.

FROM MRS. CALLOWAY

Dear Dr. Decell: I am glad to welcome you as our new editor of the Christian Advocate, and congratulate you upon the fine paper you are giving us. I have just received this week's issue and notice what a convenient place you have given your clever reminder to subscribers who are in arrears. I find that I am almost on the delinquent list, and send herewith money order for my renewal.

I appreciate the Advocate and have subscribed to it since Brother R. H. Mahon was editor, some thirty-five or forty years ago.

My husband and I have just celebrated the fortieth anniversary of our marriage, and we began taking this good paper soon after our lives merged.

All of the editors have been splendid Christian characters, giving us a periodical the influence of which has been both a spiritual blessing and a rich source of information pertaining to the activities and affairs of our great Church.

I deem our church organ indispensable to the building and maintaining of genuine Christian homes, where the aged need cheer and comfort and the young need information and encouragement in their church life.

The ideas, exhortations and experiences of fellow-Christians being brought from time to time to our attention, serve as a wonderful stimulant to righteous living as we journey toward the Celestial City. I think we are not as careful and interested in the kind of literature that comes into our homes as we should be. Many a life has been wrecked by the influence of a bad book or magazine, and many have been saved to holy living and service through the influence of Christian literature. Next to the Bible, I think every home should have its reading table filled with the church and Sunday school literature, that our children may read as they run; for indeed this is a swift age, and it is lamentable how few find time to be holy or to inform themselves in the Bible and the fundamentals of real Christianity, that they may develop into intelligent Christians, well able to defend the Church and all that she stands for in a crooked and perverse generation.

Brother Mounger and his fine family are very popular here with all the people. His preaching is of a high order and well attended. Our church and Sunday school services improve in attendance and interest in spite of our cramped quarters. We are not discouraged, but are visualizing and confidently working toward a greater church in every sense of the word.

I think our people, on the most part, are profiting spiritually by the chastening influences of depressed conditions, and many of us are "standing at attention" while our Heavenly General, the Captain of our salvation, is bringing order out of chaos and blessing out of what seemeth to be baneful experiences. Quite appropriate here is a favorite text used by our sainted old pastor of precious memory, Rev. A. W. Langley, whose ministry is still perennial in my heart: "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord."

MRS. A. FOUNT CALLOWAY.
Oxford, Miss.

FROM A LAYMAN

As we entered the church at the 11 o'clock service to-day we were handed a leaflet, the subject of which was, "Grace and Giving." It contained some good thoughts, but one or two we beg to take issue with, viz., "Dives went to hell because he refused to give to the poor." "The rich young ruler was perfectly moved, but one thing thou lackest—give!" "Give and then ye shall have eternal life."

1. Dives was sent to hell because he would have been saved SHRDLUA rejected the Lord Jesus Christ. Had he been saved he would have been prompted by the Holy Spirit to feed Lazarus. Works not prompted by the Holy Spirit are as "wood, hay and stubble." God accepts nothing from a sinner but an humble, contrite spirit. "In my hand no price I bring."

2. The rich young ruler was required to relinquish his hold upon the god of riches and follow Christ, and then good works will follow absolutely.

3. "Give, and then ye shall have eternol life." "Eternal life is in His Son." and not in works. We receive a reward, but have eternal life by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. Good works cannot wash away sin.

F. BURDINE.

FROM THE PORTERVILLE CHARGE

Dear Editor: We left Summit on the afternoon of Feb. 12 for Porterville. We reached there about one o'clock on the 13th, sick with "flu," having contracted a genuine case of it en route. It held a tight grip on me for a week, keeping me confined to my room for a week, causing me to miss my appointments the first Sunday that I was here. Since that time I have met my appointments and preached to an appreciative people, and the Lord graciously blessed us in the services.

On our arrival the good ladies brought us a good dinner. They have been very thoughtful of us and brought our meals to us while I was sick. The good people here have sent us a nice supply of groceries. It has never been my privilege to be associated with a finer people. I have never seen a finer, purer company of young folk. All are church-going people.

I found the work very well organized. We are looking forward to and expecting great revivals all over the charge. We are happy in the work and are glad to be once more actively engaged in the pastorate. Pray mightily for us, brethren.

A New Revival Songbook!
Spiritual Life Songs

An Introduction

In this collection of "Spiritual Life Songs" our Publishing House furnishes one hundred and forty-two of the best hymns of the Church. Through them the majestic voice of the Christian centuries is heard. They preserve the distinctly evangelical note of our Methodism. They express our devout and fervent spirit of worship, as well as our insistence upon a vital Christian experience and a life of Christian-like service. Here are hymns for the penitent, the backslider, and the victorious believer.

The General Conference Commission on Spiritual Life believes the worshipful use of these hymns will help to hasten the spiritual awakening for which we devoutly pray and earnestly labor.
(Bishop) Arthur J. Moore, Chairman, General Conference Commission on Spiritual Life.

FROM BROTHER W. H. PATTON

Dear Editor: Will you give me a little space in your paper?

A Different Day in Indiana

There was a time in Indiana when old "Dad" Stevenson, through his control of a certain secret organization then most powerful in the State, seemed to imagine that he was above the law or all restraint through his naming of United States senators, governors, mayors and others, the old man became so obsessed with his own prowess that he imagined nothing would be done to him even after he had attacked a young woman, who later died. But he has been contemplating his misconception of things for some few years now in the prison at Michigan City.

Mayhap the license that Stephenson claimed for himself gave the people and officials of Indiana a new light on matters. At least it is a far cry from the attitude to the conviction of former Mayor John L. Duvall, of Indianapolis, on the charge of violating the corrupt practices act. Because when candidate for mayor some years ago, Duvall promised a Republican politician that he would allow him to name two members of the board of public works, he was convicted by a jury, sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $1000.

The former mayor appealed the case and the sentence of the lower court has just been affirmed by the appellate tribunal of the State.

So Duvall must serve a prison term and submit to ineligibility to holding office for four years because he did what almost all other candidates in almost all other places have been and are still doing. Indiana has made a long jump in reform from the depths of political degradation to the heights of political purity.

The pendulum seems to have swung completely back. It is my prayer every morning in family worship that the men and women who will take part in the primary election next August shall vote so as to make a long jump in reform from the depths of political degradation to the heights of political purity in my native State.

Although this work has been opened but a very short time, already a dozen or more people have been helped both physically and spiritually.

Christ is the fathomless and exhaustless Fountain of Life. In the Atlantic Ocean, off three miles from Matanzas, Cuba, there is a spring of fresh water. It is always in commotion and covers an acre of space. The Ocean around it is thirty-six feet deep, but this spring of living water is fathomless. "There was a fountain opened up in the house of King David for sin and all uncleanness." Jesus stood and cried, saying, "if any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink" and "out of him shall flow rivers of living water."

At a meeting recently held in Washington Mr. Raskob outlined a program for a five-day labor week, suggesting that such would enable people to organize week-end parties for automobile trips. What labor needs now is not more leisure but a chance to work even less than five days per week. The Bible plan of six days' labor and one day of rest and worship would prove more beneficial than any other formula. America is suffering from Sabbath desecration and the proper observance of the Lord's day as a holy day instead of a holiday is one of her greatest needs.

Hon. Josephus Daniels, a distinguished Methodist layman of North Carolina, and Mr. Willis J. Abbott, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, are spoken of as editors of a daily New York morning paper that would uphold the moral principles of the Constitution and exemplify the culture that has made the nation great. There is a widespread demand for such a newspaper and it would doubtless have a nationwide circulation from the beginning. The Lord said to Habakkuk: "Write the vision and make it plain upon tables that he may run that readeth it." The church press is endeavoring to make the vision of God and a better day plain.

Methodists have always been a singing people. The hymns of Charles Wesley have been sung around the world. Records of rich experiences and expressions of great doctrines are written in the hymns of the Church "Spiritual Life Songs" is an inexpensive book that contains one-hundred forty-eight songs that stir the soul. Our Publishing House co-operated with the Spiritual Life Commission in its composition. Bishop Arthur Moore, in his introduction, writes: "In this collection of Spiritual Life Songs' the majestic voice of the Christian centuries is heard. They preserve the distinctly evangelical note of our Methodism. . . Here are hymns for the penitent, the backslider, and victorious believer."

THE EDITOR IN NORTH LOUISIANA

Upon the invitation of Rev. B. C. Taylor, and presiding elder Gunn the editor was priviledged to be one of the speakers on the final program of a series of district group meetings in the Monroe district.

On Friday evening, March 6, the hospitality of Rev. G. W. Pomeroy, of Delhi, was equal to the best. He soon left the goodly town of ancient name and raced along through fertile fields that surpassed the delta of the Jumna. A princess doesn't have to live in the ancient Mogul Empire, as Brother Pomeroy knows otherwise about the modern Delhi.

Winnsboro was reached on time and Bro. Pomeroy had been commissioned to preside and direct the service. This he did in a courteous and efficient manner. Judge Clark, Mrs. Hatch, R. R. Branton and the editor spoke on subjects concerning the benevolences. A splendid congregation was present and the presiding elder did not allow the Advocate to be overlooked.

OUR Bishops and the Publishing Committee met and after learning the immediate needs of the Advocate are co-operating with the editor and manager in making a success of the 100 new subscriptions as a minimum from each presiding elder's district prior to May 15. We thank the presiding elders and pastors for their efforts and urge that at least the 100 be secured by the district conferences.

J. L. DECELL, Editor,

The Methodists of Winnsboro have built a beautiful building and under the capable leadership of Rev. J. W. Booth they are going forward in every way.

After the service it was a pleasure to ride with the presiding elder, Judge Clark and Conference lay leader, S. M. McReynolds, into Monroe where the night and next day were spent in the comfortable district parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. Elmer C. Gunn. Brother Gunn is in his fourth year and the preachers and members throughout his district respect him and honor him for his work's sake. The pleasure of being in his home will not be forgotten.

Lunch on Saturday was enjoyed at the Monroe parsonage where Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Drake dispense genuine Southern hospitality. Dr. Drake is "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" and is giving himself to a joyous promotion of all the interest of the church.

Saturday night Shreveport was reached. Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of First Church, was at the train and lost no time

CRUCIFIXION THAT IS LIFE

There is more than the moral influence of a wholesome example in the death of Christ. The Cross is not the mere symbol of a governmental regime, it is the utter disclosure of Infinite Love and a revelation of the ultimate purpose in sin. However horrible it may seem, Sin would destroy God and all good, but its dart can never reach so high. Satan and sinful man are but co-workers in an inky-swash of an aftermath that deepens in its gloom of defeat. The Cross is the impregnable fortress of man's hope, and its shame has been transformed into the solid triumphs of Love. Man is reconciled and redeemed by the death of Christ.

Paul speaks of being "Crucified with Christ." The vital principles of life and love inherent in Christ perfectly poised in Him on Calvary and undiminished in death, must to some degree have reigned in the Apostle's heart for him to be "Crucified with Christ." This is the glory of the Cross—a Power that lifts man out of the way of the "cross of the other way," sinful living, and puts into him Christ-like life. "It is Christ in you, the hope of glory."

The human mind cannot comprehend all the meaning of the Crucifixion of Christ, nor understand all the splendor that shone amid nature's darkness. But loneliness, physical suffering and agony in death do not tell all. There were deathless realities present even in death. With the power of a sinless life and a consuming passion for the holy, Jesus loved man, realized his value, was conscious of his being lost, felt His responsibility and ability to lift man from sin to heights of holiness, and was fathful to man's supreme need and the Father's glory. These imperishable virtues triumphed over the worst that sin could do and ever live in the Cross that is "Towering o'er the wreck of Time." The death of Christ is the focal point where the destructive power of sin was and is overcome.

It is a blood-stained thoroughfare over which man must travel if he would live. By repentance, a change from "the other way," or a refusal to enter it, he is enabled to exercise Faith, the inlet of Christly life, and triump over sin and death. To be "Crucified with Christ" is to live and meditate somewhat of His redeeming grace to others. At the Cross, "Love so amazing, so Divine," philosophic mountain climbing becomes pitiful and the heart would join with the ransomed of all ages and sing, "Unto Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God His Father, unto Him be glory and dominion forever and ever."

The Wets Give Me a Pain in the Neck

BY ARTHUR BRIGGS

The wets give me a pain in the neck. Not personally—for some of my best friends are wets—but politically, economically, and socially. They give me the aforesaid pain because it seems to my narrow, intolerant, bigoted, and hypocritical dry mind that as soon as a wet begins to talk about prohibition—and usually he won't talk about anything else—his brain goes soggy.

My club is an example. Its roster is made up of names famous in professions that require the highest quality of direct, effective, and clear thinking. But fully half, perhaps even two-thirds, are wet.

"Aha!" comes the wringing comment, "this brilliant assemblage is made up of wets. Whaddyuh mean a wet's brain doesn't function?"

I mean it doesn't function. I mean that if these men used the warped logic, the stale sentiments, the distorted memory in their professions that they use in discussing prohibition, they would be in the poorhouse. When prohibition comes up, they go ga-ga.

In my club I have heard discussions of nearly everything human and divine, and because the controversialists were using the same brains with which they achieved their success, these arguments have been such as to dazzle, delight, and educate.

Then somebody mentions prohibition! And things go haywire.

I don't want anybody to tell me about the narrowness, intolerance, and bigotry of the drys. Any time the wets get going in my club I can spot you a Carrie Nation, two Dr. Clarence True Wilsons, and any number of arid Methodist bishops, and still win the game of intolerance in two moves. I know because, being known as a dry in the club, I have no rest from persecution. Time was when I essayed reasonable argument, until I found that I was not arguing with reason but only the same stale statements.

Then I tried avoidance. I would not argue. I would listen. I would even nod. But it isn't enough that I admit that some dry propaganda is foolish, that there are too many speakeasies, that it's too bad a gentleman can't get a drink, that I'd like to have some good liquor myself. None of this suffices, not with these broad-minded Saharaphobes.

They won't be content until I recant Volstead and all his works, and lift my voice to cry: "There is no King but Barleycorn!"

"Foul! Foul!"

Let's just try for a few minutes to apply simple high school logic to some of these wet arguments that are gravely put forward time and again. See if, by this test, you don't get an ache in the cervical vertebrae yourself.

1. "The Eighteenth Amendment never came to a popular vote: therefore it is all wrong."

Let's assume that it would be desirable to amend the Constitution by a process of popular election, and I believe it would. The very amendment providing for a plebiscite on amendments would have to be adopted in the same manner as the Eighteenth. And until the regular method of altering the Constitution—by which the Eighteenth and all other amendments have been added—is changed, all talk of referendums and all referendums themselves are futile and ridiculous in law and in fact.

There hasn't been an argument offered against the manner of passing the Eighteenth Amendment which wouldn't invalidate all others. And I'm willing to wager that Mr. Darrow and any other of the distinguished lawyers who inveigh against prohibition would, if pinned down to the pure, cold logic of law, admit this perfectly obvious fact. Their attitude toward the Eighteenth Amendment is decidedly legalistic special pleading. This they realize, and that they don't approach it as they would any other legal question is one of the reasons why the wets give me a pain in the neck.

2. "It was 'put over' during the Great War and while our boys were in the trenches."

"Put over" my eye! It was a pushover. The pushing had been done steadily for twenty-five years by the Anti-Saloon League, and if the wets were good sports, they would admit that they'd been beaten by hard, fair fighters. But the wets yell "Foul!" and claim they weren't looking. What did they have to do to defeat the passing of the amendment in Congress? Control half the state legislatures? No—only thirteen. How many did they control? Three!

Pushover is correct.

And since the Eighteenth Amendment, like all the others, is not subject to plebiscite, the boys in the trenches would have had little effect either way. There is, too, the thought that possibly those four million soldiers, sixty per cent of them from dry districts, would not have voted unanimously wet.

The Public Be Pleased!

Congressmen are elected to represent their constituents. If they don't represent the general sentiment of their districts more or less habitually, they don't remain in Congress. And steadily the dry vote in Congress has grown. If Congress, personally wet or dry, is politically dry, it is the best indication in the world that the country is dry. Indeed, a Congressman who is personally wet but who votes dry is a surer barometer of the power of public opinion than the man whose own opinions happen to coincide with the sentiment of his district.

The "tyranny" of the Anti-Saloon League over Congress is due to the political fact that Congressmen know that the League can defeat them if they vote wet. It is not the tyranny of a fanatic minority, but the tyranny of majorities in election booths. Add that up and you have your plebiscite—the only kind that means anything in this political arena of the United States.

3. "But the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act constitute sumptuary legislation, and you can't regulate people's habits by law."

Of all the statements delivered from the wet camp, this has always caused the most poignant ache in the vicinity of my Adam's apple. Of course the Volstead Act is sumptuary legislation! So is the drug act, the pure food act, housing laws, the Federal meat inspection law, anti-spitting ordinances, quarantine for infectious disease, traffic regulations, dog licenses, and just about every other statute that has been found necessary to regulate the habits and restrict the personal liberty of individuals for the sake of the rest of us.

Drinking isn't a crime in the sense that burglary or murder are crimes. But neither is driving the wrong way through a one-way street, keeping chickens in an apartment, dumping garbage in the street, swimming in a reservoir, building a frame house in Manhattan, or keeping cold storage food in a New York grocery without a sign proclaiming the fact. None of these things is a real crime, as are theft and arson. But you can and will be arrested for doing them, and if it weren't for this sort of sumptuary regulation of personal and business habits, life would be utterly impossible in communities of more than four persons. If prohibition is to be swept aside because it's sumptuary, then all this body of protective legislation is due for the dump heap.

4. "Prohibition isn't enforced."

No, not very well. Neither is the law against murder. Since less than eight per cent of murderers are convicted, let's abolish the law against murder. Think of the money we'd save. Or let's license it—think of the revenue!

Just as logical as the wets' talk of the unenforceability of prohibition.

Mayor Walker's Speakeasies

Most of my wet friends at the club are always talking to me about New York's 32,000 speakeasies.

This chatter adds to the pain around my collar. Perhaps there at 32,000 places in New York where liquor can occasionally be obtained. But if the wets mean that there are 32,000 places where the main business is selling booze, and which are even remotely comparable to the 12,000 saloons that dispensed it before prohibition, they are babbling bunk.

There were not less than twenty-five saloons within a radius of three city squares from my home in Manhattan in 1919. There may be twenty-five speakeasies within that same radius now. I haven't been able to locate more than twelve that distantly resemble saloons in the amount that passes over the tables, but they may be there. I do know, however, that in this district in wet New York I don't see one drunk where I used to see five. I don't see—and I'm up late of nights often—one truck that could possibly be a liquor truck where I once saw ten. And if it's delivered in passenger cars or by hand, it would take some procession to come within a rivulet of the mighty flood that used to flow in these parts.

It's easy to say that people drink more since prohibition, but they don't. They can't, even in New York, because it isn't nearly so easy to get.

As to the wets' contention that it's a hard law to enforce, it's not a tenth as hard as the narcotics law—and very few wets want that abolished. You can pack enough heroin or morphine in your pockets to make a fortune, but to make any "important" money out of bootlegging or a speakeasy you have to have two things—customers and a source of supply. Now you know, and I know, and our wet friends know that if a speakeasy has enough customers to make business profitable, the cop on the beat is aware of it. He doesn't have to be very bright—he merely has to make his rounds and listen. The same goes for cooking alcohol or running a still big enough to count.

I cheerfully assert that any police commissioner in the United States, or any mayor, could dry up his town in a week if he wanted to badly enough. He would need only to tell his force they were to close every known speakeasy in their districts, and keep them closed, or lose their jobs. It wouldn't mean spectacular raids; it wouldn't take a special force. It would take guts on the part of the officer at the head of the force. But if he stood fast until the first wet storm blew over, he'd be in line for the Presidency.

If there are 32,000 speakeasies in Jimmy Walker's city, it is Mr. Walker's fault—not that of the prohibition law.

5. "Prohibition brings lawlessness."

Ho hum, what a long gray beard that one has! Now I'll tell one. When these twenty-five saloons that I mentioned earlier were flourishing, they were allowed to keep open sixteen hours a day, even though they were supposd to be closed on Sundays.

Such liberality ought to satisfy almost anybody. But not those dear, law-abiding old saloon keepers whom my wet friends are always lamenting. Of those twenty-five saloons at least fifteen were open (the side door, of course)—defying the law—on Sunday. And if I had two dollars for every time I've met a cop in those back rooms, I could afford to give this article away instead of selling it.

Lawlessness? Oh, Yeah?

Eheu! Fugaces—how a wet's memory does forget! How he forgets that it was the inherent and incorrigible lawlessness of the saloon keeper, the brewer behind him, the distiller too, that made people decide to knock out the whole business. No intelligent dry expected that these lawless lads who observed no limitation, however reasonable, and who corrupted the police as a matter of ordinary business overhead, would suddenly become law-abiding and respectable. We've had, and will have for some time to come, a lawless time with prohibition. But the lawlessness began long before the Eighteenth Amendment—was, in fact, the reason for it.

6. "Well, of course we don't want the saloon back, but—now, for instance, light wine and beer. . . . ."

Talk about dry hypocrisy!

They do want the saloon back, ladies and gents. Hearken to the reminiscences of nights at Old Tim's place, where they wouldn't sell to a drunk and always obeyed the law. A rosy haze of sweetness and light they paint around the old swinging door. But not for argument or publication.

I could embrace a frank wet who would blurt forth a hope that the saloon should come back. Being by some particular chemistry of my interior one of those birds who really can take it or let it alone, the saloon never did me any personal harm. I have had some very delightful jingles in saloons. I have heard a lot of good talk—or maybe it just seemed good talk—in saloons. I saw them pass with personal regret just as I'd watch the passing to the gallows of a boon companion who had chopped his wife into small bits. In each instance I feel that I've lost a pleasant acquaintance, but that I must acquiesce in the public policy which removed them.

Hence I can regard sympathetically the honesty of the wet who wants the saloon back because he and his friends enjoyed it, and to the devil with the other issues involved. I don't agree, but I respect him. The rest want it, but they're too hypocritical to say so.

As to light wines and beers, by personal observation I have found that:

81 2-3 per cent of those who advocate them never drank wine when they could get it.

46 per cent never drank beer at all.

92 per cent drank champagne when somebody else paid for it, but bought cocktails or highballs when paying for their own.

8 per cent drank light wines and beer in preference to hard liquor.

86 per cent admitted that while abroad they specialized in cocktails.

100 per cent were drinking gin while they talked of light wines.

In other words, my brethren, what the wets want is hooch, and don't let 'em kid you.

Anyhow I'm curious to know how allowing beer and light wine is going to make it easier to prevent bootlegged hooch than now, when all alcoholic liquor is tabooed by law.

7. "But see what prohibition is doing to youth and to women!"

Well, well, what is it doing? Wild youth isn't as wild as it's painted; statistics show that juvenile delinquency is decreasing. A great many women of the upper classes who didn't drink before prohibition drink now, but the Salvation Army can tell you that the women of the masses aren't drinking as they did in the days of the Family Entrance. And there are more of the masses than of the classes.

Besides, this drinking among youth and women is not solely a prohibition phenomenon. The problem exists also in England and France. They're fretting about it in Canada, too, where the noble experiment of putting the government in the saloon business hasn't abolished either the bootlegger or the speakeasy.

When Drinkers Were Drinkers

And here again the wet's memory goes conveniently hazy. Youth drank in my youth, even if the wets forget theirs. These student statistics on drinking in college have to be taken with a salt pretzel or two. Students who take a shot once a month when they can get it count themselves as drinkers. When I went to college you didn't rank as a drinker unless you made a habit of sopping up a few daily and got edged once a month or oftener.

I might go on and tell you how, in my home town, at least ten of the young men of the best families went to moral wreckage or phyical degeneration and death from habitual alcoholism within ten years of their matriculation; but though it's true, it might be doubted.

However, we'll leave this subject with the query as to how, today, you are to reduce the drinking among young people by making hooch cheaper and easier to get.

8. "We have made ourselves the laughingstock of other nations."

Yeah? Who's leftink?

A few visitors who think that, because they've been regaled with drinks at smart houseparties and dinners among the rich, everybody drinks as much as ever under prohibition.

If you read the foreign papers, you won't discover much laughter. What you will discover is an enormous amount of worrying about the Americanization of Europe: a fear of what the high-speed efficiency of America—which has accompanied, even if we assume that it hasn't been caused by, the Noble Experiment—will do to European industrialism and trade.

As far as I am concerned Europe may laugh its head off at our "fool sumptuary law." If countries that regulate most of the details of your daily life in a way that Americans wouldn't tolerate for five minutes choose to laugh at our method of dealing with booze, that's their privilege. They can laugh at my law while I laugh at theirs.

And while we're both laughing I can chuckle over the fact that France, for example—the model that the beer-and-light wine advocates point to so gleefully—drinks more hard liquor than England does, or than we did in the days before prohibition. I can get a giggle—or could if it seemed funny to me, which it doesn't—out of the intolerance of a country whose wine growers and distillers have just succeeded in barring from the schools any instruction whatsoever concerning the effects of alcohol on the human system. Well, er—unless that instruction has to do with wine as a tonic and health beverage for children. Maybe it is—I dunno—but those scrawny, pale-faced French kids are no ad for the vinter's stuff.

Well, What Have You

The greatest ache in my jugular region that I get from wet talk is the lack of any suggestion of a sensible substitute for prohibition. True, government control and dispensaries are working, after a fashion, in other countries. But they didn't work here—in South Carolina—and they're not working to exactly universal satisfaction in Norway, Sweden, or Canada.

These noble experiments in other countries are granting every wet claim, not so brilliantly successful as to warrant substituting them for our own system. If after ten years the machinery of prohibition enforcement is still missing on three cylinders, how long might we expect it to be before government control would be even fifty per cent efficient? Why substitute the complexities of regulation, which failed for more than a hundred years, for the comparative simplicity of a policy that has had only ten years trial and is by no means—again granting every wet claim—a total flop?

The most naive confession of wet futility that I have run across appeared in the editorial columns of a New York wet paper of the highest respectability. I haven't the actual clipping before me, but this is the outline. A reader wrote as follows:

"I note that your paper smites the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act hip and thigh at every opportunity. But what have you to suggest as a workable substitute?"

To which the editor appended this reply:

"It is, perhaps, a weakness in the anti-prohibition movement that it has no reasonably satisfactory policy to substitute."

Probably the editor was fired for that confession, but for once a wet had inadvertently admitted the truth.—Reprint from Forum and Century.

THE GUILT OF NEGLECTING SOULS

By Rev. M. K. Miller

"And they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." (Gen. 42:21).

The circumstances surrounding this text are too familiar to call for any extended discussion. I shall not take time to comment on them more than to say that When Joseph's brethren found themselves in this trouble, they began to cast about in their minds for the cause, and they very wisely laid the blame for their condition of distress upon their guilt concerning their brother.

Joseph's brethren had carried a burden of unconfessed sin for years, and perhaps would never have acknowledged their guilt, had not famine brought them into distress. So we of today are perhaps being brought to an acknowledgment of our guilt concerning our brethren against whom we have committed the sin of neglect, by the distress which is prevalent in our land and in all the lands of the earth.

We are in distress today; the signs of distress are to be seen on every hand. The world of politics is a seething cauldron of greed and vice and fear and hate. The economic world is writhing in the throes of almost deathly convulsions. Industry in many fields and departments is either totally or partially paralyzed. Business institutions which have proudly boasted of their strength are tottering on the brink of ruin; while many of the less fortunate have already fallen as victims of the pressure of the times. Crime is rampant. The daily newspapers are filled with accounts of shocking murders, robberies, wrecked homes, suicides, and unspeakable crimes against the purity of womanhood. Conditions of want are almost universal; wheat and corn are being burned in some sections while people in other sections are starving to death. We are forced to realize that something is wrong with the world today. What is it? What is the reason for it? "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." The person against whom we have committed the sin of neglect, whether he be the heathen in the far-flung reaches of the remotest land or the ignorant and underprivileged of our own land, is our brother.

But you may say: "Joseph's brethren saw the anguish of his soul." True, and here I feel the disadvantage of my position. If you could but see what a missionary sees! If you could only see the world's need today. A great artist was showing a masterpiece of a greater artist to a lady in his studio. After looking silently at the picture for some time, she said: "Well, I don't see anything extraordinary about that picture." The artist looked at her in wonder and amazement, and then said very sadly: "But don't you wish you could?" Don't you wish you had the vision of the Master when He said: "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest." Can you be blind to the tragedy of the world's condition today if you so much as lift up your eyes? It is true that Joseph's brethren saw the anguish of his soul because he was near to them, but today we see around the world through our knowledge of conditions existing in every land.

Again you say: "Joseph besought them; but the heathen races and the unsaved people of the world do not beseech us today; they are satisfied with their condition." This only makes their state the more pitiable. See the maniac: in his wild ravings he may imagine himself to be a king, with the wealth of the world in his possession; does this release us from the responsibility of caring for him, and even protecting him from himself? Think of the little orphan children who are admitted into our Orphan's Home. Many are tiny infants, who know nothing of their loss of a mother's love and tender care. Shall we close the door of our Home in their faces, because they cannot realize their need and ask us to help them? So with many of the heathen and other unsaved people of the world; they are ignorant of their real condition, and they will "perish for lack of knowledge" unless the hand of mercy is extended to them. Their NEED cries out to us, even if their voices are silent through ignorance, superstitution, and fear.

Not only does the call come to us through the misery and need of the unsaved peoples themselves, but also through the devotion and self-sacrifice of the Missionaries and Christian Workers whom the Church has sent out to minister to them. When we see young men like Warren Ware, (an intimate friend of my boyhood days) asking the Mission Board for the hardest place in dark Africa, that he might give the best years of his life, and suffer perhaps permanent loss of his health as a sacrifice on the altar of his devotion to Christ; when we see fair, delicate young girls, such as our own Robbie Lee Leggett, and many others like her, tearing themselves away from the tenderness and protection of parents and brothers and sisters, braving the dangers of the high seas and the greater dangers of life in tropical climates and oriental countries, in their zeal for the extension of the Kingdom of God; truly this is a scene which should make selfishness blush and hang its head—which should put to shame that type of piety which is couched in ease and luxury at home, trembling at every suggestion of self-denial.

The call comes to us again from the condition of our own Church here at home. We are passing through perilous times in our Church life. That a condition of spiritual apathy and cold formality which presents a serious menace to our Church is abroad in the land today, is recognized by our greatest leaders. The College of Bishops, in their address to the General Conference last year, stressed the need of a great revival. The General Commission on Spiritual Life sends out a proclamation calling in no uncertain tones for a reconsecration of our people. The best men and women of our Church are praying that revival fires may burn upon our altars during this year as they have not burned for many years heretofore. Many of those who love the Church and the Kingdom of God are today constrained to cry out with Jeremiah of old: "Oh Lord, save Thy people!" The history of God's people in all ages proves to us that the most successful enemies of the Church have been those which have assailed her from within. Outward enemies have almost invariably added to her prosperity and accomplishment by their persecution. In times of great persecution the fires of loyalty and zeal have burned brightly, and the Church has moved triumphantly on to greater and more glorious victories. But it has been the devitalizing effect of conditions in times of prosperity and ease, which has so often produced festering sores that have eaten into the vitals of the earthly body of the Kingdom of God.

And what is the remedy for our situation? Joseph, against whom his brethren had so grievously sinned, was no longer in need of their help. He was now in a position which afforded him the power to hold the mastery of their destinies in his hands; it was to him that they were crying out in their time of need. Not so with the brethren against whom we have committed the sin of neglect; their need is continuous, and ever increasing. But if the time should ever come when the heathen religions of the world, and the anarchistic social ideals of many of the unfortunates for whom we plead today, should come into a position of world mastery, could we expect the same mercy and benevolence at their hands that Joseph dealt out to his brethren? Common sense answers most emphatically no! Then we must evangelize the world in self-defense, if for no higher motive.

But there is a higher motive. It is the carrying out of the plan which Jesus laid down for the extension of His Kingdom on earth. He said: "Go ye into ALL the world, and preach the gospel to EVERY creature;" so our responsibility is to all the world, and not just to some particular section or race. In fact, we are so closely bound together in our relationship to Jesus and to the people of the world of every race and condition of life, that our responsibility to our fellow creatures is co-existent and concentric with our responsibility to Christ himself, for He has said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto Me." So we cannot disclaim our obligation to our brethren of any land or race, without suffering the consequence of hearing Him say to us: "Ye saw me thus in need, and ministered not unto me."

And there is yet another motive which should impel us to missionary endeavors of the highest order. That is the reflexive power of this work upon ourselves. While you are praying for heathen souls, and sending your sons and daughters or your money to them, I firmly believe that your prayers and your bounty will return to your own bosoms. This belief is based on my confidence in God, for in His inspired Word, He says: "He that watereth shall be watered unto himself." I believe that when you become anxious to raise heathen nations from spiritual death, you will be enabled to shake off your own spiritual grave-clothes; that while you are seeking to draw forth heathen children from their spiritual sepulchres and present them alive to their rejoicing parents, your own children will start into spiritual life by your side; that when the love of distant nations glows in our hearts, it will melt us all down into love for each other, and burn up all your jealousies and strifes, envies and hatreds. The beginnings of some of these effects I seem already to discern, as a light that shines for us beyond the horizon of our present state of gloom. God grant that this light may increase, and glow with more effulgent splendor until that blessed day, when bathed in the radiance streaming from the Cross of Calvary, America's joy in Christ shall meet and respond to that of every land on earth; when one grand harmonious symphony of voices, of every tongue and every race and every nation of mankind on earth, shall be lifted up in united praise, even to heaven, in paeans of victory and shouts of joy unspeakable; when the knowledge of a loving, suffering, dying, redeeming Saviour shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

"When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love, so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS

By Rev. Jno. F. Foster, D.D.

Jesus, after the trip to Jerusalem in attendance on the Passover, went down to Nazareth and was subject to his parents, remaining at home for eighteen years. We know nothing of this period save that he was subject to them, his parents, and that he was a carpenter, as stated in Mark's Gospel.

Thus we see the Son of God—the Logos, the Creator—not only taking upon Himself the form of man in the Incarnation, but becoming a village carpenter, which in that simple day meant a village mender for all the community, as well as village cabinet-maker.

I can picture Jesus thus an apprentice under Joseph, and, after the latter's death, serving as head of the shop in serving the community.

He no doubt toiled with his hands, making a living for Mary and the children of the home, and many homes no doubt possessed his handiwork as a cabinet-maker. Thus we may imagine him employed for these eighteen years of silence, so far as hands and physical labor were concerned, but being a thoughtful, studious man, as his quotations from Scripture and their appropriate use show him to have been. What would the man of twenty-one and on to the age of thirty be doing, for most men of thirty are men of force and thought? Physically at work securing a livelihood for the family as their support, what was his thoughts, his mental and spiritual occupation?

We find him in his public ministry prepared for its situations and trying ordeals, meeting conditions that would tax anyone, and always putting the others to flight, possessed of an insight into the working of human thought and thinking, having a knowledge of human value and an acquaintance and mastery of the Scripture remarkable and profound; we find him a master of assemblies and a speaker beyond compare, speaking not as the scribes, but with a grasp of truth and fact which gave him an authority which others had not.

How came this, as we look at the human side of Jesus? What school of preparation had he as a man dependent upon God, as are other men? A man of thirty, meditative by nature and thoughtful as are few, if ever there was a man with such penetrative powers, what was his thinking during these long years of silent waiting?

Then, may I ask, called of God to be the human vehicle in the tragedy of all the ages, the epochal man of human and divine history, the human vehicle by means of which the Love of God had become incarnate, that in the atonement he should become the Saviour of the world—then—what, may I ask, would be his self-consciousness? May I ask, when did the man Jesus come to know the divine purpose regarding his life, and to what extent did he, the Son of Man, in whose body the fullness of the Godhead bodily was to reside, comprehend the divine will in his call to service?

The union of the two natures in the person of one man, Jesus, the Christ, is beyond us, I grant, and the interplay, if I may use such language, of each in the dependence of the man Jesus upon God as was the first man dependent, is all too great for me to grasp. Yet there was a consciousness of his call, and the nature and character of his ministry, and he, the carpenter, had, working with God, grasped the purpose of God regarding his humanity and its call to service.

The answer that Jesus gave to John, "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," whether accepted as translated by Weymouth or Moffatt, or as given by Adam Clark, "Every righteous ordinance," means something, and the question is, "What did it mean as used by Jesus?"

Some make it to mean merely setting an example to others to follow him in baptism. This will not answer, however, for Christian baptism was not of John, and John's baptism was preparatory to his coming who should and did institute Christian baptism at a later date. Some explain it that as he, in infancy was circumcised as a child of Abraham, so he should submit to the ordinance of admission into the new covenant or dispensation. This may sound plausible, but the ordinance of admission into the new dispensation had not been instituted, and that for which the new dispensation stood was not an accomplished fact. Christian baptism is a dedication of one's self unto God, through Faith in a Living Saviour, in dethronement of self in the confession of sin, unto the acceptance of the Christ, the Son of God, become incarnate in the person of the sinless Jesus, triumphing over sin, accomplishing the world's redemption from sin, had no sin to confess and was to be in his crucifixion, death and resurrection, the author of the salvation accepted in Christian baptism, and was himself the One, faith in whom was to be declared in Christian baptism. So that the baptism of Jesus was neither Christian baptism as now understood in acceptance of Jesus Christ unto salvation, nor Johanine, as a preparatory ordinance in repentance unto remission of sin against the time of his coming.

If this be so, then such language as following Christ in baptism falls of its own weight. A full discussion of this most interesting scene as the greatest man of all the ages meets the divine man, whom he did not know and whose herald he was and whom he was to induct into his holy office as the appointed Saviour of the world and High Priest of humanity, who stood with the shedding of his own blood make intercession for mankind, would be most delightful, but is not the purpose of this article, now already too long.

Then, what was the baptism of our Lord? What part had it in the life of Jesus, the Christ, and what did it mean to him?

To fully answer this would be to comprehend the self-consciousness of our Lord. May we not, however, say that it was the act of consecration and dedication of our Lord unto the work whereunto he felt himself divinely called?

Away back in the shadowing of consciousness as the same grew in the mind of the sinless child of Mary, the story of whose conception and birth had no doubt been told to him by his mother, Mary, together with stories of the Wise Men, the shepherds, and the prophecy of the Song of Simeon, there was a realization of a divine call t service.

This consciousness of the divine will in his living grew as he lived and walked in obedience with God until he arrived at the age of thirty, jewish majority and the age at which a priest entered upon his official life, he, led of the Spirit and consecrating himself to the will and purpose of God in his call, came to John to set himself apart unto and enter upon his high priestly ministry, unto which he is led of the Spirit in the Messianic plan of salvation for the world. Thus, then, it is his high priestly dedication and setting apart of himself to the ministry of redemption as the intermediary of humanity in the priestly offices of atonement.

The change in his life from that of a child of Mary, living at her home as her means of physical support and his private living, to that of his public life and ministry culminating in his death, resurrection and ascension, answer the whole question.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Sardis District Conference will meet in Senatobia, April 9 and 10. Bishop Denny will be with us. Pastors are requested to send names of delegates to Brother Luter as soon as possible.

TO THE SUPERANNUATES AND WIDOWS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Word coming in from our superannuates suggests that it is best that they know that beginning with the next Annual Conference the amounts which shall be allotted to each beneficiary will be on a different basis than in the past, being on the basis of number of years in service.

Thus many will receive far less and it is wise that they know the same in pledging against said allowance. Read paragraph No. 363 Discipline of 1930.

Louisiana Representative.
BOSSIER CITY, LA.

REV. R. W. EVANS

R. W. Evans was born in Marshal County, February 6, 1859. He was reared on the farm and remained there until he entered the ministry at the age of forty-two. His parents were Scotch Presbyterians and he always gave his mother credit for instilling into him, early in life, the principles of strictest honesty, square dealing and absolute truthfulness in all the affairs of life. Growing up immediately after the Civil War and during reconstruction days, his family, a large one, was in straightend circumstances and he learned well the lessons of thrift, economy and industry which proved of invaluable worth to him throughout his ministry. He never received anything but a small salary in the ministry, but he always managed to provide well for his family and keep out of debt. The writer heard him tell some of his early experiences in the ministry, how that he received a salary of $95 his first year and received 120 members into the church on profession of faith.

Growing up immediately after the Civil War, his educational advantages were meager. He attended the common schools of his day, which were poor in quantity and quality. However, he was eager for knowledge and alert to all progressive movements and an omnivorous reader, which led him in early life to be a leader in all community life as well as the work of the church. He was conscious of a definite Christian experience in early childhood and immediately began a careful study of church doctrines. Although he was reared by Presbyterian parents he joined the Methodist church because he liked the Methodist doctrine. He realized his call to preach at the age of fourteen, but at first he positively refused to even consider the impression, and for eight years he lived in open rebellion against God. He often told of the misery and sorrow of those years and of the final terrifying conviction that he had committed the unpardonable sin. Fortunately, he came in contact with a sympathetic presiding elder who straigthened him out on the unpardonable sin question. With this matter settled he tried to retrace his steps and take up the work of an active Christian where he left off, but he found afresh the old call to the ministry. This time he tried to compromise the call by doing active church work as a layman. He organized and conducted Sunday schools, prayer meetings, old-fashioned Methodist classes, etc. During this time he witnessed many conversions as a result of his church activities. But in this service the call to preach was constantly present and growing more insistent until finally he entered the local ranks. He served in the local ranks for a number of years, during which time he was an ardent student, preparing himself for membership in the traveling connection. One who knew him intimately tells of his labors and studies during this period: "He studied nearly all of every night, doing manual labor on the farm during the day and preaching on Sunday. His regular bed time was from one to two o'clock in the morning." Having thus acquired the habit of study, when he entered the traveling connection he had no difficulty in passing his course of study. This study habit remained with him throughout his ministry and made of him one of our strong, gospel preachers. The writer had the privilege of hearing him preach only twice and remembers the text and outline of both sermons. One of these was a sermon on the Superannuate Endowment subject and was the strongest presentation of this subject it has been my privilege to hear from any source. No one could hear him preach without recognizing that he was a close student.

He was twice married, first to Miss Mattie Bryant Winborn, in 1885. To this union four children were born, three of which survive, Mrs. T. B. Owen, Hollendale, Miss.; Mrs. Harry West, Columbus, Miss.; Arthur L. Evans, McCarley, Miss. His second marriage was to Miss Josie Ann Bratton in 1898, who survives him. To this union two children were born, Gladys and Helen of Artesia. Miss.

Brother Evans entered the traveling connection in the North Mississippi Conference in 1901. During his ministry he served the following charges: Bethel Mission, 1901; Tishomingo, 1902-3; Kossuth, 1904-6; Booneville, 1907-9; Olive Branch, 1910-12; Caledonia, 1913-14; Macon Circuit, 1915; Gunnison, 1916-17; Carrollton, 1918-21; Potts Camp, 1922-23; Artesia, 1924-25; Baldwyn, 1926-28; New Albany, Ct., 1929; Mt. Pleasant to April, 1930. In addition to the above he served Jonesborough in 1899 and East Holly Springs Ct. in 1900 as supply. He always went to his appointment willingly and gladly, accepting his appointment as God's appointment. Due to illness he was forced to give up his last charge in April, 1930. He entered the Methodist hospital at Memphis, where he remained until the end came on November 13, 1930. From the beginning of his last illness he was a great and constant sufferer. But in it all he was submissive and patient. It was the writer's privilege to visit him in the hospital and he said that notwithstanding his great pain he had never been more conscious of God's presence than since he had been sick. He appreciated to the fullest extent the many visits, telegrams, letters and messages of interest and sympathy received from his brethren of the Conference. He said many times that these messages fully compensated him for all the suffering he had endured. He was buried from the Methodist church at Potts Camp, November 14, 1930. The service was conducted by the writer and Rev. J. M. Bradley and Rev. L. P. Wasson. The large congregation that faced the downpour of rain to pay their last tribute of respect to this good man bespoke their esteem and love for a former pastor. So far as this world is concerned, his labors are ended, but the influence of such a good man can never die. We shall miss him at our Conferences, but look forward to meeting him at the great General Conference where there shall be no more separations. We extend to his devoted wife and children our sincere sympathy and point them to one who says, "My Grace is sufficient for you."

CORINTH DISTRICT NOTES

By Rev. James H. Felts, P. E.

Rev. N. N. Maxey, the Corinth circuit pastor, is doing about as unusual a bit of constructive work as this "elder" has knowledge of. Think of bringing to completion a church structure when all our neighbors are telling us about the hard times. This successful and popular pastor is doing this at Box's Chapel. It is the result of merging two country churches, Marvin's Chapel and Box's Chapel. All honor to pastor and people.

Rev. R. C. Nanney has expert knowledge of what an ulcerated throat can do for a preacher. He is unable to fill his appointments at present. His people are considerate, insisting that he take a vacation of sufficient length to completely recover. He is in great favor on the Kossuth charge.

Rev. W. O. Hunt, of South Side, Corinth, is recovering from a tonsil operation. He is assured of better health. Brother Hunt is working cheerily and successfully under conditions that would discourage a less persistent and capable man. The much talked of depression is very real here.

Thackeray tells us of Rawdon Crawley and Becky Sharp, and how they lived on nothing a year. Pshaw! We have pastors in this district who lost every penny of their first quarterly conference money in bad banks. They are functioning like a gold dollar at a penny party. How? The answer would probably include grit, grace, gumption and the promise of God: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." Most of us are having better health.

When "poundings" consist of food products properly selected with reference to variety and keeping qualities, the wolf-howl sounds like a dying echo in the distant hills. Many of our pastors up here can give living testimony at this point. Even the "elder" has not been immune. Selah.

A certain preacher in this district recently made the open statement that he was glad we had come to our proper place—"sow-belly, clear grease, and cracklin bread." He further stated that he believed this country would be in better condition in two years than for the past twenty-five years. Some laymen were heard discussing the matter. One of them said, "The preacher is right. We will have the greatest revivals this year we have known for many years. People are coming to their senses. When folks get sane they get religion. When they get religion they live right. Our blessing is hardly disguised." We thank God and take courage.

Rev. J. V. Bennett of Booneville was on the sick list recently. If there is a man in the whole Conference who gives of his strength to his people with utter abandon it is Bennett. Thank God for the fact, for fact it is, there are others in this district of the same timber.

An interesting fact has developed on the bread line in these parts. With hundreds of families applying for help not more than two per cent are members of any church. Not one has been found among this two per cent who attends church, or give church membership any consideration. Why is this? Real poverty and utter indifference to the better things of life, including food, raiment, shelter and outlook, seem to be practically unknown among even average Christions. Give us an editorial on this subject, Mr. Editor.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

"Why do you call yourself 'The Knight of the Pelican Pines'?"

Well, thereby hangs a tale. I have a number of "entitlements." Emory and Henry college gave me M. A.; Emory, Georgia, gave me D. D.; after shouting themselves hoarse when I preached on the King's Highway, the Negro preachers gave me H. M.—the Highway Man; Dr. Todd gave me F. M., (Forgotten Man) not a very complimentary title, by the way; my Northern brethren gave me U. R., Unreconstructed Rebel; but the title I prefer is K. P.—Knight of the Pelican Pines, and this is the way I received that honor:

Some years ago I preached for ten days for Dr. Martin, pastor of the Methodist church in Lexington, Virginia. One evening we had a very large audience. The V. M. I. cadets were there in their trim uniforms, and a large number of the students of Washington & Lee University. The opening prayer of the service was offered by Dr. Henry L. Smith, president of Washington & Lee. After the benediction a number of persons came forward to meet the preacher, and among them a beautiful lady. She looked like a genuine F. F. V., a full-fledged "Colonial dame," and would have made the ladies in Victoria's drawing room envious of her beauty. As I was introduced to her, she extended her hand, saying, "I am happy to meet the Knight of the Pelican Pines." You should have seen me kiss her hand and make the old time aristoratic bow! There was none of the ceremony of knighthood; I didn't kneel and she had no sword to touch me on each shoulder, but I felt the thrill of the compliment, and have proudly worn the title ever since.

How appropriate the setting! Lexington, the beautiful, on its green hills, under the Shenandoah skies; a little way off on one side the grave of Stonewall Jackson, and on the other side the home and tomb of the immortal Lee, and the very atmosphere freighted with the spirit of romance and chivalry! And from what higher source could the honor come than from a noble Virginia lady! There is where I got my knighthood.

What about the Pelican Pines part? Well, the prevailing timber around where I live is pine and the pelican is the emblematic bird of Louisiana. I don't know why the pelican was chosen instead of any one of a hundred other birds. It couldn't have been for his beauty; but—

"A wonderful bird is the pelican!
His mouth holds more than his belly can.
He totes in his beak food enough for a week;
But I'll bedogged if I see how in the 'll he can!"

An artist in New York drew me a picture of a knight, which I intended to have reduced and use as a coat of arms device. The knight was mounted on a splendid horse, and visor down, and shield on his arm, and lance poised, he was charging full tilt at the foe. I wanted a picture of a knight in repose, sitting erect on a fine horse, head up holding his lance upright, sword at his side and shield on his arm, and both horse and knight alert as if ready for the tilt. But milady said the artist had the right idea. How in the world people ever got the idea that I am all the time spoiling for a fight I don't know; for, as a matter of fact, I am the most pacific fellow in the land. I'm as mild as a cooing dove, unless somebody steps on my toes, like Lincoln did; then I'll admit the Irish in me steps to the front. But when they come at me as one of Lincoln's gunboats did a long time ago, a Marathon racer couldn't beat me running. While those guns were spitting fire and making the earth tremble with their explosions, I was like the darky: "Tom, did you hear that bullet?" "Yas, sir, boss. I heard it twice, once when it passed me, and once when I passed it." But my picture. Milady told the cook to clean up the house and burn up the old papers stacked up in almost every room. Alas, the servant did not have artistic taste enough to see that a $50.00 picture was not trash, and the flames consumed the rider and his horse. O, no, I didn't pay money for it; it was a present from the artist, and I valued it far above its market worth. Didn't a servant girl throw Carlyle's manuscript of the "French Revolution" in the fire, so that he had to re-write the book? Accidents will happen.

Hicks keeps up the lick and is winning all along the line. He lives right under the eves of Castle Melancholy, but the goblins haven't got him yet.

REPORT OF HOME MISSION COMMITTEE, MISSIONARY COUNCIL

Among the tasks confronting the Church in our Southland in the field of Home Missions three stand out most conspicuously challenging our most earnest consecration and endeavor.

1. The evangelization and training in Christian discipleship of our country people, all the more urgent because seven out of ten organized churches of our denomination are in the country.

2. Our increasing industrial communities in many of which vast numbers of people are without the ministry of any of the evangelistical churches.

3. The relationship existing between races, Anglo-Saxon, Indian, Oriental, Negro and others calling for the building of Christian relationship.

The country church is neither dead nor dying but its ministry must be more vital if our rural people are to be saved. This is primarily a task of Annual Conferences, and we therefore urge that the fullest and most efficient use be made in all of them of the co-operative committees and agenices provided for in the legislation of the last General Conference. These should gather information regarding unoccupied and inadequately occupied territory, the needs of the different fields and their available resources for the service of the church, the organization of circuits composed of homogenious groups of people with the view to more effective co-operation between churches in the same circuit as to the possibility and feasability of consolidating churches, for more effective service, and the formulating programs of work which will insure more adequate ministry to the needs of country people in this new day.

The country pastor should have better equipment for his work through special preparation and training, better housing for churches and parsonages, and through literature specially prepared and adapted to his and his people's needs.

The six weeks' summer schools for country preachers offered through the co-operation of our two universities and the Board of Missions should be patronized to the limit of the means available and the facilities of the seminaries. The pastors who have attended these have expressed high appreciation of the help received. We regret that financial conditions necessitate a reduction in the number of scholarships offered and trust that the liberality of our people will make this reduction only temporary, and that soon the full capacity of the institutions may be utilized.

The people engaged in industry and their spiritual needs demand the most serious attention of the whole Church, particularly of the Board of Missions and Church Extension, both General and Conference, including woman's work.

Much is often accomplished in the way of enterprising work among these people by conference between capitalists, workers, and some authorized agent of the church in new fields toward providing adequate housing and a support for pastors, but conditions are so urgent as to call for the support and backing of the entire church.

The Goodwill Industries promoted by our General Board of Missions is a most useful form of service for needy and distressed people out of employment or suffering the consequences of insufficient income, by enabling them to earn a living under Christian influences, and by this help many are brought into saving relation to Jesus Christ and made good citizens, while many others are able to secure articles needed for their comfort at nominal cost and so are helped toward a better life. The Goodwill makes real its motto: "Not Charity, but a Chance," by turning junk into jobs and waste into wages.

Our Board of Missions through its Home Department, General and Woman's Work sections, is ministering to not less than fourteen distinct racial and language groups, in aiding or maintaining schools particularly for Indians, Mexicans and Negroes, and through social centers and programs of work, but there are many other things which should be done through the brotherly cooperation of our local churches and pastors by means of counsel and co-operation in conferences and personal contacts which would be beneficial to all races concerned.

By every possible means we must do our utmost to end mob violence. The mob defends nothing, and protects nobody. It is destructive to civilization, law and orderly government, as well as to the peace and well-being of all people. We can preach, exhort, reprove, and rebuke with all suffering and doctrine, and use every other available means to exterminate this blot on our national life, than which there is no greater obstacle to the effective ministry of the gospel at home and abroad.

We can show people of these different races personal attention and interest in their welfare, temporal and spiritual, and by brotherly kindness both save ourselves and them that hear us.

We urgently need to strengthen and better equip our schools and leadership training programs that capable Christian leaders may be prepared among these people for effective ministry to their own race. We must urge for all races justice before the law and a fair chance economically that they may develop the best characters of which they are capable and be able to live peaceably a good life.

There are many underprivileged whose condition calls for our best and wisest effort. It is tragic that in the midst of such plenteous stores of provisions our means of distribution are so selfish and inadequate that even in the most Christian lands millions willing to work face starvation or become the recipients of charity's dole. Our ministry must set itself as much as is possible to correct these ills and so fulfill the law of Christ, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

W. F. McMURRY, Chairman.
J. L. NEIL, Secretary.

OUR ORDER OF WORSHIP

SEVEN VIEWPOINTS

By Rev. E. P. Craddock

Ritualism is the channel through which we worship. Prayer, hymns, and sermons should throw out a definite life line, which will to God incline the soul and mind. There is a beauty in worship when we know God. To know God is to know why the rose is sweet, the dewdrop pure, and the rainbow beautiful. God made the rose, the dewdrop, and the rainbow. Your life may be made sweet, pure and beautiful when God has touched it. There is a beauty and solemnity that hallows the services in our Order of Worship. Singing old hymns, the Lord's prayer in concert, reciting the Apostles' Creed, all of which is a great means of grace, and will help the human race.

PRAYER—Be on time when entering the church, after taking your seat, reverently bow in silent prayer, for, the Lord is in His holy temple, let all the earth keep silent before Him. What is more befitting at the close of the pastor's prayer than all the people praying in concert the Lord's prayer, because we are talking to God for His goodness and mercy, which endureth forever, and binds our Christian hearts together.

HYMNS—There is a difference between a song book and a hymn book. Some of our country churches sing from song books; the latest model preferred 1931, and think they are quite up-to-date, when they should have our own hymn books with model hymns, such as: "Amazing Grace," "A Charge to Keep," "Am I a Soldier of the Cross."

VOLUNTARY—The voluntary should be sung by those who know God, making their words distinct and clear, without a doubt or fear, in Him who is so near.

ANNOUNCEMENT—Where the church is functioning well there will be ample notices advertising all meetings. Church work should be well advertised. Call the people's attention to the working church. Advertise in the papers as from pulpit.

OFFERINGS—The offering is a religious act. "Religion that will not go pocket-deep will not go heaven high." It is well enough to ask God's blessings on the offerings in the plates of the church—for it may need cleansing.

READING THE WORD—When God is talking through his word, the reading should be well prepared, well enunciated. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Study to read the Word, as to preach the Word, then it will be gladly heard. It was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

SERMON—Nothing will take the place of the preached word, honestly preached, will be honestly heard. The preacher cannot preach a man into heaven, but he can preach heaven into a man. So, he cannot preach man into hell, but he can preach hell out of the man.

Editorial

in getting us delightfully placed in his and Mrs. Smith's magnificent parsonage home. Here we had happy fellowship with them, their two children and Dr. Smith's mother, for several days.

On Sunday morning the editor preached to one of the largest audiences (which was smaller than usual) he ever preached to in a usual Sunday morning service. Dr. Smith, his staff of workers, and his people co-operated fully and extended such wholesome courtesy as makes a stranger feel at home. At night Dr. Smith preached on "The Eighteenth Amendment" to a capacity house and those who heard it acclaimed it to have been one of the great temperance messages of a life time.

Sunday evening was spent with Dr. T. M. Brownlee and his people at Noel Memorial. A splendid congregation and a spirit of goodwill extended that made it good for a stranger to be there. Some ten years before the editor held a two weeks' revival there and many acquaintances were renewed. It was a happy privilege to be with Dr. and Mrs. Brownlee and again enjoy the hospitality of their home.

Monday morning at ten o'clock the editor spoke to the Centenary College students. What wonderful progress has been made in the last ten years! As fine a student body as can be found and a purpose manifested that is inspiring. Louisiana Methodism has a treasure and a field in Centenray and its small indebtedness should be paid and the College set free to fulfill its grand mission. Dr. Sexton and his co-workers coud not have been kinder.

Eleven o'clock Monday Dr. Carley invited us to speak on the Advocate cause to the preachers' meeting. It was a privilege and the brethren responded with assurance. Shreveport has a worthy and efficient presiding elder and consecrated and useful pastors. The Shreveport district will more than reach its minimum goal for the Advocate. Dr. and Mrs. Carley know the experiences of editors and presiding elders and were not unmindful of us during the stay in their city. They shared good things to eat and good fellowship more than once.

Monday afternoon Dr. Smith was kind enough to drive with us over to Ruston, where we had dinner with presiding elder R. M. Brown and his fine family. We were pleased to see how well Rev. H. M. Johnson still enjoys a feast. He and Brother Brown assured us of their full co-operation in the 100 minimum new subscriptions for that district. On the return to Shreveport we had a brief visit with Rev. W. R. Harvell, of the Minden district. He already has his plan for the minimum number of subscriptions. Brothers Brown and Harvell are leaders in the good work of the Kingdom and no interest will suffer in their hands.

Bishop Dohbs is a hard-working bishop and much of his time is spent out in the Conferences. He was absent from Shreveport, but it was an honor to meet Mrs. Dobbs who is a leader in the good things of Christ in her home city.

Happy experiences, royal fellowship, much kindness and subscriptions to the Advocate were some of the good things North Louisiana gave and we pray for a return of an hundredfold.

(The Annual Men's Banquet of First Church will be reported next week.)

MRS. MARY R. GRAMBLING

Mother of Rev. J. B. Grambling, Hammond, La., Passes away at San Antonio, Texas.

The many friends of Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor, Hammond, Louisiana, will sympathize with him and the other loved ones in the death of their mother, Mrs. Mary R. Grambling, who died in San Antonio, Texas, on February 13. Brother Grambling was at his mother's bedside when the end came, and returned with the remains to Ruston, La., where the last rites and interment were held.

Mrs. Grambling had reached the ripe age of 80 years and was waiting the Master's call. "Precious in the sight of God is the death of His saints." For four score years she had been spared to bless her home and loved ones, and now Heaven is nearer and richer than ever before.

The following remain to mourn her departure: Rev. J. B. Grambling, Hammond; F. A. Grambling, Long Neck, L. I.; Mrs. Gertrude de Vampert, Wilmot, Arkansas; Mrs. Maude Brown and Mrs. P. H. Fennell, San Antonio, and Mrs. Flora Davis, Shreveport, La.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev D. W. Poole, in his third year at McDonoghville, La., has our thanks for four subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Poole is happy in his work and overlooks none of his responsibility.

Rev J. W. Moore, pastor at Logtown, Miss., makes his ministry count throughout his section. On Saturday, March 14, he addressed the District, Parent-Teachers Association at Waveland, on the subject of "The Wise Use of Leisure."

Rev. N. S Loftus began a revival meeting for Rev. S. N. Young and his people at Saucier, Miss., on the third Sunday in March. Brother Loftus has unusual evangelistic gifts and is a successful pastor-evangelist.

The church building at Pascagoula, Miss., is being completely remodeled and the grounds of the church and parsonage are being beautified. Rev. E. L. Ledbetter is in the second year of his successful pastorate.

On the first Sunday in March, Rev. T. R. Holt, pastor, Second Church, Gulfport, preached on, "Memory and Hope," at the 11 o'clock hour, and in the evening, "The Light of Life." Brother Holt is having a good year at Gulfport.

Miss Gertrude Bunch, a highly esteemed young lady of the Junior Class of the Crystal Springs, Miss., high school, died March 6. Miss Bunch was a faithful worker in the Epworth League at Bethesda Church, on the Gallman circuit, and she will be greatly missed in all the community. Sincerest sympathy is extended the bereaved.

Harvey, the twelve-year-old grandson of the lamented Rev. G. H. Galloway, died at Hattiesburg, Miss., on Monday, March 16. He lived with his grandmother, Mrs. G. H. Galloway, and she with the other loved ones have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the loss of this promising young boy.

Brother O. C. Hull, the Christian Education Extension secretary of the Mississippi Conference, recently held a successful revival at Handsboro, Miss. A number united with the church by profession of faith, and there was a general forward step on spiritual lines in the church and community.

Rev. W. W. Broom, a local preacher of the Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., has our thanks for his renewal to the Advocate and for his kind expression concerning his appreciation of the paper. He is in his seventy-ninth year, and we pray that the Advocate will be a blessing to him for many years to come.

Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Downer, of the Terry, Miss., charge, are the fond grandparents of a baby boy, who was born to Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Downer, Jr., Jackson, Miss, on January 19. They have named him C. E., Jr., for his grandfather. We wish for the little man a long and happy life and trust that Brother Charley does not feel too ancient to continue his cheerful devotion to his work.

Mrs. M. H. Smith, Barland, Miss., in renewing her subscription, wrote, "I have been a subscriber to the Advocate for thirty years and do not want to miss a copy." One of the difficulties in Christian journalism is to keep the renewals up. We are now carrying over a thousand subscriptions past due, but if they all had the interest that Mrs. Smith has we would have no trouble in keeping our list up to date.

Rev. Victor G. Clifford, pastor, First Church, Columbia, is planning to put on a special effort for the Advocate He sent in fifty-four subscriptions last year, and we doubt not that he will exceed that number this year. Brother Clifford was indisposed for a while with influenza, but has now fully recovered and is back at his arduous, though joyous task. We thank him in anticipation for at least sixty subscriptions this year.

The appointment of Rev. Otto Porter as presiding elder of the Seashore District at the last Annual Conference gave to the Newton District another native son in the cabinet. Since the Annual Conference of 1905 only two years have passed without at least one presiding elder who was born in the bounds of this district, a record equalled by no other district during the same time.

It was the privilege of the editor to meet Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, Bossier City, La., while in Shreveport, and he was delighted to find him in good health and to hear of the progress of the work on his charge. Brother Ledbetter is the Louisiana representative of the Business Men's Assurance Co., of America, which is a reliable company, and brethren who are in need of insurance would do well to communicate with him.

Rev. B. D. Watson, pastor, Slidell, La., is having the loyal co-operation of his people in the work of his charge. The outlook is encouraging for a successful year. Brother Watson has the incurable habit of sending in a large list of subscriptions each year regardless where his work may be. We thank him most heartily for a thirty-dollar check, which accompanied a list of twenty subscriptions.

The next convention of the Phi Theta Kappa, scholarship society for Junior colleges, will be held at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., in March, 1932. The Whitworth chapter is composed of the following students: Misses Theresia Abshagen, Helen Boswell, Wilma Crittendon, Frances Enochs, Marguerite Gainey, Margaret Hamilton, Yuka Hinata, Olive Hollinger, Margaret James, Ann Stevens Lewis, Jeanette Priebatsch, Carl Lee Swayze, Cleo Warren, and Alice Weems.

Mrs. J. W. Perry was elected president of the Woman's Missionary Council at Memphis last week, to succeed the late Mrs. F. F. Stephens. Mrs. Perry was vice-president previous to her election as president and is well qualified in every way to perform the duties of her responsible office. The new president of the Council is the wife of Dr. J. W. Perry, secretary of the home department of the General Board of Missions.

The Louisiana Christian Education Conference which is to be held at Alexandria, April 7-8, is to be one of the most important meetings of the year. Dr. W. W. Holmes has built an excellent program and with Dr. W. Angie Smith, Dr. Clovis Chappell, Dr. Towner, Miss Sadie Mai Wilson, Miss Jennie Lou Milton, and a number of Conference representatives as speakers there will be no question about a large attendance. The editor appreciates an invitation to attend, but his district conference meets the same date.

For information to the brethren of Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisana Conferences, Rev. Mathis Armstrong, junior ministerial student in Millsaps College, is now open for engagements as musical director, soloist and young people's worker, to begin immediately at close of college session, June 1. Brother Armstrong has had several years' experience and can furnish reference from those he has labored with, also the writer, his pastor, Rev. Charles E. Downer, Raymond Road, Jackson, Miss. Any of the brethren needing services of this nature, will be safe in engaging Rev. Armstrong.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, the capable evangelistic pastor, Boonville, Miss., has discovered the art of helping to run hard times away from the doors of the Advocate office. He sent us a check for $55.50 with a list of thirty-seven subscriptions. Proportionately, this is one of the finest pieces of work done for the conference organ this year. His method was simple, but interesting. He heard his presiding elder, Rev. J H. Felts, exhort the preachers to put forth special efforts to help the Advocate, and at the following Sunday morning service he emphasized the value of the paper and the fact that his people needed the paper, and on Monday and Tuesday visited them personally, securing the excellent results as above stated. We thank Brother Bennett and his splendid people for this helpful response.

ST. MARKS, NEW ORLEANS, FIRST

Dear Brother Decell: Please state to the Methodists in Louisiana that St. Marks Church, Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor, is the first this year to pay the Kingdom Extension Offering. The quota was $36, the payment $45. This is a fine example by a faithful pastor. Let us all imitate his good example.

Missionary Secretary, La. Conference.

A MISSISSIPPIAN MAKES GOOD IN MISSOURI

The Methodist Church in the State of Missouri rejoices in the possession of a native son of Mississippi, the Reverend Doctor Robert H. Ruff, as President of Central College, at Fayette. He has been in the State but a few months, but already the people of the State know him and his enthusiasm for the task laid upon him. The citizens of Fayette have taken Doctor Ruff and his wife to their hearts. You know, this border State still loves the flavor of the genuine culture of the Southland; the presence and spirit of these two people are as nectar to many of this old town who still dream of the past.

Dr. Ruff brings with him to Central College the ideal of the South—a systematic education that is not divorced from the spiritual development. Central College has stood always for that ideal; its new leader will not need to build from the ground up, but his strength of creative idealism will find full scope for its exercise in this State. Relgious life in Missouri, as in other states, has been marked for a decade with the one point of war psychology, the power of the organization per se. With the state it could not be otherwise in war; the existence and preservation of the organization are the ends in view. How much Protestantism has taken its pattern of thought and its conormable activity from the political psychology of the last few years is apparent to every student of its inner life as manifested by its words and deeds.

Amercia needs a religious revival. It does—first and foremost among many of its religious leaders. It needs a revival of belief and conviction that intensity of religious work is properly the result of spiritual enthusiasm and not primarily the result of mechanical administration; the vital distinction between the GUIDANCE of spiritual force through organization and the CREATION of that force through the creation of administrative machinery. The problem of political statesmanship today is to transform the political party from what it is in reality, into a channel through which may flow the vital life and spirit of the people to the agencies of their government; the problem of ecclesiastical statesmanship has somewhat of the same nature touching the development of spiritual power in the Kingdom of God.

The new President of Central College has come to his work with this ideal. Judged from his public utterances, his belief is that every organization of the Church exists for, and must be measured by, the development of spiritual life, a force that shall flow back in circular response and reciprocally give larger tasks to agencies of direction and application. His criterion is the spirit of the people manifesting itself in eager labor for the spiritual Kingdom of God. Leadership of this kind is the need of today. Missouri will count Doctor Ruff an asset among the factors of its spiritual development.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, REV. B. W. LEWIS was the pastor of Sandy Hook Methodist Church for two years; and whereas he was a capable and worthy leader of the young people and a faithful co-worker in the Epworth League; and whereas he organized the Sandy Hook Epworth Hi-League; therefore be it resolved,

1. That we record our respect for him as a minister sent of God;

2. That we express our appreciation of his fine work for the young people of the church and community;

3. That we assure Mrs. Lewis and family of our deepest sympathy; and that we cherish with them the memory of the good man, who was so unexpectedly taken from them;

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our League and a copy be sent to Mrs. B. W. Lewis, Marion, Ark., and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Respectfully submitted,
By MATTIE BOONE,
Supt. of Spiritual Dept. for Sandy-Hook Epworth Hi-League.

MRS. FRANCES C. HUNT, wife of the late Rev. F. M. Hunt, died in the home of her son, F. M. Hunt, Hattlesburg, Miss., at 8:45 a. m., February 17, 1931. The funeral service was held in the Main Street Methodist Church, at 2:30 p. m., February 18, conducted by the writer, who was assisted by Revs. L. L. Roberts, R. H. Clegg, and B. F. Lewis. At the age of 80 years this choice spirit went home to enjoy the rich inheritance reserved in heaven for God's faithful children.

To know Sister Hunt was to be impressed with her abiding faith and those Christian graces that make useful the lives of the true followers of Christ. Her brother, Judge O. H. B. Bloodworth, of Atlanta, Ga., in a letter to her son, said: "No man ever had a sweeter sister than she. I never knew a lovelier Christian character." Her daughter, Miss Lois, who had the privilege of ministering to her mother during her last illness, stated, "even the servants took notice of her patience, her cheerfulness and gratitude. There is no telling how many times she said, 'Thank you,' in the past fifteen months, and when too weak to speak, she would pat the hand or cheek of those waiting on her." She gave evidence of sincere appreciation of the visits of her pastor, and of the joy she experienced in the prayers offered at her bedside. She was the mother of nine children seven of whom survive: Dr. Rolfe Hunt, Jackson, Miss., an honored member of the Mississippi Conference; Dr Roy Hunt, Ellisville, Miss.; Homer L. Hunt, Laurel, Miss.; J. S. Hunt, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. A. M. McCune, Clara, Miss.; F. M. and Miss Lois Hunt, Hattiesburg, Miss. She is also survived by a brother, Judge O. B. H. Bloodworth, Atlanta, Ga.; one sister, Mrs Lula Phlnazee, Jackson, Ga., and twelve grandchildren, one of whom is Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, McComb, Miss. The influence of her Christian life abides. Truly it can be said of her, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from hence forth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

W. H. LEWIS.

On January 23, at Epps, La., the noble soul of CLARENCE L. HAWKINS, Sr., departed this life for the home of eternal rest. Mr. Hawkins was born May 21, 1861, at Ft. Jessup, Sabine Parish, La. He spent most of his life in Sabine Parish, moving to West Carroll Parish twelve years ago. In 1894, he was happily married to Miss Remy Bonds, of Sabine Parish, to which union were born fourteen children, thirteen of whom survive. His devoted wife also survives him. Early in life, Bro. Hawkins united with the Methodist Church, to which he was ever loyal and true. He was a leader of the building committee in erecting the present Epps Methodist church. We was a steward, trustee, and Sunday school superintendent of this church at the time of his death. He served faithfully in every capacity to which he was called, always standing firmly by his convictions, which were based on principles of right. He was active in every community interest, serving as first mayor of Epps. At the time of his death he was notary public and justice of the peace. His name for the past twelve years has been closely connected with every important development of our town and community. His friends were numerous and to them he was loyal. Men in all walks of life loved him. He was a devoted and faithful husband, a most tender, loving father. His loss to his family and community is inestimable. The Epps Methodist church, where his funeral was held, was crowded with relatives and friends. The funeral servies were conducted by his former pastor, Rev. G. L. McNeese, of Pioneer. He was assisted by Rev. Mr. Bozeman, the present pastor, and Rev. Mr. Barnett, the Baptist minister. His body was laid to rest in the Midway Cemetery. The beautiful flowers which covered his grave expressed in a measure the love and esteem his friends had for him. We shall always think of him as a veteran of the Lord's army, serving almost seventy years. "He fought a good fight," and heard the welcome, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord." To the heart-broken wife we extend our deepest sympathy in the loss of her dear, devoted companion; to the dear children, we offer, too, our deepest sympathy, hoping that their dear faces will ever be turned toward father and Heaven, and they'll meet him there.

"The beautiful Christian life he lived in our midst,
Will cast its influence into the young lives of today.
In the home, church and community, he will be missed.
We feel his spirit is with us though life has passed away."

A FRIEND.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend, through the Advocate, our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many favors and expressions of sympathy shown us by our many friends everywhere, and especially do we want to mention the good people of Shubuta and our pastors and presiding elder; and most especially do we want to mention Mr. and Mrs. Schlwaight and Dr. Hand for their many acts of kindness during the illness and death of our good wife and mother, Mrs. Willie Cameron.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE BLIND

The American Bible Society is happy to announce that embossed volumes of the Bible for the blind may now be had in all systems at the special price of twenty-five cents a volume instead of at the former price of fifty cents. Thus the whole Bible in revised Braille, consisting of twenty volumes, may now be secured for $5 (the manufacturing cost is $47). The fifty-eight volumes of the Bible in Moon, the system used by older persons whose finger tips are losing their sensitiveness, can be purchased for $14.50 (the manufacturing cost is about $225). The new price of twenty-five cents a volume applies only where the purchase is made by or for a blind individual.

The difference between the selling price and the substantially greater cost price is met by designated gifts contributed to the American Bible Society. Such offerings enabled the American Bible Society last year to place in the hands of the blind over 4000 volumes in Braille and other suitable systems.—Exchange.

READ THIS SLOWLY AND THINK

Does my life please God?

Am I studying my Bible daily?

How much time do I spend in prayer?

Have I ever won a soul to Christ?

Is there any one I cannot forgive?

Is there anything I cannot give up to Christ?

Just where am I making my greatest mistake?

How does my life look to those who are not Christians?

Am I doing anything I would condemn in others?

Have I found the joy, the peace and the calm that Jesus promised?

A MEMBER OF THE W. M. S.

MEETING OF ZONE NO. 3, MINDEN DISTRICT

The first quarterly meeting of Zone No. 3, Minden District, was held at Hall Summit, on February 11, 1931.

The meeting convened at 10 a. m. and was presided over by the zone leader, Mrs. Henry Marsten of Coushatta. Four of the five auxiliaries that comprise this zone were represented and a most cordial greeting was given the newly organized society from East Point.

Mrs. Sconyers, on behalf of the hostess auxiliary, extended a warm welcome to a number of visitors who were glad to have been with us.

Reports of the presidents were then heard and a general discussion of various phases of the work was entered into. "The standard of excellence" was presented by Mrs. Ashley Perry.

Too much cannot be said in praise and appreciation of the wonderful spiritual message brought by Mrs. Woodard, and also for the sweet story told by Mrs. Gillon.

We were grateful, too, to Brother Harvel, the presiding elder, for his attendance and for the words of praise and encouragement that he always has for the work that we are striving to do.

Campti was named as the next meeting place, and the subject, "The Missionary Cultivation Period," was selected for the theme topic.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Be With You," and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. L. Lay of Hall Summit.

AUXILIARY PRESIDENTS OF MONROE DISTRICT HOLD SESSION AT DELHI

A meeting of auxiliary presidents of Zone 2, Woman's Missionary Society, Monroe District, was held Tuesday afternoon, January 20, in the Methodist church at Delhi. Mrs. C. R. Abney, president of the Pioneer auxiliary and zone leader, presided. Mrs. Allen of Tallulah, zone secretary, was present, and also Mrs. F. B. Hatch, district secretary.

The object of the meeting was to plan definite work, especially to outline topics for programs for the quarterly zone meetings to be held during the year. The work was harmoniously and quickly dispatched in an informal round-table discussion in which all present took enthusiastic part. The first zone meeting will be at Tallulah, February 10, and the topic for the program will be "World Peace," and will be sponsored by the Lake Providence and Rayville auxiliaries.

There was a vein of sadness in the meeting in the absence of Mrs. Wilbur Kline, president of the Delhi auxiliary, who was to have been hostess to the meeting in her own home, but was suddenly called to the bedside of her father, who is seriously ill in Clinton. A telegram of sympathy was sent to Mrs. Kline. In the absence of Mrs. Kline and of the vice-president, Mrs. Frank Miles, who is ill, Mrs. Fannie Travis graciously and charmingly acted as hostess and made everybody welcome, thus contributing largely to the success and pleasure of a beautiful and delightful afternoon.

ZONE MEETING A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

Zone 3 of the Jackson District, composed of the women from the W. M. S. of Terry, Forst Hill, Capitol Street (Jackson), Florence, Star, Braxton, Harrisville, Bethany; D'Lo and Mendenhall, met for the first meeting of the New Year with the Mendenhall Methodist women last Tuesday. The delegates were served hot tea as they passed into the church, where each one received a warm welcome and were "tagged."

Rev. Chas. Strait, the Mendenhall pastor, conducted the devotional, closing with "A Charge to Keep I Have."

Mrs. P. H. Gates, of D'Lo, the splendid young leader for this year, came to the chair and Mrs. H. P. Gates of Mendenhall was elected recording secretary.

In well chosen words, Mrs. P. J. Murphy welcomed the delegates. Mrs. Barwick of Braxton, responding.

Just at this time the Zone had a treat, for the W. M. S. of Collins, accepting an invitation to do so, gave the Voice playlet. Mesdames Barnes, Corley, Walker and Miss Bryant not only charmed the audience but caused the non-subscriber to realize the beauty, the information, and inspiration to be secured from the reading of this magazine.

Capitol Street (Jackson) had charge of the morning program and as was suggested by the Council, discussed the various duties of each officer, with Mrs. J. C. Wood as leader and Mesdames Walker, Lamb, Herlong, Livesay, Morse, Chisholm and Edwards taking part.

Mrs. W. F. Mahaffey, our most efficient district secretary, in her message told of new members enrolled and new auxiliaries organized and the beautiful response that was given to the S. O. S. call, bringing up the deficit in finances. She urged the women to go forward, despite obstacles to overcome, in the extension of God's kingdom.

At the noon hour a social get-together was greatly enjoyed while Mrs. Irene Geiger and her local committee arranged the lunch.

The afternoon session opened with the song, "More Love to Thee." At this time Mrs. Middleton introduced the speaker of the hour, Mrs. A. F. Watkins of Jackson, who has served many years as officer in the various departments of the Woman's Conference with distinction and is now using her influence and her persuasive powers in the cause of the W. C. T. U. As Christian women, every one was strongly for "Prohibition Law Enforcement and Non-Repeal."

The audience stood in appreciation of the great work being done and gave to Mrs. Watkins as she departed "the Chautauqua salute."

Mrs. Middleton was named zone publicity chairman, and Braxton the next hostess church.

The hour of adjournment being at hand and as one expressed it—there must be an end to even "A Perfect Day," Mrs. Morse of Jackson was asked to dismiss us and in a most earnest prayer, she asked God's blessings on each and all.

ABERDEEN ZONE MEETING HELD AT PRAIRIE—STRONGS GETS NEXT GATHERING

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Aberdeen District held its first zone meeting of 1931 at Prairie, February 12, at 2 p. m.

Mrs Sam Ward, our efficient chairman, opened the meeting with a song, "Onward Christian Soldiers." Mrs. R. A. Tucker gave a very interesting devotional taken from Cor. Her discussion was centered on love and was very inspirational. Mrs. R. C. Noah led in prayer.

The roll call showed a large attendance. Aberdeen 19, Strongs 1, Tranquil 5, Prairie 6, Hamilton 10, and several visitors.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We are still getting good news from the series of district institutes held in February. The workers have been made to feel that they have been appreciated and the board has been made to feel that the work was worthwhile. It is wonderful to feel the eagerness with which the church workers set themselves to a new task.

* * *

Three big days in the church right along. Epworth League Anniversary Day, the fourth Sunday in March; Sunday School Day, the third Sunday in April; College Day, the fifth Sunday in May. A fine program is available for each. It is hoped that every church in the conference, no matter how small, will make a serious attempt to observe each of these days. Epworth League Day, regardless of the existence of a League in your church or not. The young people and their work must be held before the church that they may be encouraged and helped.

College Day is far-reaching in its services. Its main objective is to tie each church and each college together with a sense of oneness.

The Missionary offering for last month was $200 behind the same month last year. If every Sunday school will send in an offering we will be sure to have enough available funds to do all the work planned. We need a steady increase in the number of the school observing.

* * *

The Meridian District Standard Training School, held at Meridian. March 8 to 13, was 35 less in credits from last year. It is a source of sorrow to the Board that those who feel cramped from the loss of employment are not willing to come to the schools and borrow books and use books together. This was illustrated in this school and part of its joy and pleasure was the studying of many of the persons from the same book.

* * *

Requests are coming in for Cokesbury classes this summer. We will not be able to meet all the demands and those who ask first will always be those who will receive the service.

* * *

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brother Decell: Brother R. G. Lord, our very efficient executive secretary, asked the writer to send in the Board's items in his stead for this issue of the Advocate. Brother Lord is a very busy man doing the work for both of us duringthe last five or six weeks.

I am glad to say that I am regaining my strength gradually and that for a week or more I have been able to work three or four hours daily in our office. It is a trial on one's patience not to be able to do the work assigned by the bishop.. I hope to get back in the field in a week or so. I want to take this occasion to thank many of my brethren and friends for the message of felicitation and sympathy received during my illness. I am very grateful to God for the prayers of many righteous people, to the competent surgeon and nurses, to the hospital manager, and for the tender care of my good wife in behalf of my recovery.

I have just finished reading this week's issue of the New Orleans Advocate. It is filled with timely and vital articles of interest. The bishop's message is most disturbing, being an honest portrayal of unpleasant facts. It is a mighty challenge to all the people called Methodists to come now "to the help of the Lord against the mighty." It is a clarion call to a renewed consecration of both our lives and substance. May our Church not fail the world at this crucial moment. The only hope for distressed and perplexed humanity is Jesus Christ and his Church

The executive committee of the Board of Education and Missions are meeting today in New Albany, looking to the co-operation and co-ordination of the two boards, striving to eliminate duplications and over-lapping. This, I am sure, the brethren will do.

Brother A. T. Clanton has recently closed a helpful Cokesbury class at Woodland. There was a large enrollment—twelve or more receiving credits. He tells me that Brother Youngberg and his good people gave him hearty support. Brother Hammontree closed last week a large class at Vardaman, and is with Brother Pearson this week in a class on the Mashulaville charge. Should any of the brethren desire Cokesbury work, please let us hear from you. We would also like to hear from you if you are interested in a Daily Vacation Bible School. A Bible vacation school simply carries your Sunday school work over into week days. Try one this summer and see remarkable results. Again, if you desire to help your people finance the church work write for the pamphlet, "Working Together With God" It is full of fine suggestions.

Brother A. Y. Brown and his people are planting patches of potatoes. "Working Together With God" in growing potatoes. He will come pretty near getting his conference collections this fall. Watch.

Brother J. E. Stephens, chairman of our board, will "head up" our Sunday School Day Enterprise. He has set the goal this year at $2000. He and Brother Lord have perfected a plan that will make his estimate possible, provided the preachers and superintendents will give their co-operation. The work of your board depends largely upon the Sunday School Day self-examination, to repentance and offering. Let your Sunday School Day program be your "Rally Day"—sell your school to the people and let the pepole know how you are trying to serve them. Send in your orders for programs. They are free to you.

Sincerely,

E. G. Mohler, Exten. Sec.

LOUISIANA EPWORTH LEAGUE

Dear Young People: The last few weeks have certainly been busy ones in our conference among our young people. Since my last letter to you. and I apologize that I have neglected you so dreadfully, I have been in all parts of the conference with varied interests.

The two weeks in March were spent in Efficiency Institutes in Shreveport and New Orleans. We had great times at both places. Our attendance fell short of that of last year, but the enthusiasm expressed by those there was the best ever. In Shreveport we had the pleasure of having on our faculty, Mrs. R. E Smith, Misses Louise Mitchell, Gladys Brownfield, Grace Gatewood, Elsie Jones and Reverend G. A. Morgan of Shreveport, and Reverend G. M. Hicks of Mansfield. Miss Merle Chitwood and Mr. M. M. Abernathy very capably directed the fun periods, and on the last evening Mrs. Smith conducted our closing devotional hour with a candle service. May I thank every individual who contributed to the success of the institute.

In New Orleans, we had the unusual pleasure of having Miss Ina C Brown from Nashville with us. I regret that she could give us only one week. She was delightful, and we feel much better informed after having listened to her wise council for one week. The other faculty members who assisted the field secretary were: Rev. H. L. Johns, Rev. D. B. Raulins, and Miss Helen Shriner of New Orleans, and Rev. J. B. Grambling of Hammond. The St Patrick's banquet; on Friday evening, and the closing devotional

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! As harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant — as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

The best news I could possibly give you this week is that you have a great treat in store for you. We have been talking about our Christian Education Conference, to be held in Alexandria on April 7-8. Of course we knew that we would have a great time together, but, when we learned that we were able to secure three Nashville staff workers for our program, we increased our enthusiasm and expectations about tenfold. You young people will be especially thrilled to learn that our new Young People's Secretary, Dr. Water Towner, is to be in our division. Now, I want every E worth League officer, every Sunday school officer, or teacher in the young people's department, everyone interested in the youth of your church, to make plans now to come. We are anxious for the adult, young people, and elementary departments to have full representation.

The program opens Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, and classes Wednesday at 11:30 a .m. Special rates may be secured at hotels.

Some fine reports have come in from the field concerning Anniversary Day and its observance. I am sorry to report that only forty preachers have returned the postal card I sent out, concerning the date of observance. This information would help me greatly. We are hoping that every Methodist church in the conference observes Anniversary Day in some fitting manned at as early a time as possible, so as not to intrude on other dates.

What is your League chapter doing about paying the remainder of its pledges to Missions and Conference Promotion? Our General Board has set the month of May for the time of finishing up our Missionary Special, and we are hoping that all chapters will pay up on their Conference Promotion pledge before the last of April. Don't let Assembly time find you behind on pledges and no way to raise money for your delegates to the two greatest assemblies we have ever held for the youth of our church. Mark June 10-16, Young People's Assembly, and June 17-23, Hi-Assembly, on your calendar. Plan now to be there. For all young people of our great church.

We will be looking for you in Alexandria on April 7. Keep us posted with your chapter activittites, union meetings, social stunts and any news that you would like the world to know about.

Remember this jingle:

"You say, my lad, that it can't be done,
What you say isn't true.

NORTH MISSSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE

Dear Young People: From time to time we have had something to say about our devotional programs. We believe that these programs will mean much more to the young people if they help make the programs out themselves. Here is a program on Worship which was worked out by the Epworth Hi-Leaguers of Coffeeville, with some suggestions from the counsellor and the pastor. It was one of the most effective programs that we have had in some time:

1. Hymn—"Day Is Dying in the West."
2. Announcements.
3. Hymn—"O Worship the King," played softly while the young people had their heads bowed.
4. What is worsbip.
5. Worship through music.
6. Hymn—"Jesus Calls Us."
7. Worship through Scripture.
8. Scripture quotations on Worship.
9. Worship through prayer.
10. Sentence prayers.
11. Worship through service.
12. Hymn—"Help Somebody Today.
13. League Benediction.

We give you this to show you that, with a little help and encouragement from the adults, the young people can work out their own programs. One thing that made this program effective was the fact that those who were on the program DID NOT READ THEIR PARTS. They simply got up and said what they had to say. That is very essential to the success of our devotional programs.

The young people in some of the churches over the conference are exchanging programs. That is a splendid idea. It encourages the young people in their work and it helps to develop the spirit of friendship among the young people of our church: They come to know and appreciate each other better by these friendly visits. We are glad this type of work is being done. Twenty-six young people from one of our very small towns went to a neighboring town about a week ago and put on a program. That helps to convince me that our young people will go and do the work of the church as well as going to the picture show if we will only give them an opportunity. We ought to make the church work as attractive as possible, of course. We ought to challenge our young people.

What are we going to do about Sunday School Day? Are we going to make it one hundred per cent in the observance of this day? The Board of Christian Education needs money with which to carry on its work. Let us observe Sunday School Day and give to our Board of Christian Education the support which it deserves

Yours sincerely,
WM. L. ROBINSON.

Would Not Be Without Jar of Vicks for Anything, a Missionary Writes

"We Assure You That Vicks Has Been a Great Blessing to Us," Says I. V. Larson

Enthusiastic faith in the efficacy of Vicks VapoRub is declared by I. V. Larson, writing from his mission post at Laichowfu, Shantung, China.

"We wish to assure you," he says, "that we would not be out of a bottle of Vicks Salve for anything. It was a boon to me during my recent illness. It is a wonderful remedy! We always use it when the children have the least cold. It has been a great blessing to us. May God bless your remedy."

Vicks has indeed been blessed in the public confidence all over the world. Since it was originated 25 years ago, by Lunsford Richardson, Vicks has achieved remarkable success. From an humble beginning in the back room of a country drug store, it has become the most widely used cold treatment of its kind in the world.

How customs do change—even in medicine! In Mr. Richardson's day, it was the custom to treat almost every human ill—even colds!—with heavy doses of internal medicine. Then came his discovery of Vicks—the modern external treatment for colds. Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

Just rubbed on, Vicks attacks colds two ways at once: (1) Through the skin like a poultice or plaster; and (2) Its medicated vapors, released by body-heat, are breathed in direct to irritated air-passages.

There being nothing to swallow, Vicks cannot, of course, disturb the most delicate digestion as constant "dosing" so often does. This has made it, from the first, the favorite of mothers in treating children's frequent colds.

Of course, Vicks is equally good for the cold troubles of adults, too.

Easter Offering

It has been a custom almost from the beginning of this Home for our churches to take an Easter offering for the maintenance fund. For several years past, this offering has been partly sidetracked for other interests, but there is nothing in the way this year, and we hope ALL our churches will remember us this year.

The receipts during the summer are never equal to the expenditures, and this special offering greatly aids us in carrying on the work. Information has been mailed to each pastor and Sunday school superintendent, "that you might not forget."

Meeting of Quadrennial Orphanage Committee of the Mississippi Conference

Four years ago, the Mississippi Conference decided that this orphanage was of sufficient importance to command a Quadrennial Board to look after its interest, instead of an annual committee. At Vicksburg last November our second Quadrennial Board was appointed. We have found it far superior to an annual committee appointed at each Conference, sitting once, and often then for only an hour, sometimes less.

It has been the custom for this committee to visit the Home on invitation of the superintendent once or twice a quadrennium, to see for themselves just what we have and are doing, so their reports to the Conference will be based upon what they know, as well as what the Board of Directors report to the Conference. Such a meeting was had the first of March. The Committee spent a full day with us, going over the entire plant in the city, and touring the farm. They saw all.

This tour, of course, provoked questions which gave them a clear insight into our achievements and needs as nothing else could.

Several things result from this quadrennial committee and these visits.

First and foremost, it gives this Home, not merely seven foci in the persons of the directors, some of whom sometimes do not attend the annual meetings, but fourteen additional points of contact—twenty-one in all. Twenty-one men and women who know the Home, by personal contact, is better by far than seven.

Again, when it comes to the nomination of directors when a change is necessary, this committee has a year to think over these changes and select those best for the vacancies.

Further, when these annual reports are made to the Conference, the Conference knows it is getting ripe judgments from the men who know from long service what is needed by way of legislation.

The advantages already derived from this change have been so great we would not go back to the old method.

A Child's Plea

In the Epworth Orphanage Record, published in the interest of the Epworth Ophanage, Columbia, S. C., W. D. Roberts, superintendent, we find a splendid article from which we take this:

"If a child should come to your door today stating that his parents were dead and that he was hungry, you would gladly share with him whatever food you might have. Not one of you would turn a deaf ear to his request for bread. The cry of the orphan is in the land."

Over four hundred have knocked at our doors within the past eight months and been turned away for lack of funds with which to care for them.

Could we, as a church, have done better? Only a small sum from each Methodist church in Mississippi each month would have opened our doors to many who have gone hungry this winter.

An Appreciation

Last year our very good friend, Mrs. Edgar Goodwill of Osyka, Miss., passed to her reward. Since the issue of our column the executrix sent us a check from the estate, a sum left us in the will of this friend. Under the laws of our State, this could have been withheld, as has been done in one or two cases within the pass few years. But no, the executrix was also a good friend, also loyal to the last wishes of a dear relative.

This bequest was gratefully received and has been applied to the needs of this Home. We cherish the memory of Mrs. Edgar Goodwill.

"Their Works Do Follow Them"

A few weeks ago we read an editorial in a secular paper which impressed us greatly. A man of some means had died. The will was probated. The fortune was left almost entirely to relatives. Commenting on that fact the editor asked why men did not let their money carry on their good works after they were gone?

Through the good providence of God, wealth is amassed. After having enjoyed for a season, it is as little as a man can do to let his money help God's work after he can have its use no longer. We erect immense buildings bearing our name, we put tombstones at the head of the graves of our loved ones, and in other ways perpetuate their memory. Why not perpetuate it in a helpful way?

A few years ago a gentleman died in our State. On his deathbed he asked that no flowers be sent to his funeral, but all the money which would be spent that way "be sent to the Methodist Orphanage to help in that work."

Had you thought how easy it would be to emblazon your name on God's honor roll? Four thousand dollars invested at five per cent will perpetually care for one child in this Home up to the college career. Six thousand dollars invested at five per cent will not only carry a child to college, but give it a college education.

We have several friends who send us ten dollars each month to help care for a child. One friend sends us regularly twenty dollars each month. These will live in the lives of future generations.

Why not join the noble band and also live in the life of these children?

Nature Study Group and Methodist Orphanage Pupils Present Washington Program

The members of the Nature Study Group of the Woman's Club, Mrs. Eure Weston, leader, with others interested, numbering more than two hundred and fifty persons, Friday afternoon visited the Methodist Orphanage and with the pupils of the school there, planted a beautiful large cherry tree in memory of George Washington.

Dr. B. F. Lewis, superintendent, offered the invocation, followed by Mrs. W. C. Heathman, who presented the cherry tree with fitting words. Mrs. O. P. Bartee, president of the Woman's Club, very beautifully told of Washington, his love for trees and other features of his life. Mr. Merrill placed this tree, the first planted under the direction of this group.

The guests were met by Callie Bane, Aline Grace, Frances Cochran, Rose Carpenter, Mattie Mae Bishop, and Mary Frances Walton, who gave each lady a miniature George Washington hat and hatchet made by the fifth and sixth grades.

An interesting program was rendered by the members of the seventh grade, assisted by other students of the school. Robert Green, as George Washington, delighted the audience in a pantomime "The Cherry Tree.". Roy Lott and Middie Mae Hill, as Mr. and Mrs. Washington, ably assisted him. Four seventh grade boys, Jim Credle, Roy Lott, William Brand and Robert Green, told the horrors of having to tell the truth and nothing but the truth in a playlet, "George Washington's Truth Club.".

Others having parts on the program were: Gladys Morris, Bertha Morris, Thelma Schwem, Cordie Mander, Laura Hill, Alice Brasher, Thelma Curran, Floy Harris, of the seventh grade; Junior Nolen, first grade; Vena Cook, Anabel Short, Doradeen Holifield, Lillian Deel, and Virginia Goodwin, second grade; and Thomas James, third grade.

The program was under the direction of Miss Nannie Little, principal, and seventh grade teacher; Miss Lena Allison, county music supervisor, piano.—Jackson Clarion-Ledger.

Southern Methodist Orphanage Conference

The Southern Methodist Orphanage Conference will meet in Richmond, Va., before the next issue of our paper. Several of the Home staff will attend. A full account will be given in the May issue of the Advocate. These Conferences have meant much to the orphanage work of our church—more in the days to come than in the past.

Octagon Coupons

Mrs. Alma G. Riley

The coupons have been coming in, but not as rapidly as we would wish they might. Just a few places have "remitted," although we know that practically every church in the State is working in the campaign. I am sure that you have not sent them because you are holding on until all shall have turned in their collection. May I suggest that you have someone drive and gather them up, if possible, so that we may have AT ONCE your number to be counted in with the grand total for this shipment. We shall begin shipping in a few days—let us hear from you, PLEASE!

The children of the Methodist Orphanage will broadcast on four consecutive Mondays from Station WJDX, Jackson, Miss., kilocycles 1270, from 1 to 1:15 p. m. each date. The pro-

Idea Worked!

Wise mothers find the things that keep children contented, well, happy. Most of them have found they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The experience of Mrs. Wm. Charleston, 903 Gilmore Ave., Kansas City, Kans., is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Annie and Billy all their lives. Whenever they're constipated or bilious it has them comfortable, happy, in a jiffy. Their wonderful condition proves my idea works."

Physicians endorse the use of pure vegetable California Fig Syrup when bad breath, coated tongue, dullness, feverishness, listlessness, etc. show a child's bowels need help. Weak stomach and bowels are toned by it; a child's appetite and digestion are improved.

The genuine always bears the name California for your protection.

grams will be on the following days:

March 16.
March 23.
March 30.
April 6.

Please tune in at the hour given above and tell all your friends to do so. The children will sing and there will be discussions of the coupon campaign, what it is, how it is coming along, etc.

There has been arranged between the manufacturers of Octagon products and the makers of Borden's Milk for a courtesy interchange of coupons on Magnolia condensed milk and Pearl evaporated milk. If you are a user of canned milk, ask your dealer for these two brands, save the label and send to us.

We are in receipt of letters from friends in various States, sending us coupons and saying their churches are interested in helping us. More have come from Louisiana than any other State, and this interest makes us most happy. We have just received a letter from Alabama saying, "I read in the Mobile Register an article telling of your Octagon coupon campaign, and we wish to co-operate with you in this." We understand that several churches in New Orleans, Monroe and Baton Rouge are assisting. To all we give most sincere thanks. You have no idea how this outside help "heartens" us to drive on in our stupendous task.

There is nothing that arouses people from lethargy like a contest, and there is nothing that people enjoy quite like a "race." So, why not each church challenge some other church, of equal size, or one charge challenge another charge? Please write us that you have done this, for we wish to keep a register as to how you come along. One dear elderly lady writes us, "I am getting as much fun out of this coupon campaign as a sixteen-year-old girl out of a new spring hat." She has not said so, but I know she has a rivalry on with some one. Go ahead and get up a contest. You will get lots of fun and the orphanage will get lots of coupons! And that is what we are chasing now—the coupon!

Some of the high lights up to the present are—for the month of February:

Galloway Memorial, Jackson, turned in 24,470 coupons with the leading circle of twenty women bringing in 5000; the next highest brought 3300.

Fanning charge, Mississippi Conference, brought 1200; Florence charge, Mississippi Conference, brought 1500.

CONSTIPATION ILLS

Cairo, Ill.—"I have used Black-Draught in my home for fifteen years, and it is a splendid medicine," writes Mrs. Bernice Brack, of 230 Thirty-second Street, this city. "Sometimes I am subject to colds and constipation, and I find it to be the finest thing for this.

"My mother used Thedford's Black-Draught in her home for years, and it was there that I began taking it. She thought it was so good that she had me to use it, and I have never found any medicine that would take its place satisfactorily.

"I find Black-Draught fine for sour stomach and gas. A few doses taken for several nights rid the system of poison due to constipation and it makes me feel like a new person.

"I try to keep Black-Draught always on hand, and I treat all small illness with it. I can certainly recommend it for I have found it very good and dependable."

FROM MERIDIAN DISTRICT

Dear Brother Decell: Perhaps you would like to know how we are getting along over here in the East, from whence the wise men came—and some otherwise, perhaps. Well, most of us are "sorter about," as Mr. Tom Hicks would say.

I have finished my first round of quarterly conferences for the current Conference year, and, in most places the prospect pleases. Only three charges reduced the pastor's salary. Scooba advanced. The rest have "held their own."

The district stewards' meeting, which was held in Central Church, Meridian, and which was participated in by the pastors, and a large number of charge lay leaders, was one of the best meetings of its kind I have ever attended. Without any objection being raised, the formulating of a schedule of distributing the allotments for Conference and General Work to the several charges on the district was submitted to a committee of three district stewards, and their plan was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Some began at once, putting on a system of cultivation looking to full collections, and some charges have made some collections on the benevolent claims.

The Missionary Institute held at East End Church, Meridian, was largely attended, and was quite an inspirational meeting. Mr. W. D. Hawkins, our district lay leader and Conference missionary secretary, made two helpful talks, and Rev. B. L. Sutherland, pastor of Central Church, preached a masterly sermon on the Mission of the Church. All the study books, Methodism and Kingdom Extension, that were sent to the seat of the institute were soon taken and orders were given for many more. Classes are being formed, and the book is being studied, and plans are being projected for full collection of the quotas for Kingdom Extension.

A very helpful Christian Education Institute was held at Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, February 4, under the leadership of the inimitable Rev. J. C. Chambers and his co-workers, which was largely attended. A Standard Training School is to be held at Central Church beginning March 8. We are expecting great profit from that school.

Influenza has stalked forth throughout the District and laid a heavy hand on some of our preachers and many of our laymen and has reaped a heavy toll in places, yet the work moves apace quite satisfactorily. Our preachers are optimistic and courageous, and are laboring indefatigably. Many of the laiety are responding wholeheartedly to the calls being made upon them by the church, and a degree of success is being achieved. No special revival meetings have been held yet, but some genuine revivals are being experienced in the regular worship hours—souls are being saved, and the saints are having their Christian experience enriched.

Despite the continued financial depression, and several bank failures, financial reports made at the quarterly conferences are well nigh up to the standard of last year. We thank God for this auspicious beginning. In his name we face the future and in his strength, we expect to win a great victory this year.

T. J. O'NEIL.

SEASHORE DISTRICT

The Seashore District Christian Education Institute met at Second Church, Gulfport, Thursday, February 19, 1931. There were 122 delegates representing 22 charges. Rev. John C. Chambers announced that it was the largest in point of attendance yet held.

All the preachers of the district were present, save four. Rev. V. G. Clifford, Rev. E. B. Flurry, Rev. W. B. Hollingsworth and Rev. J. W. Moore failed to answer the roll call. Brother Clifford was detained because of illness.

The discussion group leaders were enthusiastic over the interest shown in the new plans. They reported that new ideas and new inspiration resulted from the conference. Mrs. W. H. Hawkins, Miss Doris Alford, Mrs. C. P. Nesbit and Rev. J. C. Chambers, of Jackson, with Rev. J. B. Cain, of Forest, and Mr. O. C. Hull, of Lawrence, composed the faculty.

Quite a bit of attention was given to the missionary aspect of the work and the consensus of opinion was that as a result of the unified system of education our Sunday schools would make increased progress this quadrennium.

Rev. T. R. Holt and the members of Second Church very royally entertained the members of the Institute with lunch during the noon hour.

March 29-April 3 were announced as the dates for the Seashore District Leadership Training School to be held at the schoolhouse on the grounds of the Seashore Methodist Assembly.

Doctor's 3 RULES
Big Help to Bowels

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—all drugstores.

FROM MAGEE, MISS.

Dear Brother Decell: It is indeed a pleasure to write you of the progress being made on the Magee charge.

Immediately after Conference our Board of Stewards adopted the budget plan—paying sixty per cent to ministerial support and forty per cent to the benevolences.

At the first quarterly conference we reported this had been done, and the money for the benevolences sent to Brother W. D. Davis, Conference Treasurer.

We are making every effort to pay one-twelfth of the budget each month and forward the money for the benevolences regularly.

We have no rich members, unless we count a great love, a loyal enthusiasm and a spirit of sacrifice; in this we have great riches.

Brother Holyfield has hilarious enthusiasm, which is spreading over his charge.

Brother Holyfield preached several sermons on Methodism and Kingdom Extension and also taught the book to the Woman's Missionary Society and to the Epworth League. Brother Williams taught it to the W. M. Williams Bible Class.

On Sunday, Feb. 1, Brother Holyfield preached a great sermon on "Faith and Loyalty" and took the free-will offering. The full quota of $185 was over-paid in cash and subscriptions. $100 has been sent to the treasurer, J. F. Rawls, Nashville.

Every department of the church made a contribution, the Epworth Juniors contributing from 25 cents to $1 each, and all the Sunday school classes made contributions.

Fifty copies of "Methodism and Kingdom Extension" were sold.

Our people said: "This is the best book we have had on the subject." We have read it and enjoyed it, as the results prove.

Our committee is working for Advocate subscriptions and will send you a good list soon. I do not remember when I first read the Children's page in the Advocate. During the years it has been like a dear member of the family living in the next block and coming to spend the day with us each week. We love the Advocate; it grows dearer as the years go by.

MRS. W. M. WILLIAMS.

REPORT FROM THE ORPHANS' HOME QUADRENNIAL COMMITTEE

The Committee visited the Methoistd Orphanage at Jackson, Miss. on March 5, 1931, meeting a most kindly welcome by Rev. B. F. Lewis, manager, and his co-workers, and finding tthe children well, clean and seemingly happy. The conditions of the Home grounds, etc., were the very best. We also visited the farm home and found conditions out there just as satisfactory as at the home proper, with the exception of the manager at the farm home was sick. We hope he is well by this time.

There are two hundred children in the Home, being well cared for in every way, and others are waiting, but cannot be received because of the need of furniture, beds, and finances.

THE DEATH OF DEATH AND THE GIFT OF ETERNAL LIFE

Death has been abolished and the centuries of time and the cycles of eternity belong to Christ. Sunday, the first day of the week, testifies that Christ has captured the chronology of time; the centuries bear His signature and the transaction of the years are labeled with His name, and the timeless time has become the realm of His reign.

Though death remains an experience, its gloom has been abolished. The Romans wrote "emigravit," he has passed on, on the graves of their dead. This "passing on" is still the lot of man and should be faced as a solfmen and certain fact of life. The eternal world on whose borders the living stand and into which all must soon enter claims consideration. "It is appointed unto man once to die." It is estimated that every year thirty-one millions of human beings "pass on" through the gates of death. Where there is no light, death is a dark and sorrowful hour.

By His death and resurrection, Christ brought "life and immortality to light." In the presence of the transcendent fact of the resurrection the mystic love of John cried "Eternal life" while the profound reach of Paul's intellect reposed in the truth "He hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." What a petty and apparently insignificant creature man is. So frail that he must sleep almost a third of his time; so helpless that a pin may choke him to death, and the bite of an insect will carry him to the tomb. But notwithstanding his frailties and disheartening scenes of death chambers he has eternity in his heart. This world is not his permanent dwelling place. It is inadequate for his powers. The dream of his imagination, the spaciousness of his soul, and far-away look of his faith, and his deathless affection possess him with powers that outreach terrestrial bounds and declining years. Emerson said, "God does not build so magnificently for mice." Jesus said, "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." This does more than emphasize the privations of earthly life, it indicates the homelessness of man. Too often man tries to be at home by satisfying himself on the innutritious pods, but all the time he perishes with hunger, hunger for the living God, and is restless until "deep answers unto deep."

Maurice Maeterlinck wrote of death as "The Intruder," but later wrote his "Blue Bird" and in that he sends Mytyl and Tyltyl out in quest of happiness. They explored the past and future, visited kingdoms of the night and palaces of the unborn and of the dead. At last they find themselves in a graveyard. Mytyl was fearful in contact with death, the wooden crosses, marble slabs and grassy mounds troubled. Presently all the investitures of death disappear and are replaced by swaying clusters of madonna lillies and surrounded with the beauty and fragrance of life, and Mytyl inquired, "Where are the dead?" and the answer came, "There are no dead." In truer fashion than poetic imagination could ever frame Jesus "abolished death and brought immortality to light."

Christ did more than "bring immortaity to light," He "hath given us eternal life." Immortality is constitutional, all men are immortal but only those who are Christ's have eternal life. Eternal life is more than immortality, it is eternal happiness, it is more than surviving, it is joyfully serving; it is the indissoluble unity of man with God. And this "eternal life is in His Son."

Christians rejoice on this Easter day for the "Gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ," though the "wages of sin is

BRAZIL'S CONSTITUTION CONTEST

Portugal recognized Brazil's independence in 1824, but modern Brazilian history dates from the establishment of the republican form of government under Barros in 1889.

Spaulding, Kidder, and McMurdy went as Methodist missionaries to Brazil in 1836, though continuous Methodist history is dated from 1875-76 when Newman and Ransom officially began their labors, and Bishop Granberry organized the Brazil Annual Conference in 1886 with J. L. Kennedy, J. W. Tarboux and H. C. Tucker as members, which was the smallest membership any annual conference ever began work with.

Brazil has a population of forty million and is comprised of twenty states and covers more territory than continental United States in North America. Brazil is now in the throes of changing her constitution and Roman Catholicism, as she proposed in 1925, is insisting that the Roman faith be declared the state religion and that Romanist doctrine be taught in the public schools. This is meeting with stern opposition from the Protestants and Independents and turmoil prevails in many sections.

Southern Methodists are watching the outcome with deep interest. The autonomous church in Brazil has an early opportunity to "suffer hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ." Roman Catholicism seeks to intrench herself through constitutional enactment, and there, as here in our country, she is the enemy of the public school system and would destroy it if she could.

Among the greater calamities of the Christian centuries are the facts that Roman Catholicism with her wide and compact organization has opposed general public education and contended that her Pope was the rightful ruler of civil states.

MISSIONS AND METHODISM'S JUSTIFICATION

At the opening of the twentieth century, many Methodists gathered in New Orleans at the first General Missionary Conference. It was high strategy in the Kingdom Enterprise and there was raised an Ebenezer Stone here in April, 1901.

Bishop James Atkins, then editor of Sunday school literature, in his introductory words, recorded in the volume produced by that first Missionary Conference, stated that two of the expectations were: (1) "A literature on missions suited to the use of our own people." (2) "The fuller enduement of our church with that power which cometh from above."

Since that memorable Conference an intelligent and productive body of Christian literature on Missions has been created; and within the last few years over a half-million "study books" for cultivation periods, and 75,000,000 pages of leaflets and compact literature have been distributed besides the Missionary Voice, one of the very best missionary magazines, has attained a circulation of 70,000, and hundreds of columns of missionary information have been made available through the weekly church press.

During this time the Church has not been without "that enduement of power which cometh from above." She has weathered stress within and storms without, and today with blue-prints, materials and workmen she faces her largest opportunity and heaviest responsibility. Novel panaceas have been "weighed in the balances and found wanting," and she is shut up to the "gospel that is the power of God unto Salvation." This gospel is sufficient to tax all resources and adequate to achieve every success.

Though many labor at home and abroad to carry the Good News to the lost, above the average devotion is necessary now, lest the battle turn. With the Holy Spirit filling the heart of the Church the second quarter of the century will witness such effective use of the acquired experience and ability as will justify "the Lord of the havest" entrusting a double portion of the Father's spirit to the Methodism of today. That the present is a testing time can scarcely be doubted. The response that is now made to the call for fuller consecration, aggressive soul-winning effort and an increase in liberality will not only evidence to the world but witness to the Church herself whether or not she can healthfully assimilate the fruits of the gracious revival for which she prays and properly use the benefits of a prosperity she longs to see return.

Missions—the sharing of Christ with others in local communities, districts, conferences, home and foreign lands, is the highway of Methodism's advance and the justification of her existence.

ITINERATING IN CHINA

BY BISHOP PAUL B. KERN

Since I landed in China on December 3, I have had the privilege of visiting all of our major stations in which we have work with the exception of one which I hope to visit later in the year. I have been in practically every one of our institutions, including hospitals, primary and middle schools and the university. Everywhere I have been received with the utmost cordiality and appreciation. One feels the handicap of the language barrier very severely, but the thoughtfulness of interpreters aids very greatly in keeping up with the details of any meeting in which you participate. Preaching through an interpreter has a tendency to clip one's oratorical flights, but it reacts to the advantage of the audience in that it encourages one to condense his thought and make each sentence mark an advance toward your conclusion.

I have learned to eat with chop sticks with a fair degree of accuracy and today I have on enough clothes to suggest that even though rather diminutive of stature, I am fast reaching episcopal proportions.

SHANGHAI

The city of Shanghai is justly called the New York of the Orient. While I had been told that it was a great and modern city, I was not prepared to find quite so much of the modern touch and the bustle of our western metropolises. The city has well over a million population and is divided into three main sections, the International Settlement, the French Concession, and the Chinese city. And while the sections are contiguous and one passes from one to the other without knowing it, they are in reality quite different. Each has its own separate police force, and the differences in atmosphere and general appearance are quite marked. The city is full of automobiles, mostly Fords and Chevrolets, and practically all of its streets are paved. Immense department stores handle foreign goods, and I have yet to seek to purchase any article which I needed that cannot be found in Shanghai. Its great port, twelve miles from the sea on the Whangpoo River, holds the shipping of the world and its daily clearance of vessels reminds one of the port of New York.

Just at present economic conditions in China are very unstable because of the fluctuation and the low price of silver. Their coinage is on a silver basis and at present one gold American dollar is worth about $4.40 Mex. It has risen to this point from 3.71 since I came in December, and it is only a few years since one dollar gold was worth less than one dollar Mex. Such fluctuations mean disaster to the merchant and grave embarrassment to all people whose salaries are on a Mexican dollar basis. But this is only one of many problems that China is facing and in working out a more permanent basis for her currency she is receiving the advice of a special commission on finance from America.

Many years ago Dr. Young J. Allen, Mr. Hearn and others were farsighted enough to buy rather large tracts of property in undeveloped sections of the city. The progress of the city has made this property much more valuable and today we own in the heart of Shanghai some exceedingly valuable real estate. Some of this has been set aside as endowment property for Soochow University, and other tracts have furnished places for churches and residences and still others await development. Our Allen Memorial Church, presided over by the gifted Z. T. Kaung, is on property bought many years ago, and the new Moore Memorial Church, directed by S. R. Anderson and Pastor Yul, is located on the site of the old McTyeire school property. This building represents an investment of about $140,000, is located in the most strategic center of Shanghai and is easily the ranking church plant belonging to any evangelical denomination. This projection represents a venture of faith as though Methodism were saying that the China of the future must permanently reckon with the gospel of Christ. Other churches of our faith are to be found and real progress has been measured in capturing this great central city for the mastery of the Universal Christ.

During my stay in Shanghai I spent most of my time in the hospitable home of my friend and classmate, John C. Hawk. We parted in 1905 on the campus of Vanderbilt University and after these twenty-five years I rejoice in the statesmanlike leadership and unwavering fidelity with which he has devoted himself to China. Everywhere he is honored and loved by those who know him.

SOOCHOW

The meeting of the Central Council, which is in reality the governing body of our mission in China, called me to the city of Soochow. For three days we discussed the problems of the kingdom and our Chinese brethren revealed marked ability in handling difficult situations. They are very anxious to develop an autonomous church and just as rapidly as possible we wish to turn over to them responsibility for the management of the Christian enterprise. But nowhere did I find the conviction that China was yet ready for complete autonomy. We shall need to share the responsibility with our Chinese brethren for a few years yet.

Soochow is the seat of our great university, which has been and still is our most ambitious venture in the field of education. Its halls are vocal with the memories of our missionary pioneers, such as Anderson and Cline. These men dreamed dreams and saw visions and everywhere in China one meets the finest products of Christian manhood trained in Soochow University. President Yang is a perfect fit as head of the institution. Highly trained, broad in his sympathies, far-seeing in his policies, enthusiastically Christian, he is probably the outstanding educator in the republic today. Certainly he excels in courtesy as well and we were the recipients of many gracious tokens of his thoughtfulness. By his side stands Dr. Nance, whose name is closely knit into the very life of the institution and whose scholarly outlook has done much to give the institution its high rank in academic circles. We found the faculty deeply concerned over the religious problem among the students. Christianity is having a hard time on the college campus these days, but this is true of America as well as of China, and I found these men grappling with the problem with deep seriousness and concern.

If, under the guidance of a knowing friend, you can drift through the antique shops of Soochow, you had best keep a close guard on your pocketbook. There is so much that is ugly in China that one is a bit surprised to find beneath its unlovely exterior specimens of the purest artistry. No one who has ever seen a Chinese pagoda in the moonlight can ever forget its symetry and loveliness. In these curio shops we saw porcelain and china and brass and carved jade and ivory and red wood that reaches back for hundreds of years before America was discovered. The very wall around the city was built before Columbus set sail from the shores of Spain and one is reminded that here in this Celestial Empire there was a high degree of civilization when our forefathers were chasing each other through the forests of Germany.

In addition to the work at Soochow University we have two other significant enterprises in the city. The Kong Hong Institutional Church and the Moka Hwo Yoen School. The former is a pretentious plant with a very large staff doing a modern type of institutional work in the very heart of the city. It receives a good deal of its support from high class Chinese and serves a wide range of people, ministering to the needs of body, mind and soul. The property at Moka Hwo Yoen Garden, operated by the women's section of the Board of Missions, is a beautiful piece of planning and gives one the impression of very splendid equipment and personnel. The women of our missionary forces have shown splendid judgment and far-sighted wisdom in the institutions which they have fostered in the Far East.

The weather turned bitterly cold just as we were leaving Soochow. The thermometer went down to around eleven degrees, which with the humidity and the wind going right to the marrow of one's bones is really cold, but a schedule is a schedule and must be carried out if humanly possible and so we took the train the next morning for the city of Changchow, three hours away, with the thermometer way below freezing. Not one particle of heat on the train, but with foot warmers and innumerable layers of clothing of both Chinese and American varieties we arrived without any casualties and soon found ourselves comfortably at home in the delightful fellowship of our friends, Dr. and Mrs. Paty. The next morning I preached in the Carriger Memorial Church. The temperature must have been at least ten degrees below freezing and such frigidity yields slowly to even the fire and enthusiasm of the gospel. But the Chinese did not seem to mind it much; it was a "five coat cold" and they had on all five. I have discovered that there is but one way to do about this heat and cold business and that is to conform to the Chinese custom and put on enough clothes and go ahead. Otherwise, just about the time you find a room getting warm enough to be comfortable some obnoxious individual will get up and shut off the stove and open the door and remark "this room is too hot for the Chinese." There was not even any chimney in that church at Changchow, and, seeking to find out the reason why they did not have any heat, I discovered that in most instances they simply cannot afford to pay the bill for coal, and then, if they have much heat, the contrast is too great between the church and their own homes.

I was much impressed with the work of our two Doctors, Paty and Thoroughman, in Changchow. The hospital was organized at the request of the local gentry and the city council contributes $1000 a year to its upkeep. The equipment is pathetically inadequate, such as any American doctor would scorn, but these two highly trained Emory graduates are doing a scientific piece of work under conditions that the average man would regard as impossible. If I could find a person in the home church to give me $20,000 I would give it straight to Changchow and add funds available from local sources and build the first unit of a modern plant for these heroic medical pioneers.

The specific duty that called me to Changchow was the privilege of speaking to the Conference of Bible Women and Evangelists, numbering about sixty women. Their organization is very closely knit and is tremendously effective. I am not always at home in their theological viewpoint and I presume that they are not in mine, but there are so many great, essential loyalties which we both hold that we labored together for five days in the finest spirit. Where there is no tolerance there can be no Christian fellowship and one can but rejoice that the Methodist inheritance back of us leads us to think and let think in non-essentials.

I wish I had time to write in detail of the fine work that the Berckmans and Miss Green and Miss Leveritt are doing, but I must hurry on for this is only one stop on a lengthy itinerary.

NANKING

Nanking is the capital of the New China. We do not have any mission station in this city as it is in the territory occupied by our friends of the Northern Methodist Church. But I was urgently invited to visit Nanking by Dr. Price and the faculties of the Nanking Seminary and the Bible school. I preached on Sunday morning in the Central Methodist Church and had the pastor, Dr. Hendel Lee, as my interpreter. This was one of not a few courtesies that I have had shown me by my brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church since coming to the Orient. The closer we get to them and the better we know them, the more we love them. In the afternoon I preached to the union English speaking congregation and had in my audience representatives of many nationalities. To get a chance to preach in English again was a real joy.

One cannot go to Nanking without seeing on many hands the ravages of the communistic uprising of 1927. The gaunt walls of buildings gutted by fire and stripped by plunderers greet one in many sections. Missionaries were hunted like wild animals and took refuge in every imaginable place, but the Lord delivered them out of the hands of the enemies and thrilling indeed are the stories of heroism that come out of those tragic days. As I talked with these men who had come through the terrible ordeal of 1927 I felt that I was again in the presence of heroes of the faith such as the early centuries produced.

The Nationalist Government is making strides towards modernizing the city. A number of beautiful buildings have been erected. Roads have been widened and a group of city planning experts is working out in detail the Nanking of tomorrow. In the afternoon we drove out to the tomb of Dr. Sun Yat Sen. About eight miles from the city, connected by a broad boulevard, it nestles on the side of a great mountain. Three hundred stone steps lead up to the mausoleum. The view from the top of the eminence is majestic and as one enters into the exquisite building the same feelings sweep over him as when one stands in the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. Here is China's idealism, taking money out of its ragged poverty to symbolize in granite and marble its faith in an ideal of democracy and the freedom of its soul. One comes away feeling that there is an essential sublimity in China's new political aspiration bursting through the hard crust of ancient traditionalism in this most ancient empire of the east.

Unfortunately, we have only a very small stake in the educational enterprise in Nanking. Only three students in the seminary and none in the Bible school. The latter situation grows out of an unfortunate split which occurred last year and took the great majority of our students out of our seminary in Nanking and transferred them to an independent school in Shanghai. I am firmly impressed with the fact that we can never have a vigorous autonomous Methodist Church in China until we solve the problem of preparing a more adequate supply of ministers. It is our mired wheel, and until we can lift it out of the mud we cannot make much progress.

WUSIH

Wusih deserved more time than I was able to give it, but Miss Anderson and Miss Rue insisted that I must see the "coming Industrial city of China." And I confess, that I was thrilled with what the day revealed. Here is a city of 200,000 people with 47 silk filature mills, 11 cotton mills and 7 flour mills. It is the biggest industrial city of modern China and among its population are more than 100 returned students. All the hillsides around Wusih are covered with mulberry trees, growing leaves to be fed to the silk worms. The silk cocoons are treated in these mills and wound on spools and then are shipped abroad, mainly to France and America. These mills employ 60,000 women workers. The pathetic fact, however, is that thousands and thousands of children work in these mills and the hours of work are from six in the morning to six at night with a scant half-hour for lunch. As the siren whistles awoke me that morning at 5 o'clock, I realized that thousands of little children must be called from their beds and hurried to the mill before the sun was up and when they go back home it will be an hour after dark. Such is the price in human blood that we pay for the silk that adorns the backs of many French and American women. But conditions are improving. Formerly the hours of work were fourteen and they say that the workmen are well paid in Wusih. The adults get around sixty cents a day and the children around twenty. At the present rate of exchange that is fifteen and five cents gold, respectively.

The only hope for lifting this terrible injustice is through the social gospel of Jesus Christ, who wills that every little child shall have right to a decent home and a chance to play in the sunshine. Out little inadequate force is struggling to meet an almost impossible situation and they must have reinforcements of missionaries and equipment.

HUCHOW

Huchow is our most remote and inland Mission station, located in the Chekiang Province. Under ordinary circumstances one would not choose the winter time to make this journey, but the call was insistent and there is generally some way to get things done when you try hard enough. The missionaries are so thoughtful and anticipate your every situation that it makes traveling much simpler than it would be under ordinary circumstances. After four hours on the train, unheated as usual, I arrived at Hangchow, thence in a bus 65 miles to Huchow. This new motor road is one of many that China is projecting with the wider advent of the automobile and, while not comparable to our modern American highways, is in fact a very good road. I discovered that Chinese buses are just as crowded as Chinese trains. We started with a full house, but at the next stop took on three more passengers and a little farther on several more forced their way in, each with odd and bulky bundles, until the old bus was loaded to "maximum sardine capacity." The only test as to when a bus is full is: "Can the door be shut by sufficient pressure from the outside?" When we were about half-way, we stopped at a little station and about fifteen Nationalist soldiers came up with rather pale countenances and commandeered our bus with the rather excited explanation that they needed it to go after some bandits. It seems that three miles down our road about 100 bandits had come down from the hills and carried captive eleven soldiers with their arms, and now they were concentrating all available reserves to give chase to their comrades in distress. The trouble is the eleven may have sold out their arms to the bandits and thus surrendered the thankless task of defending their country for the more immediate reward of a few dollars. Our bus came back after a while, minus the soldiers, and we proceeded on our way unmolested. I think by the time I get to America I can work this story up into a real hero story and arouse great sympathy for a lone and unprotected bishop in the midst of a bandit-infested area. But I really confessed the whole experience superinduced a new waive of homesickness. I almost felt that I was on the streets of Chicago again, and I have concluded that banditry is a sort of international sport of the underworld.

I stayed in the home of my former student, Hubert Sone, and found him and his wife doing a splendid piece of work at the Institutional Church, right in the heart of this pagan city. They need a building very much, but they are not quarreling with their equipment; but using it to the fullest measure of daily Christian service to large groups that cross its threshold. I preached Christ to a large audience, mostly young people and non-Christians, on Sunday night, and had a most attentive hearing. I also preached at Hai Tau Church and spoke several times to the District Preachers meeting and was a guest at Vir[illegible] School. This, together with a few Chinese feasts thrown in for a good measure, constituted a busy four days.

If the Lord had started out to make an ideal missionary doctor and found Fred Manget I think He would have stopped right there and called it a good job. In a city that is none too friendly to Christianity, he is loved and esteemed and he has built a hospital that is perhaps only second in all China. I marvel at the scientific skill upon which these missionary hospitals are run. One could get the same grade of service that he gets in America and yet through the whole process there is a fine religious enthusiasm. It is very interesting to notice how capable these new young Chinese physicians are. They are very skillful operators and some day they will be prepared to carry on these healing agencies upon the foundations that we are laying. That time is not yet, but one does feel a thrill of optimism when he sees what the religion of Christ linked with splendid native ability is able to accomplish in these lands that are new to the gospel.

Snow was falling thick and fast as we drove the road back to the train to Shanghai, but Chinese drivers are proverbially careful, and as the lights of Shanghai welcomed me it was not far from midnight. I was a bit tired but my heart was singing and I felt once more that feeling of satisfaction that comes when one tries to share a burden with another human and lets him know that back of the "thin red line" there stands the interest and prayer and support of a great Church. If you could feel the spirit of these missionaries and their families as I have been privileged to feel it, you would conclude that a dollar invested in missions is not only a sacred obligation, but a holy privilege.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE OF IMMORTALITY

By H. H. Smith

Before me lies a very large old volume containing a compilation from "historians, philosophers, sages, scientists, poets, preachers, orators, and statesmen of all ages on every phase of the future life." After reading these very interesting selections, with their arguments for the credibility of belief in a future existence, this question suggests itself: What are the arguments of the Bible for belief in the immortality of the soul? Perhaps the best answer is: There are none. The Bible does not "argue." That is not the way of the Book in such matters—it has a better way. Men argue for or against belief in the existence of a Supreme Being, but the Bible nowhere undertakes to prove the existence of God. That is taken for granted in the first sentence of the Book: "In the beginning God—." Men argue about the origin of evil, the problem of prayer, the mystery of providence. But see how Jesus dealt with such matters. He does not give us any fine-spun definitions of sin and its origin. He simply points it out. "See that prodigal, sin brought him to that. See that demoniac, that is the work of sin." And then we are told that the only remedy for such evils is the One who stands in their midst to restore and forgive. That's enough to know about sin.

And in this wise and practical way the Master dealt with all the problems of life. He entered into no argument about the soul's being immaterial and therefore immortal, nor did he give any of the plausible arguments for the survival of the

NEWS ITEMS FROM THE MINDEN DISTRICT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Minden District has proceeded to follow the program of the Church as our leaders send it to us.

The district stewards and pastors and lay leaders met in Minden January 13 and made the proper distribution of allotments and went home to work it out 100 per cent.

The Missionary District Institute was divided into two sections, one meeting in Minden, January 27, and the other the 28, in Winnfield. Our presiding elder, Rev. W. R. Harvell, presiding and introducing as his helpers the Rev. H. N. Brown, Conference Missionary secretary, Dr. J. E. Crawford of Nashville, and the Rev. A. K. McLelland, Dual Extension secretary. All of the talks were of interest and stirred us to action for our great causes. The attendance was good at both meetings, averaging something over fifty.

The winter has not been so bad, but the bad weather that we have had has usually been on Sunday, which has greatly hindered the work in some places. The wet days, together with sickness among the workers, has made us a little backward in some places, but we are going to do it under the leadership of our enthusiastic leader, Brother Harvell.

The first round has not been entirely made and we are already electing delegates to the District Conference, which meets in Minden April 23 and 24.

At the close of the last Annual Conference, we received the following, who are with us to try out the Minden District: Revs. A. S. J. Neill, J. M. Alford, J. L. Lay and Thurman Spinks. They have all started off in a fine way. Two of our number, Bro. Perry of Rochelle, and Bro. Wynn of Minden, have been sick, but both are better again, for which we are very thankful.

It will be learned with deep sorrow that Bro. Leon I. McCain, who served four years on the district, stationed at Minden, is still sick in New Orleans.

The dedication of the Winnfield church by Bishop Dobbs, assisted by Presiding Elder W. R. Harvell, was quite an event in the history of that outstanding church. They arrived on Saturday, January 25, and were received as became their mission to our town. In the afternoon, we carried them to the big rock quarry and to see the big salt shaft that was just being completed, which is supposed to be one of the great salt domes of the nation. From 3:30 to 5 they were tendered a reception at the parsonage by the ladies of the church.

The dedication was at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday, January 26. There was no collection nor anything but the dedication, which was done in a very fine manner. Just as we began we were delighted to have Bro. D. C. Barr come in and he was invited to the pulpit, where he made the opening prayer. He was licensed to preach from this church more than fifty years ago, and is always gladly received by the church and community.

Bro. Reid, of the local M. P. Church, joined in and was invited by the Bishop to pronounce the benediction. This was a delightful day. We had prepared for it and the weather was perfect and the congregation large and the music of a high order. Our bishop won all hearts and every one wishes him to come to see us again. After the service here, he went to Pineville and cheered up that pastor, Bro. Boddie, and his congregation.

And, now, everyone is busy on the book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension." It is a most interesting book and will enlighten us if we will study it, even though we read on page 19 about Wesley having preached 5000 times annually, which would average between thirteen and fourteen times daily. Dr. Cram was quoting from Birrell's "Appreciation of Wesley's Journals." "The contention is that Wesley preached times and not sermons." He woud meet a man on the street and exhort him and count this a "time." The great thing for us to do is to do what our Church asks us to do and when and in the manner she desires it done.

A STATEMENT CONCERNING THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE

To the friends of orphaned and homeless children, and especially the 200 children now being cared for by the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, La., I feel sure that the following statement will receive their serious concern and interest.

At no time during the past 25 years has the institution confronted a situation so alarming or so uncertain, as that which it faces at the present time. There are over 200 children in the orphanage that must be cared for, fed, clothed, and provided with every necessity of life in order that they may be fitted for useful citizenship. These children were left homeless, through no fault of their own, and have been taken under the sheltering care of the great Methodist Church in its only institution for this purpose in Louisiana.

On account of the financial depression that is now prevailing throughout the State it is exceedingly difficult to secure funds to carry on this work. Every available dollar will have been used by the first of April. The only means of income whereby this institution can be kept going is the money that will be raised in the churches and Sunday schools all over the State on Easter Sunday, April 5. This is the day set apart by the Conference for this purpose, and it is expected that every church and Sunday school in the State will observe the day and attempt to raise a sufficient amount to keep the Orphanage going through the summer months until Harvest Day, or the second Sunday in October. If the churches and Sunday schools should fail to secure a liberal offering for this work then great suffering will result. No agents, solicitors or collectors are employed to raise money for the orphanage. Their sole depedence is on what is secured through the churches and Sunday schools on Easter Sunday. Therefore, the friends of this institution are urged to do all they can, to go to church and Sunday school prepared to give as liberally as possible for this great work.

It is a matter of pride that this institution has never suffered a dollar's loss by fire, no scandal of any kind has ever besmirched its name, no death has occurred among its inmates for the past 13 years, no indebtedness of any kind is recorded against the institution, 25 college graduates, all of whom are doing well, have gone forth from the institution, and they now have sixteen students attending college at Louisiana Tech, 52 students attending the high school and city grammar school and they maintain a school of their own in the orphanage teaching through the sixth grade.

Surely a work of this kind should be kept going in spite of the difficulties that now confront our people, and we sincerely hope that a liberal and generous offering to this cause will be made throughout the State on Easter Sunday.

A MYTH WITH A MORAL—THE KNOCKER

By Rev. J. H. Moore

Satan was at one time a man. Later he evolved into an angel and dwelt in Paradise. There must have been a time when he was worthy of trust and affection, otherwise the Almighty would never have allowed him to enter heaven. But Satan was of a peculiar disposition. He had the "artistic temperament," which is to say, he was moody, irritable, fault-finding, he was also idle. He smoked cigarettes and much of the time was full of dope and booze. Istead of trying to remedy the weak points of Paradise, he merely pointed them out and harangued about them to all who would listen. And Satan still finds mischief for idle hands to do. It was the same then: Satan would neither tune harps, launder the robes, nor polish the pavement, which was made of gold and precious stones.

It took a lot of labor and a deal of skill to set the paving-stones, but while the workers were at it, Satan would sit on the curb and make sport of them. When the Almighty came around to see how things were getting along, Satan would whisper unkind things about Him after He had passed, and kick about how severe He was in discipline. The Almighty warned Satan from time to time to get busy, but his answer was, "I am." "Sure enough," replied the Almighty, "but at the wrong thing!"

They tried to get Satan to lead the Choral Society and break in the new arrivals, some of whom sang slightly off key. "I teach those jays? Why, they have no voice, they only have a disease. You should never have let them in, what this place needs is a new gatekeeper who has nerve with him and can direct the wrong applicant where to go! No, I'll not lead your orchestra; and anyway, I am drilling a little class of my own and have no time; I am organizing an Anvil Chorus."

It was of no use. Satan would not do what he was told. He always knew a better way, and he sneered at every plan for a Heavenly betterment that he did not himself suggest. And he suggested precious few, and these he could not carry out. There was only one thing that interested him, and that was the Anvil Chorus. When the saints sang Hallelujahs, Satan would start up his favorite instrument and pound. He wasn't industrious in anything but knocking. Finally he had gotten so many people believing that the anvil was really sweeter than the harp, that the Almighty lost patience. And when it was discovered that Satan had started a factory to make hammer handles, the Almighty decided to fire him bodily.

So the word was passed along, and the saints quietly tucked their robes in their belts and made a rush for Mr. Satan and his band of knockers. It was soon over. Satan was cast out of Heaven and Milton says he fell for three weeks! What a pity that men and women made in the image of God, will not leave the business of knocking to the Devil and his band!

THE THORN IN THE FLESH OF THE CHURCH

By Rev. Ichabod Crane

Dear Editor: It has been a year or two since I've written anything for the Advocate, but now since the Conferences are all over, and we have a new editor who is putting out the best Advocate we've ever had, I guess he'll (don't leave out the apostrophe) be as nice as the others have been, and publish an article or two for me.

I've just been thinking about a thing that causes more inefficiency in the Church than any other two or three things. It is often said that the pastor is the key to the situation in any church. This is true, and I've been wondering what happens to the situation when the key is broken. To be more specific, I'm thinking about the unpaid (not under-paid) pastor and the problem he creates in any church. I'm wondering if the Church realizes what a hazardous liability she is taking upon herself in allowing this problem to exist. An unpaid pastor is a stroke of paralysis to any church, and a large number of them vitally handicaps the whole connection.

I had a letter from a good pastor, a life-long friend of mine, who owes me a small amount of money. He was explaining why he hadn't paid it. He said confidentially, "I haven't received anything on my salary since taking over my new charge." He had been pastor of one of the leading charges in our Conference for two months. I knew that his former charge had lacked over two hundred dollars paying him his salary for the previous year. Here was a man going for nearly four months without an income, and had no money to begin with as a result of previous experiences of this kind. Could one in any other profession have stood a similar experience without serious embarrassment? This is not an isolated example; it is common among the rank and file of our pastors.

To carry this case further, as examples of dozens of others of my own knowledge, I know it to be a fact that this brother (we'll call him Brother Z) owes a good many unpaid bills that are past due, and his creditors are pushing him; he has several bank notes in the same shape, and has had several checks returned on account of insufficient funds, which he gave in anticipation of his vainly hoped for salary to avoid embarrassing court action. This man is a good man; I would trust him with anything that I possess. I only wish that I were able to pay his obligations. However, with all of his brilliance, ability and character, can he be a successful pastor under such financial handicaps? Who is to blame? Who suffers most, the pastor or the Church?

One of Brother Z's creditors, a steward, by the way, in a church Brother Z served last year, said to me recently, "Preacher, why do you Methodists allow a preacher to continue to preach without paying his bills? Brother Z left here owing me over $5, and I haven't heard a word from him." The church treasurer's books show that this particular "steward" never paid a cent to any cause in the church during last year. He excused himself for doing so on the ground that he didn't like the pastor. (Ever hear of that before?).

"I suppose he must not have liked his grocer," I replied to the "steward," and continued on my journey.

Another one of his stewards met me and said, "Confidentially, Brother Crane, I have a returned check on Brother Z, and I don't want to cause him any embarrassment, won't you please urge him to take care of this matter immediately, or I'll be forced to take action."

I investigated. I learned that Brother Z had received a check from one of his leading members for $50 and had deposited it in his bank, checked on it, only to have it returned to his bank in time to cause his checks to be returned. He hadn't collected the fifty as yet.

I later, after returning home, met one of my stewards, a prince of a man, on the street. "How goes it?" I inquired. He had only a few days before lost practically all he had in a bank failure and was facing financial embarrasasment galore.

"Preacher, I haven't been lit for a thing in a week," he replied. This exactly expressed it. His nerves were taxed, his enthusiasm abated, his equilibrium lost. He had no zeal, no glow, no go. I thought to myself, "Brother Z has been in this same boat for over four months, maybe longer." How could he inspire his church? How could he cheer his people? What had his charge done since Conference? Nothing! They were just two months behind, never to catch up again, for time lost is time gone.
